TO MY HONOUR'D FRIENDS
THE GENTRIE OF WARWICK-SHIRE.

HAT all things perish by Age and time, or some unhappy accidents, is a thing not to be denied; the consideration whereof, hath not a little incited me to the undertaking of this present work; which, after no small cost and pains, being thus finished, I offer unto you my Noble Countrymen, as the most proper Persons, to whom it can be presented, wherein you will see very much of your worthy Ancestors, to whose memory I have erected it, as a Monumentall Pillar, and to shew in what Honour they lived in those flourishing Ages past.

In this kind, or not much different, have divers persons in Forrein parts, very learnedly written; some whereof I have noted in my Preface: And I could wish that there were more that would adventure in the like manner for the rest of the Counties of this Nation, considering how acceptable those are, which others have already performed, though but briefly; viz. the Perambulation of Kent, by Mr. Lambard: The Survey of Cornwall, by Mr. Carey of Anthonie: The Description of Leicestershie, by Mr. Burton; and the Antiquities of Canterbury, by my speciall friend Mr William Somner: To which I may adde A short view of Staffordshire, by Mr. Sampson Erdslike (late of Sandon in that Countie) not yet publisht; a Gentleman whose memorie is very precious in those parts for his great knowledge in Antiquities.

What I have said of our Warwick-shire Families, is whilst they

they have been seated in the Countie; and, where I could, pointing briefly at their extractions: for to have gone farther would have been both improper, as out of my bounds, and impossible for me to effect, as may well be deemed by those that understand what a taske it is to find out authorities for the asserting of no more than one Descent. Great is the commendation that is justly due to most of you, for promoting this publique work, by so noble a freedom to me in the sight of your antient Charters and Evidences, which have afforded also many notable discoveries in relation to others aswell as your selves: Nor is it a little honour you deserve for that pious, though due respect, shewed to your dead Ancestors, by representing to the world a view of their Tombes, and in some sort preserving those Monuments from that fate, which Time, if not contingent mischief, might expose them to.

But principally must I acknowledge the signall furtherance, which this Work hath received by my much honoured Friend Sir Simon Archer Knight, a person indeed naturally qualified with a great affection to Antiquities, and with no small pains and charge, a diligent Gatherer and preserver of very many choice Manuscripts, and other rarities, whereof I have made speciall use, as almost every page in the Book will manifest.

That this my endeavour will have a candid acceptance, I no whit doubt; my principall ayme having been, by setting before you the noble and eminent Actions of your worthy Ancestors, to incite the present and future ages to a vertuous imitation of them; the continued welfare, and lasting honour of your selves and hopefull posterity, being the unfeigned wishes, of

Your most devoted and humble servant

William Dugdale.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE
CHRISTOPHER LORD HATTON,

COMPTROLLER OF THE HOUSEHOLD

to the late KING CHARLES, and one of his Majesties most Honorable Privie-Councill.

MY LORD,

It is little lesse than twenty years since I had the happinesse to be first known to you, and to receive your encouragement to go on in the getting of fit materialls for the work I have now at last (through God's assistance) though with no small difficulty, accomplished; towards which I had then made some little progress:

wherein I ever found you so great and constant a favourer of my endeavours, not only by the free opening unto me your choise and costly Treasurie of extraordinarie rarities, whereof the margents of the Book will declare what great use I have made; but by procuring for me, both accesse to most of the publique Records in this Nation, and affording me the chief support I then had, whilst I laboured therein. So that, besides your great deserts, as a principall Mecœnas of learning, and more especially of Antiquities, wherein your skill and knowledge far surpasses any within the compasse of your own Orbe (the Nobility) that I know, and therefore the more fit to judge thereof; the influence that this work hath had from your Lordship, doth justly challenge a publique and gratefull acknowledgment, which I hope will not be wanting from all persons, especially those that it concerns, as it hath from me, who

who with abundant thankfulnesse for these high favours , do now present it to you.

Had I been farther happy in your judicious assistance, and advice for its fabrick and composure , I am sure it would have appeared much more beautifull than now it is ; but that , through your distance from hence , by reason of our sad distractions , could not be expected. Such therefore as it is , I humbly offer to your Lordship , well knowing that your goodnesse will accept thereof, rather as a testimonie of my gratitude , than any other merit , from

Your Lordship's most obliged servant and honourer

William Dugdale.

THE PREFACE.

That the prefixing an Introduction to this present work, is as essentiall as the Porch to a greater building will not be doubted; I shall therefore, by way of Preface, speak briefly of Historie in generall, and then of that which may most properly usher in the following Discourse.

It is Historie, saith an eminent person, that hath given us life in our understanding since the World it self had life and beginning, even to this day; and carried our knowledge over the vast and devouring space of many thousand years, having made us acquainted with our dead Ancestors, and out of the depth and darknesse of the Earth delivered us their memorie and fame. And as this is no little satisfaction to all discreet men, so may it be of much advantage, in regard that by a serious observance of the Actions that former times have produced, with their circumstances and issues, a far greater knowledge may be obtained, than the longest life can otherwise afford. Hence is it, that the Antients have bestowed such paines in this kind, as hath been long ago noted by an old Writer; Antiores nostri, quoth he, ab antiquis temporibus labentis seculi excursus prudenter inspexerunt, & bona seu mala mortalibus contingentia, pro cautela hominum notaverunt, & futuris temporibus semper prodesse volentes, scripta scriptis accumulaverunt: Hoc nimirum videmus à Moyse & Daniele factum, &c.

As for the work itself, it is an Illustration of the Antiquities with which my native Countrey (Warwickshire) hath been honoured; in accomplishing whereof, I have spent the chiefest of my time for much more than twenty years, diligently searching into the vast Treasuries of publique Records, besides a multitude of Manuscripts, originall Charters and Evidences in private hands, as the margents where they are cited do manifest; therein imitating Polybius, Livie, Suetonius and Tacitus, who made speciall use of the publique Records of Rome, which were preserved at their Temple of the Nymphs, and at that of Libertie in the Aventine (as ours in the Tower of London and the Rolls chiefly are); so likewise Thucidides, and of later times Sigonius in his de Regno Italiæ, Du Tillet in that of France, and divers more, whereof the learned Selden hath most judiciously taken notice.

Nor do I want example for Discourses of this kind scilicet the Antiquities of particular Countries, Places, and Families by men of eminent learning; witness that of Provence in France by Caesar Nostradamus; of Brescia (a Citie in Italie) by Octavius Rossus; of Languedoc by Guil. Catel; of Bresse and Burgie by Sam. Guichenon; and very lately of Flanders by Anth. Sanderus, who hath most exquisitely represented, by curious Cuts, the Cities, Towns, Monasteries, Colledges, and Gentlemens Houses of note, in those parts, for the better ornament of his Storie.

Perhaps there are some who may expect in this my undertaking, that I should ascend much higher with my discourse of divers Places and Families than I have done, supposing it as possible to speak of the Saxons times as those since the Norman Conquest: but to the consideration of such I shal offer, what likelihood there is, that Memorials of any thing could be preserved, where War did so much abound: For in the time of the Saxon Heptarchie most certain it is, that there was no little striving by those petty Kings to enlarge their Dominions, whereby great wast and spoil was occasioned: And no sooner had King Egbert subdued the Northern Britans, with those that inhabited Cornwall, overcome Bernulph King of Mercia, united Kent, Surrey, the South and East-Saxons to his West-Saxon Kingdom (being therefore reckoned the first English Monarch) and left the possession of all to his son Ethelwolp, which hapned in the year DCCCXXXVI. from our Saviour's Incarnation, but that the Danes, with other barbarous Northern Nations began to infest this Kingdom, vehemently afflicting and wasting the land by the space of CCCXXX. years, even unto the coming of the Normans, sparing neither age nor sex, as saith mine Author, ita ut mirum in modum illiterati Comites penè omnes: nay the very Clergie themselves were so ignorant, as that in the beginning of King Alfred's reign (which was about the year DCCCLXXII.) there were few Priests on the South of Humber that understood the Latine service, or that could translate any writing from Latine into English.

Neither did they much minde learning, till a little before the Conquest by Duke William, as may appear by the testimonie of an authentique Writer; who saith. Non paucis ante adventum ventum Normannorum annis, &c. Not few years before the coming of the Normans, the Clergie were content with disorderly learning, being scarce able to stammer out the words of the Sacrament; he which understood the Grammar being admired of the rest. So that it is not such a merveil that we have no more light of storie to guide us in those clauer times, as tis a wonder there is any thing at all left to us, by reason that learned men were exceeding scarce, and that the Monasteries, which were the preservers of what is left to us of that kind, suffered such miserie by those barbarous people, who were grown so powerfull in this Realm, that for fear of loosing all, King Edmund was constrained to yeild, that Aulafe King of Norway should enjoy the whole Land from Watling Street Northwards: The like agreement in the year M. XIII. in the reign of King Ethelred, were the people forced to, by Sueno King of Denmark.

But to come neerer to my purpose: forasmuch as 'tis a single Countie, which is the subject of this following tract; and that I have proceeded therein by viewing each Hundred apart, I resolve in the first place, to take notice of what antiquitie the division of this Realm, into Shires and Hundreds is said to be; for of the positive time when it was first cast into Counties our best Historians, for want of good light (by reason of the Warrs and distractions before spoken of) are to seek; Ingulphus referring it to King Aethelred, about the year DCCCC. which was towards the end of his reign; H. Huntendon to King Egbert (by circumstance) who began his reign in Anno DCCC. for these are his words--- Postquam autem Reges West-Seaxe cœteris prævaluerunt, & Monarchiam obtinuerunt, terras per XXXV. Provincias sibi dividerunt.

Now, that it was King Egbert (the West Saxon) that so united the Heptarchie, is plain enough; but they are both short: for there is no doubt, but some division thereof into Counties, was long before, though not directly the same throughout that was afterwards by King Egbert; otherwise, why were Egga and Leuricus witnesses to King Ethelbald's Foundation-Charter of Crowland in anno DCCXVI. stiled, the one Comes Lincolnæ, and the other Comes Leicestræ? Besides, as Mr. Selden from Ina (King of the West-Saxons in anno Dccxx) his Laws observes, If any Ealdorman were guilty of an escape, he was to forfeit his Shire, perdat suum Comitatum, as the old Latin translation hath it: So that, had there not been Counties then, this could not have been said: Therefore what Ingulphus mentions as to the first division of this Realm into Counties and Hundreds by King Aelfred, was doubtless meant of Hundreds only, however his pen slipped: For VVilliam of Malmesbury, who mentioneth the occasion of that King's constitution of the Hundreds only, delivereth the same reason that Ingulphus by that mistake doth for Counties and Hundreds both--- Et quia occasione Barbarorum, &c. That by example of the Danes the naturall Inhabitants were greedy of spoil, so that no man could passe to and fro, in safetie, without defensive weapons; Aelfred therefore ordained Centuries, which they terme Hundreds; and Decimes which they call Tithings, that every English man living under Law, should be within some Hundred and Tithing; and if he were accused of any transgression, he should forthwith bring in some one of the same Hundred and Tithing, that would be his suretie to answer the Law; but if he could find none such to undertake for him, then to abide the severitie of the Law: And if any guilty person should fly, before or after his giving such securitie, that then all within the Hundred and Tithing should be fined to the King.

To give some reason why they were called Counties, I shall here exhibite the authoritie of an ancient MS. which making mention of Osulph Earl of Northumberland, hath these words --- Nec invenitur, quod ante prædictum Osulphum Comitum, aliquis fuerat Comes Northumbriae, & per consequens nec ibi Comitatus; quia Comitatus à Comite dicitur, id est dignitas Comitum, vel tantum spacium terræ quantum ad Comitem pertinet. Whereof more to the same effect in the Glossarie of the learned sir H. Spelman Knight, titulo Comitatus, is to be seen, and that matters of Controversie were heard before the Earl in his Countie-Court, or before his substitute, whom the Saxons called geþef, and Scipegeþef, that is Shire-reeve, Scipe or Scipen, signifying in our old English to part or divide, or rather (as we yet say) to share a thing; and Reeve (from the Saxon word geþef or geþeua) a Provost or Steward, which name is yet used in divers Mannours, being attributed to him who is appointed to collect the Lord's Rents.

Having said thus much of the beginning and occasion of the Hundreds, I shall adde a line or two more, from the aforesaid Gloss: where there is a large and learned discourse upon that word. Est autem Hundredus, &c. The Hundred is a portion of the Countie, wherein anciently dwelt an hundred Sureties for the King's peace, as a Tithing wherein were ten; and therefore a Hundred contained ten Tithings, the number of an Hundred being Ten times ten.

And 'tis not a little observable, that before the Normans entrance, the Bishop sat in the Hundred.

THE PREFACE.

Hundred-Court, with the Lord of the Hundred, as he did in the Countie-Court with the Earl, and in the Shireeves-Turn, with the Shireeve---Primi igitur sedebant, saith^a Sir H. Spelman, in omnibus regni Comitibus & tribunalibus Episcopi; in Regali quidem palacio cum Regni magnatibus; in Comitatu unâ cum Comite, & Justiciario Comitatus; In Turno Vicecomitis cum Vicecomite; In Hundredo cum Domino Hundredi: sic, ut in promovenda Justicia usq; quaq; gladius gladium adjuvaret, & nihil inconsulto Sacerdote (qui velut Saburra in Navi fuit) ageretur.

^a In Epist. ad Tom. 1. Concl. Vide R. Hoved. f. 260. b. n. 40.

And so likewise after the Conquest, till King William prohibited it, as is evident by these ensuing words of his Mandate^b to the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln;---Propterea mando & regia autoritate præcipio, ut nullus Episcopus, vel Archidiaconus de Legibus Episcopali-bus amplius in Hundredo placita teneat, nec causam, quæ ad regimen animarum pertinet, ad judicium secularium hominum adducat; sed quicumq; secundum Leges Episcopales de quacunq; causa vel culpa interpellatus fuerit, ad locum quem ad hoc Episcopus elegerit & nominaverit, veniat, ibiq; de causa sua respondeat, & non secundum Hundredum, sed secundum Canones & Episcopales Leges rectum Deo & Episcopo suo faciat.

^b Cart. 2. R. 2. per. Inip. m. 13. n. 5.

Howbeit, besides this dividing the Kingdom by King Alfred, as hath been said, it should seem that he made an exact Survey thereof, much like that which was afterwards performed by King William the Conqueror---Talem Rotulum, saith Ingulphus^c, speaking of Doomesday-book, & multum similem ediderat quondam Rex Alfredus, in quo totam terram Angliæ per Comitatus, Centurias, & Decurias descripsit, sicut prænotatur, qui quidem Rotulus Wintoniæ vocatus est, quia deponeretur apud Wintoniam conservandus: which Roll, time hath consumed, I believe; for I could never discern that our greatest Searchers after Antiquities had seen it.

^c Ingul. H. f. 5. 16. b.

Yet of that Survey so made by the Conqueror, there is still remaining a most perfect and excellent memoriall, kept in the Treasurie of the Exchequer, at Westminster, and intituled by the name of Liber Judiciarius, or Doomesday-book; by the light whereof I have been guided in discovering the most antient possessors of the principall places in this Shire: touching which Survey our Historians do somewhat differ in the time when it began, as these Authorities, cited in the margin, do shew; but the Red book manifests, that it was in the fourteenth year of that King's reign; and that it was not perfected till the xxth. the volume it self declareth.

M Paris. M. Westm. 16. n. Conq.

That this work was performed with great curiositie and strictnesse, observe what an eminent and very antient Historian^a saith---Misit autem dehinc Rex potentissimus Justiciarios per unamquamq; Scyram, id est Provinciam Angliæ, & inquirere fecit per iurjurandum, quot Hydæ, id est jugera, uni aratro sufficientia per annum, essent in unaquaq; villa, & quot animalia: Fecit etiam inquire quid unaquæq; Urbis, Castellum, Vicus, Villa, Flumen, Palus, Silva redderet per annum: Hæc autem omnia in Chartis scripta, delata sunt ad Regem, & inter thesauros deposita usq; hodie servantur. And to the same purpose Ingulphus Abbot of Crouland, a Writer of great credit, who lived in that age, (saying^c, that he himself went up to London, and took brief notes of the lands belonging to their Monasterie, so surveyed, as they were recorded in the before specified Book, for his successors better knowledge) hath this expression---Totam terram descripsit, nec erat Hyda in tota Anglia, quin valorem ejus & possessorem suum scivit; nec Lacus, nec locus aliquis, quin in Regis Rotulo extitit descriptus, ac ejus redditus & proventus, ipsa possessio & ejus possessor, Regiæ notitiæ manifestatus, juxta taxatorum fidem, qui electi de qualibet patria, territorium proprium describebant: the substance of all which is thus Englished by an old Poet^d.

furth^r crave leave, considering how vast a change this Conquest made, to go on a little in taking a breif view of the courses then exercised to make a firm establishment thereof.

And first for his Crueltie to the native English, 'tis evident, that he spared not the very Clergie, imprisoningⁿ Stigand Archbishop of Canterbury till he died, with many others; degrading divers Abbots, wasting the lands of Wolstan Bishop of Worcester, Walter Bishop of Hereford, and Frethric Abbot of S. Albans; compelling many of the Nobilitie and others to forsakeⁱ the Kingdom; forcing divers, aswell Priests as Lay-men, driven^u out of their possessions, to betakeⁱ themselves to Woods and Deserts, where they were constrained to live as Savages, whereby there was scarce^m a great man left; all sorts of men being reduced to such miserie and servitude, that it was held a disgrace to be accounted an Englishman--- Tantum tunc Anglicos abominati sunt, saith Ingulphusⁿ, ut quantocunq; merito pollerent, de dignitatibus pellerentur, & multo minus habiles alienigenæ de quacunq; alia natione, quæ sub cœlo est, extitissent, gratanter assumerentur: For which being toucht with compunction when he lay upon his Death-bed, he cryed out thus to his Friends.---Multis^o (ô Amici) gravibusq; peccatis onustus, contremisco, & mœx ad tremendum Dei Judicium rapiendus, quid faciam ignoro: and so goes on deploring his iniquities; and amongst other of his sins that lay heavie upon his conscience, he hath this expressionⁿ.---Naturales Regni filios plus æquo exosus habui, Nobiles & vulgares crudeliter vexavi, injustè multos exhæreditavi, innumeros, maximè in pago Eboracensi, fame seu ferro mortificavi.

And of his more particular proceedings against them, and advancing his Normans, observe this notable relationⁿ from a person^{*} that lived in the next age. Post regni conquestionem &c. After the Conquest of the Realm, there was diligent enquiry made, who were in Armes at the battail against the King, that had saved themselves by flight: To these and the heirs of those which were slain therein, all hope was shut for obtaining any of their lands or possessions; Nay, it was thought to be a great favour that they were permitted to live: yet those which were required to put themselves in Arms and did not, and others that were not in the battail, with much and earnest suit had obtained favour from their new Lords, though without hope that their Children should succeed therein; and at length their sons began to retain those possessions at the will of the Lord: but after a while they became odious to them, and were driven away every where from their estates; neither was there any man that would restore what he had so taken from them: So that the Natives being thus despoiled of their substance, and hated, made a common complaint to the King; whereupon advising with his Councell, he decreed, that what they could obtain from their Lords, either in consideration of any merit or service, by lawfull agreement, they should enjoy to themselves without interruption, but by way of descent they should challenge nothing: which, with what discreet consideration it was provided (saith mine Author) is manifest enough, especially because by this means, they were thenceforth for their own sakes bound to studie all obsequiousnesse to their Lords, as to the purchasing of their favour; for none of this conquer'd Nation. saith he, did possess any thing which seemed to be his own by right of Descent, but what onely through his deserts, or by agreement he could obtain.

But besides these ways of high oppression, he wanted not divers subtille devices to secure his dominion.

First by building[†] of Castles in sundry parts of the Realme: Then to prevent tumults, in the Night season not only disarming the native English; but causing^{*} a Bell to be rung in every Parish, at eight of the clock in the evening, at the sound whereof every one was to cover their Fire and go to rest.----Item ut ferociam populi ad otium perduceret, omnibus arma ademit (saith Polidore) statuitq; ut quisq; paterfamilias vesperi, circiter horam octavam post meridiem, testis cineribus igne dormitum iret; & ad id signum vicatim dari voluit per campinas, id quod etiam nunc servatur, & Normanicè vulgò dicitur Cobertfeu. And in that year in which he triumphed, saithⁿ M. Paris, he took with him some of the English Nobility into Normandie, and married them to Norman Ladies; and in like sort did he marry divers English women to his Normans; continuallyⁱ loading the people with heavy Taxes, to the end they might have enough adoe in busying themselves how to live, rather than to have any leisure to stir up commotions. Moreover, for the better new-moulding them, he introducedⁱ hither, the Norman fashion in making Conveances and Grants, viz. by Deeds sealed with wax, whereas before, they were testified with Crosses, and subscribed by those which were present; causing the Laws of the Land, Statutes of the preceding Kings, and all Pleadings to be written in the French tongue. Nay, to the end that the English Language might in time wear out of use, he took care that the French should be taught in Schools; as also in writing appointed that the French Fashion should be imitated: And for the better accomplishment of his designe, introduced the termes of Hawking, Hunting, Tennis-play, Dice, and other pastimes in that Language.

THE PREFACE.

Baltinglasse. (2) Of Richard Murden Esquire, at ~~Boston~~ Boston, whose sole daughter and heir is the Ladie Harvey, widow of Sir Stephen Harvey Knight of the Bath (3) of Sir Edward Ferrers at Badley: Clinton, whose heir is Henry Ferrers Esquire, now Lord of that place (4) And of Sir Edward Devereux Knight and Baronet, at Alton juxta Bermingham, whose grandson and heir is the present Viscount Hereford.

Of the Religious Houses, Hospitalls and Chantries (those signall Monuments of our Forefathers Pictie) I have shewed their Foundations, endowments, and continuance, with their dissolutions and ruine, which gave the greatesse blow to Antiquities that ever England had, by the destruction and spoil of many rare Manuscripts, and no small number of famous Monuments.

And to the end that my discourse of the severall places, may be the more perspicuous, taking notice of that excellent expression of ^a Arias Montanus, viz. -- Si enim absq; locorum observatione res gestæ narrentur, aut sine Topographiæ cognitione Historiæ legantur, aded confusataq; perturbata erunt omnia, ut ex iis nihil non obscurum, nihil non difficile elici possit, I have drawn exact Schemes of the severall Hundreds; wherein, besides the rectifying of divers places, which stand amisse in the ordinarie Maps, are inserted many that were hitherto omitted, fixing them according to their direct stations, as also the depopulated Villages, and other places of note, whereof there is mention in the following work; extending the Rivers neerer their originall heads, and adding sundry petty streamlets, heretofore not taken notice of by our Geographers.

In etymologizing the names of Towns and Places, I have not been over-bold, because most of them had their originall denomination from the Britans, or Saxons; and that Time hath much varied the antient name, by contracting it for the more ease in pronounciation, or in some sort altered it from what it was at first, as is evident in most of them: Nor should I have adventured thus far, had I not received much light from that learned Gentleman Mr. VVilliam Somner of Canterbury, my singular friend, unto whom I cannot attribute enough for his great knowledge in Antiquities, and those commendable works, which he hath ^a already published, and is now taking pains in.

Much variation there is, I confess, in the names of sundry places and persons, which perhaps may cause some doubt of my care therein: but in that I have been very curious, having Records, or other authentique writings for my authoritie, which I thought much more fit to follow, than to deliver the names as they are now written.

And as my chiefe aime hath been to illustrate the Antiquities of this Countie, so must I desire my Readers to observe, what intricate parts I have walkt in, to make good that undertaking; scil. the whole series of publick Records, and a multitude of antient and obscure Manuscripts, as the references to them do shew: for the better understanding whereof, because the narrownesse of my Margent hath confined me to such brevity, I have added a short Scheme adjoyning to my Index, which will plainly demonstrate what those pieces of words, and single Letters do mean, with notice where the said Records and Manuscripts were, when I had the perusall of them. And, whereas I have cited, nothing to give testimonie of the Churches Dedications, that what I have said therein of them, is from divers old VVills, Testaments, and other authorities in the Registries of the Bishops of Cowenre & Lichfield, and Gloucester, which to have instanced particularly could not well be done, in regard they were all in loose parcells.

And moreover it is to be noted, that to such or such parts of the Pedegrees where no quotation at all is entred, the proof to make them good, will appear in the historical part. And lastly, that the passages of later times are obvious to the present age wherein we live, or have been delivered to me from persons of credit, unto whom they were certainly known.

Perhaps it will be expected, that I should have deduced my Storie of the Places and Families, to this present year, scil. 1656. But as of that there is no great necessitie, in regard whatsoever is memorable of them cannot be unknown to many observing men; and may much more freely, and without danger of exception, be spoken of by the next generation; so must I plead mine own disability to perform it; partly by reason that some, who had the custodie of our publick Records, were over-curious in vouchsafing a view of such things which concern the last age, deeming it an hinderance to their profit, that ought should be made publick in that kind; and partly in regard that some Gentlemen, doubting that the sight of their Evidences might expose their estates to be questioned, have been nice in yielding thereunto. And 'tis not unlike that some, but for the most part the younger branches of many Families, may think themselves neglected, because their Descents and Matches are not memorized in this work, but to the greatest part of these, I can very justly say, that I had no exact knowledge of them, nor fit means to accomplish it, which is (I hope) a sufficient Apologie.

Of the Incumbents to Ecclesiasticall Benefices, I confesse there is not in this work, an exact succession, divers being omitted, whereof some, which men now living, knew: But the reason is easily given; viz. the neglect of the Bishop's Secretaries, to record their Institutions; which hath never been so great as in this last Centurie: for to such a height was it grown, within our own time, that notwithstanding ample Fees were received in consideration thereof, they seldome kept a Paper-book for that purpose; but at best, made a brief note of it upon the Instrument of Presentation, which being slightly put on a File, was soon after broke off, and lost.

Nor of the Abbots, Abbesses, and Priors, is there any perfect Series, in regard that the Bishops Registers have noted but few of them, and that other Records are therein, for the most part silent.

And now to conclude this Proëme, I shall farther advertise my Reader, that though the following Work seemeth by its Title to relate meerly to this Countie; nevertheless there are some Descents, and much that is historicall, which doth not a little concern many Families in other parts, forasmuch as not a few Lordships in it are possesst by such persons, whose residence is elsewhere, and that matches of heirs female, either hither or from hence, have been so frequent. And it is no lesse considerable, that divers discourses therein are of generall importance, as to matter of knowledg, pointing out the originall or antiquitie of severall things whereof most men perhaps are not as yet so far informed; scil. of Parishes, Consecration, and Dedication of Churches, Feasts of such their Dedication (called Wakes) Mercates and Faires; solemnities antiently used at the Baptizing of Children; the sacred and Courtly Ceremonies in conferring the honour of Knighthood; as also of Sepulture, Grants b, Charter, Seales, Mortuaries, and others, whereunto the Index briefly directeth. In all which, and throughout the whole work, I have to my utmost, endeavoured the plainest stile, as most meet (in my Judgment) for such a business; well remembering that of Cicero, how an Historian should be qualified, scil. not of necessitie to be an Orator, satis est non esse mendacem, saith he. The Truth is it, which is principally to be aimed at; for a little after he thus goes on, Nam quis nescit primam esse Historiæ legem, ne quid falsi dicere audeat? deinde ne quid veri non audeat? ne qua suspicio gratiæ sit in scribendo? ne qua simultatis? Hæc scilicet fundamenta nota sunt omnibus.

As undertaking (I acknowledge) this would have been more proper for such a one whose Ancestors had enjoyed a long succession in this Countie, whereunto I cannot pretend; for my Father was the first, who marrying with a daughter of the House of Swinfen in Staffordshire, seated himself therein, and in the same Parish where my present habitation is; being by birth of Cletherow, in Com. Lanc. and descended from a Familie of good antiquitie in those parts: But I presume, that the less my relations are, the more acceptance will my endeavours find with the ingenuous, and learned, to whose Judgment I only submit both my self and it.

cord, viz. * Doomeday-Book, shew what Hundreds there were in this County at the Norman Conquest; and though all the particular Towns which were contained in each of them do not directly appear, yet by what I shall say, may be discerned, whereabouts those Hundreds did lye, and neerly guess at what they contained: But whether those were the same that were set forth by King Alfred, or if altered, when, and how, I cannot take upon me to say; believing rather, that they might have received some alteration; For by what shall be shewed by and by, it will appear that all those did not continue long after the Conquest, but others started up in the places of some of them; and at this day, instead of them all, which were in number Ten, at the Conquest, there are now only Four in being, and not one of them reteyning the name of any that were then.

The Names of the Hundreds in the Conquerours time.

Now contained within the hundred of Kilneton.

Now contained within the hundred of Knightlow.

Now contained within the hundred of Barlichway.

Now contained within the hundred of Hemlingford.

And because I have a desire to shew (so far as I have any Authority) where the Vestigia of those Hundreds were, I have here inserted the names of such Towns as are positively exprest in Doomeday-Book, to be within each of them; whereby may be discerned, in probability, of what extent they were, in regard that the other Towns, which lye intermixt with these, must, in all likelihood, be contained therein.

But of all these hundreds, except Four, there is not to be found (after that time) a word in Record, viz. Mereton h., Stanley h., Pathlau h., and Tremelau h. instead of the rest there being Winklow h., Cnuchelaw h. (now Knightlow) Chinton (now Kilneton h.) Humelsozd (now Hemlingsozd h.) Barlichway h. (now also in being) Cotes h. and Chiknef h.

Of the antiquity of the present Hundreds (I mean so far as I find them mentioned in Record) I shall shew in their several places, as the Rivers lead me into them: And touching the continuance of the rest (that is, whilst I find mention of them) I will now expresse what I can, and so leave them; referring only Pathlow to be spoke of when I come into Barlichway h. because it yet hath a kind of being, termed by the name of the Liberty of Pathlow unto this day.

Of Winklow h. I find mention in the a Rot. P. 21. 21. H. 2.
of H. 2. it paying then four Marks for a Mur-ther,

b Rot. p. 24. H. 2. ther. In the ^b 24 of H. 2. seven shillings and foure pence for murther, and in ^c 5. Joh. 3 marks. After which time it is called onely Leta de Brynklow; viz. ^d 8. E. 3. upon the Taxation of a fiveteenth and tenth; which word Leta importing that which at this day we call Leet, sheweth that there was a Court here belonging to the Kings Jurisdiction, for part of the Countrey thereabouts; the Towns and Villages there mentioned to be within the same, being these.

Leta de Brinklow.

Belwigham Regis. Herdeburgh-magna. Herdeburgh-parva. Lalleford-longa. Peubold. Pantun. Lalleford-parva. Gosford. Brownes wabere. Penton iuxta Clifton. Church-wabere. Celler-wabere. Walton iuxta Litchby. Pennham-parva. Paylington. Peubold. & Stretton. Cstantwihull Wylfe. Wybetosfe. Wykeble monachorum. Wotthurst. Copston major. Stretardeston. Wyttchroke. Hopsford. Anstye. Folkehill. Keretwey. Princethorpe. Astley.

But for the Etymologie of the word Leet, I cannot well be satisfied, except it proceed from the Saxon word gelaethian, id est, Congregare, which may very well be: For in Kent those divisions of the Countrey are called Lathes, which with us are called Hundreds.

Of Merton-hundred and Stanley-hund. I onely find, that they paid severall Fynes for murther in ^a 21. 24. & 29. H. 2. and in ^{r. R. 1.} howbeit, in 8. E. 3. they are both under the title of Leta and not Hund. as I have said before in Brinklow. Yet it seemes that Stanley continued the name of a Hundred longer than Merton; for in ^s 7. E. 1. it is called Hund. de Stanley.

The particular Towns and Villages in each of them, I have here inserted (as in Brinklow) out of the said Roll of ² 8. E. 3.

Leta de Merton.

Mordenhull. Lodbroke. Rodburne. Southam. Napton. Shukeburgh-super. Fleckenho. Wolfhamcote. Pethercote. Grenburgh. Wolfcote. Caldecote. Salesbrugge. Wylebie. Levington-Hastang. Hull. Bradwell. Mobercote. Leke-wotton. Hull.

Of Tremelau-hundred, I find, that in ^b 1. R. 1. and ⁵ Joh. it fined for Murther: but as I meet with no mention thereof afterwards, so The Hundred can I no further point out where it is, than I have already signified.

Of Chikenel-hundred, it appears that it fined for Murther ⁱ Anno 29 H. 2. 1. R. 1. ^{i Rot. P. de} and ⁵ Joh. but no more. ^{codem an.}

Of Cotes-hundred, & the like in ²⁹ H. 2. ^{k Rot. P. de} But whether this of Cotes was any part of the Countrey about Wapwick; for the Village at the East end of the Town, now called Coton-end, was anciently called Cotes, as I shall have occasion to shew hereafter. Or whether Coton in the Parish of Churchober, anciently also called Cotes, as in due place shall be shewed, I cannot determin.

And as for Chikenel-hundred, I must leave the discovery thereof to others, having no guess whereabout it should be.

So much therefore shall suffice touching the Hundreds, which are not now in being. And because it will fall out that I must begin this work with Knightslow-hundred, I shall therefore here shew what I have met with thereof.

Of Knightslow-hundred.

I shall not need to enumerate the Towns and Villages which it now contains, the Map saving me that labour.

The first mention I find in Record of it, is in ¹ 16. H. 2. where the Sheriffe accounts ^{l Rot. P.} ^{16. H. 2.} Cent. sol. pro placitis conclatis; and there it is called Sipesocha de Cnuchrelawa, those of Chinton, and Humeliso, having there the same title of Sipesocha. The word ^m Secha, by Expositors, signifying a free Court, where Pleas of Debt, Covenant, Trespasse, Detinue, &c. are held; but for the first syllable Sipe, I rather suppose it should be ^s Sithe the Saxon letter p (which was in use long after the Conquest) being mistaken for p, and then if so (and that Mr. Lambert's exposition of the word Sithsecundman to be Legalis homo, or Militaris homo, be right) it will not be improper to interpret Sithesocha, to be Curia libera legalium hominum: for the Hundred Court, we know, is Visus franc. pleg. as we commonly terme it. And if it be taken in the sense of Militarium hominum, it agrees well enough with the nature of that meeting; for to this day in some Counties they are called Wapentac's from the touching of his speare who had the government of the Wapentac assigned to him by the principal sort of men that did associat with him; as Mr. Cambden (speaking of Wapentac's) observeth out of the Laws of St. Edward.

In K. John's time I find it by the name of ⁿ Hundred de Chnitelowe to answer XL. Marc. de fir- ^{n Lib. rub. 233. b.} ma.

In the account of William Lufcy (Sheriffe of the Shires of Warw. and Leicest.) ²¹ H. 3. it is thus recorded.

And amongst the Presentments made by the Hundreds before the Justices Itinerant ⁴ E. 1. there is one from this Hundred, the title whereof is, Hund. de Knytelawe.

The Hundred of Knightlow.

q Ex ipso Rot. in fene. penes Remem. Regis.

Rot. Fin. 4. E. 3. m. x.

the Hundred of Knypetlow (to then it was written) was yearly worth XXIX. l. XVII. s.aving to the Sheriff his two Turnes by year; and that Richard de Stretton, whilst he lived, paid yearly for the same XXIX. l. XVII. s. to the Kings Exchequer.

Upon Inquisition taken 9. E. 2. by vertue of the Kings Precept, (amongst other things,) to certify how many and what Hundreds there were; what Cities, Boroughs, and Towns, &c. and who were owners of them; It is certified, that the Hundred of Knypthlawe was then in the Kings hand. And in 4. E. 3. the King by his Pat. dated at Westm. 3. Jan. granted the Bayliwick of this Hundred dilecto valetto suo Edmundo de Shireford, to his well-beloved Esquire Edmund Shireford, to hold during life; paying by the hands of the Shiriff, for the time being, the antient ferm thereof, according to the Statute in that case made.

But, since that time, finding little thereof memorable, I shall here adde a List of those Towns, within the precincts of it, which do yet owe fure to this Court. Wolston. Lillington. Lemington. Hasling. Prince thope. Hopsford. Lodbroke. Wubbenhill. Burdington. Shilton. Barnacle. Napton. Stretton super-Dunsmore. Radford-Semeley. Bourton. Draycote. Wemcote. Church-Ober. Walton in parocha de Monkskirby.

A word or two now of the place, whence it takes the name, which is a Tumulus, or little heap of earth, standing on the brow of the Hill upon the great road-way leading from Cobentre towards London, as you enter upon Dunsmore-heath, commonly called Knighlowlow-hill, or Knighlowlow-crosse, the latter Syllable Lowe (as we now pronounce it,) but antiently and more truly Lawe, signifying a little Hill; and so Mr. Cambden, in his Remains observes, that the Scots who border nearest to England doule the word in that sense to this day.

That these Lowes, or artificially raised heaps of Earth, were antiently made to cover the Bodies of such as were slain in the field, in the time of the Romans, we have the testimony of Tacitus, where he makes mention of Varus' his overthrow in Germany; and of Germanicus (who is there called Caesar) his coming to the place of that slaughter, and finding the carcases unburied.

—igitur Romanus qui aderat, excercitus (saith he) sextum post cladis annum trium legionum ossa, nullo noscente alienas reliquias an suorum humo regeret, omnes ut conjunctos, ut consanguineos, aut in hostem ira, maesti simul & infensi condebant. Primum extruendo tumulo cespitem Caesar posuit gratissimo munere in defunctos & presentibus doloris socius. These last words implying, that every Souldier brought his turf, or turfs to the raising of a Tumulus, according as his respect was to the defunct; and that Germanicus himself laid the first, as eminent persons have used to do the first stone in the foundation of some notable building.

And that this course in covering the Bodies, not onely of such as were slain in the feild, but of others, was also very antiently used by the Danes and other Northern Nations, I shall here exhibite the testimony of Olaus Wormius; who, now in our age hath brought to light the old Cymbrike antiquities; and, amongst other things, touching the ancient Danish Burials, hath these words

—Ab antiquis Epochas quasdam, a sepeliendi ritibus apud septentrionales introductas esse accepi;

qui cum varii fuerint, illi quoque, eorum habitu ratione, subinde mutabantur. Sic enim membrana mea M. S. tres numerari solent hominum etates, qua ab Inferiarum modo denominationem acceperunt. Prima Holfold. Secunda Hofgold. Tertia Christendoms old. Primitus enim defunctis iussu soluturi, in campo plano juxta viam regiam, aut defuncti pradium sito, circum rata magnitudinis lapidibus efformabant, oblongum tamen, viginti quandoque orgyarum longitudine, latitudine trium: In hoc defuncti cadaver cremabant; cineres collectos urnis includebant, ac in circi medietallo locatos grandioribus undique stipabant saxis, superinjecto saxo aliquo latiore quo cetera tegerent. Hinc totam aream lapidibus, arenâ, glebaque terrestri replebant, ac in formam monticuli collem desuper attollebant, quem demum cespitibus tgebant, ut viriditate sua oculos praterentium recrearet. Hac sepultura Rolfer; & hunc sepeliendi ritum at Rolfe dixerunt. Regibus tantum hunc honorem habitum voluit; alios autem pompa minore tumulatos, &c. Addunt alii Reges tumulos ad magnitudinem & figuram carinae maximae navis Regia descriptos. Secunda etas, Hofgold dicta, ea fuit, quâ cadavera incremata atque integra cum suis ornamentis, in circulo, ex grandioribus confecto saxis, locabant, aliisque circumquaque tgebant, arenam & glebas terre exaggerando usque dum in justam monticuli exurgeret altitudinem, qui cespitibus & aliis saxis demum exterius exornabatur. In praelio casos in unum cumulum conjiciebant, quem Malcoffe vocabant, & supra eos terram exaggerabant, ut in monticuli speciem agger cresceret. Tertia & ultima etas Christendoms old determinatur, ex quo nos Christiani demortuos jam tumulare soleamus, &c.

Which learned Author, further to manifest this usage from other writers, thus goes on — Scien- dum autem quod Dani, cum propter defectum saxorum pyramides & obeliscos extruere minime potuerint, eum in memoriam Regum & heroum suorum, ex terra coacervata ingentem molem, montis instar eminentem statuerunt.

—Fuit ingens monte sub alto Regis Dercenni terreno ex aggere bustum Antiqui Laurentis, opacaeque ilice tectum.

which the learned Gawyn Douglas, sometime Bishop of Dunkel in Scotland; thus translates.

—Under the montane Lair there stude fote hote ane bing of erth upheit like ane mote contengng the cauld astis and birnt banis of auld Dercennus King of Laurentanis oberheloe with aktn treis, &c.

The like expression hath also the said Poet, speaking of the tomb of Cajeta, Aeneas his Nurle.

Now, forasmuch as it appears, by what hath bin said, that these heaps of earth were at first so raised to cover the Bodies of some one person of note, or else of many slain in the Field and brought together, I shall adventure upon the Etymologie of the word lowe or lawe (for they are indifferently called.)

That it might have its originall from the old British word Llehan, id est, locare, vel collocare, as Dr. John Davies in his Dictionary expoundeth it, and so by contraction be pronounced lawe, is not improbable; for so it expresseth the same that tumulus with the antients did. Nam & terra congestio super ossa Tumulus dicitur, as we read in the most learned and ancient Commentary of Servius upon Virgil's iii. Aeneid. ver. 22. And we know well that the word Tumulus signifieth the same that Sepulchrum or monumentum doth; and yet not properly from the very nature of the word, but by a Metonymie. And that the British word Llehan might proceed from the Latine locare, is also likely enough, forasmuch as it is apparent^d, that the Romans did, by kind and most insinuating praises, make the old Britons overstudious of their language and customs.

Add hereunto, that the Romans calling the places wherein they layd the bones of the burned corpses loculos, as it is clear à locando, and that the British llogel is the same with loculus, and it will not seem unutable, that they may have taken their word, whose custome of interring they imitated or expressed. And then, that the Saxons coming after, who frequently changed the vowels, indifferently using the C for L, and the like, expressed the verb logian also, for collocare, or componere, as we see Marc. i. 12. It may very well be, that both Latine, British, and Saxon are all derived from the same Greek Fountain, seeing λογω, as it signified many things with the ancient Greeks, so it was often used for cubare facio. λογω also doth often signify cubo, jaceo; and from this acceptance of the verb cometh λογος and λογος, lectus; our Dutch leggen or liggen, jacere, leger, stratum, cubile; as also llehan, logian, logis, &c.

But forasmuch as in things at this distance from us, by reason of their antiquity, we cannot go upon very absolute certainties, I will adventure upon another, and, in my opinion, more likely conj.ecture.

Bustum, as we find in Pompeius Festus, proprie dicitur locus in quo mortuus est combustus, & sepultus; diciturque bustum, quasi bene ustum. Servius likewise, upon the 185. verse of Virgil his xi. Aeneid. maketh this distinction. Pyra est lignorum congeries. Rogus, quum jam ardere ceperit, dicitur. Bustum jam exustum vocatur. It is therefore not unlikely that the Antients, in imitation of the word bustum (which signified the place where a man was burned and buried) made their word lowe from loge. For illustration therefore of this Etymologie observe, that, not onely leg or lig, but loge also signified a flame, as it should seem from λογε or λογος, flamma, the initial p being here taken away, which sometimes is added; as when the English flanke is made out of the Teutonike lanke. I will not alleage here the British word llogg, incendium, ustio, and lloggt, rere; for they may seem too much different: but I do refer my self to the old Gothike Monuments, in the which, loge signifieth a flame.

Willeramus Abbas in his Paraphrasis also upon cap. 8. ver. 6. of the Canticles, useth loghon, and lloghon instead of ardere, flammam emittere. Those likewise who, as yet in Frisland do entertain their ancient Country language, call the flame loehene: yea almost all the other low-Dutch call a fired straw bunch to dry their vessels withall by the name of lochter. Of this loge therefore, which antiently signified a flame, cometh lowe bustum, without doubt; even as the word law is corrupted out of the old Saxon lagu, lex. and as the word malu is made of maga, stomachus. And that it was so, I am much the more confident, when I consider; that in the Northern parts of England, as also in Scotland, where the vestigia of our ancient language, the Saxon, are most to be found, the flame of any fire is called lowe to this day; the common people usually saying, that the fire low's, when it blazeth or flameth: consonant whereunto is that of the before specified Bishop of Dunkel in the said translation of Virgil.

f Aique omnem ar-natum flamma crepitante cremari.

Now for the word Tumulus, it may very well be derived, either from cumulus, which signifies a heap, or from the verb tumeo, to swell; for it is taken promiscuously, not onely for a place of sepulture, but any rising ground, as in xii. Aeneid. — Et tumulum caput, &c. — tumulique ex aggere satur.

Nor is it unlike, but that these Tumuli have bin instead of Altars to Sacrifice unto the Ghosts of the dead, as the same Virgil bears witness, Et statuent tumulum, & tumulo solennia mittent. We also observe, that there was Sacrifice offred to those Ghosts upon Tumuli which were plac'd at a great distance from the party deceas't, as we find likewise in the before mentioned Authour, — tumulum Rhetæo in littore inanem constitui.

And Andromache, although in a Græcian Citty, Sacrifices Hectorum ad Tumulum. As for the fashion of these Tumuli in Homer's days (near 3000. years since) let himself speak, ἔκδοξ' ἄνδρ', &c.

g Iliad. lib. 3. v. 197.

— Terramque supersudere recentem, tum facto tumuloredeunt.

And in the same place Achilles complains how small a Tumulus he had made for his beloved companion Patroclus; and intreats those that should survive him to raise it to a greater height. ἔκδοξ' ἄνδρ', &c.

h Ib. v. 189.

Exiguum statui tumulum, quicumque relictus Post nostram fuerit mortem, belloque superstes, Illius extructus manibus consurgat ad astra.

Of which desire, you shall find in the last Book of

of the Odysses, that the Græcians were not unmind-full, but built a Sepulcher for him and Patro-clus; a large one indeed, which served afterwards for a land-mark, as appeareth from the same Author, in these words, ἵδμεν δὲ τὸν ἐνθάδε, &c.

2 Odyss. lib.
xlii. v. 80.

*Hos super Augustum tumulum vastumque pelagici (Littore sublimi qua clauditur Hellepontus)
Struximus, ut notum per secula longa maneret, Etque mari longè speculantibus obvius esset.*

2 Per. 636.

And this was the fashion of these Monuments in Homer's time, even for the most famous persons, which may be taken notice of in many other places; as that whereof he makes mention in the third Book ἄλκιμονος Ἑκτορος.

And a little after, another, Πολύβορος Μυῖνος; which is there called a high Hill. As also in the 23. Book, wherein he seems to give notice, that that manner of Buriall was in fashion long before the Trojan wars: for Nestor calls that rising ground, of which he forewarn'd his Son Antilochus in his chariot-race, the monument of some man dead long before; which agrees to that authority, likewise which we find in the last Book of the Iliads in the Burial of Hector;
*Et tumulum saxi ingentibus undique firmant,

Now, it is agreed upon by the best of Authors, that not only the Græcians, but most of the Eastern Nations borrowed their Philosophy, their ways of Sacrifice, and Buriall from the Ægyptians, and, very probably, this custom amongst the rest; especially having so noble a pattern as those much fam'd Pyramids were; which no man doubts to have bin the Monuments of some of their Kings.
And that this fashion did continue till Virgil's time, his distich upon Balista will verify.
Monte sub hoc lapidum tegitur Balista sepulcris, &c.

A word or two now, touching the burning of dead Bodies, in regard it hath bin observed by some judicious persons, who have dig'd to the bottom of divers heaps of earth which are called Lowes, especially on Cogleby heath in Derbyshire, that there have bin found burnt Bones and Charcole there. So also at Lilburne in Portsmouth shire, as Mr. Cambden observeth; and in the Isle of Man, severall Urnes with the like burnt Bones and Coal.

1653.

There is a remarkable place in Plinie, out of which we learn, that it was not an ordinary or usuall thing amongst the antient Romans to burn their dead Bodies: yea, that divers great families never did it; but, that it was most used about them, who dyed in an expedition of a remote War, amongst enemies thirsting after an inhumane and hostile revenge. The custom it self, and the reason thereof is set down by Plinie in the 54.
Chap. of the vii. Book of his Naturall History.

—*Ipsam cremare apud Romanos non fuit veteris instituti: terrâ condebantur. At postquam longinquis bellis obrutos erui cognovere, tunc institutum.
Et tamen multa familia prius servavere ritus, sicut in Corneliâ nemo ante Syllam Dictatorem traditur crematus. Idque voluisse, verum talio-nem, erui C. Marii cadavere. Varus Quintilius his exemplo, and many such like terrified them;
—Ipsius quoque Consul's Corpus, saith Florus
Lib. iv. Cap. 12. where he speaketh of Varus, quod militum pietas abdiderat effossum. Neither had they any reason to expect better usage of the* Britans than of the Germans; seeing divers of their Generals (as Cavallacus, Galcacus and others) had sufficiently declared, how they took it, that the Romans came, in such away, to disturb the tranquillity of their Island, and studied to enslave them all. It seemeth therefore, that any Consul, or eminent warrior dying in such an expedition, was, for that reason, burned upon the level near the via strata, or militaris; And having by this course deprived the exasperated enemies of their hope in ever being able to abuse the dead Body, they did moreover hinder them to scatter the very Bones in haste, when the whole Army congested upon them pure grassy turfs, cut from the surface of the ground; which is the reason why it doth not appear by any hollowness, whence the earth was taken that raised the Tu-mulus.

And thus much shall suffice for these Tumuli, or Lowes (of which kind there are many more in this County); a good part whereof I do acknowledge to have received from the learned Franc. Junius, my worthy friend.

As for the first syllable Knigh (this Tumulus being called Knighstlow) it is a Saxon word and hath divers significations; sometimes it is used for a Man-Child, sometimes for a Young Man, Servant, Bachelor, or unmarried Man. In the Saxon Gospels the Disciples of our Saviour are called leopning cnihtas: but most commonly is that name of Knight attributed to a Souldier, or one that beareth Armes: for the antient manner of conferring the honour of Knighthood, was bal-theo militari decorare. We call them now in Latine Milites; the Italians Cavallieri; the French Chivaliers, in regard they serve as Souldiers on Horse back: but I will not enlarge my self further on this subject, it being so fully handled by others; concluding that this Low was the Tu-mulus or monument (doubtless) of some eminent Souldier in the Romans time.

But the Cross sometime there, was of later erection, as in most publick places of concourse the like hath bin, to put people in mind of the great benefit God hath vouchsafed for the Redemption of mankind by the passion of his Son; which, no doubt, to all pious Christians is of very good use, however, upon pretence that they were idolized, are now demolished in most parts of this Kingdom.

According to my proposed method, beginning with the River Avon, (which hath its head near Pavesby in Portsmouth-shire,) I shall observe that the original thereof is Brittain; Aufona or Avon, with them signifying the same as Fluvius in Latin: and that at its entrance into this County, it meeteth the great Road called Watlingstreet, whereof I hope it will not be thought incongruous to take here some speciall notice.

That it was a work of the Romans is not to be doubted. Whilst Agricola (saith Tacitus n) governed Brittaine, severall wayes were enjoyned, and far distant places (by the purveyours commandement) that the Connirey should carry from the nearest standing Camp, or wintering places, to those that were far of and out of the way; and the Brittans complained, (as the same Tacitus writeth), that the Romans wore out and consumed their bodies and hands, in clearing of woods, and paving the Fens, with a thousand stripes and reproachfull indignities: And we read (saith Mr. Cambden) n Tacit. in vita Agri-

in ancient Records. That in the days of Honorius and Arcadius, there were made in Wiltaine certain beaten wayes from Sea to Sea. And that this was the Romans work, Beda testifieth. The Romans (saith he) inhabited within the wall which Severus had made overthwart the Island towards the Southern side, which the Citties, Churches and Street-wayes, there made, do witness at this day.

From this Way was that ancient City Verolaminum (near St. Albans) called, in the Saxons time Wetlingaceaster p, as appeareth by K. Ethelreds Charter, whereby he granted lands to the monastery of St. Alban, in the year of Christ 996.

Great was the cost and labour, in carrying of Stones, Gravell and Sand, for the making those ways firm and lasting, as may yet be seen in divers parts, where the soyl it self, within many miles, yeildeth not such materials. Nay it hath bin observed, that near St. Albans, in digging the ground where Wetlingstreet-way antiently went, Gravell and Sand hath bin found ten foot deep in the earth, and eighteen foot in breadth, with great flint stones in the bottom, such belike, saith mine Author, q as were at first upon the top thereof. And, in what great account these wayes have antiently bin, may appear by the eminency of the persons, who were employed as Officers for taking care in the oversight of them; Augustus Caesar himself not disdaining the task: And sometimes the Ediles took charge of them, as it appears by Caligula his causing the Edile-vestment of Flavius Vespasianus, when he executed that place negligently, to be publickly dawbed over with dirt: and sometime that imployment was committed Collegio Quaestorum.

They had rules let down de muniendis & struendis viis, which they called Legem viariam, as appears by Celius his Epist. to Cicero; and these they called Viocuri, for viarum curatores; yea they committed the tuition of the wayes to the Gods themselves, and called them Dii vii. Plantus in Mercatore Act. 5. Scen. 2. calls them Lares viales: And Apollo, by Pausanias is termed Viarum praeses. Likewise they used to sacrifice "Dea vivilia, qua ab erroribus viarum mortales liberat"; And there is extant an antique Inscription (the Copy whereof Lipsius upon Smetius hath mentioned) FORTUNAE REDUCI LARI VIALI ROMAE AETERNAE. Q. AXINS AELIAN.

Neither were these ways without great account by our Ancestours the Saxons, as may appear by the Laws of St. Edward, De pace quatuor Chiminorum; that is Viarum, sub majori iudicio; viz. touching the peace of the four road-ways, in some higher Court: And since that time the Statute of Mactlebridge forbiddeth distresses to be taken in any of the Kings High-ways, or common streets; And the Statute called Articuli cleri commandeth, that such as abjured, should not be molested while they be in the High ways.

But of those ways let us hear Rob. of Gloucester in his old ryme, though he be somewhat mistaken, as well in the Tract of them, as in the Makers.

Faire weyes many on ther ben in Englonde;
But four most of all ther ben I understonde,

Clifton.

BUT I will forbear to enlarge my self any further on this subject, and take a view of Clifton, which standeth upon the top of an indifferent hill, on the South-side of Abon, having its name from the scituation; Clippe, and Clive with the Saxons, signifying not onely a rocky place, but any shelving ground.

In Domesday-booke it is written Clifstone, the Norman Transcribers of the certificate made upon that Inquisition taken by the Countrey, mistaking (without doubt) the Saxon letter F. which is thus written f, for a p.

In the time of K. Edward the Conf. this Town was posselt by Alwine, who is commonly called Alwinus viccomes; a great man in those days, and lineall ancestour to that worthy and long lasting family of Arden, that hath flourished ever since in this County, as I shall shew when I come to Curdwoth, in Hemlingford-Hundred.

Which Alwine gave 2 it to the Priory of Coventre, for the health of his soul, by the content of the said King Edward, and of his own sons: but after the Norman-Conquest Earl Alberic (Progenitor to that noble family of Vere antiently, and yet, Earles of Orford) unjustly seized upon it and outed the Monkes; as it is certified by the Conquerours Survey, in which it is found to contain five Hydes. There was then a Church, and two Mills, the value of the whole Lordship being rated at liiii. l.

I have not seen by any Record, how it came out of the line of this Albericus Comes; but certain it is, that it continued not long therein: for it is evident that Ernald de Bois, who lived in K. Stephens time, was owner thereof. And that it was given to him by Robert, surnamed Bossu, then Earl of Leicester is not to be doubted; for upon the grant a of the custody of his heir in the 7. year of K. John, it is said to be de feto Saiheri de Quinci, which Saierus married b Margaret Sister and one of the coheires of Robert Fitz-Parnell Earl of Leicester, and had by her, in partition, the moiety of the Honour of Leicester.

The Originall ground of which payment arose by reason of the damage that the Bishop and his Successours were like to sustain after such appropriation made; because the Parson was to give entertainment to the Bishop when he came to visit; forasmuch as the Bishop might visit ecclesiasticum, that is every particular Church, if he pleased: so that there was good cause, that he should, upon the appropriation, pro indemnitate sua & successorum suorum, reserve something to be paid, in regard they must travail at their own charge.

So that here you see, that whereas the word procuratio doth simply signify procurement, which is for another to do that which the party himself ought; whereupon the word Procurator, in the Civill Law imports as much as an Attourney in the sense of the common Law: so is it in this case strained, by the same reason, to express Dyet or entertainment, which another takes charge of to ease the party himself, on whose care it must otherwise rest.

Now for the term of Appropriation, because I would once for all make it clear to every ordinary capacity; it commeth from the French word appropriar, id est aptare vel accommodare, and properly signifies in our Law (as Dr. Cowell in his Interpreter observes) a severing of a Benefice Ecclesiasticall, which originally and in nature is juris divini, & in patrimonio nullius, to the proper and perpetuall use of some Religious-House or the like: for without the consent of the Bishop, no Religious Orders could receive any Appropriation or Tithes, as by a decree in the Lateran-Councell Anno 1180. was ordeined. Ecclesias & decimas (are the words) de manu laicorum, sine consensu Episcoporum, tam illos (that is Templars and Hospitalars, against whom the Provision was chiefly made) quam quoscunque alios Religiosos, recipere prohibemus; which was confirmed in the Generall Councell of Lateran under Innocent the 3. Anno 1215.

in Domes- day lib.

IN the Conq. Survey this town is written Gan- ra, the Norman Clerks not being used to our English W. but instead thereof used a G, as Gualterus for Walterus, Guillelmus for Willelmus, Garde for Warde, and many more as might be instanced.

This name of Waure (for so it is afterwards, of a long time, written, as well as the two other towns of the same name, of which I shall speak hereafter (viz. Church-waure, now Church-Over, and Thester-waure, now Cester-Over) hath its denomination from the eminent site thereof, being upon a Hill: But however it is thus written, the Countrey people call it Over, and not Waure, which signifies no less, (as we experimentally know) then a high situation: for all towns named Overton, or Wauerton (as I shall have occasion afterwards to instance) do stand upon hilly-ground. Over importing as much as supra.

As for the addition of the first Syllable (Browns) it is to distinguish it from the other neighbouring towns of the same name, which was joyned therewith, as 'tis apparent, by reason that one Bruno x had his feat here in the Conq. time, and held two hydes of land in this place of Geffrey Wince (a man of great note in these parts, as I shall demonstrate when I come to Donkshirby.)

In this place Earl Alberic (of whom I have spoken already in Clifton) held, then also, two hydes and a half; And one Radulfus (of whom I shall make mention in Holme and Peuton) half a hyde.

Upon the Aide a for marriage of the Kings Sister xx. H. 3. there is one mark for half a Knights fee in Brunsewaure of the fee of the Earl of Winchester (in regard of that part of the Honour of Leicester which he held, as I have already shew'd in Clifton.) And in the 55. of H. 3. it appears, that Ernauld de Boys (of whom I have also spoken in Clifton) held four Knights fees in Wetton, Bulkinton, Clifton, Wauere (viz. this Wauere) and Wibstoff: so that it may (without doubt) be concluded, that the possession of this Mannour belonged as anciently to the family of Boys, as Clifton did. How or when they parted with it I know not; but in 8. E. 1. it (being then written Bruneswaure,) was granted, by Robert Hovel, and Alianore his wife, to Theobald Malegal, and Nicholas Test, Merchants of Luke, to be held of the said Robert and Alianore and the heires of Alianore for ever, paying 1. d. at Easter yearly for all services; and for this they yet gave then C C. marks of Silver: so that, it seems to have been of the inheritance of Alianore. And yet in 13. E. 1. did John de Bosco (of whom I have made mention in Clifton) claim 'a Court-leet here, and other liberties, used by his ancestors time out of mind; As also Free-Warren, by the grant of K. H. 3. to Ernauld de Boys, his Father; exhibiting the Kings Charter for the same, which was allowed.

But from the before specified Theobald and Nicholas was it purchased 'by William Revell in 20. E. 1. which William, in 27. of the same K. Reign, obteyned a Charter 'for Free-warren in all his demesne Lands here: And in 35. E. 1. entayled 'it with Clifton, as hath been there exprest.

When these Revells parted with it I find not; nor have I seen any thing more thereof till 11. E. 4. that Thomas Bellers Gentleman releas'd to Richard Boughton Esquire all his right therein; which Richard was of Little-Lawford, and dyed 'seized thereof 3. R. 3. leaving William his Son and Heir, whose descendants, there continuing, have enjoyed it to this day.

The Chappel here, (dedicated to St. Michael) with tythes of Corn and Hay, as also one yard land and a messuage belonging to the mother Church of Clifton, were given 'by Ernauld de Boys (viz. the first) to the Abby of Leicester. In which Chappel & there is Christening and Buriall, by the speciall grant of the Abbot of Leicester in regard of the distance of this village from the Mother Church of Clifton, and the hindrance of access thereto by the overflowing of Abdon, oft times.

Newton.

Adjoyning to this Village is Newton, having its name from the first plantation there, which was then new (it seems) in comparison of the other adjacent Towns.

In 'the Conq. time Turchil de Warwic (Progenitor of the Ardens) held it, viz. by Tenants under him, the remembrance of whose names are not of consequence, it then containing 3. hydes as is certified in the generall Survey.

A great part of this village belonged to the Priory of Kenilworth; some whereof was given 'thereunto by Geffrey Clinton in H. 1. time, at the Buriall of Geffrey his Father, founder of that Monastery (as shall be shew'd in its proper place): which grant 'Henry de Arden, Grandchild of the above mentioned Turchill, confirmed. And the rest, viz. two Hydes, Ernauld de Boys (of whom I have already spoken in Clifton) gave; which Land he the said Ernauld (as by his grant appears) had of Geffrey Clinton before specified. The residue in K. Steph. time did Hugh Bagot purchase, & together, with Cotes (now Coton) of Raphe de Dunnerne: And in consideration of xl. s. which Ingeram Bagot his Brother gave him towards his expedition beyond Sea with Otuerus de Sulley, granted them both to the said Ingeram to be held of Rob. fil. Odonis, the chief Lord of the Fee. Which Ingeram had issue Simon, who sold 'to the Monks of Combe three yard land here; Raph de Mora one of the Heirs to Robert fil. Odonis confirming 'the grant.

[But of these Bagots I purpose to speak, when I come to Preston Bagot, where I shall insert a scheme of their descent.]

Afterward; viz. in 8. Joh. Robert de Cotes (now called Coton in the Parish of Church-Dor.) obteyned by exchange 'from the Abbot and Covent of Combe, all the Land that they had in Newton, for Lands which he gave them in Cotes. And in the '25. of H. 3. Nichola, the Widow of Simon Bagot of Preston (in this County) releas'd to the Abbot and Covent of Combe and their successors, the whole right which she had by reason of her dowrie, in all those Lands of Cotes and Newton. So that in '36. H. 3. that which the Monkes of Combe had in Newton, answered for the sixth part of a Knights-Fee, upon payment of the aid for the Kings transference into Calcoine; which, as it seemes, was viii. yard Land, or else they had more granted after that time to them; for, in '4. E. 1. they enjoyed so much. In the 'xx. of E. 3. it answered also for the sixth part of a Knights Fee.

But, in R. 2. time, by new gifts or smaller measure, that which the Abby of Combe had there, was rated at xxi. yard Land and 1. Acre, accounting 48. Acres to a yard of Land.

Thus did this Monastery continue possessed of Newton till its dissolution. After which, viz. in 36. H. 8. the K. granted 'away (with divers other Lands) that which belonged to the Monks of Combe, to Thomas Broke, and John Williams, and to the Heirs of Broke, by the name of the Mannour of Newton. And yet, in the same year, I find a Licence 'to Mary Dutcheff of Richmond to Alien the very same Mannour to Henry Leigh Esquire. And afterwards by Inquisition 'taken upon the death of the said Henry, is it found, that he dyed seized thereof 14. Apr. 3. Eliz. and that Edward his Son and Heir was xx. years of age. But what became of those Lands, which the Pr. of Kenilworth had here, I have not seen.

Below Newton, Eastwards, lyes Wiggin so called of later time. Wiggin signifying an habitation; in resemblance whereof we have the Saxon word bigengan for inhabitants. As also in the Northern parts the name of Wiggin for a fair House, or Gentlemans seat, but antiently this was called Holme, having been a Village in the Conq. time, though now there be scarce any thing left but a Mill: which name it took from the situation, lying in a nook betwixt the River Avon, and a small brook that comes from Shawell in Leicestershire, as the Map will shew: for such grounds as are in whole, or for the most part, compassed with waters, are so called, as we may observe almost every where.

In the Conq. time Turchil de Warwick held it, by his under-tenants.

From whom it came, with the rest of his Lands, (as it seemes) to the Earles of Warwick; for of their Fee it afterwards was: and thence, partly to Camvile and partly to others. That which Camvile had here, being granted to 'Henry de Rokeby from Richard de Camvile, was by the Canons of Leicester obteined, in H. 2. time, in consideration of the Chappel of Rugby, given by them to him and his Heirs, which Chappel was a member of Clifton, as hath already been manifested. But the Mill, yet standing, they had & from Robert the Son of Fulco de Holme, who in xx. H. 3. was certified to hold the x. part of a Knights fee here of the Earl of Warwick.

Here also had the Canons of Roucester in com. Staff the sixth part of a Knights fee, held of the said Earles; but when or by whom granted I find not. The like 6. part & did the Lady Joane Beuchamp of Bergabury hold in 14. H. 6.

The greatest proportion, if not all, of which particulars, excepting what the Monkes of Combe had, came at length to William Leigh, and Elizabeth his Wife: for in 29. H. 8. were they seized thereof by the name of the Mannour of New-Bigging, which devolved to Henry Leigh Esquire, who had it in 3. Eliz.

But the Mill, and what else belong'd to Combe was granted out of the Crown in 36. H. 8. unto Thomas Brooke and John Williams, and to the Heirs of Brook.

I have now done with the Parish of Clifton; towards the North-west part whereof the River Swiff (that riseth above Lutterworth in Leicester shire) which takes its name from the nimble course thereof (doublets) falls into Avon. This River crossing Watlingstrete entrencheth Warwick-shire at a Bridge called now Benesford-bridge, but antiently Brunesford-bridge. But whether this Bridge had its name from that Colony of the Romans called Bennones, whose station was at High-cross, (not far distant from hence, where the Fosse meets with Watlingstrete.) as Mr. Cambden conceives, is hard to say. It may very well be, that if the right name thereof be Brunesford, as I find it antiently written, it might have its originall from Bruno, who held Bruneswaure in the Conq. time (as I have already shew'd :) for his seat was not far thence you see. But all that I have met with concerning this Bridge, is, that by a presentment of the Jury before the Justices Itinerant at Leicester 12. E. 1. it was then found to have been broken: and that the Towns of Lutterworth and Cotesbach, were to repair the one half thereof; viz. that side which is in Leicester-shire: and Maure and Maure, viz. Church-Ober and Cester-Ober (for that they lye on each side the water,) that towards Warwick-shire.

Church-Ober.

I Have now only, on this side that River, the town of Church-Ober to speak of; with Coton, antiently a village, though at present there be but one House in this Parish; and then I must step on the South side of Avon again.

In the time of Edward the Conf. one Waga (as the Book of Domesday calls him) was Lord of this place, of whom, when I come to speak of Moston in Barlichway-hundred, I shall say more. But after the Norman invasion Robert de Stafford, Progenitor of that great family, I mean the Barons of Stafford, had it. In the Conquerours Survey this town is written Wara, and there certified to contain 7. Hydes: yet we now pronounce it Ober (for the reason I have shew'd in the Etymologizing of Wotton-Ober) and call it Church-

Ober, for distinction from the other adjacent of same name.

Howbeit there is no mention in Domesday-Book, of any Church here in the Conq. time; nor, indeed, in most other places of this County: Nay we are not onely without all knowledge when our Churches were first founded and endowed; but very much to seek as touching many of their presentations and Institutions within that compass of time, in which we are sure such there were. Mirum non est in rebus antiquis Historiam non constare.

Let us therefore observe what we can find, in generall, as well concerning the originall of Parishes, as when they were so fixed, that the Inhabitants, within that precinct, were restrained from paying Tithes to what Church they pleased; in which scrutiny I hope it will not be taken amiss, if here I make a short digression.

In the year of Christ 266. Peace being then restored under Galienus, Dionysius, the Pope ordeined Churches, Church-yards and Parishes, to Priests. This other Popes had done before, but Priests being driven from their charges, in Valerian's persecution, he again did it. But long after those days the Church was in her infancy, as that approved Author venerable Bede, will tell you: for he saith, that in the Province of Bernicia and Deira, Paulinus, who first converted the people in those parts to the Christian faith, Baptized them in the River Swale; there being not, about that time, either Fonts or Churches: and this was about the year of Christ 627. Howbeit in England Honorius (the fifth Arch-Bishop of Canterbury) about the year 636. was the first that ordeined Parishes; ut singulis ministris singulos greges quos curarent posset attribuere. That he might assign to every Priest the particular flock on which he should have charge. And our eminent Antiquary (Mr. Selden) speaking of those antient times hath these words, In the Primitive times of the English-Saxon Church; viz. about the year 684. the Bishop and the whole Clergy of the Dioces, were as one body, living upon their endowments (bestowed on the Bishoprick) and their treasure that came from the sundry places of Devotion, whither some one or other of them, at the Bishops appointment, was sent to Preach the word and Minister the Sacraments, every Clerke having his dividend for his maintenance. And Cuthbert the xi. Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, about the year 752. obtained of the Pope, that the Bodies of the dead should be buried in Church-yards, within the Cities; whereas before, the custom was to carry them out of the walls to be interred.

But the first express mention of limitation of profits (other than of the endowing) to be given to this or that Church, is in those Laws of K. Edgar, made about the year 970. (as Mr. Selden saith) where a threefold division is of Churches. The first is called Ealdan Mynstre, that is Senior Ecclesia, which name antiently was given to Cathedralls. The second a Church that hath Legeþrope or place for buriall, The third Church that hath no Legeþrope; where it is ordeined, that every man, having not erected a Church of his own, shall pay his Tythes to the Ealdan Mynstre & reo hyppnerre to hyppre; that is, to the antientest Church or Monastery where he hears Gods service.

And in the Synod at London held by Anselm Arch-Bishop of Canterbury An. 1102. it was ordained, * ut decime non nisi Ecclesiis dentur; whereby it is plain, that Tythes were given, before that time, at liberty. Nay, such had been the use to pay Tythes where they pleased, that Pope Innocent the 3. in the year 1199. writes to the Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, ut Ecclesiis parochialibus iusta decime persolvantur.

The Epistle is worth observing, therefore have I quoted the place exactly where it is to be seen at large. And Mr. Selden says, It is most certain, that before about the year 1200. after Christ, it was most commonly practised by the laytie, to make arbitrary consecrations of the Tithes of their possessions to what Monastery or Church they would; sometimes giving half, sometimes a third part, and at their pleasure, all in perpetuall right, or otherwise according to the nature of those consecrations in other Countries. And, 'tis sure enough, that many years after that, the people practised such arbitrary disposition of their Tithes: for in the Councell at Uyons, convoked in the year 1275. by Pope Gregory the x. it was ordained; Quod nulli hominum deinceps liceat decimas suas ad libitum, ut antea, ubi vellet assignare, sed matri Ecclesia omnes decimas persolverent.

It should seem, that anciently men payd their Tithes to that place where they had a mind to be buried, which was the cause that they often waded the payment to their proper Parish Church; for Mr. Selden observes, that in an old Councell of Trbur in the year 895. it was decreed, ubi quis decimas persolvebat vivus, ibi sepeliatur & mortuus.

But I find that Simon Islep Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, in the year 1362. did assign, and appoint that the stipend of a Priest should be but lxvi. sol. viii. d. a year, quod plures furari coegit, says the Historian.

A word now touching the first beginning of Institutions to Benefices by the Bishop.

In the National Synod held at Westm. An. 1124. by John de Crema the Popes Legate, it was constituted (saith the before specified learned person) quod Nullus Abbas, nullus Prior, nullus omnino Monachus vel Clericus, Ecclesiam, sive decimam, seu qualibet beneficia Ecclesiastica de dono laici, sine proprii Episcopi autoritate & assensu, suscipiat; quod si presumptum fuerit, irrita erit donatio huiusmodi; and some allowance was given to the Canons by the King: yet it is most certain (saith he) that the practice was for divers years otherwise; and that Churches with Tithes, were most commonly given by lay Patrons without the Bishops assent or institution; and that aswell by filling them with Incumbents, as appropriating them to Monasteries, Chapters, or otherwise.

I now return to Church-over, whereof the first mention I find after the Conq. time, is, that the Monastery of Combe had much land here by the gift of Robert de Wauere, fil Sewardi; and this is very antient; for K. H. 2. confirms it; whence I conclude, that either the same Robert, or Seward his Father, was first enfeoff of a great part, if not of all this Village, by the said Robert de Stadford, or some of his descendants.

Such was the affection of this Robert de Wauere to the Monastery of Combe, that amongst other his grants, he gave thereunto 96. Acres of cr-able Land in this Lordship with his body there to be buried; and that his Obit might be as solemnly kept, as if he had been a Monk of the house. Which grants Roger de VVauere, sonne of the said Robert, (in some called Rogerus de Church-waver (confirms to the said Monastery. And after him Ernaldus filius Ernaldi de waver, gave Lands in this town to the said Abby cum corpore suo, Radulphus filius Elena, dicta de Church-waver ratifying the same. So that the quantity, which the Abbot of Combe had in this place in R. 2. time, was six messuages and three yard Land, containing in the whole 155. Acres and a half; with two Acres and five doles of Meadow.

But this town was then called Waver-Roger, by way of distinction from Wunet-waver and Thesster-waver; the reason whereof is plain, Roger de Wauere (son of Robert) being sometime Lord thereof.

How or when it past from these Waver's I am yet to learn: nor have I seen any thing further of it till 20. E. 1. that Gefferey Stapleford and Joan his Wife entayled it upon the Heirs of their two Bodies. From hence therefore must I make a leap till 9. E. 2. at which time John de Chireford and Geffrey de Morton were certified to be Lords thereof: but it seems, that Morton's moytie came shortly afterwards to the Monastery of Kenilworth; for it appears, that the Abbot and Convent of that House obtayned licence of the King in 7. E. 3. to purchase it from Roger de Boywill, then Parson of Lalleford, and John Lok Vicar of Willington; who, as Feoffees in trust, had it in their hands to convey unto them accordingly: After which it is plain, that they presented to the Rectory, alternis vicibus, as it fell void; but what Lands or Rents they had here I find not, forasmuch as the Survey in 26. H. 8. mentions not any. Nor whither the Monks of Combe obtayned it, to augment what they had in this place, so given as above said, can I say; but certain it is, that after the dissolution of that Monastery, what they had here past by the name of a Mannour, as appeareth by the Licence unto Mary Dutcheis of Richmund for aliening thereof unto William Dixwell and his Wife, in 36. H. 8. (whereby 'tis like that she had the first grant of it from the Crown.) Since which time the Dixwells of Coton (hard by) have been owners of it, as it seems.

As for Shirford's moytie, 'tis plain, that it divolved to the family of Puresey, by Marriage of Margaret, Daughter and Heir of the before specified John de Shireford, unto Philip Puresey of Munsterton in Leicester-shire; and continued in that line for divers ages, as by their presentments to the Rectory may be discerned.

In this Parish upon the old Roman way called Watlingstrete, is to be seen a very great Tumulus, which is of that magnitude, that it puts passengers besides the usuall road. But of this kind I have spoken before in my discourse of Sanctloth-bill, therefore I need not to enlarge my self further on that subject.

In an. 1291. 19. E. 1. the Church (dedicated to the Holy Trinity) was valued at vii. marks and a half; and in 26. H. 8. at 9xv li. At which time the Procurations and Synodals, payd out thereof, were ix. sol. vi. d.

Coton juxta Church-over.

Coton, antiently called Cotes, is in this Parish (Cote and Cotan in the Saxon signifying a House or Habitation, as we know in our ordinary language,) but being a Member of Church-Over is not mentioned in the Conq. Survey.
Nor afterwards, that I have seen, till Hugh Bagot gave it, with Pewton to Ingeram his Brother (as in Pewton I have observed;) which gift Roger Bagot, Son of the said Hugh, confirms, for Cotes enely: wherein is exprest, that William Trussell as chief Lord of the fee, ratified the same, being one of the Heirs of Robetus filius Odonis (as when I come to Worley I, shall have occasion to shew;) and thereupon received homage of the said Ingeram in the Hundred of Wartlichway.

Here was a family to whom this place an-tiently gave name, scil. de Cotes; who held that which they had of the abovementioned Bagots, and were Benefactors to Combe, as appears by some petty grants of Land given to those Monks:
one of which line had Buriall at Combe, as may seem by bequeathing his Body thither, with a Rent of iii. sol. per annum, to boot. But Simon Bagot, in H. 2. time, was he that gave most Land here to that Monastery, besides the homage and service of Robert de Cotes and his Heirs for all that the said Robert held of him in Pewton; which William Trussell, before mentioned, confirmed.

So that what the Monkes of Combe had in Cotes, was half a Knights fee, which they held of William Trussell; and he of Raphe de Mora; and he of the Baron of Stafford in 36.
H. 3. Wherein they claimed a Court-Leet in 13. E. 1. with other Priviledges; calling it the Mannour of Cotes super le mans, (or super waldas, as it is recorded 4. E. 1.) these Hilly parts being then, and after called Woulodes, as many other of that kind are to this day in other Counties;
And in 18. of E. 1. they obtained a Charter of Free-Warren to them and their successours, in all their demesn Lands here. The quantity of their possessions in R. 2. time, being rated at ix.
yard Land lxxxiii. Acres and a half, accounting 48. Acres to a yard Land. But after the dissolution of the Monasteries, this Mannour so belonging to the Monkes of Combe, then called Coton lay wood, was granted out of the Crown (inter alia) to Edward Clinton in 5. E. 6. who as it seems, soon past his title therein unto Thomas Marrow; for in the same year I find, that the said Thomas had Licence to alien it unto William Dixwell, Esquire, to whose descendants it still continues.

Hill-Morton.

Returning now to the South side of Avon, I find, below Clifton, a little rivulet falling into that Channell. This rising about Creek in Northampton-shire comes through Hill Morton, which Town takes its name from the situation;
Hill antiently written Hull, conteyning that part standing on the Bank, and Morton where the Church is, that below in a moorish flat ground.

In the Conq. time it was in the possession of the Earl of Mellent, who had a large share in this County, as by the particulars, when they come in my way, I shall shew. Howbeit I do not find that this Earl of Mellent continued long owner of all those Lands in this County, bestowed upon him by the Conq. but that his Brother Henry de Neuburgh (advanced to the Earldom of Warwick towards the later end of the Conq.
time,) posselt the greatest part of them; and, amongst the rest, had this Hill-Morton (then called Mortone, as appears in Doomesday Book.)
For in 11. H. 2. when William Earl of Warwick certifies what Knights Fees he held de veteri Feoffamento; that is, whereof they that so held them were enfeofed of in the time of H. 1. the Record says, that Philippus de Estlegh held 3. Knights Fees:

Fees: And though the names of the places where they did lye, be not there exprest, 'tis very evident by the sublequent testimonies, which I shall produce, that Hill Porston was one: for the 'Receivers of the aid for the Marriage of the Kings Sister to the Rom. Emperour 20. H. 3. do certify; for Astley and Milberton one Fee and a half; Wellingston one Fee; and Porstone super Dunsmore (which is this Hill Porston) half a Knights Fee; all which were then held of the Earl of Warwick by Walter de Estleg. (Grand-child of the above mentioned Philip.) and do make up three in number, being the proportion the said Philip enjoyed; which Fees in 36. H. 3. were held by Thomas de Astley, Son of Walter, of those Earls. But Astley is the place where I purpose to speak Historically of this antient family; and therefore here shall onely trace down the succession to this, which went out with a younger branch; For the above mentioned Thomas de Astley, marrying a second Wife (as the descent herewith drawn doth shew) had issue, by her severall Sons. To Thomas the eldest of them he gave Hill Porston and the advowson of the Church; entayling it upon any Brother or Sister of the whole Blood, in case Thomas should dye without issue; which grant bears date in May 47. H. 3. But this Thomas the donee about the 'beginning of E. 1. time dyed without issue, leaving his Brother Raphe his Heir; from whom in a direct line did descend Sir Francis Astley of Melton Constable in Posff. Knight, Lord of this Mannour, lately deceased.

Thomas de Estleg. Editha filia Petri Constaprima leg miles 47. H. 3. ble de Melton in com. Noiff. rel. 18. E. 1.

Of Edith (Mother to Thomas.) to whom this Mannour was sôgiven, I find, that she continued many years a widow after her Husbands death. And in 18. of E. 1. granted * to her Son Stephen, all her Lands in Melton Burgh, Maria, Langhara, Birmingham, Snitterley, Winton, Glamforde, Sarlington, Scharnton, Cottingham, Whimingham, Wyldobeston and Porwich in the County of Posff. which descended to her by inheritance after the death of Geffrey, the Son of Peter Constable of Melton, her Brother.

And if there be truth in tradition, (as there is likelihood for antiquity,) that fair Monument of Free-stone, with the statue of a Woman, excellently wrought, lying in the midst of the South Isle of Hill Porston Church, was erected for this Edith, whereof the tabernacle, or cover over her head, is very like to that of Queen Eliano's (Wife to K. Edw. 1.) which is of brass in Wellesminster Abby.

This Thomas, to whom Hill Porston was sôgiven by his Father, obtained to himself and his Heirs in 49. H. 3. a Charter * for a weekly Perccate here upon the Saturday, and a Fair yearly, to begin on the even of St. John Baptiste, and to continue for three dayes: which Grant being made at such time as the King was a Prisoner, the Barons exercising regall authority in his name, held not valid; and therefore in 52. of the same Kings reign, he procured a new Charter, ratifying the Fair, but altering the Perccate to Wednesday. At which time he also had Free warren granted * to him and his Heirs in all his demesne Lands here.

For this Thomas, who dyed before the 13. of E. 1. is there yet standing a very fair monument betwixt two Pillars in the Church of Hill Porston, opposite to that of his Mother Edith, whereon his statue of free-stone lyeth cross leg'd in Armor of Male, as when I come to speak of the Church may be seen, whose Brother and Heir, viz. Raphe de Astley, in 13. E. 1. claymed a Court Leet, and other Priviledges in this Mannour by Prescription; and likewise exhibited K. H. 3. Charter for the Perccate, Fair, and Free warren (last before mentioned) all which were allowed.

To whom succeeded Thomas, his Son and Heir, certified * to be Lord of Hill Porston in 9. E. 2. who liking not the Wednesday Perccate there, procured a new Patent f in 8. E. 3. for to have it upon the Tuesday; continuing the Fair as formerly, and renewing the Charter of Free warren: And in the same year obteyned Licence s for amortizing of certain Lands lying within this Lordship to maintain a Chantry-Priest to sing Mass for ever, in the Chappel of our Lady contiguous to the Parish Church of Hill Porston, for the Souls of him the said Thomas and Margery his wife; As also of Edith Astley, (before mentioned) and of the Father and Mother of the said Thomas, their Heirs and Ancestours, and all Christian Souls deceased.

This Thomas in 9. E. 3. had a speciall Parent, b exempting him from Knighthood.

And in 17. E. 3. gave i the perpetuall Patronage of the Church of Hill Porston to the Dean and Canons of the Colledge of Astley (then newly founded by Thomas Lord Astley, the chief of that family) and dyed k before the 20. of E. 3.

But of his descendants, forasmuch as their residence hath been in Posfolk I have here no more to say.

But there is something else, which I must not pass by, before I leave this place, and that is the foundation of two Chanterpes here. The one of them by ^p Sir Edmund Trussell Knight, in the Chappell of our Lady adjoining to the Parish Church, for the soul of Thomas Astley deceased, and the good estate of Margerie late Wife of the said Thomas; of their Children that were then living, and for the souls of their Children deceased: as also for the Souls of John Primrose, and of the Lady Edith Astley; and for the good estate of Sir Raphe Astley Knight, and Dame Agnes his Wife; Sir Edmund Trussell Knight, and Dame Margerie his Wife; and of Thomas Meilour Priest, and for their souls after their decease.

The Patronage of which Chantry, by the Bishops Instrument for Ordination thereof, was reserved after the death of the same Sir Edmund Trussell, to be in the Heirs of the said Thomas Astley and Margery. And for the maintenance of a Priest, perpetually to sing Mass there, for the purposes above mentioned, the King gave Licence to the said Sir Edmund to amortize four messuages, fifty acres of land, seven acres of meadow, and xxvi. sol. Rent in Hill Morton, as it may seem by the Jurors certificate returned upon the Writ of Ad quod dampnum thereupon.

This Sir Edmund Trussell bore for his Armes a crosse forme fleuritè debruised with a bendlet, as appears by the impression of his Seal,* which I have seen affixed to his first Instrument of Presentation to the said Chantry; And I suppose that he married Margery, the Widow of the said Thomas Astley, though it be not directly exprest in the Ordination before specified.

It is very like that this Chantry swallowed up that whereof I made mention in 8. E. 3. viz. which Thomas Astley had Licence to found: for upon the Survey taken an. 37. H. 8. there was no other but this in that Chappell of our Lady, the lands belonging whereunto were by the Commissioners in 37. H. 8. certified to be of the yearly value, over and above all reprises, of iiii. l. xviii. sol. x. d. For the other Chantry was in a Chappell of St. James in Hill super Dunmole (as the Record expresses;) which is that part of the town, situate upon the Hill Westwards from the Church; and founded by ^p Mag. Thomas de Morton in 18. E. 3.

The certificate in 37. H. 8. expressly says he was a Priest, and the word Mag. imports as much; yet in the Licence given to him to amortize lands thereunto; viz. one messuage, one yard land, and four acres; as also four acres and one rood of meadow in Hill Morton aforesaid; it is for a Priest to sing Mass for the good estate of him the said Thomas and Alice his Wife, and Margerie their Daughter during their lives; and for their souls when they should depart this world; As also for the souls of Adam de Morton his father, and their ancestours, &c. But it seems, he was a married man, and a professor in some other science.

The value thereof in 37. H. 8. was certified to be xlv. s. viii. d.

In this Lordship of Hill Morton there were also eight messuages, and one yard land and a quarter given by one William Poyntell, to the Hospitall of St. John Baptist in Lutterworth for the finding of a Chantry Priest, there to sing Mass for the souls of him the said William and his Wife (3. E. 3.)

Rugby.

ON the South-VVest side of this little Rill, which comes from Hill Morton, lyes Rugby, bounded with Abon towards the North; but in Domesday-Book written Rocheberie; Berle signifying with our ancestors a Court or habitation of pore; And Roche a rock or quarry of stone; for such there is VVestwards from this town about half a mile; and 'tis very like that the ground, whereon the town stands, being high, is of the same condition, though that the quarry lye not very near the surface of the earth; so that then the nature of the soyl, may be the occasion of the name. Howbeit in all the elder times si- thence, it is written Rokebpy with a k. instead of the Ch.

In the Conquerours time Turchil de Warwick, of whom I have already made mention, was owner of it, one Eddulfus (for so he is called in Domesday-Book) then holding it of him; it sayeth being then certified to contain two hydes and a half: the posterity of which Eddulfus continued posselt thereof, holding it by half a Knights Fee of the said Turchill's Heirs, till it went away with a Daughter and Heir in Edw. the first his time, as the descent will shew.

But Thurbert, the son of this Eddulfus, is sometimes called Thurbertus filius Hadewolff de Bilineja; for it seems he had also a Seat at Wilney, (now called Winey) and sometimes Thurbertus de Rochebe; and was a notable benefactor to the Monks of Combe, giving a large precinct of his land in Wilney, adjoining to Smite, (within which Smite the monastery was founded) the lands being exprest by boundaries after the ancient manner; which grant was ratified by Henry son to the same Thurbert, who calls himself Henricus de Rokeby filius Thurberti de Biliney; adding to his fathers gift the Mill of Wilney, and some other land: for the better assurance whereof, Henry de Arderne, grandson to Turchill, confirms the grant, though that, with a great part also of his inheritance, was taken away by the Conquerour, or King H. 1. and given to the Earl of Warwick (as I think) before that time, which was in the reign of K. Steph. Roger Earl of Warwick being a witness therunto: for Earl William (son of Roger) adds his Charter of confirmation to them all, which needed not, had he not been possessor of Arderne's lands.

Here was a little Castle at Rokeby, which stood about a furlong from the Church Northwards; as is to be seen by the banks of earth, and part of the moat, yet remaining. I am of opinion, that this was one of those Castles which were built in King Stephens time; for fearing the coming of the Empress (as saith mine Author) concessit ut quilibet procerum suorum munitionem, seu castrum, in proprio fundo facere posset; Almost all which were demolished by the command of K. H. 2. about the third year of his reign. And besides the probability thereof, the Inhabitants have it by tradition, that it was Sir Henry Rokeby's castle.

This Henry de Rokeby was a benefactor to the Abby of Pipwell in Northamptonshire, as appears by what he gave in Rokeby, where the Monks of Pipwell had a grange. He also gave all the land which he had in Holme, to the Canons of Leicester (whereof I have already spoke) for the advowson of the Chappel of Rokeby, which was a member of Clifton, and belonging to that Abby: touching which Chappel there was a sute betwixt the said Henry, and the Abbot of Leicester in the 2. year of K. John; and bequeathing his body to be buried at Combe, therewith gave the yearly rent of half a mark of silver, issuing out of the Mill of Aston (juxta Birmingham) in this County; which Henry had issue Henry, who confirmed all the grants to that Abby made by his grandfather and father, adding something from himself in Wilney. But it seems that the difference concerning the advowson of the Chappel of Rokeby ended not till this time: For by a fine levied 5. H. 3. betwixt Henry Rokeby and the Abbot of Leicester, it was concluded, that the said Henry and his heirs, should exhibit a fit Clerk to the same Abbot and his successors, whom they might present to the Bishop; which Clerk should pay to them yearly, the ancient and due pension, that the Abby of Leicester had wont to receive out of the said Chappel, of Rokeby in right of their Church of Clifton: And to perfect this agreement, the said Henry gave to that Abby for ever, a yard land in Holme.

This Henry was a Knight; for so by his grant under seal he is stiled; whereby, with the consent of Ranulph his son and heir, he gave a yard land in Rokeby to the Prior and Monks of Witby. And in the 39 of H. 3. obtained for himself and his heirs a Charter for a weekly Mercate here every Saturday, and for a Fair yearly, beginning on the Even of St. Laurence, to endure for three daies; with Free warren in all his demesne lands in Warwickshire. For the advantage of which Mercate, the Abbot of Combe earnestly moved the Monks of Pipwell for permission, that they might purchase, or erect a house in Rokeby to receive those Monks of theirs, as they should have occasion to imploy thither. Howbeit in 13 E. 1. Annabilla, the Widow of the said Henry, holding this Mannour in dower, and claiming Free warren with a Mercate and Faire here; for which she exhibited the Charter of K. H. 3. extended her claim further than that Charter warranted, as it seems: for it was then found, that she challenged liberty to punish the breakers of the Assize of Bread and Ale, whereof being not seized, the Shiriff entred upon the Market, Fair and Free warren for the King. To which last mentioned Henry succeeded Ranulph his son and heir, who dyed before 20 E. 1. for in the 24 of that Kings reign, Raph Basset, son and heir of Simon Basset of Sapcote, granted the custody of Annabil his daughter and heir, with her marriage, to Peter de Leicester Clerk. Which Annabil was the wife of Sir John Goband Kt. Howbeit Annabil her mother being married to Mundevill, held Rokeby in dower. 3 E. 2.

In 1 E. 3. the before specified John Goband, and Annabil his wife, had a Court Leet and other privileges granted to them in this their Mannour of Rokeby, after which it continued not long in that family; for in 23 E. 3. John the son and heir of Sir John Goband Kt. past the inheritance thereof, with the advowson of the Church, to Raph Lord Stafford, and Sir John Oddingells Kt. and their heirs. In which grant he makes mention, that the same was settled upon John Brown and Annabil his wife, and upon him the said John Goband, and his heirs, by John Charnells Parson of the Church of Sweepston in Leicestershire. I suppose that this Annabil married to her second husband the before mentioned John Brown: for in 20 E. 3. John Brown is said to be Lord of Rugby, which doubtless was in her right. After which, in 24 E. 3. Sir Thomas Charnells Kt. releast to the said Raph Lord Stafford all his interest in this Mannour. And in 7 R. 2. Nicholas Goband, Rector of the Church of Cley, did the like to Hugh Earl Stafford, son of the said Raph; in consideration whereof he received xl. l. sterling. Which Nicholas Goband sealed with three Crosses crosslets fitchè upon the fesse, to difference him from the principall branch of that family, who bore a plain fesse, and 3. besants in chief.

The Release of Sir John Odingells to the said Baron of Stafford I have not seen, Howbeit, there is no question, but that such a thing there was: for in the same 23. year of E. 3. the Lord Stafford, as Patron of the Church, exhibited his Clerk to the Abbot of Leicester; according to the Agreement before exprest.

This Mannour continued in the Family of Stafford till the death of Humphrey Duke of Buckingham in 38. H. 6. but how much longer I have not yet seen: for the next mention I find thereof is, that Ric. 3. an. 1. of his Reign granted it to John Lord Dudley, and to the Heirs of his body, in which Patent it appears, that it came to his hands by the death of Margaret Countess of Richmond (who was mother to K. Henry 7.) and that he so gave it to the Lord Dudley for his faithfull service in favouring his (usurped) title to the Crown. It should seem that Thomas Lord Stanley (who was Husband to the Countess of Richmond) held it during his life: for I have seen a Grant by the said Lord Dudley dated 1 Aug. 2. R. 3. whereby he makes dilectum consanguineum (for so he calls him) his beloved Kinsman Will. Catesby Esq. Steward thereof, whensoever it should come into his hands, or the possession of his Heirs; and to receive for his yearly Fee ten marks sterling; In which grant it is exprest, that the said Lord Stanley, then had it for that term.

But I perceive it came again to the house of Stafford, though I have not yet seen how nor when; for immediatly upon the attainder of Edward Duke of Buckingham, Henry 8. granted it to Sir Gilbert Talboys Kt. and Elizabeth his Wife, and the Heirs of their two bodies; exprest, that it was Edward late Duke of Buckingham's attained. Which Sir Gilbert and Elizabeth, had issue Elizabeth their Daughter and Heir wedded to Ambrose Dudley (afterwards Earl of Warwick;) who in 2 Eliz. sold it together with the advowson of the Church to John Wyrley and Dorothe his wife. Which Dorothe dyed, seized thereof ult. Martii 28. Eliz. Francis her Son and Heir being then 40. years of age.

In an. 1291. 19. E. 1. the Church (dedicated to St. Andrew) was valued 2 at seven marks and a half. And in 26. H. 8. at xvii. li. xix. s. ii. d. over and above xx. sol. yearly Pension issuing out of it to the Abb. of Leicester; and ix. sol. vi. d. for Procurations and Synodalls.

Bilton.

Southwards from Rugby stands Bilton, which was the freehold of one Illuinus before the Norman invasion. And in the Conq. Survey certified to contain five hydes; whereof all, except one virgate, were then possessed by Roger de Montgomerie, Earl of Arundell and Shrewsbury (of which Earl I shall speak more largely when I come to Wolston) that virgate belonging to Turchill de Warwick. In the certificate of what Earl Roger held, it is written Belstone; but in the other of Turchill's lands Bentone, mistaking, as I suppose, the u. for an n. in regard it was there written Bentone, the i. being changed for the u. according to the ordinary pronunciation of many words amongst the vulgar; as in Lalleford (the very next town) which is usually called Lanford; and of latter times so written.

Marie the wife of this Walter, she, for her confirmation thereof, had a gold Ring and a palfrey given to her by the Abbot; which Walter left one only daughter his heir named, Beatrix, who brought this Lordship in marriage to Roger the son of Geffrey de Crast (owner of Craste in Letchester-shire, whereof he took his name) and confirmed the gift of his Father in Law, as he acknowledges he promised to do, the very day when he marryed the said Beatrix, standing before the dore of the monastery, in the presence of Geffrey his Father, Robert his Brother, and divers others: And afterwards, upon the buriall of the same Beatrix in the Church-yard at Wpswell, with Roger his son and heir, gave also to those Monks for the health of her soul xi. selions of land, and a piece of meadow in Wilton: which Roger (the second) following the steps of his ancestours in bounty to that Abby, ratified all that his Grandfather, viz. Walterus fil. Hingan gave; and for the better assuring thereof levyed a fine thereupon at Westm. on the Eve of St. Peter and Paul 7. R. i. adding of his own gift common of pasture in Wilton for three hundred Ewes, twelve Kyne and a Bull, five Sows and a Boar with their Pigs, sixteen Oxen, and six young Beasts; and fewell in Wilton-moor, as much as should be necessary for the expence of the Monks in their grange at Wilton: which grange hath been usually called W Dunchurch grange, in regard that the lands belonging thereto, did lye in the fields of Dunchurch and Wilton; but it is situate in part of Wilton.

This last Roger was in Armes against K. John (towards the end of his reign) at that time, when ^b Robert Fitzwalter, (a great Baron,) was made Princeps militiae; id est, the Generall: for the better carrying on of which work, the people attributed to him the title of Mareschallus exercitus Dei & Ecclesia, but this enterprize not thriving, it was called a Rebellion, and those that had a hand therein were glad to seek for mercy; amongst which this Roger was one; who, by the favour of K. H. 3. (son of K. John) upon returning to his allegiance, had his lands that were seized on for that insurrection, restored to him again; which Roger (for it might be he) was living in 20. and 25. H. 3. for I find him charged & in both those years for a Kts. fee in Wilton. Howbeit, after that; viz. in 36 H. 3. (upon collection of the Aide for the Kings transference into Castigoigne) Roger de Crafee answered for a Kts. fee in this place: but I suppose that this was the third Roger; for 'tis not like that the other could then be alive.

It doth not appear to me, clearly, how Bilton went from this line of Crasie; but Charnels was the next that, I find, possess it, and if I may take my liberty to guesse, I shall suppose, that it was by a Daughter of Crasie.

About the beginning of Edw. 1. time, Nicholas Charnells Kt. entayled "this and other Lordships in Leicester-shire on his son George and the heirs male of his body, and for default of such issue on Sir William Charnells Kt. brother of the said Sir Nicholas, with divers other remainders. In which family of Charnells it continued till the beginning of R. 2. time; and then by Maude, daughter and heir of Thomas Charnells, came to Trussell.

Of the before specified Nicholas, I find, that being in that Rebellion with the Barons against K. H. 3. (so happily crushed in 49 of his reign) he was of the retinue to Hamon Straunge (a great man towards the coast of Wales, and one of the most active of those Barons) but afterwards, through the Kings mercy, received his pardon for that offence: And, in the beginning of E. 1. time, had the trust (amongst other men of note in this County) to be constituted one of the Justices of Goal-delivery; for so I find him recorded in an. 2. 9. 3. 6. f. & 8. E. 1. Which Nicholas left issue George, who, amongst divers other men of valour in that time, had summons to be at Warwick upon Twede upon the feast day of the Nativity of St. John Baptist, 29 E. 1. sufficiently furnished with Horse and Arms to attend the King in his expedition against the Scots. Which George, by a fine levied Oftab. Trin. 2 E. 2. entailed this Mannour, with the advowson of the Church, upon (his son) Nicholas Charnels and Joan his wife, and the heirs of the same Nicholas by her the said Joan; reserving unto himself first an estate for life therein: and was one of the Knights for this Shire in the Parliament of 6. E. 2. but after that time he lived not long: for in 13. E. 2. Lucia his widow held this Lordship in dower. To whom succeeded Nicholas his son, of whom I find, that in 18 E. 2. he was joyned with Roger la Zouch for the choosing of xxx Hobelers and lx Archers, in the Counties of War. and Leic. for an expedition into Galcoine. In 13 E. 3. one of the Knights for this Shire in the Parliament then held at Westminster. In 20 E. 3. of the retinue to Thomas Husfield then Bp. of Duresme in the French expedition (which B. was the Founder of Duresme-Colledge in Orford, and Duresme-House in London.) In 30 E. 3. assigned one of the Justices in this County for putting the statute of Labourers in execution; And that he had issue Thomas, and he Maud a daughter and heir, wedded to Laurence Trussell of Cubledon in Staffordshire, by which means this Lordship, with divers Mannours also in Leicestershire, devolved to that family: but was not enjoyed without great suits: for John Charnells of Beutworth, in this County, (combining with one John Marshall Parson of the Church of Swepton in Leicestershire, who had been a feoffee in trust for those lands) intruded himself into the possession of a large part thereof, obtaining a Charter of Free-warren in this Mannour of Wilton to himself and his heirs: And, for the better effecting of his purpose, deduced his pretended title from the King; alledging, that Edw. Prince of Wales (Father to the King) dyed seized of it, having been enfeoffed thereof by the said John Charnells: And, the better to carry on his design, caused an Inquisition to be taken after the death of the said Prince, whereby it was found accordingly: so that after much suit, in the latter end of E. 3. time, exhibiting a Petition in Parliament, 1 R. 2. the K. directed his Precept to the Judges of the Common Pleas to do her right therein; whereupon (it seems) she recovered it: for in 9 R. 2. she, with Laurence Trussell her husband, demised it to Sir Raph Ferrers Kt. to hold during his life, paying a Roke onely at the Feast of the Nativity of St. John Baptist yearly. After which it continued in the line of Trussell, till the beginning of H. 8. time: (for though I finde in the Institutions of 10. and 14. H. 4. that Sir Robert Lytton Kt. as Lord of the Mannour, presented to the Rectory, I conceive it to be an estate to him in trust onely; because, neither before nor after that time, is there any mention of him otherwise) and then by Eliz. daughter of Edward, but sister and heir to her brother John, it came to the Earls of Orford: for in 22 H. 7. the K. granted to John E. of Orford, and to John Vere Nephew of the same Earl, the wardship and marriage of the said Eliz. to the intent (as the Record saith) that she should be married to the said John Vere, who was then servant to the King, and next heir male to the above said Earl.

Of which Trussells, whose seat was at Aylmesthorpe in Leicestershire (which they also had by Charnells heir) I have onely added the descent, that the succession of this Lordship may be the better illustrated; for in Warwickshire they had no employment of note. But by Edward Earl of Orford, towards the latter end of Qu. Eliz. reign, was it sold unto John Shugborough Esq; then one of the six Clerks in Chancery; which John dyed seized thereof in 42 Eliz. leaving Henry his son and heir, of whom Edward Boughton of Lawford Esq; (having those lands in Wilton sometime belonging to Wipwell-Abby, which after the dissolution were obtained by his Grandfather) purchased it about the beginning of King James his reign; and procured afterwards a Charter of Free-warren to him and his heirs therein; which Edward disposed thereof to Thomas Boughton his second son, who now, scil. anno 1640. maketh his residence here.

The Church (dedicated to St. Mark) was in a. 1291. 19 E. 1. valued at ix marks; but in 26 H. 8. at xv l. xs. vi d. the Procurations and Synodals then being ix s. vi d.

Church-Lawford.

Westward from Bilton, and near the bank of Abon, stands Church-Lawford, (within which Parish is likewise the Village of Long-Lawford, lying somewhat higher upon the same River.) In the Conq. time it was rated ^a for 5 hydes, and then held by one Rainaldus of Roger Earl of Arundell and Shrewsbury, but written Lelleford. The lands of which Roger, in these parts, came afterwards to the family of D'Albany. But in H. 2. time, Roger Hayrun was Lord ^b of this place, in whose male line it continued till E. 2. time, held ^c of the heirs of the said Earl of Arundell: So that, 'tis without doubt, that this Roger Hayrun, or his Father, was first enfeoffed thereof by one of those Earls. And it may be that William Hayrun, who lived in the beginning of K. Steph. time, was ^d Father of the same Roger.

Of this family there were three Rogers successively, all Benefactors ^e to the Monastery of Combe; whose grants John Fitz-Alan, chief Lord of the Fee (by descent from D'Albany) confirmed^f. The last whereof gave ^g a piece of wast ground called Womchill, lying also within this Lordship, to the Abby of Pipwell, with a younger son, who was admitted Monk of that house, upon which those Monks built ^h a sheepcote, and planted trees, it being thenceforth called Parham. As also ⁱ his water-mill here, with the luit of the town, and their heirs, thereto, together with the seat of a wind-mill: and ^k bequeathed his body to be buried in the Abby of Combe, thereupon giving to the Monks in pure and perpetual alms, certain lands of good value. After which, Agnes his widow, desiring also sepulture there, gave ^l all her goods, movable and unmovable, with her body, to that Religious House. But in 36 H. 3. Will. de Waver is styled ^m Dominus de Lalleford (in right of Juliana his wife, questionless; for she is called ⁿ hæres Rogeri Hayrun) so also ^o in 3 E. 1. but how this comes to pass, Roger Hayrun having two sons, viz. William and John (as the descent, and what I shall say besides, doth shew) I cannot well imagine: both which were Lords of this place successively, but dyed without issue (William being living ^p in 56 H. 3. and John in 89 E. 2.) leaving two sisters: but ^q because the inheritance should not be divided, and so diminished, John gave ^r the same to Robert, son to his sister Margerie. Which Robert was son of William de Newnham (by the said Margerie) upon whom the said John, designing him to be his heir, did, by a fine levied ^s craft. Joh. Bapt. 1 E. 2. settle this Mannour, entailing it upon him the said Robert and Eliz. his wife, daughter to one Thomas Boydin of Stretton, and to the heirs of the same Robert begotten on the said Elizabeth; and for default of such issue, to Nicholas brother to the said Robert, with divers other remainders: so that Robert coming thus to the estate, was thereupon called Robertus de Lalleford: howbeit when John dyed, I (certainly) find not.

It seems that this Robert de Lalleford became a man of note in his time; for in 14 E. 3. he was one of the ^t Knights for this Shire in the Parliament then held: but dyed before the 20 E. 3. for in ^u that year John his son and heir relealed to John Whitwell all his right in this Mannour during Whitwell's life. Which John dyed without issue, so that ^v William his brother became thereupon heir; who in 35 E. 3. granted ^w it to Walter VVhythors and Isabell his wife, and to the heirs of Walter.

From whom descended Sir Raphe VVhythors Kt. who granted ^p it to certain feoffees and their heirs; which feoffees passed their title therein to Henry Earl of Derby, Guy de Mone Keeper of the Kings Privy Seal, Sir Henry Green Knight, Sir John Bagot Kt. and others (all great men in those daies) and their heirs; their grant ^q bearing date at Bathkinton, in this County, the monday after the feast day of St. Dunstan. 19 R. 2.

What chopping there was with it for the space of xxvi years ensuing, appears not to me: but in ^r H. 6. I find, that Nicholas Parker of Thornbury (in Gloucestershire) a servant to Hamfray Earl Stafford, passed it to the said Earl and his heirs: whence I ghes, that all these feoffments last mentioned were but in trust, in those turbulent times, for this family of Stafford: In which line it continued till the attainder of Edward Duke of Buck. (13 H. 8.) and by that means coming to the Crown, the K. by his Letters Patents, bearing ^s date 29 Martii the same year, granted ^t it to Thomas

Thomas Marquess Dorset for life; and afterwards, by the like Letters Patents, bearing date 27. Junii 15. of his reign to the said Thomas and to the heirs male of his body.

But I suppose that it came to the Crown, I. Maria, by the attainder of Henry D. of Suffolk, Son to the same Thomas.

For in the next year the Qu. granted Licence to . . . Baylye for aliening thereof unto Thomas Leigh Alderman of London, and his Heirs. (Of whom I shall speak more when I come to Stonley) After which, it was in xi. Eliz. settled by him on Alice his wife during her life, the remainder to William Leigh his younger son, and the heirs male of his body; whose grandchild Francis Lord Dumfries, of whom I shall make further mention in Peunham Regis, doth now (scil. an. 1640.) enjoy it.

In an. 1291. 19. E. 1. the Church (dedicated to St. . . .) was valued at x. marks; and in 26. H. 8. at xli. xv. sol. iiii. d. the procurations and Synodalls then issuing out of it being viii. sol.

Long-Lawford.

This place (as I have said) is in the Parish of Church-Lawford.

In the Conq. time Geoffrey Virce (of whom I am to speak in Monkskirby) posselt it; and, in the xii. year of that Kings reign gave to the Monastery of St. Nicholas at Angiers in France, amongst other things, two parts of the Tithes of Corn and Cattel, and the whole Tyth of Wool and Cheefe, arising within the Precincts thereof, which were received by the Prior and Convent of Monkskirby before mentioned. In that Grant it is written Lellebozt, but in the Conq. Survey, where the same Geoffrey is certified to hold five hydes here, Lellesozd; The addition of the first Syllable Longe, being of later times used to distinguish it from the other, which we now call Church Lawford; and doubtless, was put there to in respect that it lyes not so round together as many othertowns do.

That Nigellus de Albany, Progenitor to the family of Monbray, became posselt of all Virce his lands is apparent: (whereof I shall speak more largely, when I come to Monkskirby) which Nigellus, or Roger his Son (who assumed the name of Monbray) enfeoff Robert de Stuteville thereof: for I find that the said Robert, about the beginning of H. 2. time, passed it to John de Stuteville his younger brother; who, for the health of his own soul, and of the souls of his father and mother, Robert his brother, both their childrens souls; as also the souls of K. his Queen, bestowed it on the Monks of Piptwell. Within the Precinct of this Lordship was a certain Spydney called Black-thyrne, whereupon those Monks built a Corn-Mill, and a Fulling-Mill; which graunts were in the beginning of H. 2. time: for by the said John de Stuteville's confirmation, he ratified it unto the Monks, by the name of Thyrne-mill, with the Floodgates and Damme to the same height and breadth, as it was that year in which the said K. Henry returned from Tholose, viz. the vi. year of his reign. All which were confirmed by William the son of the said Robert de Stuteville, & John and Roger sons of the said John, and by Roger de Monbray, chief Lord of the Fee; as also by Roger Pantolfe nephew and heir to Roger de Stuteville; betwixt which Roger and the Monks of Piptwell there were two agreements concerning Common in the Moor of Long-Lawford, digging of Turf for fewell, and likewise about fishing in the River of Avon; one of these bearing date in xi. Ioh. and the other 3. H. 3. as are to be seen at large in the Leiger-Book of that Monastery.

In E. 1. the Monks of Piptwell had Free Warren (inter alia) granted to them in this Lalleford. But there is little else of moment that I have met with concerning this place, till after the dissolution of the Monasteries; howbeit then, viz. in f. 33 H. 8. did the K. Grant, (amongst other things) to Edward Boughton Esq. and his heirs, the graunge of Long-Lawford, Thyrn-mill, and divers other lands there, which were belonging to Piptwell-Abby. And in 7 E. 6. the Mannour unto one Iohn Green of the City of Westminster, and Raphe Hall of London Scrivener, and their heirs: which Iohn in 1 Maria past away his right therein unto Elizabeth Boughton. But I suppose that Hall's part came shortly after to one Thomas Vrightman: for in 4 Eliz. the said Thomas granted it, by the name of the Mannour of Lawford, which belong'd to the Monks of Piptwell, unto Sir Thomas Leigh Kt. and Dame Alice his wife: which Sir Thomas dyed & seized thereof; and at this day Francis Lord Dunsmore, his great grand-child, (by Sir William Leigh a younger son) enjoys it, viz. an. 1640.

I have now done with Long Lawford.

There is in this Parish of Church Lawford a place called the Stode, situate upon Dunsmore-heath, where was antiently a Chappell: which, with divers Churches and other things, became appropriate to the Priory of Cobentre in the year of our Lord 1260. (44 H. 3.) and as appears by the Grant of K. Philip and Mary an. 1. & 2. of their reign, was an inclosed grove; but stands from the town about a mile South-west.

Wolston.

Following the stream of Avon, the next place I come to is Wolston, which is a large Parish, and contains sundry villages and hamlets: viz. Sperrston, Stretton upon Dunsmore, and Winsthorpe, on the same side the River; with Brandon and Bretford on the other.

In the Conq. days Earl Roger held it by Raimaldus his under-tenant; it being then certified to contain five hydes and one virgate of land; but in the generall Survey written is Wulfricestone in one place, and Wulfricstone in another, all under the title of Terra Rogeris Comititis (at which time there was a Church) and had its appellation originally from some antient possessor thereof in the Saxons time, Wulfricus being a name usuall in those days; from whence it hath antiently been written Wulfriceston and Wolfricston, though by contraction it be now called Wolston.

This Rogerus Comes, before mentioned, is he who was surnamed de Montegomerico by our old Historians, being one of the chief Councillours to William Duke of Normandy for his expedition into England; and, to second his advice, adventured himself in the Battail against K. Harold, in which the Duke was victor; whereupon, as a reward for his fidelity and service, he had, first the City of Chichester and Castle of Arundell; and afterwards the Earldome of Shrewsbury bestowed upon him by the Conq. And, by him, or one of his sons, do I conclude, that Alanus filius Fladaldi, (progenitor to that great family of Fitz Alan) became enfeoffed of this Lordship: for, that he had to do here, I have seen good authority, besides the testimony that his descendants, Earls of Arundell, were superior Lords of the fee.

From which Alan it divolved to Roger de Frevill in marriage with Sibilla his wife, whose daughter, 'tis like she was. For I find, that the same Roger and Sibilla gave lands out of it to the Monks of Burton (super Trent) in an. 1132. (viz. 33. H. 1.) quas prius obtulerat domina Adeliza mater Sibillæ tempore Nigelli Abbatis, as the Leiger book of that house expresses; but who this domina Adeliza, her mother, was, I cannot yet discover.

Here was in Wolston a religious House, subordinate to the Abby of St. Peter super Dinam (in the Dioces of Sats in France) of which I shall say more anon: resolving now to take notice of the posterity of the said Roger de Frevill and Sibilla, with whom the inheritance of Wolston went, and what I find memorable of them: for the clearer understanding whereof, I have inserted this descent.

This

This Roger was a benefactor to the Cannons of Kenilworth, by the consent of Sibill his wife, giving them one hyde and one virgate of land here. And had issue Richard, Agatha, and Sibill: which Richard became a benefactor to the monasteries of Alcester and Combe in this County; To the first whereof he granted the Church of Pebworth in Gloucester-shire, and to the other; his Mill, at Merston in this Parish: but had no children, it seems, for his Sisters became his heirs: whereof Agatha married to Geffrey Thorville, and Sibill to Robert Chetwode; who both, with their husbands, did confirm the gift of Merston-Mill made to the Monks of Combe by their Brother Richard. But, forasmuch as the descent from the said Agatha is not so cleared by authority of Record or other evidence, as I could wish; I must, by that light, which I have, point out what I conceive hath most affinity with Truth, which in this and the like uncertainties, is exprest by prickt lines, as in the example may be discerned.

This Geffrey Turvill (for it may very well be he) gave the Chappel of Stockingforth, with certain lands there, to the Abby of Leicester. But the first husband to the said Agatha was Hamon Strange: which Hamon, by his wives consent, confirmed to the monastery of Kenilworth five virgates of land in Wulfricheston, that Roger Frevill and Sibill his wife had formerly given thereto; and had issue a daughter named Agatha, who gave to the Abby of Combe for the health of her soul, and the soul of Richard her son, and the rest of her children certain errable land lying in Wulfricheston fields. In which grant she is called Agatha le Strange filia Hamonis le Strange; but what her husband was I find not.

In 24 H. 3. amongst the Kts. fees which were assigned to Hawys the widow of John Fitz-Alan, in this County, there is mention of one, held of the said John, by Hamon Turvill, and another by the heirs of Raphe Strange. Which Hamon (as I guesse) was the son of Geffrey Turvile and Agatha; and gave lands in Merston within this Parish, to the Monks of Combe.

This Agatha de Turvill lived to a great age; for I find, that by the procurement of Geffrey Turvill, her son; who was Arch-Deacon of Dublin and the Kings Treasurer there, she had a Patent whereby herself and her heirs were, during her life, free'd from suit to the County and Hundred Courts for Wulfricheston, Merston, and Bretford in this Shire. Which Geffrey being elected Bpp. of Exeter in that Kingdom, had the royal assent for confirmation thereof. But the next of this line, that I meet withall, as Lord of Wolston, is Sir Richard Turvile Kt. in 29. E. 1. then one of the Coroners in this County, an Office, in those days of great accompt, and confer'd onely upon the wisest and discreetest Knights that might best attend thereon: for there is a writ in the Register Nisi sit miles, whereby it appeareth, that there was a sufficient cause to remove a Coroner chosen, if he were not a Knight, and had not C. sol. Rent of Free-hold. But I find, that in regard of impotency, he was discharged of that Office, and dyed the same year, as 'tis like; for in 9 E. 2. was Robert de Turvile certified to be Lord of Wolfricheston, with the members thereto belonging. To which Robert succeeded John de Turvile; who in 19. E. 2. levied a Fine thereof; entayling it on himself and his children by Margaret his wife; but for default thereof, to Thomas Ferrers and his heirs: and left issue Thomas Turvile his son and heir, William, Robert, and Geffrey. Howbeit, after the 34 E. 3. that this Thomas presented to the Chappel of Bretford, I find no more mention of these Turviles here.

Nor further of this place till x. R. 2. that Sir William Wauton Kt. and Dame Ismania his wife, levied a Fine thereof to the use of Sir William Bagot Kt. and William Glym, and the heirs of the said Sir William Bagot for ever: by which Fine it appears that there was special warranty against her the said Ismania; whence I guesse, that she was Turviles daughter and heir. Which Sir William Bagot left issue Isabell his daughter and heir, wife to Thomas Stafford; who in H. 5. time, past it to the Canons of Kenilworth without licence; whereupon, it being seized into the Kings hands, was in 6 H. 6. granted to John Verney Clerk, and John Throgmorton, to hold for twelve years: but in 10 H. 6. John Weston of Weston, Sergeant at Law, John Beauchampe of Kenilworth Priest, and John Stokes of the same Kenilworth Yeoman, were certified to hold it, with Merston, by the fourth part of a Knights fee. How they had it, or how they parted with it I find not; but certain it is, that Nicholas Metley a Lawyer, soon after obtained it, and by his last will and Testament, dated 12 Nov. 16. H. 6. appointed, that his Feoffees thereof should hold it to the use of Joane his wife during her life, and afterwards to the behoof of Margaret his Daughter by the said Joane, and her heirs for ever: which Joane took to her second husband one Richard Horst, who was constrained to defend his wives right therein against Thomas Throgmorton, and one John Brokesby in 30. H. 6. they then laying claim thereto; but of this suit the Plaintiffs had little benefit as it seems; for after the decease of the said Joane, John Hugford of Emscote posselt it in right of Margaret his wife, daughter to the before specified Nicholas Metley, and dyed seized thereof 1. H. 7. leaving John Beaufoe son and heir of Joane his daughter, Margaret, Alice, and Anne daughters to him the said John and Margaret Metley abovesaid his next heirs, as when I come to Emscote shall more plainly be shewed; whereupon in 4. H. 8. scil. 12. Aug. partition being made of Hugford's lands, John Cotes (of Honingham) in right of Alice his mother, had these manours of Wolston and Merston; which John by his deed, bearing date xx. Aug. the same year, past them in exchange to Edward Belknap Esq. and his heirs, as in Decret I shall more fully shew.

This Edward Belknap was afterwards a Kr. and by his Testament gave Wolston with the manour of Merston to his brother in Law, William Shelley Esq; and Alice his wife, sister of the said Sir Edward, and to the heirs of the said Alice, reserving first an estate for life in them to his wife: which William Shelley, by the said Alice, had issue John Shelley his son and heir, who dyed seized of them 16. Dec. 4. E. 6. leaving William his son and heir 12. years old; who being attainted for treason committed xv. Dec. 25. Eliz. forfeited all the estate he had here, (which was no more than for life, by reason of an entayl made 16. Jan. 23. Eliz.) so that dying ing without issue, 15 Apr. 39 Eliz. these Mannours, by vertue of the said entail, came to Sir John Shelley Kt. and Bt. son and heir to John Shelley brother of the said William: which Sir John, by his deed of bargain and sale bearing date 19 Oct. 10 Jac. conveyed the same to George Warner Gent. and his heirs, the present Owner thereof, an. 1640.

I now return to the descendants from Robert de Chetwode, by Sibilla the other daughter and co-heir of Roger de Frevill (before mentioned.)

This Robert had issue Raph de Chetwode, and William; which Raph confirmed his Uncle Rich- ard Frevill's grant of Sperston-mill to the Abby of Combe: but left no issue, as it seems: for William his brother inherited the estate; and having given to those Monks certain errable lands in Wolston-field, left one onely daughter and heir married to William le Bretun of Long- Bechington, betwixt whom they had issue Guy le Bretun. Which Guy in 15 E. 2. (with other Commissioners) was appointed to assesse the sum of cc l. imposed upon those Knights, Esquires, and other men at Arms in this County, who being summoned to attend the King in person against the Rebels here in England (viz. Thomas E. of Lancaster, and his complices) desired to be exempted from that service.

In 2 E. 3. he was one of the Knights for this Shire in the Parliament held at Both. And in 9 E.
3. one of the Commissioners assigned to assesse and collect the sum of 120 l. in this County for the discharge of 1x Hobelers and cc Archers, which were to be chosen and armed, as also conducted to Newcastle upon Tine.

In 14 & 15 E. 3. he was assigned, with others, to make sale of the Ninth of Sheafes, Fleeces, and Lambs in this County granted to the K.
in Parliament; as also to levy and collect a Tenth granted in the same Parliament; and founded a Chantry in the Abby of Combe for one Monk to sing Mass daily there at the Altar of St. Edmund the Archb. for the soules of William le Bretun his father, and of Avicia his wife, and their ancestours; which Avicia was a Benefactress in the enlarging and beautifying the Church of Wolston, as her picture in a North window thereof doth manifest.

This Guy had issue Sir William Bretun Kt. Lord also of Wolberton in this County, and one of the Knights for this Shire in the Parliament held at Westminster, 45 Edw. 3. who being constituted Sheriff of the Counties of Warwick and Leicester, 49 E. 3. in 1. R. 2. served again as one of the Knights for this Shire in the Parliament then held at Westminster; and left issue Guy; of whom I find nothing memorable, neither can I trace down this descent any further.

I now come to the Monastery sometime here situate; which being a Cell, as I have said, to St. Peters sup Dinam in France, was one of those we commonly call Wypozics-alien. But of these Cells have I not seen many formal foundations;
the course being, for the most part, barely to grant the Land and Tithes (as by a multitude of instances might be manifested:) After which the Monks beyond Sea, partly to propagate more of their own Rule, and partly to have faithfull Stewards to transmit unto them a good proportion of the profits arising out of such their new acquired possessions at so great a distance, built competent places for the reception of a small Covent, and then sent over such a number as they thought fit, constituting Priors over them successively, as occasion required:

which grants were all very ancient, I mean shortly after the Conquest; being commonly made by such, who had themselves been Founders of some Religious House, or at least their Ancestours, or near Allyes. And that the grant of this at Wol- ston was about that time I have intimated, these circumstances do much satisfy me; (for in our publick Records can I find nothing thereof) First, that the Fabrick of the Tower Steeple hath the apparent form of those Buildings which were in use soon after the Normans entrance: And next, that Roger de Montgomeri, the Possessor of this place in the Conquerours time, stood in a near relation of kindred to Robert Earl of Gloucester, who with his Brother Hugh, Bp of Lisieux, assisted their Mother Lescelina in the foundation of St. Peters super Dinam before specified, as the descent herewith drawn will shew; and so consequently was the more like to be a Benefactor to that Monastery.

But whether there was any grant thereof at all, otherwise than verbal, is somewhat disputable: for in those elder times, concessions by Charter were not very common I am sure, as may appear by this instance to the Monastery of Daventre in North- hamptonshire, viz. by Stephan de Welton, of the Church of Staverton in that County, bearing date in the year 1161. 7 H. 2. In which Charter there is this expression, "Hanc eandem ecclesiam de Staverton ad ius ecclesie Daventrensis pertinentem, & membrum ejus, pluribus annis ante hanc donationem sancto Augustino & suis, patre meo an-nuente, reddideram; sed nullam charta vel sigilli defensionem contra posterorum cantelam & vexa-tiam pulsationem dederam, & actionem meam im-munitam reliqueram: ut ergo jam ex hoc nunc in seculum rata sit & stabilis, mea qua precessit red-ditio, & qua sequuntur adjuncta est donatio; necnon & ipsa prefata libertatis concessio, Scriptis & Sigilli mei testimonio eas pariter munimine con-firmo."

Leaving therefore the original of this small Monastery thus uncertain, I will now descend to what our Records, or other evidences, which I have seen, do shew thereof.

It appeareth by a publick Instrument of the Prior and Covent of Tutbury, bearing date the day of the translation of St. Benedict, an. 1226.
(10 H. 3.) that the Abbot and Covent of St. Pe- ters super Dinam, had granted to the said Prior and Covent of Tutbury the Church of Wilst- cheston, with all the appurtenances, in consideration of ten pounds sterling to be yearly paid to them and their successours by the said Prior and Covent of Tutbury; excepting the right of presentation to such Churches, which were of their advowson, as they should fall voyd.

But these Priories-alien were seized into the Kings

Kings hands, in respect of the wars he had with France, the Rents and Profits, which issued out of them to those foreign Monasteries, in case they had received them as formerly, being conceived of advantage unto the Kings enemies; for such were the French then esteemed to be, as this Record doth fully manifest. Que à les maisons en Engleterre sont mandez moignes Franceys de par de la, pur convenient d'eux (id est, of those Houses in France to which they were subject) les quels n'ont consiance de gentz, ne savent le language, ne la manere de la terre. Et ouvre ceo plusieurs d'eux avenont de noitirement feble vie, soeffrent leur maisons de eschoir, divine service amenuiser, & degastent les biens de leur maison, come la chose se monstre en fait, & ont grant indignation que nul Engleis soit avancee entre eux si soit il mi si able persone; Et que plus est a douter come homme suppose communement par eux leur consins & allies, & autres Franceys que demourront ovesqz eux, le Conseil de la terre est descovert, & les biens emporte a les oeps des enemies dont supplient, &c.

But the first publick seizure made in that kind, (for which I have seen any authority) was in 23 E. 1. as appeareth by the Roul^m of that year, wherein the particular persons in each County, to whom the custody of these Religious Houses was committed, are recorded. Which persons were to retain them in their hands during the Kings pleasure, answering to his Exchequer the profits thereout issuing, according to the tenor of the Ordinance therein made by the King and his Council: whereupon those in this County, and in Leicester, were committed to the custody of John de Shelton (as the same Record sheweth) all Freeholders and other tenants of those lands being commanded to be observant to the said John accordingly.

It seems that K. Edw. 2. in consideration of a certain Rent to be yearly paid into his Exchequer, did commit this Cell, with what belonged thereto, unto the Prior thereof, to hold during the Kings pleasure: for so in 1 E. 3. the same Prior by his Petition exhibited to the K. and his Council then in Parliament, doth set forth, whereby he craveth restitution of the lands, goods, and chattels, with the advowson of Churches belonging to that house; and pardon for such arrears of Rent, which were due upon the above mentioned grant of K. Edw. 2. whereunto the King was graciously pleased to condescend.

After this, K. Edw. 3. seized it again, and committed it to the Prior thereof, for a certain Rent to be paid into the Exchequer yearly; whereof default being made, and the same resumed upon the Petition of the said Prior, he allowed him iii sol. a week for his maintenance; command being given to Roger de Gray and Henry Arderne to make payment thereof unto him accordingly: but I do not perceive that there was any one Monk there at that time to bear the Prior company.

In 31 E. 3. it appears, that the Prior of this Monastery, having made an agreement to pay xx l. yearly into the Exchequer, as a ferm for this Cell; and being not able to perform it, the King was pleased to pardon ten marks a year thereof for the three next ensuing years. After which, by an extent of these Priories-alien in the 1, 2, and 3. years of K. R. 2. I find, that the possessions hereof were rated at xxxiii. ix sol. per annum; and that shortly after it was committed to Wal- rine Waldgrave, paying xx l. yearly into the Exchequer, as John Chater Prior of that House had wont to do. Which frequent seizures, giving the Monks beyond Sea little hope to have any considerable profit from their English Cells for the future, occasioned the Abbot and Convent of St. Peters super Dinam, to think of making their best thereof. Whereupon, by their publick Instrument, bearing date 10 Dec. an. 1394. (18 R. 2.) expressing, that, by reason of the wars, and distance of place, they had not received any benefit at all from thence of 50 years, their charges in sending over all waies exceeding the profit; and that, were there perfect peace concluded betwixt the Kings of England and France, the benefit would be so small to them, as that it would suffice for the maintenance but of one religious person to be sent from their Monastery thither: And therefore, considering that it might be of advantage and profit to the Prior and Convent of Carthusians near Cobentre, then lately founded by K. R. 2. and withall that the said Prior and Convent had given them two thousand four hundred Francks, in good gold of French coyn, to be employed in purchasing Rents and Possessions lying nearer, and more profitably to them; did they, by their said publick Instrument, grant and confirm to the same Prior and Convent of Carthusians this Cell at Woltricheston, with the advowsons of the Churches of Woltricheston, and Church-Lanford in the County of War. Wotterst-pirie in the County of Northampton, Homton-Drehell in the County of Leic. with all other profits and advantages, to the said Priory of Woltricheston any waies belonging; to have, hold and possess to them, the said Prior and Convent of Carthusians and their successors for ever.

All which was confirmed by the K. Letters & Patents bearing date 5 Julii, 20 of his reign, (upon the return of a Writ of Ad quod dampnum thereupon) and thenceforth continued to the said Carthusians till the general dissolution of all the Monasteries by K. H. 8. After which it came to the hands of Roger Wigston, descended from a family of the Wigstons in Leicester, divers whereof were Merchants of the Staple. Which Roger (being a Lawyer, I suppose, for he was Steward to the Monastery of Wimley in this County) by his Will dated 34 H. 8. bequeath'd his body to be buried in the Church of Wolston; having been Shiriff of this County and Leicester in 33 H. 8. and in commission of the peace for divers years. And left issue William VVigston, a Justice of Peace likewise in this County, and Eschaetor, towards the latter end of K. H. 8. reign; as also Shiriff in 5 E. 6. but Knighted in 2 & 3 Ph. & M. who dyed 27 Sept. 19 Eliz. and lyeth buried in the Chancell at Wolston, Roger his son and heir being then xl years of age: which Roger having no issue male, left the inheritance of his lands to his two daughters; whereof Susanne was the wife of Nicholas VVentworth Esq; who in her right became Lord of this Mannour (for so it is now reputed to be) and left it to Sir Peter VVentworth Knight of the Bath, his son and heir, the now owner thereof.

q Stafford of which, besides the 9 sum of xiii sol. iiii d. due to & Kempe, the Bp of Coventre and Litchfeld, for the time
 f. 339. a. being, as a pension, there was 9 liii sol. iiii d. year-r Cod. MS ly to be paid to the poor there, as the composition perès S. manifesteth.

The Vicaridge in f. 26 H. 8. was valued at xv l. x sol. over and above viii l. yearly allowed for the stipend of two Priests serving in two Chappels within this Church, and ii sol. per annum for 1 Synodals.

The appropriation of the Fruits of this Church to the Monastery of St. Peter sup. Dinam, was an-tient: for I have seen a very old Copy * of the ordination of the Vicaridge (commonly called the Composition) made by Alexander de Savensby, Bp of Cob. and Litch. about the beginning of
 H. 3. time; who at his institution of Henry de Leicester Priest, upon the presentation of the Prior of Tutbury, Procurator general to the above mentioned Abbot and Covent, makes this appointment in the behalf of the said Vicar and his successors, viz. that they shall have all the Obven-tions of the Altar, as well of the Mother Church as of the Chappels, with a Messuage and a croft which one Alanus then held; the Vicar out of these being to pay Synodals, and to see that the Chappels were served by honest and able persons.

But by another Instrument ^b of the said Bp. it appears, that by the consent of the before mentioned Prior of Tutbury, there was an assignation made of four marks yearly to be paid to the Vicar for the time being, out of the profits of the Rectory, by the hands of the Procurator of the said Abbot and Covent, whoever he should be, at Wolfricheston at two terms in the year, viz. two marks at the day of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin, and two marks on the day of her Purification; out of which the Vicar was to give yearly xiii coats, each containing three ells, and xiii pair of shoes to the poor of the parish, by the oversight of the Archdeacon of the place, or his Official;
 and whatsoever was remaining, himself to have towards the maintenance of one Priest, there, assisting him.

There is one thing more, that I am not willing to pass by, touching this Vicaridge; viz.
 a Commission * which I find granted by the Bp. of Cob. and Litch. bearing date 1 Dec. an. 1454.
 (33 H. 6.) to certain persons there named, and entrusted by him, to enquire of the Ordination thereof; forasmuch as the present Incumbent had signified to the said B. that the same was so slenderly endowed, that, having there the cure of souls, he could not maintain himself in that fit manner as he ought out of the profits thereof, nor well undergo what was incident to him as Vicar; and thereupon humbly craves remedy from the B. By which Commission the B. gives power to the persons therein mentioned, to call before them the Prior and Covent of Carthusians near Coventre, to whom the Rectory was appropriate; appointing, that this enquiry should be made by persons of credit both of the Clergy and Laity, and upon oath; as also thereupon to proceed in augmentation thereof as there should be cause, with power of Canonical cōsecution.

By which it appears, that though the Vicaridge were formerly endowed, yet, if in the discretion of the B. or his successors, at any time after, the fruit issuing out thereof to the present Incumbent, were not esteemed sufficient to maintain him in a fit manner, there might be an enlargement made out of the profits of the Rectory.

And that the B. may lawfully do this, I could manifest by very good authorities, as well as undeniable reason: but, in regard this Argument belongs to men of another profession, and that there is already a very handsome Discourse written upon this subject by Dr Ryves, a learned Civilian, entitled, ^d The poor Vicars plea, I will spare that which otherwise I could have said therein. Adding this onely, that if respect be to be had, that the Vicar is to have that competent and laudable support as is futable to his degree and quality; for work he may not by the Laws, being to follow his study, maintain hospitality, releive the poor, pay Procurations, and defray all other charges incident to his Benefice; and that the Laws do allow him to marry, whereby the charge of a single person, as antiently they were, is by wife and children much, in all probability, increased; then no doubt many hundreds in England ought to be in this case regarded. Neither can the Improprator, justly say, he hath wrong, though he purchased the Rectory at a dear rate; for he must needs know, that it is divolved to him with no more priviledge than the Monks had it, who were alwaies subject to coercion for the like augmentation, as cause required; it being not originally intended, that they who lived plentifully in their Cloyster should sweep away the chief fruits of the Church, the Parish which paid duely their Tithes having little advantage from them; and that the Vicar, who daily served at the Altar, should snap on short commons; but if there were sufficiency for both,
 each to have share; otherwise, if one must want,
 it should not be he that did undergo the work.

I know this will sound harshly in Impropria-tors ears, but Magna est veritas, & pravalere debet.

OF this Mannour, being situate flat and low near the River, where the soyl is naturally marish, and giveth occasion of the name, I shall not need to say much, having already spoken thereof in Wolston. It was antiently called Bretons-Manneur, Guido Breton writing^a himself of this place in 5 and 6 H. 4. But how it past from that family, I have not seen, nor when; the first^b mention which I afterwards find thereof being in 6 H. 5. where Richard Quatermaynes of Londoun, granted the moytie thereof, with the appurtenances, to Thomas Vodelow and Margaret his wife, and to the heirs of Thomas; and levied a fine^c thereupon the same year: Unto which Thomas and Margaret, and the heirs of Thomas, did John Boteler of Wolbardington release^d all his right in the other moytie. Whereupon the said Thomas, being possessor of the whole, was in 10 H. 6. certified^e to hold it by the service of half a Knights fee. After which it was not long ere that it came to Nicholas Metley, and so to John Hugford, in right of Margaret his wife, daughter and heir to the said Nicholas, as in Wolston I have shewed: since which it hath past from hand to hand with Wolston, and so continues to the owner of that Mannour till this day.

Stretton super Dunsmore

THIS Village takes its name from the situation upon that old Roman way called the Fosse; which, being by the common people termed the Street, as all great waies and passages are, thence hath the name of Stretton: the addition, super Dunsmore, being to distinguish it from the rest of the Strettons in this County.

In the Conquerours time I find that same Raimundus, whom I mentioned in Wolston, held^f also this place of Roger de Montgomerie E. of Arundell; it being then rated for 5 hides, and written Stratone.

Within the limits hereof is a very antient Mill (written long since Purmulne, but now Pirreymill) given^g to the Monks of Combe by Robert de Cherwode and Sibilla his wife (of whom I have already spoke in Wolston;) which Monks, in consideration of xx marks, past^h it to the Lady Albreda Marmin; who again assigned it unto them for the solemnizing the Anniversaries of her husband Sir William Camvill, her self, William her son, and the rest of her sons and daughters.

There is no doubt, I think, but that this Mannour came, with Wolston, to Alanus filius Eladaldi; for I find, that the said Alan gaveⁱ certain lands here to the Abby of Burton. And from him likewise it is probable that Roger de Frevill had it: for in 36 H. 3. Raph Strange, who descended from one of the co-heirs to the said Roger (as the descent in Wolston sheweth) was certified to hold half a Knights fee here of John Fitz-Alan, descendant to the before specified Alanus: but the next possessor thereof, that I have seen any authority for, was Thomas de Garshale, temp. E. 1. (of whom in Bourton I have made mention) who, with Maud his wife, sold^j it unto Robert de He- riz and his heirs, to hold of them the said Thomas and Maud, and their heirs, by the service of 1 d. to be paid yearly at Easter. Which Robert, in consideration of xxx marks of silver, soon after granted^k the inheritance thereof unto Henry de Hastings, son and Heir of Sir Henry de Hastings Kt. to hold of him the said Robert and his heirs by the service of a pair of white Gloves, or 1 d. yearly at Easter. But this Henry kept it not long; for I find, that Sir Thomas de Bray purchased^l it of him within a short time after; to whose posterity, residing here, it continued for divers decents: and at length (as it should seem) by Elene one of the daughters and co-heirs of Richard Bray, wife of Edmund Starkey Gent. in H. 6. time, divolved to that family; in which it rested till 4 Eliz. that William Starkey sold^m it, by the name of the capital messuage, and certain lands, &c. in Stretton to the Lady Longvile; upon whose death it descended to Bartholmew her son and heir, by Bartholmew Tate of de la Pre juxta Posthampton, her first husband: which Bartholmew in 23 Eliz. conveyedⁿ it to Anthony Tate his younger brother, who left issue George Tate of Sutton-Bonington in Com. Post. that, by his deed^o, dated 6 Julii, an. 1620. sold them to Ric. Taylor of Winley in this County, to whose posterity they still continue.

There is within this Village a Chappel of All Saints, which had a Chantry^p therein, founded by Thomas de Wolwardynon, Parson of the Church of Lobenham (in Leicestershire) for two Priests to sing Mass daily at the Altar of St. Thomas the Martyr, for the good estates of the said Thomas, William Clinton Earl of Huntingdon, Richard Earl of Arundell, John Peyto the younger; as also of Alice and Margaret, sisters to the said Thomas the Founder, during their lives; and of the reverend Father in God Roger Northburgh, then B. of Cob. and Lich. and for all their souls after their departure out of this life: as also for the souls of Sir Peter de Wolwardynon Kt. and the Lady Aliva his Wife, Father and Mother of the said Thomas: and of the souls of John de Wolwardynon, William, and Peter, brethren of the said Thomas deceased; and of all faithfull people departed. For the maintenance of which two Priests, King E. 3. in 19 of his reign, granted^q licence to the said Thomas de Wolwardynon, to amortize three messuages, three yard land, four acres of meadow, three acres of wood, and xx sol. rent, with the appurtenances in Stretton aforesaid. After this, viz. in 2 R. 2. licence was also granted^r to Robert de Stretton, then B. of Cob. and Lich. to amortize four messuages, and eight yard land, with the appurtenances, lying in this Village of Stretton, for the maintenance of a Priest to sing Mass daily in the abovesaid Chappel, for the good estate of the said King whilst he lived; and for the health of his soul, when he should depart this life; as also for the souls of the Kings Father and Grandfather, and all the faithfull deceased. Whence I conclude, that this B. was born here, and took his name of the place, having been first a Canon^s of Witchfesslo, and Chaplain to the Black Prince (K. Richard the 2. Father:) but an illiterate man he was (saith Godwin) in so much as he found it a very difficult matter to obtain Consecration; which nevertheless, through the Kings power, at length he got. in 35 E. 3.

Thomas de Volvadynton, viere in 26 H. 8. valued α at iiii l. xiii s. per annum; but upon the survey taken 37. H. 8. at iiii l. xvii s. per annum.

Prinsthorpe.

OF this place, lying in the Parish of Wolston, but Southwards from it about two miles, do not I find any mention, till α 4. E. 1. at which time it was written Prinsthorpe.

As for the name, it proceeds, doubtless, from some ancient possessor thereof, the latter syllable, viz. Thorpe, signifying a Village or Hamlet, for so in the Saxons time they were called; the Dutch to this day (whose Language hath a great affinity with our old English) calling such Villages Dorpes, pronouncing d instead of th.

In xx E. 3. it answered with Stretton upon the Aid α then collected. And in 31 E. 3. there was a Fine β levied thereof betwixt William de Peeke, Parson of the Church of Wapenbury pl. and Nicholas de Stoneley and Hugh de Geydon Priests, Deforciantes, whereby it was settled upon the said William de Peeke for life, the remainder to Sir Richard Trewlow Kt. and the heirs of his body; and for lack of such issue, to John Hockele and Cecelie his wife, and the heirs of their two bodies; and for default thereof, to Nicholas le Eyr, and his heirs.

After which I have seen little considerable of it, till it α came to the Hugfords of Embscote in H. 6. time; but whether by Metley's heir, or not, I am yet to learn. In which family it continued till 9 H. 8. that John Hugford sold α it to Sir William Compton Kt. whose great Grand-child, Sir Henry Compton Knight of the Bath (and brother to William late Earl of Northampton) now enjoys it, an. 1640.

Brandon.

THIS being a part of Wolston Parish lying on the other side of Abon, and situate at the foot of a Hill, the soyl whereof is sandy and dry, makes me conjecture, that it might originally have its name from the effect that the Sun by heat doth oft-times produce upon such high ground; or otherwise, because, being antiently woody, it was first made fit for tillage by burning the thicker that naturally grew thereon.

In the Conquerours dayes Turchill de Warwick was possessor thereof, Wlſe then holding it of him. By the general Survey α then taken (where it is written Brandune) the extent of it is certified at half a hide, the woods containing four furlongs in length, and two in bredth, and the whole esteemed at xxv sol. there being then a Mill rated at xxvi d.

But Turchill's lands being by the Conquerour, for the most part, disposed of to others (as I shall have occasion in due place to shew) this was (it seems) given to Geffrey de Clinton Chamberlain and Treasurer to K. H. 1. and Founder of the Castle and Priory of Kenilworth (of whose advancement, and what else is memorable, I am to speak in Kenilworth) whose daughter Leſcelina, being married β to Norman de Verdune, brought it, with other lands, to that noble family: but Geffrey her brother had a hope to regain it: for having given γ lands in Wetford, near adjoining, to found there a small Cell for Nuns (as in Wetford I purpose to declare) which lands were, by those Nuns, very soon after, granted δ to the Monastery of Kenilworth, and confirm'd ε by him; covenanted ζ with the Canons of Kenilworth, that, if he recovered Brandune, he would give them as much land in value as that at Wetford, and have that again in exchange.

This Geffrey de Clinton, the second, wedded Agnes the daughter of Roger Earl of Warwick; and had with her in Frank marriage by the gift η of her Father (inter alia) ten Knights Fees of those seventeen that were held by him of the said Earl, de Veteri Feoffamento; that is to say, whereof he or his Father were enfeoffed in the time of K. H. 1. which ten, by those covenants of marriage, were to perform their (military) service in the custody of this Brandune: whereby 'tis plain, that the Castle was then in being, though it be hard to say whether Geffrey de Clinton the Father of Leſcelina, or her husband Norman de Verdune built it.

In the line of which Norman it continued for divers ages, as the descent here inserted sheweth. (their principal seat being at Alton-Castle in Staffordshire.) But little do I find memorable of it, other than, that, in 7 R. 1. it was garrison'd by VWill. fil. Ricardi (a great man in this County, as in Worshall shall be manifested) who had then the custody thereof, by reason of the minority of Bertram, son and heir to the before specified Norman de Verdon. To which Bertram succeeded Nicholas; who in 11 H. 3. had a Charter of Free-warren granted to him and his heirs in all his demesne lands here. And raised a Pool in this place to so great a height, as that the Monks of Combe brought an Assize of Novel-disseisin against him for drowning their lands in Stretton thereby. But it was not long afterwards ere that this Castle underwent the fate, which is incident to such strong holds in time of hostility: for it appears, that the partakers with Simon Montfort E. of Leicester, who in 39 H. 3. held Kenilworth Castle against the King, taking notice, that John de Verdon, Grandchild to the before specified Nicholas, had Commission to raise Forces in Staffordshire against those Rebels, issued out of of that place, and pulled it down.

To which John succeeded Theobald; who, about the beginning of E. 1. time, extended his Free-warren here beyond the bounds of his Barony, into the lands of the Prior of Coventre and Abbot of Combe; and ingrossed the whole fishing of Avon, on the one side, to himself; viz. from Bretford to Sperlines-mill, which had wont to be common. It seems he rebuilt the Castle: for I find, that it was then again in being (though now nothing remain thereof but the moats and heaps of rubbish) and had a Park thereto, containing a mile in length. As also, that his Tenants were thus distinguished, viz. by Servants, Cottagers, and Free-holders. Of the first sort there being xxv that held xii yard land and a half in servage; that is to say, besides payment of a certain Rent, each of them to find one workman, at the Lords disposal, to labour from Monday next after the feast day of St. Peter and Paul, untill the feast of St. Peter ad vincula (which is the first of August) in every week two daies; and after that time, till Michaelmas, to find one man working two daies one week, and three daies another by turns, at such employment as the Lord should appoint. And the Cottagers to find, each of them every week, from the first of August till Michaelmas, one labourer, to work upon Monday onely, as the Lord should appoint. But the Free-holders, which were onely three, held by a certain Rent and homage, and to do service to his Court every three weeks. It was likewise then found, that he had Free-warren here of the grant of K. H. 3. and how he had incroacht upon the Prior of Coventre and Abbot of Combe; as also that he had a Court Leete. Gallows, with assize of Bread and Beer, for a Palfrey yearly payable to the K. Unto which Leet his Father, being a powerfull man, had drawn the Hamlets of Thurlaston and Athoe, without any justifiable authority: but as to the rest of those privileges, being questioned in 13 E. 1. by what authority he claimed them, he pleaded prescription, which was allowed. To which last mentioned Theobald, succeeded Theobald his son and heir; and to him his four daughters and heirs; whereof Elizabeth the wife to Bartholmew de Burghersh had (inter alia) this Lordship in partition assigned unto her: Whose son and heir, viz. Sir Bartholmew, shortly after, past it unto Sir Walter Pavely Kt. and other feoffees; who in 43 E. 3. conveyed it to Sir John Delvres a Staffordshire Kt. from whom it came to Sir John Arundell Kt. who in 3 R. 2. dyed seized thereof: and so descending to Sir Richard Arundell, fell by partition in 16 H. 6. unto Elianore wife of Sir William St. George Kt. one of the two daughters and heirs to the said Sir Richard: which Elianore departing this life without issue, it devolved to Sir Robert Villoughby of Cresby Kt. son and heir of Thomas Villoughby Esq; and Joane, the other sister and co-heir; which Sir Robert Villoughby dyed 5 E. 4. leaving Robert his son and heir within age: but Sir William St. George had the possession thereof during his life, as Tenant by the curtesy of England, and dyed 11 E. 4. the reversion thereby coming to Christopher Villoughby, brother of the last mentioned Robert, who was at that time 19 years of age.

From which Christopher, by Thomas a third son, one of the Justices of the Common Pleas in the later end of K. H. 8. reign, descended Sir Percivall Villoughby Kt. (late of Spioleton in this County, as I shall further shew when I come to speak of that place) who sold it to Sir Henry Tolverton Kt. Attorney General to K. James, within our memory.

Bretforde.

This was a member of Bzandon, as will appear by what I am now to say, having its name from the wideness of the Forde; and for Bzadforde, is, by corruption, called Bretforde. But the first mention I find thereof, is, that Geoffrey Clinton (son to Geoffrey, who founded the Castle and Priory of Kenilworth) gave land to the foundation of a small Cell for Nuns here; which land is particularly mentioned in his grant, the name of the first Vorreys there, being Noemi; but it seems, she liked not the place; for her fellow Nun, named Seburge, and she past away the same lands to the Canons of Kenilworth, in the life time of the said Geoffrey Clinton, and by his consent; Henry de Clinton, son of the said Geoffrey, afterwards confirming the grant. After this, viz. in 11 H. 3. Nicholas de Verdon obtained a special Charter for a weekly Mercate here upon the Tuesday, and his great Grandchild Theobald had here a Gallows, as a badge of those royal privileges belonging to his Castle of Bzandon; which Gallows were in this place at first erected, as I guess, because it lyes upon that great Roman way called the Fosse, so that it might be in terror to passengers. But upon partition of Verdons lands, it went, with Bzandon, to Burghersh, in right of Elizabeth his mother, one of the co-heirs; since which time they have not been severed.

Here was a kind of Hospital or Chappel of St. Edmund; founded, I presume, by the Turviles, Lords of Wolston; for they were Patrons of it, as appears by the Institutions thereunto.

Rieton.

HAVING now done with the Parish of Wolston, I come to Rieton, situate upon the Southern-side of Avon, and usually called Rieton super Dunsmoze, for distinction from another of the same name, which is in Bulkinton Parish: the reason being obvious enough, forasmuch as the soyl here is of a light sandy disposition, and beareth Rye best of any Grain.

This was one of those towns which Earl Leo-frike gave to the Priory of Cobentre upon the foundation thereof An. 1043. 1. Edw. Confessoris, as I shall further declare when I come to speak of that Monastery. But it seems, that the Monks chopt it quickly away, though it appears not how: for Aluinus, 6 Progenitor to the family of Arden, had it before the end of the said Kings reign; And in the Conq. time Turchill, the son of the same Aluin, (commonly called Turchill de Warwick) held it. It is there written, Rietone and conteyning three hydes and half a carucate, had at that time a Church, and a Mill, the woods thereof being then certified to contain half a mile in length, and two furlongs in breadth; and the value of the whole 1x. sol.

The word in Domesday-book signifying a mile, is leuca or leuva, which the French to this day call a league: but that it was used to express a mile, that is to say a thousand paces, and not a league, (which with the French is twice so much) observe what Ingulphus (an authentique Historian who lived in that age) says: viz. that the English, being now brought under the dominion of the Normans, did, in many things, follow the French Garbe; and therefore in the stead of miles they called them leucas, that is leagues, but intended miles: Nay so carefull were those that took this Survey to account the measure with the scantest, in regard of envious Informers, that they would alwaies express the measure rather more than less of what it really was.

The Leiger Book of Stonley says, that this Mannour was a member of Stonley, and given to the family of Arden by K. H. 1. The first part of which expression is like to be true: but I am of opinion, that it was part of those lands which Turchills posterity were permitted to enjoy, and not at all out of their possession till they granted it away to the Hospitalars, as I shall, shortly manifest: For Seward de Ardena, (son and heir to the said Turchill) with Cecelia his wife, gave it to the Monks of Thorney in Cambridge-shire, the Mill here at Rieton, for the health of his soul; which grant Henry de Arderne his son confirmed, which Mill yeilded xii. s. Rent per an. in that age: howbeit in these grants and confirmations of Thorney, it is written Rugintunia, Rutunia, and Ruitonia. In which family of Arden it continued till Edw. 1. time: Thomas de Arden being certified in 7. E. 1. Lord thereof; and that he held it of the Earl of Warwick by the service of half a Kts. Fee. This Thomas had here then 1 in demesne three carucates of land and a water-Mill; as also three servants, each of them holding a yard land and a half, and paying a certain yearly rent in money, plowing one day in winter a peice, and one day in Lent, mowing, raking, making hay, carrying corn, and gathering Nuts, at each work one day.

The Cottagers were at that time xiii. in number, who likewise, besides their Rent, did work one day a peice at some of those before mentioned labours. And the freeholders xv. which held eight yard land and a fourth part, three acres and a half, and one rode: but their particular names and Rents, for brevity I omit. At that time it was also certified, that the Abbot of Thorney held a Mill there, and half a yard land: And the Hospitalars had two Free-holders holding one yard land, and a water-Will. But in 10. Edw. 1. there was a sute betwixt the before specified Thomas de Arderne and the said Hospitalars; by which suit the Prior of St. Johns recovered of the said Thomas one Mill, CC. acres of land, twelve acres of meadow, and ten acres of wood; and had possession thereof accordingly: howbeit the Earl of Warwick, of whose Fee it was, came and interposed with his claim so that there issued out a Writ to enquire of the Earls right therein. After which, viz. in 14. E. 1. this Thomas, though for what consideration I find not, granted all his right therein to the said Hospitalars, and their successors: against whom in 9. H. 8. it was certified, that they had inclosed here three hundred acres of land, and that by this decay of husbandry, if remedy were not provided, the Church there would fall to ruin.

But after the dissolution of the Monasteries K. Edw. 6. in 4. of his reign granted this Mannour, (inter alia) to John Dudley Earl of Warwick and his heirs; which John was afterwards made Duke of Northumberland, and lost his head in 1. Maria (as in Warwick I shall more fully shew) After whose attainder, Queen Mary, restoring the Romish Religion, granted it, with other things, to Sir Thomas Tresham Kt. as Master of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in England and to his successors: but upon the death of that Queen, the Romish Religion being again suppressed, Ambrrose Dudley Earl of Warwick (son to the attained Duke: amongst divers other lands which were his Fathers, obtained it to himself and the heirs of his body; who dying without issue, in 31. Eliz. it returned to the Crown; whereupon the said Queen, by her Pat. dated 28. Oct. 40. Eliz. passed it to Randle Crew of Lincoln Esq. and Richard Cartwright of London Gent. and their heirs; who by their deed of bargain and sale bearing date xxiii. Junii 41. Eliz. granted it to Thomas Dilke Esq. (but afterwards Kt.) and to his heirs, whose Grand-child William Dilke of Marstoke Castle now enjoys it.

The Church here was very antiently given by the Prior of Cobentre unto the Cathedrall of Lichfield in the name of a Prebend: and in 1291. 19. E. 1. was valued at xv. marks; but in 26. H. 8. at xi. l. vi. sol. viii. d. the Procurations and Synodalls being then vi. sol. viii. d. per an. and the Curate a stipendary to the Prebend. But in it are neither Arms nor Monuments.

and, of him held by one Aluric, whose freehold it had been before the Norman invasion, contained then five hydes, whereof the woods were two furlongs in length and two in breadth; there being at that time a Mill; but the value of all then certified at fifty shillings, where it is written Wubenhalle.

In 13. Joh. this Mannour answered for the third part of a Knights fee, amongst the lands which were of the Honour of Herveus de Stafford. And in 36. H. 3. amongst the fees held of the Lord Stafford, it was certified, that the Earl of Warwick held two parts of a Knights fee here.

But in 7. E. 1. John Fitzwith being Lord thereof, held it of Hugh de Plessers by the third part of a Kts. fee, the same Hugh holding it over of the Baron of Stafford; which John had at that time here one carucate of land in demesne; ten servants that held two yard land and a half; seven Freeholders holding ten yard land and eight acres; as also eight Cottagers.

In whose family it continued till the later end of Edm. 3. time; but then went away with a Daughter and heir, as the descent here inserted will shew.

Ioh. Pauncesot - Margareta filia & Ioh. Wysham
1. maritus. hæres. 2. maritus 1. H. 6.

I am of opinion that these Fitzwith's had their seat here, as I shall further instance anon, therefore I purpose here to memorize what I find notable of them. Of this John, whom I have already mentioned, I find, that he was the first that assumed the surname of Fitzwith, being the son of one Guido (or Guy) called Guido filius Roberti, as in Shotswell I shall have occasion to shew; and in 3. E. 1. one of those who had Commission for the Gaol delivery at Warwick: as also, that in 5. E. 1. he attended the King in his expedition into Wales; at which time the Welch were reduced to subjection, their Prince being then content to accept of such termes as K. Edward would afford him: And, that in 29. E. 1. he was one of those that received the Kings precept to be at Berwick upon Twede sufficiently appointed with Horse and Armes to march against the Scots.

To whom succeeded Robert, called Robertus filius Guidonis; who, being a Kt. in 3. E. 2. wrote himself of this place; which Robert had issue Guy, that dyed in 10. E. 2. leaving Elizabeth his Daughter and Heir within age; who departed this life without issue as it seems; for the inheritance came to Robert le Fitzwith Nephew to the last Guido by John his Brother; which Robert, having no issue, settled part of his lands in his life time, upon the said Robert le Fitzwith, his Nephew, (as I shall more fully shew when I come to Bernangre) the rest descending to him. This last mentioned Robert had two wives; Agnes the Daughter of Will. Catesby, and Joane who survived him, and married to Will. de Tyrington; and died in 36. E. 3. leaving issue Joane his Daughter and heir, ward to Sir Richard Penbruge Kt. by the Kings grant; which Joane married to John Beauchamp of Holt (in Worcester-shire) and proved her age in 49. E. 3. whereupon her husband and she had livery of her lands.

This John Beauchamp had the honour to be the first man that ever had creation to the dignity of a Baron in England by Patent, which bears date at Woodstoke x. Octobris undecimo R. 2. but he enjoy'd it not long; for the same year the rebellious Lords, having rais'd a potent army, came up to London; and there mustering their men in the fight of the Tower, where the King then lodg'd, forced him to call a Parliament, wherein, by their power, they did what they listed, causing Sir Robert Tresilian chief Justice of England, and divers others to be attainted of treason; of which number this Sir John Beauchamp, (then Lord Steward of the Kings house-hold) being one; was thereupon hang'd and drawn and quartered.

But by the Kings writ of Monstraverunt directed to the Justices of the Common Pleas in xv. R. 2. upon the allegation of William de Tyrington and Joane his wife; wherein they set forth, that the said William and Joane had recovered the third part of this Mannour in 43. E. 3. as the dowrie of Joane, against the said John Beauchamp and Elizabeth; it appears, that the said John and Elizabeth, long before this attainer; viz. the Sunday being the feast day of the exaltation of the Holy cross in 7. R. 2. did demise it unto John Catesby, to hold during the said John Catesby his life, in consideration of viii. l. per an. to be paid to the said John Beauchamp and Joane and their heirs: so that, by reason of this demise, the viii. l. Rent per an. only, and the reversion, after John Catesby his death, were seized for the King in regard of the aforesaid attainer: And (which is not the least notable) that his coat of male, being then in the hands of one John Reede an Armorer of London, was thereupon delivered up unto Henry E. of Derby (afterwards King by the name of Henry the 4.) by a speciall command. But this attainer as all things else done in that Parliament of xi. R. 2. held by force, being made void in the Parliament of 21. R. 2. and it being enacted, that all that were then disherited should be restored to their estates; command was given by the K. writ directed to his Eschaetor in this County, to put Sir John Beauchamp Kt. son and heir of the aforesaid John, into possession of the viii. l. per an. rent, payable during the life of John Catesby; which Sir John Beauchamp dyed seized of this Mannour 8. H. 5. leaving issue Margaret his Daughter and heir, then the wife of Iohn Pauncesot, and shortly after of Iohn Wysham; who in 1. H. 6. with her husband Iohn Wysham, levied

From which Thomas it devolved to John Crosfe, who in 8. H. 8. ^b passed what interest he had here, by the name of the moytie of the Mannour, unto Sir Edward Grevill Knight.

In whose line it did not long continue; for in 29. Eliz. Edward the son of Thomas Wotton ⁱ possessed it; and I have heard that his descendants are still Lords of it.

Being now come to the skirts of Stoneley Parish wherein the River of Sow meets with Abon, before I follow the Banks of that River any further on this South-east side, I am, according to my declared method, to take notice of those places, which are situate on the North-west side thereof: but because the Northern part of this Hundred lyes not adjacent to any branch of Abon, I must be constrained to observe some few places in that Eastern Corner by their bordering on Watlingstreete, or near thereto, till the same great and well known road do meet with the River Stowfe at Benaford bridge, which will lead me to those other towns that lye on the North-west Bank of that stream, as also of Abon. Which being done, I then purpose to discover the original of Sow; and so following that Channell, with its branches, not onely to finish all that Northern side of this Hundred, but to take view of the City of Coventre with the liberties, which antiently was part of the same, (though now an intire County of it self.)

And having thus declared the course that I purpose to take, wherein the Map will be a proper guide to the Reader, I shall begin with Stretton, now a depopulated place, and known commonly by the name of Stretton-fields; but antiently called Stretton-Baskerville, to distinguish it from the many other Strettons in this County; according to which appellation I have fixt it in the Map.

Stretton-Baskerville.

AS all other Strettons take their names from some great road near unto which they are situate, so doth this of. that known Roman way, called Watlingstreet lying on the North side of it; with the addition of Baskerville, in regard that family were antiently Lords thereof, as I shall shew anon. In ^a Edm. the Conf. days one Edricus possessed it; but after the Norman invasion it was bestowed on Raph. de Mortimer, Progenitor to that eminent family seated at Wigmore in Com. Salop, who had also lands in the Counties of Driford, Lin. Salop, Wor. Hereford, Worcester, Somerset, and Berks. as by the generall Survey, then taken, appeareth, where this place (written Stratone) is rated for three hides, and valued at xxx. sol.

How or when it went out of the line of Mortimer, I have not found: but the next possessor thereof, that I meet with, was Baskerville, and that very antient; for in 12. H. 2. when Will. Earl Ferrers certified what Fees were held of him, it appears, ^a that Raph. de Baskerville held one of those three, of which William de Baskerville, his Father, was enfeoffed by (Robert Earl Ferrers) his Grand-Father, which must needs be in H. 1. time; whereof this Stretton was part, as the Aid-roll ^p in 20. E. 3. manifesteth: For John de Twyford was then found to hold the fourth part of a Kite fee here, of the fee of Tutebury: which Honour of Tutebury did antiently belong to Ferrers, as is commonly known. But the first of the Baskervilles, that the Records, I have seen, do directly point out to be possessor hereof, was Walter de Baskerville, who lived in K. John's time; and this is in a pleading ^q betwixt the said Walter, and the Priorefs of Caton (now Pan-Caton) which the said Priorefs claimed in right of the Church of Burton, whereunto she alleaged this to belong as a Chappell; and, to fortify her title, produc't the grant of the Church of Burton to the Nuns of Caton by Raph. de Turevill, together with the confirmation of H. (Nuvant) Bishop of Coventre, whereby it was mentioned to be a Chappel belonging to Burton. And, besides all this, she exhibited a writing made by Alice de Baskerville, Grand-Mother to this Walter, directed to the Bishop of Coben, whereby it appeared, that after the truth touching the right of advowson was known unto her, she did for ever after further desist laying claim thereto. But to this Walter answered, that what the Nuns had there produced could not prejudice his title; for they had shew'd no grant thereof from any of his ancestours; and alleged, that this of his Grand-Mothers ought not to bind him, in regard she had no interest there but by her dowrie.

This, as it is historical in relation to the Church, so doth it shew, that Alice was Grand-Mother to Walter; And that William was his Grand-Father and Raph his Father, I think there is no doubt. Of these, Raph was a Benefactor ^r to the Monastery of Sperevale (in this County, founded in his time by Robert Earl Ferrers;) And Walter gave ^s three palfreys in 10. Johan. for having respited in the payment of x. l. owing to the King ^t for a Fine, which he made with him; and of ^u xvj. l. debt that he owed to the Jews. But in

Rot. P. 16. Job. ¹⁶ Job. this Walter was dead: for then Ysolda his widow gave C. marks and one palfrey to have possession of her inheritance; as also of the dowry accruing to her by the death of her husband; and that she might not be distreyned to marry. Yet what issue she left, is not known to me, except Ascelia (with whom he gave 6 marks rent in frank marriage to Walter Biser) was his daughter; which Ascelia afterwards married to Nigell de Pinchbec. But if she were his daughter, she dyed without issue, as it seems: for in 4 H. 3. I find, that Raph Fitz-Nicholas, then Steward * to William Earl Ferrers was owner of it †, by descent from Alice de Baskerville his Grandmother; and the next year following there was a Fine * levied betwixt him and the Priores of Eton touching the advowson of the Church; which was acknowledged to be the right of the same Raph, saving to the said Priores and her Church of Burgton the ancient and due portion she had wont to receive out of it.

This Raph Fitz-Nicholas was a very eminent man in his time, and had here a Mannour-house, as may be inferred by the storing of a pool with fish, for which purpose he had the Kings mandate * to the Constable of Kenillworth-Castle to deliver unto him C. Breemes out of Kenillworth-Pool (a Fish in great esteem and price antiently, as, when I come to Sutton in Hemlingford Hundred I shall shew.) In 14 H. 3. he had, amongst other liberties and privileges granted to him and his heirs in divers Mannours, freedom from suit to the Hundred and County-Court, and of the payment called Auxilium Vicecomiti for this his Mannour of Stretton. And in 41 H. 3. departed this life (at which time he was Steward * of the K. Household) leaving Robert * his son and heir, who did his homage the year following. Which Robert was summoned * to beat Worcester, with divers other great men, on the feast day of St. Peter ad vincula, 47 H. 3. to resist the power of Levelin Prince of Wales, then in hostility; but he afterwards adhered to the rebellious Barons, being of the retinue * to young Simon Montfort: Nevertheless, returning afterwards to obedience, he was again received * to favour, finding Sureties * for his future fidelity, viz. Raph de Pipard, and Raph de Pichford of Shropshire; and in 1 E. 1. dyed without issue, leaving Raph, * surnamed Pipard, his nephew and heir; which Raph did his homage in 2 E. 1. having lands in the Counties of Staff. Derby. Dron. and Berks. by descent from his said Uncle.

In 13 E. 1. this Raph Pipard claimed * a Court-leet here, with weyfs and other privileges: and power to punish the breakers of the Assize of Bread and Ale: part of which his claim was allowed, in regard it appeared, that his Ancestours had used them time out of mind; but as to the weyfs he did not speed. After which, viz. in 29 of the said K. reign, he aliened * this Lordship, with the advowson of the Church, unto John de Twyford, reserving to himself an estate for term of life onely: and in 3 E. 2. departed * this life, leaving John Pipard his son and heir 37 years of age, of whom I shall say more when I come to Long-Compton.

This John de Twyford made his residence here, as it seems (though Kirk-Langley in Derbyshire was his antient seat) for in 17 E. 2. I find * him amongst the List of those Knights and Men at Arms, whose names were then returned into the Chancery for this County. In whose family it continued till H. 7. time, that Thomas Twyford, having begun * the depopulation thereof, in 4 H. 7. decaying 4 messuages, and 3 cottages, whereunto Clix acres of errable land belonged, sold * it to Henry Smith Gentleman. Which Henry, following that example, in 9 H. 7. enclosed 1 DCxl acres of land more, whereby 12 mess: and 4 cottages fell to ruine; and 80 persons there inhabiting, being employed about tillage and husbandry, were constrained to depart thence and live miserably. By means whereof, the Church grew to such ruine, that it was of no other use than for the shelter of Cattle, being, with the Churchyard, wretchedly prophaned, to the evil example of others, as are the words of the Inquis: In which line of Smith it continued, till that Richard Smith, son and heir to Sir Walter, settled it with Shirefords, as I have there declared; and since, hath it been posselt by the owners of that Lordship.

The value of the Church, in an. 1291. 19 E. 1. was certified * at viii marks; and in 136 H. 8. at vi lib. over and above ix s. vi d. allowed for Synodals and Procurations: there being antiently a pension * of x s. per annum payable out of it to the Monastery of St. Dunstons: but there is not now any part of the Church standing.

12 Rot. de Nonis garb. &c. in Seas.
This is now alio a depopulated place, but had antiently a Chappel pertaining * to Hinkley in Leicestershire, whereof (doubtless) it was not long since a member, in regard it appears to be of the fee of Winchester (by reason of Quincy E. of Winchester's interest in the Honour of Leicester.)

As for the signification of the name; I shall refer you to the Gloss: of the learned Sir H. Spelman, where may be seen the various acceptions thereof; conceiving, that in this place it was first imposed, to exprels a certain quantity of Land sufficient for one Plough to manage. But the first mention that I have met with of it, is in 3 Job. where Will. Mareschall and Raph Mallore levied a Fine of two yard Land here to the use of Richard fitz Robert. To which William succeeded Thomas, who in 55 H. 3. held * half a Knights fee in this place and Eton (now Pun-Caton) with Sapcote in Leicestershire. After which have I not seen anything considerable relating thereto; till 20 E. 3. that William Moton answered * for the 8th part of a Knights fee here, held of the Honour of Winchester; whose title therein divolved, as it seems, to Richard Grey of Codnoure, and Laurence Dutton: for in 11 R. 2. the half Knights fee before specified, lying here and in Caton, was certified to have been held by them of Henry Lord Ferrers of Groby. From which time, till 1 Maria, can I discover no more thereof; but then was it found, that Sir Walter Smyth (of whom I have spoken in Shirefozd) dyed seized of the third part of this Mannour; As also 300 acres of pasture, 60 acres of meadow, and 2 s. rent lying here and in Hinkley, purchased of John Leeke and Richard Astell, leaving Richard his son and heir 22 years of age: which Richard, in 35 Eliz. being posselt * of two parts, seled them upon William Littleton, in marriage with Margaret his daughter, in the same manner as he did Shirefozd (whereof I shall speak at large) since which it hath accompanied the possession of that Lordship.

Burton-Hastings.

1b Domef-day lib.
c R. Hoved. p. 264. 22.
Southwards from Stretton, and adjoining thereto, lyes Burton, antiently called Burton-Hastings, by reason that the Hastings were sometime Lords thereof: which, with other Lands, whereof I shall make mention in their due places, being part * of the possessions belonging to Sinuard surnamed Barn, a potent * man in England before the Conquest, was, among other the distributions, which William the Conquerour made, given to Henry de Fereires, one of his Normans, (Progenitor to that great Family afterwards Earls of Derby) and contained then 4 hydes, having 2 mills belonging thereto: the value of the whole being certified at xl s. But in the general Survey it is written Boxtone; howbeit in after times, Burthton, Burhton, Barugton, Barughton, and sometimes Burtone, from the old English word buph and bupgh (as I guess) signifying, with the Saxons, not onely a place fortified with some warlike rampier or wall, but that which had a kind of fence or closure about it: or else from gebupic, and then may it be colonorum villa.

In H. 2. time half this Town was * given to the Monastery of Pun-Caton by Geffrey le Abbe and Emme his wife (it being of her inheritance) with the consent of Raph de Turvill and Richard le Abbe, heirs to the said Geffrey and Emme; and confirmed to them by the Charter of the same King: the residue, as it seems, coming soon after to the family of Hastings: for in 36 H. 3. it was certified, * that Henry de Hasteng held 1. Kts. fee here and in Shirefozd of the Earl Ferrers. And in 53 H. 3. upon the death of Henry de Hastings, amongst other Kts. fees assigned in dowry to Joane his wife, there was one in this Burton, which Nich. de Turvile then held.

How or when Turviles interest passed away, I have not seen; but, in 9 E. 2. John the son of Fouke de Orreby, having (as by his deed & he expresses) granted all his Lands which he had in the Village of Borghton to William de Herle and his heirs, paying to the said John and his heirs 7 marks of silver yearly, at the feasts of Easter and St. Michael the Archangel by equal portions, then released to the said William all his title to that Rent of 7 marks, reserving 6 marks to be paid by the said William during the life of him the said John; which release bears date at Staplefozd in Cheshire, 9 R. 2. whereupon, the same year it was certified, * that the Priorels of Eton, and William de Herle were Lords of this place. Which William had issue Sir Robert de Herle Kt. assigned * one of the Justices for conservation of the peace in this County in 18 and 19 E. 3. who gave * a messuage in Caton to the Nuns there; and, in 21 E. 3. departed * this life, leaving his son Robert then 30 years of age: which Robert dyed * in 38 H. 3. without issue; whereupon Sir Raph Hastings Kt. son of Margaret, sister to the said Robert, became his next * heir: which Sir Raph had issue Raph, that dyed 9 21 R. 2. leaving issue Raph, Richard, and Leonard. Of these, Raph the eldest, being attainted * for Treason, lost his head 20 Jul. 6 H. 4. for^s conspiring with Richard Scroop Archb. of Doyle, and others, against the King: but Richard his younger brother, a man of better affections to the Crown, had restitution * of his Lands; and, in 2 H. 5. underwent * the Sheriffalty for this County and Leicestershire. After which, viz. in 9 H. 5. he was retained * by Indenture to serve the K. in his wars beyond Sea with 10 Men at Arms, and 30 Archers, taking 2 s. a day for his own wages, 1 s. for every of the said Men at Arms, and 6 d. for every Archer.

In 1, 5, and 11 H. 6. he had again the custody * of those Counties. But, in 15 H. 6. dyed, leaving Leonard his brother and heir xl years of age. Which Leonard, being also Sheriff 2 for these Counties in 32 H. 6. departed * this world in 34 E 2 leaving leaving William his son and heir, afterwards Lord Chamberlain to K. Edw. 4. and erected^b to the degree of a Baron by the same King; as also made Master-worker^c of the K. Moneys, both Gold and Silver; and Keeper of all manner his exchange and interchange in the Tower of London, Ireland, and Calceps. This is he whom Ric. D. of Glouc. (afterwards King, by the name of Ric. 3.) caused to be pull'd from the Council Table, in the Tower, and immediately beheaded upon a peice of Timber within the walls of that place, as our Historians do manifest: But he had a more honourable burial, viz. in the Chapel of St. George at Windsor, by the appointment of his last Will and Testament^d, and in a place assigned for that purpose by K. E. 4. in his life time; where is a fair Monument erected over him by his Executors, for the making whereof he bequeathed an hundred marks.

To whom succeeded Edward his son and heir, styled Lord Hastings and Hungerford; who by his Testament^f in 22 H. 7. bequeathed his body to be buried in the Colledge at Windsor, near his Fathers Tombe; and left issue George Lord Hastings; which George was afterwards created 3 Earl of Huntington, 8 Dec. 21 H. 8. and sold^h this Mannour to Thomas Harvey Esq; (a rich Merchant) who, by his last Will and Testamentⁱ, bequeathed it, together with one messuage lying in Wobrosc in this County, to the use of 3 Priests, during xxi years, to keep an Obit for his soul. After which time it returned to his four daughters and heirs; whereof Lucie, the youngest, was married to Thomas Cotton of Connington in Com. Hunt. Esq; (formerly in ward to the said Thomas Harvey.) Upon partition of whose Lands, this (inter alia) being allotted to her, is descended to Sir Thomas Cotton, now of Connington Br. (great Grandchild to that Thomas.) Unto whom, for his singular favours in most freely communicating to me many rarities out of that inestimable Library, which with great cost were gathered by his worthy Father, and with no less care preserved by himself, I stand highly obliged.

After the dissolution of the Abbeyes, that part of this Lordship, with the Rectory, belonging to the Monastery of Sun Caton, was granted^k unto Sir Marmaduke Constable Kt. together with the site of that Religious House, and divers other Lands: but since, by purchase, is come to John Hele Esq;

The Church, being granted^l, very antiently, to the Monastery of Sun Caton, was also appropriated^m thereto; and in an. 1291. 19 E. 1. valuedⁿ at 7 marks and a half: but in^o 26 H. 8. at 4 l. 14 s. 2 d. over and above ix s. vi d. for Procurations and Synodals, being not a Presentative, but the Cure served by a Stipendiary; in which Church are neither Arms nor Monuments.

Shirforde.

From Burton-Hastings, towards the South, lyeth Shirforde, whereof there now remains nothing but part of the antient Mannour-house. This place may seem to have taken its name from the Forde or Passage over that little Torrent, which runs on the West part thereof towards Sun-Caton, as the Map will shew; Shire signifying clear, and in that sense we still use the word upon some occasions.

As it lyes within the Parish of Burton-Hastings, so was it antiently a member thereof, and held likewise of Ferrers: but the first mention that I find of it, is in H. 2. time, where Raph the son of Robert de Chartres (a man in some eminency at that time, as I apprehend by the stile of his Deed) confirms^q unto the Canons of Crebury (in this County) a yard Land lying in Shireforde; for so is it there written: and, by the consent of Richard his son, granted unto them ten acres more in pure alms. Amongst the Witnesses to which Deed were Randolfe Truwe, and William his son. Not long after which time, viz. about the beginning of H. 3. reign at the farthest, certain Lands there were given^r to the Monks of Combe by Thomas Trove, who stiles himself in his Grant, Dominus de Schireforde. From which Thomas, as I guess, did descend John de Shireford; who, in 20 E. 3. with Robert de Herle, answered^s for half a Knights fee in Wroughton and Shireforde, then held of the Honour of Wutbury.

This John de Shireford was also Lord of the moitie of the Mannour of Church-water; but, leaving no issue male, these his Lands devolved to the family of Puresey, Margaret his Daughter taking to Husband Philip Puresey of Munster-ton in Leicestershire: In whose line this Mannour of Shireforde continued till H. 8. time, being their principal seat in this County.

his Esquires, to be yearly paid him out of the Mannour of Rotley, pro consilio suo impenso & impendendo. He was also in Commission^e for conservation of the peace in this County, from the 13 of R. 2. till 6 H. 5. and had a memorable Grant from John de Whellesburgh of the inheritance in reversion of Fenny Drayton and Whellesburgh, two good Mannours in Leicestershire; whereby the same John did also pass his Arms to be born by him the said Thomas, his heirs and assigns, as entirely as he himself or his Ancestours had born them; all which appears by the Deed^d sealed with his Seal of Arms, and bearing date at Fenny-Drayton 21 R. 2. which Arms, viz. Or, 3 piles gules, and upon a Canton arg: a mullet Sable, have ever since been born by his Descendants, quarterly with their own.

This Mannour continued to William, son and heir of the last mentioned William, who married Margaret the daughter to Sir William Cherwynd Kt. in 21 R. 2. Which William, in 6 H. 4. was joyned in Commission^f amongst others to treat with the people about a loan of Money for the K. special service, and rested in Commission for the peace in this Shire from 8 H. 4. till 1 H. 5. But how long he lived, I find not; for the name of William holding on to his Posterity, doth to confound the descent, as that without more particular light than I have yet had, I must onely by circumstances distinguish them: which I presume is here right enough done: for the next mention of them, that I meet with, is in 10 H. 6. where William Puresey of Shirford is certifiedⁱ to hold the Mannour of Olover (now Church-Ober) in this County, whereof I have already spoke. This is that William, who married Mariana the daughter to Alan Ayott of Shalfston in Com. Back. and in 12 H. 6. when all the men of note through England were sworn to observe divers Articles agreed on in the Parliament then held, is recorded, amongst others in this County, having then his residence here at Shirford.

In 19 H. 6. he had Commission^m to treat for another loan: and was a Justice of Peace from the 18, to the 24 of H. 6. In 26 H. 6. he had the Shirralfaty of these Counties; and dyed^p in 6 E. 4. leaving issue Philip his son and heir 24 years of age, with John a younger son. Which Philip in 8 E. 4. being in Commission^f for the assessing of two fifteens, and two tenths in this County, then granted to the K. in Parliament, dyed^p the same year, seized, inter alia, of this Mannour; and was buried^q in the Church of St. James at Badley-Clinton, as by his Testament he directed; leaving issue^r John, Nicholas, and William. Of these three, Nicholas was the last that survived; but all of them dyed^r without issue: and therefore Nicholas, son to John their Uncle, became heir to the estate, being then in ward to the King for this inheritance. Of whom I find nothing further memorable, than, that he was^s of Shalfston in Buckinghamshire, and sold^t this Mannour of Shirford to Henry Smyth Esq; the principal branch of his descendants having for the most part resided ever since at Drayton in Leicestershire (whereof George Puresey Esq; son and heir of George, by Mary one of the daughters and co-heirs to Sir Valentine Knightley, is still Lord, though his seat be at Wadley in Berks.)

chamsted I have spoke) bore so great a love to that City, that he contributed^e to the purchase of 50 l. lands per annum, for the maintenance of one Priest, 12 poor men, and one woman in the Gild of the holy Trinity, St. John Baptist, and St. Katherine, there situate. And was in Commission for conservation of the peace from^d the 17 of H. 7. till his death: as also for Goal-delivery in 17,^e and 23, f H. 7. And had issue Sir Walter Smyth Kt. whose Murder here at Shirford by his own Lady, assisted with two servants, and the circumstances conducing thereto (which are very memorable) I shall here briefly set forth.

This Sir Walter, being grown an aged man at the death of his first wife, considering of a marriage for Richard his son and heir, then at mans estate, to that end made his mind known to Mr Thomas Cherwin of Ingestre in Staffordshire (a Gentleman of an ancient family and fair estate) who, entertaining the motion in behalf of Dorothy, one of his daughters, was contented to give 500 l. portion with her. But no sooner had the old Knight seen the young Lady, than that he became a tutor for himself, being so captivated with her beauty, that he tendred as much for her, besides a good joynure, as he should have received in case the match had gone on for his son. Which liberal offer so wrought upon Mr Cherwyn, as that he spared not for arguments to perswade his daughter to accept of Sir Walter for her husband. Whereupon the marriage ensued accordingly; but with what a tragique issue, will quickly be seen: For it was not long, ere that her affections wandring after younger men, she gave entertainment to one Mr William Robinson (then of Drayton-Basset, a young Gentleman of about 22 years of age) son to George Robinson a rich Mercer of London: and grew so impatient at all impediments, which might hinder her full enjoyment of him, that she rested not till she had contrived a way to be rid of her husband. For which purpose corrupting her waiting Gentlewoman, and a Groom of the stable, she resolved by their help, and the assistance of Robinson, to strangle him in his bed, appointing the time and manner how it should be effected: And, though Robinson failed in coming on the designed night (perhaps through a right apprehension of so direfull a fact) she no whit staggered in her resolutions: for watching her husband till he was fallen asleep, she then let in those assassins before specified; and, casting a long towell about his neck, caused the Groom to lye upon him to keep him from struggling, whilst her self and the maid, straining the towell, stopt his breath.

It seems the good old man little thought that this his Lady had acted therein: for when they first cast the towell about his neck, he cryed out, help Doll help! But, having thus dispatcht the work, they carryed him into another room where a close stool was plac'd, upon which they set him; and, after an hour, that the Maid and Groom were silently got away, to palliate the business, she made an outcry in the house, wringing her hands, pulling her hair, and weeping extreamly; with pretence, that missing him for some time out of bed, she went to see what the matter was, and found him accidentally in that posture. Which subtill and feigned shews of sorrow, prevented all suspicion of his violent death: and, not long after, went to London, setting so high a value upon her beauty, that Robinson, her former darling (perhaps for for not keeping touch with her, as before hath been said) became neglected. But, within two years following, it so hapned, that this wofull deed of darknes was brought to light by the groom before specified; who, being entertained with Mr Richard Smyth, son and heir to the murdered Knight; and attending him to Cobentre with divers other servants, became so sensible of his villany, when he was in his cups, that out of good nature, he took his Master to a side, and upon his knees besought forgiveness from him for acting in the murder of his Father, declaring all the circumstances thereof. Whereupon Mr Smyth discreetly gave him good words, but wisht some others, that he trusted, to have an eye to him, that he might not escape when he had slept and better considered what might be the issue thereof. Notwithstanding which direction, he fled away with his Masters best Horse; and, hasting presently into Wales, attempted to go beyond Sea: but being hindred by contrary winds, after three essays to lanch out, was so happily pursued by Mr Smyth, who spared for no cost in sending to several Ports, that he was found out and brought Prisoner to Warwick, as was also the Lady and her Gentlewoman, all of them, with great boldness, denying the fact; and the Groom most impudently charging Mr Smyth, with endeavour of corrupting him to accuse the Lady (his mother in-law) falsely, to the end he might get her joyncture: But upon his arraignment so smitten was he at apprehension of the guilt, that he publickly acknowledged it, and stoutly justified what he had so said to be true to the face of the Lady and her Maid; who, at first, with much seeming confidence, pleaded their innocency, till at length, seeing the particular circumstances thus discovered, they both confessed the fact: For which, having judgement to dye, the Lady was burnt at a Stake near the Hermitage on Wolbep-hearth (towards the side of Shirford Lordship) where the Country people to this day shew the place: and the Groom with the Maid suffred death at Warwick. This was about the third year of Q. Mary's reign, it being May 15. 1 Maria, that Sir Walter's murder^k so hapned.

To whom succeeded the before specified Richard, his son and heir; who was strangely juggled out of a fair inheritance, this Lordship being part; the manner* whereof, considering what success hath attended it, is not unworthy the relation.

This Richard, having but one onely daughter, called Margaret, by his first wife; and doubting of issue male, treated with Sir John Littleton of Frankley in Warwickshire, for a marriage betwixt his said daughter, and William Littleton, third son to the said Sir John: In consideration whereof, he agreed to settle all his lands, in remainder, after his own decease without other issue, upon the said William and Margaret, and the heirs of their two bodies lawfully begotten; but, for lack of such issue, to return to his own right heirs. And having Writings drawn accordingly, trusted the said Sir John Littleton to get them ingrossed. Which being effected, and a day appointed for sealing, Mr Smyth came over to Frankley, where he found very noble entertainment, and some of Sir John's friends to bear him company, in whose prelence the Writings were brought forth, and begun to be read: but before they came to the uses, slept in Sir John Littleton's keeper in a sweat, and told them, that there were a brace of Bucks at lare in the Park, which carryed a glass in their tails for Mr Smyth's Dogs to look in (for he loved coursing well, and had his Greyhounds there) but, if they made not hast, those market people, which passed through the Park, would undoubtedly rouse them. Whereupon Sir John Littleton earnestly moved Mr Smyth to seal the Writings without further reading; protesting, that they were according to the draughts he had seen, and without any alteration. Which bold asseverations, putting him out of all suspicion of sinister dealing, caused him forthwith to seal them, and to go into the Park.

Hereupon the two Children (for they were not above ix years old a peice) were marryd together, and lived in the house with Sir John. But so it hapned, that, about six years after, the young man dyed by a fall from a Horse; insomuch as Mr Smyth, considering that his daughter had no issue, resolved to take her away, and signified as much to Sir John; who, designing to marry her again to George, his second son, refused to deliver her; till which time Mr Smyth never suspected any thing in the Deed formerly so sealed, as hath been said: But then, upon difference betwixt him and Sir John, it appeared, that for want of issue by the before specified William and Margaret, the lands were to devolve unto the right heirs of the said William, which was Gilbert Littleton his eldest brother, contrary to the plain agreement at first made. To make short therefore; William, the youngest son, marryd her; George, the second, enjoy'd her; and Gilbert, the eldest, had the estate, as heir to his brother: Which, descending to John his son, was kept from Mr Smyth the true heir, with whom he had great suits in Law; and at length by his attainder^l for adhering to Robert E. of Essex in 42 Eliz. came to the Crown [for he^m was drawn into that Treason, as being a man much respected for his wit and valour by those Conspirators, and dyed in Prison.] After which, King James, at his first coming to the Crown of England, being petitioned by Muriel the widow to the said John for restitution of his lands; well weighing how popular a man the Earl of Essex was, and so consequently all those that took part with him were lookt on by the Vulgar, unto whom an Act of Mercy could not but be, especially at his first entrance, very gratefull, yielded to her request; and by his Letters pat. made a grant of them to her. Whereupon, she still doubting more trouble by suits with Mr Smyth, sold them away to Sergeant Hele, a great Lawyer: who likewise considering upon what foundation Littleton's title was at first built, to the end that it might the better be defended, disposed of them to his 5 sons, viz. Sir Warwick Hele and Sir Francis (both Knights) Nicholas, Walter, and George. But such is the fate that follows these possessions, that for want of a publick adversary, these brothers are now at suit amongst themselves for them.

And, as none of the line of Gilbert Littleton before specified (to whom they so descended by force of the before specified conveyance) doth enjoy a foot of them: so is it no less observable; that the son and heir of George by the same Margaret (so marryd as I have declared) viz. Stephen Littleton of Polbreach in Warwickshire, was attended with a very hard fate, being one of the Gunpowder Conspirators in 3 Jac. for which he lost

Bulkinton.

Southwards from hence lyes Bulkinton, which is a large Parish, containing these Hamlets, viz. Weston in Arden, Ryton, Bramcote, Wolfsburghill, Marston, Abet, and Bernacle; of which in their order.

In the Conquerours dayes, this was certified to be in the possession of the Earl of Mellent, and held then by Salo his under-tenant; at which time it contained 4 hydes and one virgat of land, being valued at xx s. and written Bochintone.

That Ernald de Boys was Steward to Rob. Bossu E. of Leic. I have already taken notice in Clifton; but whether this place descended to him as heir to Robert de Watervill, his Uncle: or whether he were enfeoffed thereof immediatly by the said Earl, I cannot say; nevertheless that he succeeded Watervill as heir, is most probable: for it appears, that Roger de Watervill, brother of Robert, gave the Church to the Abby of Leicester, upon, or near the time of that Monastery its foundation, which was in an. 1143. (8 Steph.) To which Church were then belonging 9 two yard land, called the glebe; with the Chappels of Bernangle, Weston, Ryton, Marston, Schelton, Ansty, and Bramcote: all which, except Schelton and Ansty, do yet continue of this Parish: for in those dayes it was seldome seen, that the possession of the Mannour and patronage of the Church were in several hands before such perpetual advowsons were given to the Monks. Which Ernald confirmed the said grant of Roger de Watervill: so also did his descendants, the 3 succeeding Ernalds.

In 13 E. 1. John de Boys, son to the last Ernald, claimed a Court-Leet, Gallows, power to punish the breakers of the Assize of Bread and Ale: as also Weyfs; and to be discharged of the common amerciaments of the County. All these, I say, he claimed then by prescription in this his Mannour of Bulkinton, Weston, and Ryton, with Free-warren here by grant to Ernald his father, which were allowed. To whom succeeded William his brother and heir, (as in Clifton is manifested.) Which William settled this Mannour, with divers other, upon himself for life; and afterwards upon William de la Zuche and Maud his wife, and the heirs of the same William and Maud; and for lack of such issue, to the said Maud, and the heirs of her body; the remainder to his right heirs. Which Maud was heir to the above mentioned William de Bosco, as the descent in Clifton sheweth.

In 7 E. 2. the K. granted Free-warren to the before specified William and Maud his wife, in their demesne lands here at Bulkinton, Weston, Ryton, Bramcote, and Wolfsburghill, all in this Parish. But afterwards do I meet with nothing more of that family, relating to this place, further than their dying seized thereof, till Edward, the principal male branch of those Barons; who, wasting that great Patrimony, descended to him from his Fore-fathers, sold this Lordship, with the rest of the Hamlets in this Parish, to Humfry Davenport Esq; and one Richard Bucknam Gent. Which Humfry and Richard past the one moytie thereof to Sir Christopher Yelverton Kt. one of the Justices of the K. Bench (temp. Jac. R.) whose Grandchild Sir Chr. Yelverton of Castleton in Com. Northampton. Kt. of the Bath, now enjoys it. And the other moytie to George Puresey, fifth son to Michael Puresey of Caldecote Esq;: which George had issue Gamaliel Puresey, who sold it to Anthony Stroughton now of St. Johns in Warwick Esq; the present owner thereof.

The Church (dedicated to St. James, being granted to the Abby of Leicester (as I have already shew'd) was antiently appropriated to that Monastery: and, upon the endowment of the Vicaridge, a pension of xxvi s. viii d. per annum, was reserved out of the same.

In an. 1291. 19. E. 1. the Rectory was valued at xxvi marks; and the Vicaridge at 11 marks: But in 26 H. 8. I find the Vicaridge rated at vi lib. x sol. vi d. over and above time I have seen.

Upon the death of the last Ernald de Boys, 5 E. 1. it was found^a, that this Mannour was by him held in capite of the heirs of the Earl of Winchester (in right of their partage in the Honour of Leicester) paying yearly unto them one Hound called a Wache, and seven pence in money for all services.

Afterwards, scil. in 7 E. 2. Will. la Zuche and Maud his wife had Free-warren granted to them here and in divers other places, (as in Bulkinton hath been said.) Which Will. in 19 E. 3. had licenc^b for amortizing of 8 Messuages, 9 yard land and a half, and xxx s. annual Rent, with the appurtenances, lying in Clepbroke and Heyre (in Com. Leic.) this Weston in Arden, Berston-Jabet, Coton, and Ryton juxta Bulkinton,
(Com. War.) for the maintenance of two Priests to sing Mass daily in the Chappel of our Lady within this his Mannour of Weston, for the good estate of himself, whilst he lived, and for the health of his soul after he should depart this world; as also for the soul of William Danet; and for the souls of the father and mother, with the ancestours and heirs of the said Will. la Zuche and Will. Da-net, and of all the faithfull deceased. Concerning which Chantry, the B. of Cob. and Lich. upon his Ordination^c thereof, the next ensuing year, thus declared; That there having been a Chappel of the blessed Virgin Mary within this Mannour of Weston, and therein divine service celebrated time out of mind; which, being grown ruinous, was then newly fallen down, Sir Will. la Zuche of Waringworth Kt. had rebuilt the same with a fair fabrick, in honour of the said blessed Virgin, for the good estate of himself; as also of Sir Will.
la Zuche of Totesnes, and the Lady Eliz. his wife, with their children during this life; and afterwards for the health of their souls, and for the souls of Will. de Boys, Sir Endo la Zuche, Melisent de Montalt, Maud la Zuche, Elen^e la Zuche, and their children departed this life: And for the souls of Will. Danet and Richard Dobyn, and other Benefactors, with all the faithfull deceased.

But, whereas the first licence for amortizing the lands before mentioned was for two Priests (as I have said) it seems the said Sir Will. la Zuche chang'd his purpose: for I find, that in 21 E. 3.
he had the K. licence^d for the alteration thereof for one Priest onely, so that the said Priest might have another under him for performance of that service.

Belonging to the Lord Zouch his Mannour-house here, there was antiently a Park, as it seems:
for, in 46 E. 3. Sir Will. la Zuche had licence^e to turn a way for the enlargement thereof: Howbeit, in 10 H. 6. where Will. Lord Zouch was certified^f to hold this Mannour, it is called Welton-Arnold, for distinction from the other Wel-tons in this County, in regard that Arnold de Boys had antiently been owner thereof.

But after the attainder of John Lord Zouch, in 1 H. 7. the K. granted^g it to Sir James Blount, and to the heirs males of his body: nevertheless,
it seems, that the family of Zouch afterwards re-gain'd it: for in 6 E. 6. George Lord Zouch was possess'd^h thereof, and dyedⁱ seized of it, 19 Junii, 19 Eliz. leaving Edward his son and heir, who sold it to Humphrey Davenport Esq. and Richard Bucknam, with Bulkinton and other lands; by which

Weston in Arden.

THIS, taking its name from the Western situation from Bulkinton, was also, in the Conq.
daies, in the possession of the Earl of Mellent, and then certified to contain two hydes, which were valued at xl sol. Since which time the possession thereof hath gone along with Bulkinton, till now:
therefore shall I not need to make instance by particular proofs; in regard, that all those Records, that I have made use of for Bulkinton, do manifest the same. Yet, because there are some things peculiar hereunto onely, I shall in their order take notice of them: amongst which this is not the least observable; that of all these places in the Parish of Bulkinton, it hath not onely the priority in rank, where they are mentioned together in the Records: but even Bulkinton it self, with the rest, are accounted as members of it; the reason whereof can be no other, than, that the Lord of them all had his Mannour-house here, where the Leef being kept, not onely the Inhabitants of the other Villages met; but from other places, both in this County and Leicestersh. which were the Lord Zouches lands, viz. Clifton, Brownf-over, Wybbott, Bulkinton and Ryton, in Com.
War; with Althorpe, Elmesthorpe, and Clepwhich means it came to Sir Christopher Yelverton Kt. of the Bath, and Anthony Stoughton Esq; the present Lords thereof, as Bulkinton did.

A Tradition there is, that one of the Lord Zouches, who much affected to reside here, and wanting sufficient mowing ground for his use, upon a time invited the Free-holders of Bulkinton to his house; and welcoming them with very good entertainment, proposed the purchasing of their several doles in a fair large meadow, which lay fitly for him; All which assented, except one Rogers. Whereupon the rest urging him to do as they had done, the Lord Zouch said, Let the Churle alone with his peice; And so, to this day, the posterity of the said Rogers continue posselt thereof, it being called the Charles peice.]

THE first mention that I find of this place, is in that grant k of the Tithes thereof to the Abby of Leicester, as a member of the Parish of Bulkinton; viz. when the Church of Bulkinton was first given thereto by Roger de Waterville, of which I have already spoken: but that it was and is a member of Bulkinton, or rather Weston, where the Lord had his seat, all the testimonies from Record, which I have produced before, do manifest; and therefore I shall not need to say any more thereof.

THIS place, in the Conq. time, contained two hydes, whereof one and a half then belonged to Earl Alberic, of whom I have made mention in Clifton: and the other half hyde to Ric. Forestarius, of whom I shall speak in Chefferton. But, before the Conquest, one Salo was owner of that, which Earl Alberic had, being the same man that afterwards held Bulkintone of the Earl of Spellent. The other half hyde one Sexi posselt. It is there written Bramcote; perhaps from Bran, the Saxon, and cott or coed, the British word, which signifie the burnt wood.

That the inheritance of this Village was as antiently in Waterville, as any of those before specified were, I am induced to believe: for Roger de Waterville gave p six yard land and the Mill here to the Abby of Leicester, by the consent of Robert Earl of Leicester his Lord (and Founder of that Monastery) which grant was afterwards confirmed q by Arnold de Boys, his Nephew, and all the rest of the succeeding Arnolds. Yet, in an Inspec. made by Thomas Earl of Lanc. whereby he recites divers grants to the Canons of Leic. and amongst those, the same yard land in Bramcote, he declares it to have been given to them by Gesfrey le Abbe, of whom I had occasion to make mention in Burton-Hastings: and, together with his confirmation thereof, ratifies s also the gift of two yard land more, which one Ranulph held: so that there being eight yard land therein belonging to the Abby of Leic. besides the Mill, and what was appurtenant thereto, the Canons of that House did, as in other their lands in this County, claim a Court-Leef and other privileges therein in 13 E. 1. as granted by the Ks. progenitors to that Monastery, for which they then produced their Charters.

But in 6 E. 2. I find a, that the heirs of Henry de Hastings held the third part of a Kts. fee here of John de Hastings the elder, then deceased, it being then written Bzompote. The like is certified n as to the tenure of that third part by the heirs of the said Henry in 49 E. 3. 14 x H. 6. and 167 E. 4. But what the Lord Zouch posselt in this Village, I am not able directly to point out: howbeit, certain it is, that something he enjoy'd, in regard the Free-warren granted z to him in 7 E. 2. extended into his demesne lands here, as well as in those of Weston, Bulkinton, and Ryton.

As for that which the Abbot of Leic. had, it amounted to the third part of a Kts fee: for in 20 E. 3. it is certified, a that so much he held of the Earl of Lancaster, who then had the Honour of Leic. as is well known. All which lands so belonging to that Abby, were in 38 H. 8. granted b to Edward Watson Esq; and Henry Herdson, and to the heirs of the same Edward; who (as I have heard) had two daughters that were his heirs; the one married to Turner; the other to Lisle: from which Lisle descended Lisle, that sold his moytie to George Puresey of Wolverhill Gent. And from Turner, William, his Grandson, of whom Gamaliel Puresey, son to the said George, purchased the other.

Wolverhill.

THE first mention that I meet with of this place, is in 21 E. 1. where it is settled, with Bulkinton and other Mannours, upon Will. la Zuche and Maud his wife, and the heirs of Maud by VWill. de Boys (as I have in Bulkinton already observed.) In that Fine it is written Wulfars-hill, which doth import, that the original of its denomination was from one Wulphere his residing there; that being a very common name in the Saxons time.

In the line of Zouth it continued with Weston before spoken of, till a the time of Edw. Lord Zouch, the son of George, as the Records, which I have cited touching Weston do shew; VWill. la Zuche and Maud his wife having Free-warren granted d to them here in 7 E. 2. Which Edw. sold e the same with Weston, &c. unto Humphrey Davenport Esq; and Richard Bucknam, in Eliz. from whom Geo. Puresey, 5th son to Mich. P. of Caldecote in this County, Gent. purchased f it, whose son Gamaliel now enjoys it.

THIS Village, taking its name from the flat and moorish situation, had the addition of Fabet to distinguish it from the other Towns in this County of the same appellation, in regard the Fabets were antiently Lords thereof.

In the Conq. time it was in the possession of the E. of Spellent, and certified g to contain one hyde, valued at 3 lib. one Herennard being owner thereof in Edw. the Conf. dayes; who, after the Norman invasion was glad to become Tenant to it under the said E. of Spellent.

This, being part^b of those 3 Kts. fees whereof Philip de Estley, Ancestour to the family of Astley, had been enfeofft in the time of H. 1. (as I have already pointed at in my discourse of Willmoxton) was held by his descendants of the Earls of Warwick byⁱ the third part of a Kts. fee; and, of them by Henry^k surnamed^l Jabet, son^m to Fulco de Merston; which Henry gaveⁿ 4 yard land here to the Abby of Leicester, whereupon he was received into that Monastery, as a Canon, and his wife as a sister. To him succeeded John^o his son and heir, sometimes called John filius Henrici de Merstona, and sometimes John Jabet, who was a Benefactor to the Monks of Combe, by giving to them lands in this place: which grant K. H. 2. confirmed^p.

This Henry had a brother called Robert^q; who, having certain lands in this Village, gave^r divers small parcels thereof to the said Monks of Combe: and not onely so, but, by his deed made them promise, that he would neither sell nor pawn any of it, except to that Monastery. Which grants to those Monks, with divers more made by several persons, whose names are of no great note, were confirm'd^s by Thomas the son to Walter de Estley, in an. 1241. 25 H. 3. To whom succeeded Sir Andrew de Astley Kt. who confirmed^t to them and their successors for ever a Court-Leet here for their own tenants; which, with other privileges, was allowed^u of by the K. in 13 E. 1. But the residue of this town, the said Sir Andrew himself held by the service of half a Kts. fee, (as I have already said) and, in 13 E. 1. claimed^v here, by prescription, a Court-Leet, Gallows, Weyfs, power to punish the breakers of the Assize of Bread and Ale, Free-warren, with immunity from the common amerciaments, and of aid to the Shiriff, it being then accounted a member of Astley, all which were allowed. But further than this have I not found any thing considerable of it, other than, that after the dissolution of the Monasteries, that part, which belong'd to the Abby of Combe, was, with divers other lands, granted by Letters^x Pat. dated 28 Octob. 36 H. 8. to Thomas Broke and John Williams, and to the heirs of Broke; from whom, it seems, Henry Waver soon purchased it: for I find^y, that on the 26 of Febr. next following, the said Henry aliened it to Will. Perkins, whose descendants do still enjoy it.

Bernacle.

IN the Conq. time; this was in the Earl of Mellent's possession^z, and held of him by the same Herennard that had Merston, whose freehold it had been in Edw. the Conf. dayes. By the general Survey it is certified to contain 3 virgats of land, and of wood 4 furlongs in length, and 3 in bredth, the value of all being xx s. and there written Berenhangre, the latter part of the name (viz. hangre) signifying, of old, the same that collis or mons doth: but afterwards it is otherwise written.

There were 4 yard land, lying in this place, given^a very antiently to the Abby of Leicester, by Henry the son of Fulke de Merston (of whom I have made mention in Merston-Jabet) all of the fee of Ernald de Boys before spoken of, and by him confirmed to that Monastery; as also by K. H. 2. In that grant it is written Bernangul; but in Thomas E. of Lanc. his ratification^b of a carucate of land to the same Monastery, Berhangil.

In 13 Edw. 1. the Abbot of Leicester had a Court-Leet here for his own Tenants, with other privileges, which he claimed^c to have had time out of mind.

It seems, that the Fitzwiths (of whom in Bobenhull and Shotswell I have spoke) were antiently owners of this place, though the grant thereof to them have I not found: for it appears, that the Canons of Leicester granted unto Guy, a Knight, then Lord thereof, that he and his heirs should have an Oratory, or Chappel, in his house here at Bernangre; provided, that such Priest, who was to celebrate divine service there, before he entred upon that duty, should take a solemn oath in the presence of the Vicar of Bulkinton for the time being, that it might be no damage to the Mother-Church of Bulkinton; and, that he would be faithfull to the said Vicar. This was in H. 3. time, as will appear by the descent of that family in Bobenhull; for his Grand-child Robert, called Robertus filius Johannis, filii Guidonis, Lord^d also of this place, dyed in the beginning of E. 2. time. From whom descended Robert, whose daughter and heir Joane, being the wife to John Beauchamp of Holt, brought this Lordship to that family (whereof also in Bobenhull I have spoke.) After which time it accompanied the possession of Bobenhull; first to Panncefote, afterwards to Croft, and then to Sir Edw. Grewill, as the authorities there cited will manifest; but further I cannot speak.

It seems, that the Hospitalars were antiently Lords of the moytie of this Village; for so in an old Rentall^e of lands, lying in Astley and Shotswood, they are said to be. Which moytie was, after the generall dissolution of the Religious Houses, granted^f (inter alia) by K. E. 6. 15. Dec. in 4. of his reign, to Sir Raph Sadler Kt. and Laurence Wennington Gent. by the name of a messuage called Ferne-place. Which Sir Raph sold^g the same to John Wade Gent. and his heirs. From whom, in 3 Eliz. it was pass'd^h by the name of the Mannour of Barnakell, to Sir Rouland Heyward Kt. and others; who soldⁱ it to Over, and Phyneis. But Phyneis releasing, Over pass'd^j the same away to Richard Perkins, by the name of the Mannour and capitall Messuage in Barnakell. Which Richard, in 14 Eliz. granted^k it to Edw. Aglionby. And, in 15 Eliz. the above mentioned John Wade joyn'd^l with the said Perkins in levying a Fine thereupon, by the name of the Mannour of Barnakell, 8 Messuages, and Acres of land lying in Barnakell and Shilton. Which Edw. Aglionby, by his deed^m dated 8 Maii, 32 Eliz. granted the reversion thereof, after the death of Mary his wife, unto Mich. Feilding and his heirs; who dying without issue, it descended unto Basill Feilding, late of Petonham Esq; his elder brother: which Basill settled the same upon Roger Feilding, his younger son, afterwards Knighted; whose son, Basill, now enjoys it.

Shilton.

I Have now done with the Parish of Bulkington. The next Town in my designed order is Shilton, which the Earl of Mellent held^p in the Conq. time, Wallef being his tenant thereof, whose free-hold it was before the Norman invasion.

It then contained two hydes, having woods of two furlongs in length, and one in breadth, and was valued at xl sol. being in the general Survey then taken, written Scelfstone. I suppose, that it attended the succession of Bernangre for a long time, though I have not light enough from Record to manifest as much; for, in 8 H. 5. it appears, ^q that John Beauchamp of Holt dyed seized thereof, and that Margaret the wife of John Pauncefort was his daughter and heir. After which time, till 5 H. 8. have I seen no more of it; but then did Raph Swillington and Alice his wife pass^r it to Richard Bishop of Winchester, and others, though to what uses I know not. And, in E. 6. time, was Thomas Essex Esq; son of Sir Thomas Essex Kt. seized^f thereof.

This Village is now reputed to be a Parish of it self, whereas antiently it was of the Parish of St. Michael in Cobentre, and the Chappel here appropriated^h to the Priory of Cobentre. Howbeit the Inhabitants had^u not then liberty of sepulture in the Chappel-yard, which was made and consecrated by Roger de Clinton B. of Cobentre, with the permission of the Prior and Covent, but were enjoyn'd to bring the bodies of their dead to be buried at the Mother Church of Cobentre, the Curate being a Stipendiary^m to the Prior of Cobentre, and removable at his pleasure; having^x onely the small tythes assigned him for his Salary; which, in 26 H. 8. were valued at 5 l. per annum. It seems that the interest^p which the said Prior had here, was by Composition with the Canons of Leicester, forasmuch as this, with Anty, were antiently Chappels belonging to Bulkington, and given to the Monastery of Leic. by Roger de Watervill; for which the said Prior paid x sol. yearly to the Canons of Leicester.

Shilton

In the South windows of the Church,

Wolvey.

Northwards and somewhat by East from Shilton, lyes Wolvey, whereof Alricus the son of Meriet was posselt^x in Edw. the Conf: dayes: but after the Norman invasion it came to the hands of Robert de Veci, with other Lands in the Counties of Leic. and Lin. and by the general Survey^a is certified to contain five hydes and a half, valued at 50 s. there being at that time a Church. In that Record^b it is written Albessa, taking its name originally (no doubt) from one Ulf or Wulf, whose seat it was in the Saxons time, and the Saxon word haga, which is the same with domus, the g being, for easiness of pronounciation, changed into y or i, and the h sometimes left out, and sometimes retained, as in 32 E. 1. may be observed.

To the posterity of this Robert de Veci it continued not: for, in H. 2. time, the Earl of Warwick had it, and enfeofft Harecourt thereof, it being part of those 7. Knights fees which William E. of Warwick in 12 H. 2. certified^c that Ivo de Harecourt then held of him de veteri feoffamento.

This Ivo de Harecourt disposed^d thereof (inter alia) to Robert Basset with Beatrice his sister in frank marriage, to hold and enjoy as freely, as he the said Ivo or his father ever held them: which Robert was^e of the family of Basset of Riston (now called Ruthston) in Northamptonshire, and a good Benefactor to the Monks of Combe; for he purchased^f a great part of Wolvey from Thurbert the son of Hadhewlfus, and gave^g it to that Monastery. By the consent^h of Beatrice his wife, he gave likewise thereunto C. acres of land lying in this Lordship, with pasture to the same belonging, which K. H. 2. also confirmedⁱ.

This Robert Basset had issue^k Reginald, who ratified^l to the Monks of Combe the said grant by his Father; in which confirmation it is expressed that those C. acres did lye, partly upon Caldwellehull on Wolvey-heath, and partly betwixt Sandford and Grimeston towards Wallingstrete; adding^m also of his own gift pasture for 500 Sheep upon Wolvey-heath. And likewise bestowedⁿ on them the Church of St. John Bapt. here at Wolvey of his patronage, with all lands, tythes, and obventions thereunto belonging. The one moytie whereof was appropriated^o to them by Geffrey Muschamp B. of Cob. and Lich. in K. John's time, at the request of the said Reginald; and the other^p, (by agreement betwixt the said Reginald, the Monks, and the said B.) made a Prebend to the Cathedral of Lichfield; whereof the said B. and his successours was to have the advowson. Which agreement was confirmed^q by Pope Innocent the 4. in the 8. year of his Papacy (34 H. 3.) as also by^r Hubert Archb. of Canterb. William Bishop of Cobentre, and^s the Prior and Covent of that Church. Other grants^t of land and rent, here in Wolvey, did the said Reginald make to them, which to particularize will not be much material; as also of lands in Herbertbury, whereof I shall say more when I come to that place.

Of this Reginald the first^u mention that I find in Record, is in 23 H. 2. In^v 4 and 5 R. 1. he was joyn'd with Gilb. de Segrave as substitute for Hugh. Nuvant Bishop of Cobentre, to whom the custody of these Counties was committed: but, afterwards, viz. for the 6, 7, 8, and 9. years of that K. reign, as also in 21 Joh. he had the sole charge of them himself, and accounted for them as Shirriff.

To

a Ex autog. in officio Amorum. To the Monks of Wolby he gave a Common of Pasture upon his Heath here at Wolby, viz. for their draught Oxen at Copstone with 5. Kine and a Bull; and to their tenants of that village Common of Pasture upon the same Heath for all kind of Cattle. As also 20. loads of Heath and Fern yearly to be cut upon the same Heath for those Monks; with liberty to their tenants of Copston to get Heath and Fern there yearly for fuel by the space of xv. days before Christmases, and for viii. days before Easter. And whereas the said tenants of Copston had wont, in consideration of the said common of Pasture and getting of fuel, to perform certain services to the same Reginald and his Father; viz. plowing twice a year, harrowing once, mowing and raking once; and in Harvest one man from every House to gather up Corn: as also from every House a Hen at Christmases, and ten Egges at Easter; the said Reginald for the health of his soul, and the souls of his Father, Mother, and Ancestors, released to them all those services.

b Rot. P. c 11 Joh. This Reginald seated himself here at Wolby, as by that grant appeareth; and had great suites with Will. de Harecurt, Thomas de Astley, and other Knights, that held of the Honour of Leicester: for, in 11. Joh. he gave two palfreys, that the cause might be heard before the King; wherein he got the better, as may seem by that Fine of CC. marks, payd into the Exchequer by the said Tho. de Astley the year following, pro falso clamore. But, having no Children, the issue of his two Sisters became his Heirs, viz. Yvo de Dene, and Rob. de Leicester. Which Yvo had his seat at Dene in the East part of Northamptonshire, but was highly devoted to these Monks of Combe, as may appear by his large concessions to them; first for pasturage for their Horses and Oxen that were employed in Tillage; and likewise for 12. Kine and a Bull in all places within Wolby, where his own Horses, Oxen, and Kine, or his Heirs, or others of the same town were to have pasture; as also liberty for them to dig turfe yearly with two men for six days. And moreover of his Mill here, with the Pool below his Mannour-house, and course of water thereto, excepting all the Fish but Eels, whereof the Monks were to have the one half. And afterwards, in further testimony of his bounty, bestowed on them his Mannour-house and whole Lordship of Wolby, with the homage and services of all that held thereof; which grants, not onely Nich. de Dene, son to the said Yvo, confirmed, but Ric. de Harecurt, Superior Lord of the Fee by descent from the before specified Yvo de Harecurt. So that now those Monks, having a Lordship here, which, in 4. 20. H. 3. and 20. E. 3. answered for a whole Kts. Fee, claimed in 13. E. 1. a Court-Leet and other Priviledges therein, whereof they had allowance: And in 18. E. 1. obtained a Charter of Free-warren in all their demesne lands here. And in 19. E. 2. the like for a Mercate every week upon the Wednesday, with a Fair yearly to last for three days; viz. the Even of St. Mark the Evang. and two days following.

Ex Car. ul. de Erington penes Th. Iolt. Eq. ur. & Bar. 74. b. But, leaving the Monks of Combe thus posselt of this Mannour, I shall now observe what I find otherwise memorable in Wolby; which is, that one Sir Thomas de Wolvey Knight had a fair estate here, and left issue Joan the wife of Sir Henry de Erdington (of whom in Erdington I shall speak) and Alice of Giles the Son and Heir to Andrew Lord Astley, towards the latter end of E. 1. reign: upon which Giles and Alice and the Heirs of Alice, in 32. E. 1. he settled 37. mefs. three carucats with ten yard land and a half, lying in Withpbroke and this Wolby in the County of War. Three mefs. 1 carucat of Land, and 6. s. 6. d. rent in Sisteneby, and Dleby in Com. Leic. and 13. mefs. and 13. oxgangs of land in Scakethorpe and Wotham in Com. Ebor; reserving to himself and Alice his wife an estate for term of life in the aforesaid lands, paying yearly to the said Giles and Alice a Rose at the Feast of the Nativity of St. John Bapt. for all services. But all that I have seen further of him is, that being one of the Coroners in this County (an Office of great note in those days, as in Wolston I have shew'd) in 6. E. 2. he was grown so aged, and impotent to undergoe the same, that he had his Writ of ease. And that he bore for his Armes Or a Lyon rampant sable, as by his seal and other authorities appeareth: which Seal, being adorn'd, without the compass of the shield, with Castles, makes me suppose, that his paternal ancestours were of the family of Castell, residing at Withpbroke, hard by.

This Alice, the wife to Giles de Astley, surviving her Husband, was stiled domina de Wolvey, as by the institutions to the Chantry may be discerned; which Chantry she founded in 17. E. 3. in the Chappel of our Lady within this Parish-Church, endowing it with two mefs: and two yard land lying here in Wolby, for the maintenance of a Priest to sing Mass daily there for ever, for the good estate of her self whilst she lived, and for the health of her soul after she should depart this life: as also for the souls of her ancestors and heirs, and all the faithfull deceased. And left issue Thomas Lord Astley her son and heir; of whom, being to speak at large in Astley, I shall now say no more than what relates to this Lordship: which is, that he gave 1. mefs. and 36. acres of land lying therein, to the Prior and Coven of Erdbury, and their successors towards the maintenance of a Canon in that Monastery, to sing Mass daily for the good estate of him the said Thomas and Eliz. his wife; and of the same Alice de Wolvey, and Andrew de Astley whilst they lived; as also for the health of their souls after their departure hence; and for the souls of their heirs and ancestors, and all the faithfull deceased.

To which Thomas succeeded William Lord Astley, and Giles a younger son; which William, in 15. R. 2. gave to the said Giles, his Brother, and Kath. his wife, and to the heirs of their two bodies, this Mannour of Wolby, paying to the said William and his heirs a grain of Wheat onely, at the Feast of St. John Bapt. yearly for all services. Of which Giles all that I find memorable is, that, in 18. R. 2. (which was about three years after he became posselt thereof) by the consent of the Abbot of Combe, he admitted one Will. de Scregham, to the Hermitage upon Wolby-heath, there to live a Heremeticall life in the service of God, and to pray for the souls of him the said Giles, his ancestours, and all the founders and benefactors of the said Monastery of Combe. When this Hermitage was first founded appears not, but by what is exprest in that Instrument of his admission, it seems, that it stood ina solitary place upon Wolbep-heath, which long before that time, had been inhabited by Heremites.

In 1. H. 5. there was an Award^d made by Reginald Grey, Lord Hastings, Weysford, and Ruthin, and Richard Crosby Prior of Coventre, upon certain differences, which were at that time betwixt the Abbot of Combe, and the before mentioned Giles, touching the metes and bounds of their lands on Wolbep-heath, and concerning common of pasture, which the said Giles challenged in those C. acres of land long before granted to the Monks of Combe by Rob. Bassett, and Reginald his son (as is before exprest) and concerning the sole presentation to the Heremitage before specified, and commoning upon all that Heath: by which Arbitrators it was determined, that the said Abbot and Giles should present to the Heremitage in Common, and hold all the said Heath in Common, except the above mentioned C. Acres of land: But all that I further find^{*} of this Giles is, that he dyed at Dunstable upon the day of St. Nicholas the Bishop an. 1427. (6. H. 6.) After which, viz. in 16. H. 7. Will. Astley his great Grand-child presented^e one John Iddezeard to the Heremitage. From which William is Giles Astley Esq. now Lord of the same Mannour, descended.

* Inscrip. tumuli apud Astley.

e Ib.

Having thus deduced the succession of Astley's Mannour, I am next to take notice of what the Templars had here: Of which the first mention I find, is in the Shiriffs account f of 1. E. 2. after the seizure of the lands belonging to the Templars into the K. hands; wherein he certifies vii. s. Rent of Assize received at the Feast of the Annunc. of our Lady next before of certain Free-holders and Cottagers there; and xx. s. at the same terme for the Rent of a Water-mill and a Wind-Mill let to ferm at xl. s. per an. which possessions were anciently held by the Templars of Alan la Zouch by the fourth part of a Kts. Fee.

That the Templars were suppressed, and how their lands came to the Hospitalars, I shall shew when I come to Balshall in Hemlingford-Hundred. And that the Hospitalars possessions came to the Crown in 31. H. 8. upon that great dissolution of the Monasteries is known sufficiently: at which generall deluge this Mannour of theirs in Wolbep was swept in, being then accounted as a Member^b of the Preceptorie of Balshall above-mentioned, and continued in the K. hands till 7.

E. 6. but was then grantedⁱ (inter alia) to Edm. Aglionby of Balshall Esq. and Henry Hugford of Solthull Gent. and their Heirs; which Edm. in 3. & 4. Ph. & M. aliened^k the same to Thomas Marrow Esq. who, the same year granted^l it to Will. Newman: of whom, in 3. Eliz. it was purchased^m by Edmund Scarning Esq. which Edmund dyedⁿ seized thereof 3. Apr. 1. Jac. leaving issue Ezechias his son and heir then aged 34. years.

Touching that Mannour, which belong'd to the Monks of Combe, I further find thereof this; that in 8. H. 6. it was granted by the then Abbot and Covent of that Monastery to Humsfry Earl Stafford and his heirs, the advouson of the Church with the lands in Little-Copston, belonging thereto, excepted.

Here it hapned, that K. Edw. 4. being surprized by Ric. Nevill, the stout E. of Warwick, was carryed away Prisoner to Stoleham-Castle in Yorkshire; the circumstances whereof I have briefly touched in my discourse of that Earl in Warwick.

In an. 1291. (19. E. 1.) the Church (dedicated to St. John Bapt.) was valued^o at xx. marks (the one moytie being then a Prebend of Wichfield) at which time the Vicaridge was rated, at 1. mark. But, in 26. H. 8. at 9 vi. l. vi. s. iiiii. d. over and above ix. s. allowed for Procurations and Synodals.

Copston-parva.

Northwards from Wolvey, and in the same Parish, lyeth Little-Copston, now a depopulated place, and known onely by the name of Copston-Fields; which originally had its denomination from one Copsi, possessor thereof in the Saxons time, as I guess; that being a name then in use: but in the Conq. Survey is there not any exprels mention thereof; so that I do conceive it was involved with Wolvey: for, in the beginning of H. 2. time, Ivo de Harecurt granted all his land in this place (together with Wolvey) unto Rob. Bassett, in frank marriage with Beatrice his Silter, as in Wolvey is shewed. Which Robert, very suddainly after, gave to the Monks of Combe one carucat of land here. In villa igitur mea, qua dicitur parva Copston (saith he) unam caruc: terra, &c. in perpetuam elemosinam dono. So that, it seems he was then owner thereof, which grant K. H. 2. confirmed.

Here was antiently a Chappel, as appears by the Composition touching the Church of Wolvey, betwixt G. Muschamp B. of Cobentre, and the Abbot of Combe (34. H. 3.) whereof I have already spoken.

How it past from Basset's posterity I have not seen; but in H. 3. time, Thomas de Asteley had it: for, after he was slain in the battail of Evesham 49. H. 3. (as in Afley is shew'd) this, with the rest of his lands, being confiscate, was given by the K. to Warine de Bassingburne. But after the Decree called Distum de Kenilworth, whereby, they which were not slain in the battail, aswell as the posterity of those that lost their lives, were admitted to Composition for their forfeited estates. (as in Kenilworth is manifested) Andrew de Afley, son and heir to the said Thomas, past away this his village of Little-Copston with the appurtenances, to the Monks of Combe and their successors for ever, in consideration of CCCxx. marks sterling, which he received of them to redeem his lands so forfeited as hath been said. After which, viz. in 18. E. 1: the said Monks obtained a Charter of Free-Warren in all their demesn lands here; whose whose possession it continued in till the dissolution of that Monastery.

Wibtoft.

I Now come to Wibtoft, a petty village, but eminent for its situation; for it lyeth in one of the Corners, where the two famous old Romane ways, viz. Watlingstreet and Fosse do meet: in which place once also stood a flourishing City of the Romans, called Clepechester, as the tradition goes; whereof I can say no more, than what Mr. Camden, in Leicester-sh. hath already spoken, the very foundations thereof being now, for the most part, turn'd up by the Plough and spade; and large stones, Roman-brick, with Ovens and Wells; nay Coins of Silver and Brasse, mixt with its ruins, frequently discovered; the earth, so far as it extended, being of a darker colour then the rest thereabouts; and of such rankness, that much of it hath been carryed by the Husbandmen to further distances, like Dung, to make the ground more fertile.

Upon the very thwarting of those two great ways, hath antiently stood some eminent Cross, which the Country people called High-Cross; but now, instead thereof is onely a pole bearing that name. That this was the station of the Antonines-Itinerary; yet nothing more can I say of it, time having worn out the memory of what else was memorable. But I return to Wibtoft.

Though it lye in this County, yet is it in the Parish of Clepeboke in Leicester-sh. and hath a Chappel dedicated to our Lady (viz. to her Assumption.)

The first mention I find of it, is 60. years and more before the Conquest. for Ulfrie Spot, a potent man in those days (and founder of Burton-Abby in Stafford-sh.) gave it by his Will to one Athelric, for life, and afterwards to the said Monastery of Burton. But, in the Conq. time, it was posselt by the Earl of Mellent, and in the generall Survey then taken, written Wibetof, Willep being joyn'd therewith; both which were the freehold of Sævi in Edw. the Conf. days. After which, ere long, was Ernald de Bois enfeofft thereof, with Clifton, Bulkinton, &c. whereof I have already spoke: for not only an Extent of Knightsfees in 55. H. 3. shews, that they were then held jointly of the E. of Warwick by 4. Kn. fees; but the possession hereof continuing in the family of Boys, and afterwards to Zouch, as most of the other did, argues no less.

And I find, that the grant of Raph Araby made to the Abby of Leic. of 7. mels, 10. crofts, 5. yard land and a half, and one mill lying here, was confirm'd by the same Ernald; wherein the Abbot claimed a Court-leet and the like Priviledges that he did in Bulkinton, and had allowance of them. As also, that the same year, scil. 13. E. 1. the Priorels of Eaton purchased one mels: and 120. acres of land, lying in this place, of Gilbert de Houby (a great man in Leicester-sh.) But further can I not speak thereof, than that, in the line of Zouch it continued (as by the severall authorities I have vouch't in Bulkinton appeareth) till Edw. Lord Zouch, in our Fathers memory, past it away, as he did the substance of his antient inheritance.

Willey.

Following Watlingstreet, I next come to Willey, joyn'd with Wibtoft in the Conq. Survey; both which, being then held by the E. of Mellent, and containing 3. hides, were valued at 4. l. But the first mention that I after meet withall of this place, is in 26. H. 2. where Robert de Wilega (for so he is there written) paid 3. marks to have a tryall in the K. Court against Simon de Verdon for this Village; From the E. of Mellent, it came to the E. of Warwick (as most of Mellent's lands in this County did) and was granted to Hastings by one of those antient Earls, as may seem by severall Inquisitions from whom the ancestours to Turville, and Herdebergh were at first enfeofft, Robert de Wilega being one of those families, and called de Wilega whilst he resided here, and de Herdeberg when he dwelt at Herdeberg (now called Harbozough-magna in this County) for such kind of alteration of names was usuall enough in old time, as I could manifest, if need were. But what I find memorable in generall, touching this family of Herdebergh, I purpose to declare when I come to Great-Harbozough before mentioned, where I have inserted a Scheme of their descent; and therefore here I shall chiefly take notice of them as in relation to this place; for I have circumstance enough to satisfy me, that Herdebergh had the principall interest and not Turville, though Turville had part.

In 33. H. 3. there was a tryall betwixt Roger de Herdebergh and the Abbot of Preaur (in Normandy) touching the Church here, in respect of the right that the said Abbot claimed therein, by reason of the Cell at Warminster in this County, of the E. of Warwick's foundation, which was subordinate to that Monastery of Preaur; upon which suit, it seems, that the Abbot of Preaur recovered the same: for it appears, by the Institutions, that he presented thereto. To which Roger de Herdebergh succeeded Hugh, that held this Mannour, immediately, of Hastings, and had issue Roger; who dying in the life time of his Father, left onely two Daughters; Ela, the elder, within age in 14. E. 1. married to Will. le Boteler of Wenme in Com. Salop; and Isabel to by whom she had issue Dionysia that dyed Childless; and Alice wedded to John de Peyto; which John and Alice in 7. E. 3. settled the one moytie of this Mannour upon the issue of their two Bodies, and for default thereof upon the said William le Boteler, and the heirs of his Body, with remainder to the right heirs of Ela. And the other moytie, after the decease of them the said John and Alice, unto the said William with the like remainder. By which means it descended to Edmund le Boteler, son to the said Will. and Ela, as the descent doth manifest; which Edm. (being a Priest) dyed 49. E. 3. whereupon his Sisters became his heirs to the estate; whereof Dionysia the eldest married to Hugh Cokesey, and had issue Sir Walter Cokesey Kt., unto whom Sir Fonke Pembruge Kt., and Margaret his Wife, Daughter and heir of Ida (or Idonea) the second Sister of the said Edmund, by William Trussell of Dolham, Monkskirby.

Southwards of Willepe, and bounded by Wal- lingstreet, lyes that great Parish of Monks- kirby, containing ten petty villages, or hamlets, besides the town it self; viz. Wobhurst, Stret- eton, Stretton-subm-Josse, Walton, Es- enhull, Payllington, Petbold-Revell, Copst- magna, Pelunham Pador and Cester-Dver, extending it self to the North-west bank of Swiff, as the map sheweth. Beginning therefore with the town of Kirby it self, I am in the first place to take notice of what hath been observed to me by my worthy friend Sam. Roper Esq. (a Gentleman learned and judicious, and singularly well seen in Antiquities, from whom I do acknowledge to have received much light for the furtherance of this work) viz. certain apparent tokens, that the Romans had some station here: for, by digging the ground near the Church, he hath met with foundations of old Walls, and Roman bricks, part whereof I my self have seen; as also 3. or 4.
 heaps of earth in an adjoining pasture apparently manifesting themselves to be Monuments of Sepulture for some Military persons in those days; which badges are sufficient to satisfy, that it hath been a place of note many hundreds of years since. And it may very well be, that those materials for building, by reason of the ruins before mentioned, so ready at hand, became a special motive to that renowned Lady Ethelfleda * (so much taken notice of by our old Historians, and stiled Merciorum Domina; to begin the structure of this place: for in the year of Christ 917.
duas urbes, Eyricebyrig, viz. & Meadbyrig, post natiuitatem Domini adificauit, saith mine Author. And that this is the same and no other, though the appellation it now hath, viz. Kirby, found not like it, I shall sufficiently manifest;
 First, by observing, that Eyrice, with the Saxons, was the same that after-ages called Wirk, and we now Church; and that Byrig in our old English signifieth Civitas or Burgum in Latine; which, being now changed into Wye, alters not the meaning of the word, inasmuch as Wye with the Saxons is no other than habitatio in Latine: neither is it out of use with us at this day in that sense, those orders and rules that are usually made in our Court-Barons being called Wye-Laws, id est Town-Laws, Byan the Verb in the Saxon tongue signifying to dwell.

This place, with Petbold = super Abon;

Petbold-Revell, Long-Lawford, Wapenburg, Hampton-in-Arden, Swistoke, Bentley, Woun-
der, Cester-Dver, Pelunham-Pador and Hops- ford, all belonging to Leuwinus, a Saxon, before the Norman Conquest; as also great possessions in the Counties of Southampton, Wilt. Dev. and Lin. was, in that generall distribution made by Will. the Cong. amongst his friends and followers, given to one Geffrey Wirce of Little Biltan- ny in France, and of the family assuming that name from the territory there, called Guerche ad-joyning to Anjou; who then came into Eng- land and assisted in the Conquest thereof, and, probably, with Aland Fergant, eldest Son to the D. of Wiltamp: for it appears by the testimony of a good Historian, that divers persons of quality in that Province, whereof he names some, accompanied him: as also, that a third part of the Conquerours Army was commanded by the same Alan, who had the Earldome of Richmond given him as a reward for his service.

This Geffrey bore a great respect unto the Monastery of St. Nicholas, founded at Anglers (the principall City of Anjou, in the year 1020. to the honour of St. Nich. Archb. of Plce, St. Hie- rome, and St. Lazarus whom Christ so loved:
 For by his deed, bearing date here at Kirby the
 xii. year of K. William's reign, he gave thereunto both land and tythes out of divers Lordships here in England, whereof he was posselt by the Conq.
 favour; and in particular to the Church of this Kirby, which he found decayed, and rebuilt, dedicating it to the honour of the blessed Virgin and St. Dennis; which singular munificence occasioned the Monks of Anglers to send over part of their Covent hither, making it a Cell subordinate to that foreign Monastery; whereby it became one of those we usually call Wytowes-alien, and thereupon had the name of Monkskirby.

By the generall Survey this Lordship was certified to contain xv. hides, there being two Priests here at that time, who held xxi. carucats of land.
 [These were Frans and Osgot, as I guess, mentioned in the before specified Charter.] All which then extended to x.l. value, whereof the Monks of St. Nicholas had two Carucats in demesne, and
 vi. bord. holding v. more; and in that Record it is written Chirchberpe, which gives further illustration to what I have said already touching the name. Howbeit of the said Geffrey Wirce have not I seen any thing else memorable:
 nor do I find that he had any Children; so that I most incline to believe, that, dying, without issue, his possessions in England returned to the Crown; for all in this and the before cited Counties, came to the hands of Nigel de Albani, Progenitor to the Moubray's, by the grant of K.
H. 1. whose possessions in this Shire, by that means, and by marriage of Segrave's Daughter and heir were of no small extent.

But, returning to this ancient Monastery, I find, that Nigel de Mulbray, Grand-child to Nigel de Albani, made a generall confirmation unto the Monks here, of all the lands, tythes, and other his possessions, which had been given to them by his Ancestors in divers particular Mannours there exprest; and in all others, as the grants of Geffrey de Wirce, Nigel his Grand-Father, and Roger his Father witnessed. I am of opinion, that the before specified Nigel de Albani gave all the rest of

this Lordship to those Monks: for in that confirmation made to them by Rog. de Sutevill of what his ancestors had given in Penbold (id est, Penbold super Abon) he makes mention, that they had possessions there in the time of Geoffrey Wirce; and that Nigel de Albani augmented the same, by grant of certain lands and other benefits. But all that I have seen of any further grants thereunto in this County, is certain common of pasture on Molbey-heath, and in Little-Copston by Reginald Bassett of Molbey; and of a yard land in Rokeby by Sir Henry Rokeby Kt. of both which I have spoke more fully in my discourse of those places.

In Leicestersh. I find, that Hugh de Rampaine gave unto them 7 oxgangs of land, with the capital Mess: of Birkby super Wreke; which grant Will. de Molbrai, who was superiour Lord of the fee there, confirmed. And that Geoffrey Trussell gave them the Church of Sharnesford in the same County; whereof Will. Bassett added his ratification. After which, viz. in K. John's time, Geoffrey Muschamp B. of Cobentre, confirmed to them that which by his Predecessours had been granted, viz. the Church of Birkby, with the Chappel of Moldebzoc, so that they should hold the same appropriat to their own benefit; as also 3 marks of silver yearly out of the said Chappel of Moldebzoc in the name of a pension. And ratified to them the Church of Wapenbury, with the Chappel of Bunningham, so that they should receive xx s. yearly out of the same, and a stone of wax in the name of a pension: and likewise the Church of Penbold; that is to say, two parts thereof to their proper use; and to the third, that the Prior of Birkby should present a fit Clerk to the Bishop.

Being therefore thus plentifully endowed, they obtained, in 50 H. 3. a Charter for a weekly Perceate upon the Wednesday, with a Faître yearly to begin on the even of the feast of St. Joh. Bapt. and to continue 3 days: but the Wednesday Perceate, after a while, being not found so convenient, they procured K. E. 1. in 33 of his reign, to alter it for Tuesday, at which time he likewise granted to them Free-warren in all their demein lands of Monkskirby, Walton, Penbold-Pauntun, and parva Herdebergh, with view of Frank-plege of all their Tenants in these and other places within this County: as also in Birkby super Wreke in Leicestersh. with tryal of Malefactors and Weyfs: In consideration whereof, they were to pay to the King, his heirs and successors, v marks yearly. Which Mannour of Birkby super Wreke was by these Monks in 14 E. 2. granted to Roger Beler, and Alice his wife, and to the heirs of their two bodies; paying yearly to them and their successors viii marks, vi s. viii d. at the feasts of St. Michael and Easter by even portions.

What else is memorable, relating to this Monastery, remains now to be spoke of as it was a Priory-alien, viz. first of its sundry seizures made by the King, and next of its dissolution. Of which seizures, haoning by reason of our wars with France, as in Walton hath been shewed; the first that I have seen authority for, was in 18 E. 1. for, by an Indenture bearing date on the feast day of St. Mathew the Apostle, in that year it appears that Rob. de Sottewell and Rog. de Belegeave, to whom the lands and tenements of the said Priories-Alien in the Countyes of War. and Leic. were by the K. precept committed, did, upon certain conditions and agreements, deliver to the Prior of Birkby the said Monastery, with what thereto belonged, and the stock upon the ground, all prized at estimable rates; In which Indenture, amongst other things it is observable, that Wheat was then rated at vi s. a quarter, Rye v s. Barly iii s. Beans and Pease ii s. viii d. Oats ii s. Swans at iii s. iii d. a peice, and Ducks at i d.

After which, viz. in 14 E. 3. the K. having again made the like seizure, and committed the custody of this, with the other Cels subordinate to the Monastery of St. Nich. at Angiers, unto their Procurator general in England for a certain sum of money, to be yearly paid into his Exchequer at Michaelmas and Easter by even portions, did, in consideration that the said Procurator should make payment thereof at the feasts of the Nativ. of St. Joh. Bapt. and St. Mich. together with the Tenths granted to the said K. by the Clergy, so far forth as concerned those Cels, restore the same unto the Abbot of the Monastery of St. Nich. before specified. But in 50 E. 3. the custody thereof was disposed to Sir Cannon Rybussard Kt. to hold from the feast of St. Mich. th' Archangel then next following, during the continuance of the wars with France, paying xl l. yearly into his Exchequer. Which Sir Cannon was onely to have the same benefit of Rent and other advantages as the Mother Monastery at Angiers before spoken of, in times of peace usually had: For, upon an Extent in 1 R. 2. it appears, that all the lands belonging thereto were then valued at CCxx l. iii s. iii d. per annum.

But so much were the Monks incumbered by these seizures, and appointment of secular persons to have the rule over them, that, in consideration of a good sum of money in hand, they made a Lease to the said Sir Cannon Robsart of all their lands for 25 years. And the superiour House beyond Sea, likewise discerning themselves so set aside, as to the receiving any advantage from hence, made their addresles to Thomas Moubrey E. of Nottingham, and Earl Marshal of England, offering to quit their interest here to him, upon easy terms.

Which Earl, having in 20 R. 2. obtained liberty to found a Religious House of Carthusian Monks at Eppelworth, or where else he thought fit within the Isle of Arholme in Lincolns. procured the K. Letters Pat. of licence for the Abbot and Covent of St. Nich. at Angiers before specified, to grant this their Priory of Monkskirby, with the Mannours of Penbold super Abon, Copston and Walton to the same belonging: As also the advousons of the Churches and Vicaridges of Birkby-monach. Penbold super Abon, Witthibzoke, Wapenbury and Sharnesford, with their pensions, unto the said Monastery of Carthusians for ever. Whereupon John, son and heir to Sir Can. Robsart (the Lessee before specified) by his deed bearing date upon Easter eve, 20 R. 2. releas'd to the King, and to John de Moreby, Prior assigned of the then late founded House of Carthusians to the honour of the Visitation of the Mother of God in the Isle of Arholme, all his right and title in this Priory. But no sooner did H. 4. come to the Crown, than that the Priory-alien began to find much favour: for in the Parl. held an. 1. of his reign, taking into consideration the losses and inconveniences that had befallen them by the frequent seizure of their lands, and ferming them out in the time of his Grandfather K. E. 3. whereby not onely they had suffered great decay in their buildings; but that the worship of God in that regular way, Hospitality, Alms, and other charitable works, antiently establisht and there accustomed to be performed, were withdrawn, as also the pious desires of the Founders thereby thereby defrauded (as the words of the Pat. do import) did by the advice of his Council in that Parliament, restore^t to the said Abbot of St. Nich. at Angiers, the patronage and advowson of those Religious Houses in England, which were subordinate to that Monastery, to have and to hold to him and his successors, so that they should present fit persons to them upon the vacancies that might happen.

Howbeit, this favour of K. H. 4. was not long enjoy'd by them: for K. H. 5. reciting the licence granted by K. R. 2. for founding the said House of Carthusians in the Isle of Arholme; and the power then given to the Monks at Angiers to pass away this Priory of Monk Kirby, with the appurtenances thereunto, as aforesaid; by his Letters Pat. dated at Westm. 28 Junii, 3 of his reign, confirmed the same. Whereupon the said Carthusians, being thus possessed hereof, obtained of K. E. 4. in 8 of his reign, a confirmation^m of those privileges granted to the Prior of Monk Kirby by K. E. 1. in 33 of his reign before specified, extending into all their lands there named, which they enjoy'd therewith till that fatal overthrow of the Religious Houses in K. H. 8. time; when some, being corrupted with temporary profit, and others through terrour, were brought to surrender their Monasteries into the K. hands, the said Prior and Cov. of Carthusians did, not onely give up theirs, but levied a Fine^e thereof; as also of all the possessions belonging thereto; and in particular of this Mannour of Monk Kirby, with the rest of the Mannours, Lands, &c. appertaining to it. Which stay'd not long in the Crown; for the same year was it granted away by the King to Thomas Mannyng, late Prior of the Monastery of Watlington in Suffolke, then newly made Bishop of Ipswich D. of Suff. and the heirs of his body lawfully begotten, to be held in capite by the tenth part of a Kts. fee, and the yearly rent of ix l. xiii s.

After which, viz. in 37 H. 8. the K. granted unto Trinity Coll. in Cambridge the Rectory of Monk Kirby, with the tythes, and certain lands, rents, &c. lying in Monk Kirby and the other Villages adjacent, formerly belonging to the before specified Carthusians, to hold to them and their successors in pure alms.

From which Duke this Mannour of Monk Kirby, with the rest before mentioned, devolved to Henry Grey D. of Suff. in right of Frances his wife, daughter of the said Charles, and one of the sisters and co-heirs to Henry Brandon D. of Suff. From whose death the said Frances held it during her life; and dyed 2 Eliz. leaving the Lady Kath. and Lady Mary Grey; daughters to the aforesaid Duke, her heirs; viz. Katherine 19. and Mary 13 years of age. Which Kath. being wedded to Edw. Seymour E. of Hertford, had issue Edw. Lord Beauchamp, that dyed in his fathers life time, father to Will. now Marq. of Hertford, who sold this Mannour to the right honourable Mary Countess of Buck. in our memory (paternally, through that antient and noble family of the Beaumonts of Colcopton in Leicestersh. descended from the Kings of France, as is well known.) Which Mary settled it upon Basil Lord Feilding (now E. of Denbigh) her Grand-child, with divers remainders.

In an. 1291. (19 E. 1.) the Church (dedicated to St. Edith) was valued^s at xxxiii marks; and in 26 H. 8. the Vicaridge^t at xxii l. ix s. 6 d. the Taxation or Ordination whereof was made in an. 1237. (21 H. 3.) as appears by the original Instrument^m. Which Vicaridge, being but of small worth, had an augmentation made thereunto by the bounty of the Lady Aliza, one of the daughters of Sir Robert Dudley, as in Manchester I have particularly shewed.

As this Parish is spacious, so is the present fabric of the Church very large, though of no antient building; having a tall Spire for a landmark over all the Country; which was more eminent than now it is, till the Inhabitants within our memory, to save charges in repairing, pulled down above xx foot of it.

Monkeskirby.

On the North Side of Basill Fieldings monument, express on the last page are these Armes.

1. Peto empaling Feilding
2. Lure empaling Feilding
3. Aplinby empaling Feilding
4. Feilding wth his quarterings.

On the east end of the same Monument,

Brock-hurst.

THis Hamlet, being parcel of the Mannour of Monkeskirby, takes its name from the situation thereof upon that bank or hurst by the Brook, which runneth a little Eastward from the Church; but of it there is little mention in Record, other than that the Kts fee, which the Prior of Kirby held of the Lord Moubray, did extend into this place.

Stret-Aston.

THis, being also part of the Mannour of Monkeskirby, lyeth Eastward from the Fosse (commonly called the Street) and thence hath its denomination. In the same Records where mention is made of Brockhurst, is there also of this, and in no other that I have seen; it being written Stred-Aston, and Stroderston, as well as Stret-Aston.

Stretton subtus Fosse.

THis hath its name from the Street way also, below which it lyes, and was originally a member of Petebold-Revel; and so being possessed by the family of Revell, descended by a daughter and heir to Malory; and from Malory by the like means to Cave, and so to Andrews and Boughton, as the descent in Petebold-Revel sheweth: for in 37 H. 8. Thomas Andrews Esq; levied a Fine thereof; and in 8 Eliz. it was found, that Margaret Boughton (one of the daughters and coheirs of Edw. Cave) dyed seized of it, leaving Edw. her son and heir, 21 years of age.

Walton.

OF this Village I have not seen any thing in Record till 19 E. 1. it being antiently reputed as parcel of Monkeskirby, and the substance thereof belonging to the Priory there. That which is then mentioned thereof, is upon the payment of a Tenth to the Pope by all the Monasteries, as well as Churches, in England: at which time it was certified that the Prior of Kirby had 4. carucats of land here. But the particulars I shall not stand to mention, forasmuch as the authorities, which I have voucht in Monkeskirby will manifest, that it being therewith granted to the House of Carthusians in Asholme, came at length to the Crown, and so attending the possession of that Lordship (I mean of Kirby) ever since, is now in the Earl of Denbigh's hands.

Esenhull.

THis place taketh its name (I presume) from the situation, standing Eastwards from Monkeskirby, and upon a rising ground; but was originally a member of Petebold-Revel: So that passing from Revel to Malory, and Malory to Cave, by heirs general (as the descent in Petebold-Revel sheweth) it came at length by purchase to Sir Walter Smyth of Whitford Kt; who dyed & seized thereof in 1 Mar. Since which, by force of that conveyance whereof I have spoke in Whitford, it was possessed for a time by the Littletons; but eschacted to the Crown with that Lordship.

Paylington.

OF this Village I have not seen any thing before H. 3. time; and then I find, that Will. de Turewill was Lord thereof; for so he writes himself, bearing for his Arms gules 3 chevrons vary. From which Will. descended Nich. who, in 25 E. 1. was certified to hold here and in Herdebertwe half a Kts. fee of the E. of Lanc. Hugh de Herdebergh, and John de Charnells, holding at the same time each of them the 4 part of a Kts. fee here.

To this Hugh de Herdebergh succeeded Isabella de Hulle in the possession of what he had here; and to her Dionysia and Alice her daughters and heirs (as the descent in Will. sheweth) betwixt whom partition being made of these and other lands in 17 E. 2. all that they had in this place was allotted to Alice, then the wife of John de Peyto. It seems, that the residue, or a great part thereof, was antiently obtained by the Revells of Petebold: for, in 32 E. 1. Will. Revell had Freswarren granted to him in all his demesne lands here. From which family it descended by an heir female unto Malory; and so to Cave; and from Cave to Andrews and Boughton, as the descent in Petebold-Rebell sheweth. For in 37 H. 8. Tho. Andrews Esq; levied a Fine thereof: and, in 8 Eliz. Margaret Boughton dyed & seized of it, leaving Edw. her son and heir 21 years of age.

Within the precincts of this Village were 4 mess. and 4 carucats of land, whereof Walter Hopson Esq; dyed & seized in 1 E. 4. leaving Eliz. his sister and heir, then the wife of Roger Corbet of Morton in Com. Salop, 30 years of age. Which lands had afterwards the name of a Manour, Andrew the son of Rog. Corbet being posselt thereof in 30 H. 8. Which Andrew had issue Robert, and he Elizabeth and Anne, his daughters and heirs, of full age in 37 Eliz.

Newbold-Revell.

This place, having been part of the possessions which Leuninus had in Edw. the Conf. dayes, was, after the Norman conquest, disposed of to Geffrey Wirce (of whom I have already spoke in Spenskerby). In the Survey then taken it is written Fent-Petebold, and certified to contain 8 hydes, valued at vii l. which large extent makes me of opinion, that Stretton subius Fosse, as also Elenbult and Haplington, were at that time involved therewith; the possession whereof having also gone along with it ever since, as by what I have already said appeareth.

As for its name, viz. Fent-Petebold, there is this to be said, that bold in our old English signifies a house, the word Fent being onely an addition to distinguish it from the many other Petebolds in this Shire; Fent, with our ancestors the Saxons signifying dirt; from which reason part of Cambridge and Huntingdonshires are called the Fens. And that it is now called Petebold-Revell, is, by reason that the family of Revell were anciently Lords thereof, as I shall shew by and by.

But it was anciently reputed a member of Wapenbury, in respect that the owners of Wapenbury were Lords hereof; it being (doublets) part of those 5 Kts. fees which Thomas de Wapenbury held of Roger de Moubray de veteri feoffamento, in 12 H. 2. and whereof his ancestors were enfeofft by Nigel de Albani, father to the said Roger de Moubray in H. 1. time. Which Nigel had Geffrey Wirce his lands conferred upon him; as in Spenskerby I have already intimated.

But touching that ancient family of Wapenbury (who had their seat at Wapenbury, whence they assumed their surname) I shall speak when I come to that place: And because this Petebold came by descent from Wapenbury to Revell, and afterwards from Revell to Malory, I have here inserted the pedigree; whereby the same may the better be understood; as also what I shall say historically of the families of Revell and Malory, whose seat it was.

Of this name and County, H. Revel is the first, whereof the Records that I have seen, do make mention, son to Rob. Revel (as I guess) who had to do at Swinsford in Leicestersh. 29 H. 2. But of this H. I can say no more, than that he was a Rebel against K. John, for which his lands in this County were seized on; and that in 1 H. 3. returning to obedience, they were restored to him again.

Unto which Hugh, succeeded W. Revel, to whom K. E. 1. in 27 of his reign, granted a Free-warren in his demesne lands here, and in other places of this County, whereof I have already spoke. Which Will. had issue John and Robert; whereof John was Lord of this place in 9 E. 2. being being an active man, and of great trust in his time: for in 6 E. 3. he had the joynt custody of this County, with Thomas de Astley, and John de Heyford. And in 11 E. 3. was in Commission for the levying and receiving Scutage for the K. Army, upon his expedition into Scotland.

In the same year he served as one of the Kts. for this County in the Parliam. held at Westm. And the next year following, being appointed one of the Receivers of the xv. and x. granted to the K. in Parl. the year before, was called of that trouble, by the K. speciall favour: as also from the Collection of the Scutage before mentioned, in regard of his speciall employment otherwise in the K. affairs, as the Records & express. At which time I find, that the K. being to make an expedition into France; and to that end taking care for preservation of the Peace here, in his absence, did summon him, being then one of the Kts. for this County, amongst others, to be at Westm. the morrow after the Clause of Easter before himself and his Councell, to hear what should be declared unto them thereupon. In 18 E. 3. he was a Kt. & constituted one of the Justices for conservation of the Peace in this Shire. The like authority had he the year following. In 25 E. 3. he served again for this Shire in the Parl. then held at Westm.

To this John Revell succeeded Will. who was of the retinue to Thomas Bishop of Durham in that French expedition 20 E. 3. whereof I have spoke in Hil. Morton. And in 32 E. 3. one of the Kts. for this Shire in the Parliament then held at Westm. I suppose, that he then received the dignity of Knighthood; for the next year ensuing he is so styled, and bore for his Armes, ermine a cheveron gules within a border engrailed sable; but had no issue, nor either of his Brothers; insomuch as their three Sisters became Heirsto the estate; viz.

..... married to John Malory of Winwick in Northampton-shire; who bore for his Armes "a fesse between three boars heads coupes. Joane to Robert de Whitney, of Whitney in Hereford-sh. Elen to Rob. Gresley, who had issue by her Robert that dyed Childless, and Joane, to Ric. Boreler. Amongst whom partition & being made in 6 R. 2. John Malory, son to the same John and had this Mannour of Fennit-penbold, with certain lands in Esenhall, Stretton, and Strod-Aston; and the Capitall messuage, or Mannour house of Paylington assigned to him. Robert de Whitney and Joane his wife the Mannour of Cliff-ton in this County, with certain lands in peloton junta Cliff-ton for their part. And Richard Boteler & Joane his wife the Mannour of Brown-Ober, with certain Rents and services in Paylington.

Which John Malory was constituted one of the Commissioners for conservation of the Peace in this County in 13. and 14. R. 2. In 15. being then a Kt. he was made Shiriff of these Counties. To whom succeeded John, one of the Kts. for this Shire in the Parl. held at Westm. 1. H. 5. and in 4. H. 5. Shiriff also of these Counties. In 7. H. 5. he was by speciall Commission, with others, assigned to treat with the people about a loan of money to the King. In that year K. H. 5. being victorious in France, and Humf. D. of Glouc. his youngest Brother, constituted Custos Anglia in the K. absence, precepts were directed to the Shiriffs of all the Counties in England, in the K. name, and signed by the said D. commanding them to elect and appoint a certain number in each Shire of Kts. and Esquires, bearing Armes from their Ancestours, such as were most able and sufficient to serve the K. for defence of the Realm; all which were to attend the K. Councell at Westm. the Tuesday in the first week of Lent. For which purpose 13. being chosen in this County, this John Malory was one. In 2. H. 6. he underwent the office of Eschactor for these Counties of Warr. and Leic. and, the next year following, the Sheriffalty. And having been in Commission for the peace, from 6. H. 5. till 12. H. 6. left issue Thomas; who, in K. H. 5. time, was of the retinue to Ric. Beauchamp E. Warr. at the siege of Caleys, and served there with one lance and two Archers; receiving for his lance and 1. Archer xx.li. per an. and their dyet; and for the other Archer. x. marks and no dyet.

This Thomas, being a Kt. in 23. H. 6. served for this Shire in the Parliam. then held at Westm. and dying 14. Martii 10. E. 4. lyeth buried under a marble in the Chappell of St. Francis at the Cray-Frithers, near pelowgate in the Suburbs of London. To whom succeeded Nicholas his Grand-Child, viz. son of Robert, who dyed in his Fathers life time. Which Nich. being a Justice of Peace in this County from the 17. of H. 7. till his death, left issue two Daughters his heirs; viz. Dorothe first married to Edm. Cave, and afterwards to George Ashby; who had, upon partition made of that inheritance 26. H. 8. the Mannour of Winwick in Northampton-sh. with certain lands in Stretton, and Paylington in this County; as also in Swinsford Com. Leic. And Margery first married to Clement Cave; but afterwards to John Cope; which Margery, having this Mannour of pelowbold assigned to her upon the said partition, with certain lands in Esenhall before specified, joynd with her second Husband John Cope 12. Oct. 29. H. 8. in the sale of this Mannour to Thomas Pope, then Treasurer of the Court of Augmentation; which Thomas Pope by his deed dated 14. Julii 30. H. 8. past it to Will. Whorwood Solicitor generall to the K. whose Daughter and heir Margaret became the wife of Thomas Throgmorton Esq. Son and heir unto Sir Robt. Throgmorton of Coughton Kt. which Thomas and Margaret sold it to Sir William Stamford one of the Justices of the K. Bench: From whom it descended to Sir Robert Stamford Kt. his son and heir, who left it to Charls Stamford a younger son; of whom Elizabeth the widow of John Alderford of Abbots-Salfoz Esq. purchased it for Edward Morgan her son by Morgan a former Husband: which Edward sold it to Sir *Sym. Copston-magna.

OF this place I shall not need to say much; for as to the Etymologie of the name, what I have exprest in Copston-parva will serve turn. And, that it was given by Geffrey Wirce to the Monastery of St. Nich. at Angiers in 12 Will. Conq. what I have said in my discourse of Monkskirby will manifest.

That it continued in the hands of those Monks, as parcell of the possessions of the Priory-alien of Monkskirby, and past therewith to the House of Carthusians, founded in the Ile of Arholme in 20 R. 2. I have likewise signified in Monkskirby: as also, that upon the dissolution of the Religious houses in 31 H. 8. it came to the Crown; for all which I shall refer my Reader to the Records there cited, not being able to give any further account thereof.

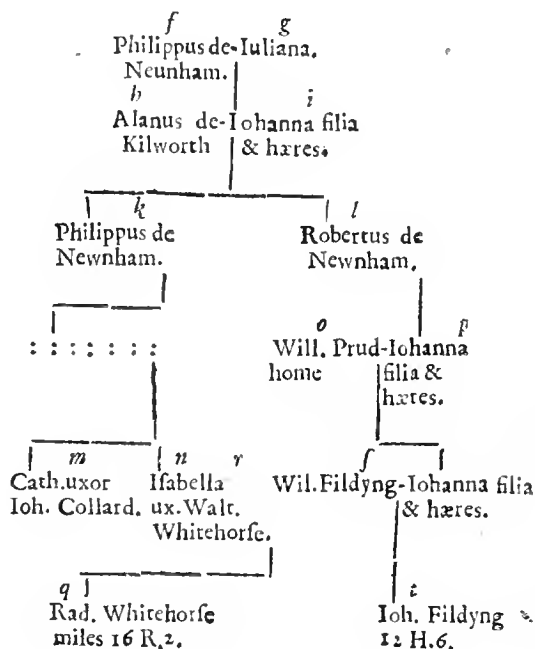

Neunham-Padox.

THIS place, by reason of another not farre off, which hath the same appellation, hath been antiently distinguished from that, by these severall additions; scil. Neunham juxta Kirby-monach. Neunham parva. Cold Neunham; and lastly Neunham Padox, by reason of a little Park formerly there, as 'tis like.

In the Conq. Survey it is rated for one Hide, valued at lx. s. and written Stweham, Geffrey Wirce (of whom I have spoke in Kirby) being then posselt thereof; with the rest of whose lands it came to Nigel de Albani (asin Kirby I have intimated) and was, towards the end of H. 2. time, as I guess, granted by Nigel de Monbray (Grand-child to the said Nigell) unto Roger de Newham: for of this Roger is there no mention in 12 of that Kings reign, when Roger de Monbray certified his Knights Fees: but afterwards I find, that the same Roger de Newham held one Kts. Fee of Nigel de Munbray before mentioned, which was, doubtlesse, for this place.

To whom succeeded Will. de Niveham, who in 11 Joh. accounted for vii. marks towards the making up for Will. de Molbray that Fine he payd to the King for part of his inheritance, concerning which he was impleaded by Will. de Stutevill. From which William (who is stiled Dominus Villielmus de Newnham, which argues he was a Kt.) it came in proceß of time to Philip; and was in 6 E. 3. by him settled, for want of issue, on Robert his Brother for life; the remainder to John another Brother, and the heirs of his Body; and for default of such issue on Joane, Sister to the said John: And for lack of issue by her, on Mariot his other Sister, with remainder to the right heirs of the said Joane, then wife of Roger Ryvell. But from this Philip, descending two Daughters and heirs; viz. Kath. married to John Collard, and Isabell to Walter Whitehorse, the same John and Catherine, in 36 E. 3. past their title therein unto the said Walter and Isabell; entayling it upon the heirs of the Body of her the said Isabell, with remainder to the right heirs of Walter. Which Walter had issue Sir Raph White- horse Kt. who in 16 R. 2. granted it to Will. Giffard and others. From whom, as also from Sir Will. Bagot Kt. (who it seems had an estate in trust therein) it was convey'd in 18 R. 2. to John Leventhorpe, Thomas Totty and others, but to the use of the said John Leventhorpe; which John in 3 H. 5. agreeing upon a price with Totty, levied a Fine thereof to him and his heirs; upon condition, that the money should be forthwith payd: but the said T. Totty, going presently beyond Sea where he was made Captain of the Castle of Rysbanke (neer Caleys) and a Knight to boot; (for so was he after stiled) hapned to be slain at the battail of Marke, so that the bargain could not be compleated. Whereupon the before specified John Leventhorpe, being fully siezed of it as his own right, by his deed bearing date 11 Nov. 12 H. 6. past it to John Fildyng and his heirs: which John was great-Grand-Child to Rob. de Newnham before specified, as the Pedegree here inserted sheweth; and paternally of a very noble extraction; viz. from the Earls of Hapsburg in Germany, as is apparent from divers authentique evidences, whereof I shall only give these two for instance; the one a Letter of Atturmy made by Geffrey his grandfather, bearing date at Wunsterton (Com. Leic.) on the feast day of S. Barnabas the Apostle 9 Edm. 2. in which he calls himself filius Galfridi, filii Galfridi Comitis de Hapsburg, & domini in Lausenburg, & Rinsiding in Germania: and wherein, by the consent of Agnes de Napton his wife, he gives power to Will. Puresey to deliver seisin of his Mannour of Wunsterton, before specified unto Sir Rauf de Stanlow; as also of one yard land in Lutterworth, which his Mother Maud de Colvile sometime held: And the other an Acquittance made by the said Sir Raufe upon the receipt from him of xlii sterling, wherein he mentions his descent as above said; which Acquittance bears date at Westm. 5 Julii 12 E. 2.

And that it may not seem strange, that a foreigner, so eminent for his parentage, should thus settle here in England, I have here added what I find in an antient MS. written about K. Edw. 4. time, which manifesteth the occasion thereof, Memorandum quod Galfridus Comes Hapsburgicus propter oppressiones sibi illatas à Comite Rodolpho, qui postea electus erat Imperator, ad summam paupertatem reductus, unus ex filiis suis, nomine Galfridus militavit in Anglia sub Rege Henrico tertio. Et quia pater eius Galfridus Comes habuit praecones ad certa dominia in Lauffenburg & Rinsfelden, retinuit sibi nomen de Felden, Anglice Filding; & reliquit ex Matilda de Coleville uxore sua Galfridum, Johannem & Thomam tunc pueros. Galfridus Filding duxit in uxorem Agnetem filiam Joh. de Napton, qui fuit frater Roberti de Nipton militis, ex Alicia filia Ricardi de Mitterton uxoris sua, & habuit exitum Will. Filding, qui duxit in uxorem Johannem filium Wi. l. Prudhome, ex Juliana filia & herede Roberti de Newnham; & ex illa genuit Joh. Filding militem, qui ex Margareta Purfrey uxore sua genuit Will. Filding mil. qui quidem Will. duxit in uxorem Agnetem de Seyton, & habuit exitum Johannem, Everardum, Edw. & Martinum Filding.

It seems that K. Henr. 3. much tending the condition of the before specified Geffrey, who was in Armeson his part here in England, as by what is above exprest may appear, gave him a considerable support in Rents and Fees lying in sundry places: For in a Roll^e of them yet extant, and written in E. 3. time, whereunto the title is Reddus & feodi Willielmi Filding filii Galfridi, filii Galfridi, filii Galfridi Comitum de Hapsberg, Lauffenburg & Rinsfelden, in the margent thereof is this intertion Ex dono quondam Regis Henrici filii Regis Johannis. As the testimony of these things is, in truth, of much honour to those of this Family; I do I perceive that it hath heretofore had no lesse estimation amongst them: for in an old Book^e sometime belonging to the Hospital of S. John Bapt. in Lutterworth, I find this written Notum sit omnibus hunc librum visuris, quod ego Willielmus Veyssy Magr. Hosp. S. Joh. Bapt. de Lutterworth praesens fui quando Joh. Fylding, qui postea erat miles, eodem anno quo inserviebat Johannem ducem Bedfordie in Bello contra Gallos, tradidit multas veteres scripturas custodiendas Thomae Bellers Gentilman, quae certificabant dominum Galfridum Filding filium fuisse Galfridi Comitum de Hapsburg &c. (ut supra) And likewise this following expression^e made by Sir Will. Filding Kt. who lived in H. 8. time, The Evidence of all these things was left with Will. Cave the son of Thomas Cave Gentleman, by Sir William Filding before the battail of Tewksbury, and a Bill of remembrance of the same after given to Ric. Cave, which was also written in the book of Will. Veyssy Master of the Hospitall of S. John Bapt. of Lutterworth.

This was the bok of my fader Syr Everard Fylding.

That they have antiently born for their Armes three Lozenges upon a Fesse, some Seals to^e Deeds before date; as also of K. E. 3. and Ric. 2. time do testifie: and for their Crest sometimes an Eagle and at other a Palm Tree, though of later times altered. And that these matches with Napton and Prudhome before specified, were heirs, the quarterings on those their Monuments at Wonskistrby are satisfaction enough. But I return. This John having served in the warrs of France and been dignified with the honour of Knighthood, as by what is before exprest appeareth, left issue William his son and heir, a person so well affected to the Lancastrian side in the Civill Wars betwixt that and the House of York, that no sooner did K. H. 6. regain his sovereignty (viz. in 49 of his reign) but that he constituted^e him Shirriff of the Counties of Cambridge and Huntingdon, being then^e a Kt. In which year, fighting on the behalf of the said K. in that memorable battail of Tewksbury, he lost^e his life, and was there buried^e.

This Sir William, by Agnes the Daughter and^e heir of Seton, with whom he had^e the Lordship of Payntesthorpe in Rutland, and a descent^e in blood from those great families of Vaux, Longvile, and Bellers (a younger branch^e of Monbray) left^e issue Everard Fylding his son and heir, Shirriff^e of this County and Leicestershire, in 21. E. 4. and in 2 H. 7. a Commander in the Kings Army at the battail of Stoke juxta Newmarke: So likewise at^e Black-heath in Kent in 12 H. 7. which Everard, being made^e Kt. of the Bath at the marriage of Prince Arthur in 15 of that King's reign, was Custos^e Rotulorum in the County of Leic. within two years after. And by his Testament, bequeathing his body to be buried before the Altar of our blessed Lady in the Black-Fryers at Portsmouth, departed^e this life in 6 H. 8. leaving issue by^e Jellis Russell his wife, Will. Fylding Esq. Shirriff^e of Rutlandshire in 11 and 12. as also in 18 H. 8. but afterwards Kt. who having been employed about raising forces out of his Tenants, and otherwise, for the Wars of France and Scotland in the time of H. 8. as by severall Privy Seals^e appeareth, assisted likewise with no lesse than xvi. Horse at his own charges against the Scots; as from the Registers, sometime belonging to the Councell-table, hath been observed: As also^e with ten able persons, most Archers and Gunners, in that Navall preparation made by the same King under the conduct of the Earl of Southampton. for preventing such attempts as might be exercised by the Pope or his Agents, whose Supremacy he had abolished: And was in such esteem with Q. Jane (third wife to the said K. H.) that in 29 H. 8. upon her delivery of Prince Edward, she sent a Privy-Seal^e unto him, signifying the same, with desire of his congratulation and prayers.

This S^r Will. by Eliz. Daughter^e to S^r Thomas Pultney of Wiltinton Kt. leaving issue Basill dyed^e 24 Sept. 2 E. 6. which Basill was Shirriff^e of this County in 11 Eliz. and took to wife^e Godith, second of the 7 Daughters and coheirs to Will. Wiltinton of Barcheston Esq; by whom he had issue William, Shirriff^e of this County also in 31 Eliz. and thrice of Rutland; viz. 24, 34, and 40 Eliz. who being afterwards a Kt. by Dorothy the Daughter^e to S^r Raph Lane (by a Daughter and coheir to the Lord Parre of Worston) had issue Basill, Shirriff^e of this County in 9 Jac. which Basill by Eliz. Daughter to Sir Walter Aston of Witchall Kt. had issue William, Lord of this place an. scil. 1640. who, being Knighted by K. James about the beginning of his reign; (and after made Custos Rotulorum in this County) was in 18 thereof advanced to the dignity^e of Baron and Vicount Fylding: And in 20, ob generis claritatem, & nuptias admodum honorandas; sed praecipue ob eximiam virtutem, & erga nos & Coronam nostram, fidem, as the words of that Charter^e import, created Earl of Denbigh. And having been constituted Master of the great Wardrobe, and Admirall at Sea in severall expeditions, did likewise, by his marriage with Susan, Sister to George late D. of Buck, not a little enlarge the honour of this Family.

M. S. I.
Rous in bibl. Cor-
ton. p. 144.*

THis was, antiently a village of many dwellings, but long since depopulated,* so that there remains now no more than the Mannour House, and that reduced to so mean a condition, as 'tis scarce capable of any Inhabitant, other than an ordinary Fermour, the grounds, for the most part, being converted to Sheep-pasture. Of later times it hath been, by the vulgar, called Cester-Ober, which occasioned Mr. Cambden in his Britannia to represent it as a place of great antiquity, and no lessthen a City in the Romans time: to which opinion, the adjacency of Watlingstreet did, as it seems, the more encline him. But that addition, which is, by the corrupt pronounciation of the vulgar called Cester, should, in truth, be Thester; for so 'tis antiently written, as I shall shew anon, and not used, neither, till a long time after the Conquest: for in Domesday-Book it is called Wara, where the place now called Church-Ober is written Wauere, as well as Wara; and Byownd-Ober also Wauere, and Wara, as I have already shew'd, with the reason thereof.

As for this addition of Thester, for distinction from the other towns before mentioned, it is no more than to signify the Eastern situation thereof from Spontekirby, in which Parish it is; and so by contracting two words into one, viz. The Caster, or The Castward, for the more brief expression is called and written Thester.

In the Conq. dayes Geffrey Wirce (of whom I have so often made mention) posselt it; at which time, being certified to contain 5. Hides, and having a Mill, it was valued at xl. s. one Robert then holding it of the said Geffrey; which Robert was paternall Ancestour (as I conceive) to the family of Wauere, written afterwards Waver; who, assuming their Sirname from hence, flourished here till toward the end of E. 3. time, as this descent manifesteth.

But the first of this line, touching whom I have found any thing of note, is Sir Rob. de Wauere Kt. who wedded Emma one of the two Daughters of Sir Roger Pantolf Kt. (Lord of Peubold-Pantolf) and cohairs to Will. their Brother.

This Sir Robert was a good benefactors to the Monks of Combe; for, besides the grant of 2. yard land, common for 100. Sheep, 24. Beasts, and 30. Hoggs; for xxii. marks of silver he gave them 96. acres of errable land lying in this village, with his Body to be buried in that Monastery; appointing the like solemnity to be performed for his Obit, as for a Monk of that Covent.

To him succeeded Sir William, his Son and heir, who wedded Juliana heir to Rob. Hayrun, Lord of Church-Lawford; Which Sir Will. in 35. H. 3. founded a Chantry in the Priory of Spontekirby, and endowed it with certain lands and Rents lying in Costord. In 38. H. 3. he was appointed Eschaetor for this County; but, having the K. speciall warrant to be freed of that office, in case he were not willing to undergoe it, as the Abbot of Perthore (generall Eschaetor on this side Trent) affirmed to the K. he procured a discharge; and in 41 H. 3. obtained a Charter to himself and his heirs for a weekly Perccate here upon the Tuesday; and a Fair once a year to last for three days, viz. on the Even of St. James, and two days following.

In 45 H. 3. he was constituted one of the Justices for the Gaol delivery at Warwick: but in 48 H. 3. adhering to the rebellious Barons, then in armes, was taken at Northampton, and imprisoned; his lands being given to Roger de Somery (Baron of Dudley.) But afterwards, taking benefit of the Dictum de Benllworth, he had the K. letters of safe conduct for access to the Court; and, compounding with the same Roger, had all his lands restored again, except the Mannour of Perstton (now called Wavers-Perstton, in this County) which by agreement betwixt themselves, the said Roger and his heirs was, in consideration of his Fine, to have.

After which he was again admitted to employments of trust, as appears by those Commissions of 52. 53. and 54. H. 3. for the Gaol delivery at Warwick: and dyed in 56 H. 3. leaving Robert his Son and heir of full age, and then married. Whose Grand-child, Robert, past away the inheritance of this Lordship to John Lovet of Peulton in 32 E. 3. Unto which John succeeded Will. Lovet of Ulcumbe in Com. Back. who, in 9 R. 2. granted 12. mess. 3. tofts, and 13. yard land, lying within this Lordship and Costord, in reversion after the death of Clementia his Mother, then the wife of John Parant, unto Will. Pursey (of Church-Ober) and his heirs: from whom they descended to Will. his Grand-child: for in 10. H. 6. I find, that he, and one John Waver were certified to be Lords of this Mannour.

But,

But, for ought I perceive, the family of Waver, notwithstanding its interest here, was at that time very low, and might have sunk to nothing, had not the industry of Henry, Citizen and Draper of London rais'd it up again: for he it was (being question-lesse a branch of this ancient house) that in 39. H.

1. Claus. 39. H. 6. m. 6. In dorso. 6. First, obtaining a lease from Will. Broke gent. son and heire to Elene Brooke late of Atwell in Com. Northampton. of the one moytie of this man-our, for the naturall life of himself and xii. years after, upon the rent of xi. l. per. ann. sterling, payable at Easter and Michaelmas by even portions; purchased the inheritance thereof from the said William, in 5. E. 4. as also, at the same time, bought the other moytie of Will. Bate of Melborne in Com. Derb. Esq. In which year, on Ascension day, being one of the Shiriffs for the City of London, he was made Knight of the Bath. Whereupon, resolving to restore this ancient seat of his Progenitors, not only to the condition wherein it formerly stood, but to add a greater lustre thereto, the next year ensuing, obtained a speciall Patent from the King to rebuild it with Turrets and Walls embattelled; and to inclose 500. acres of Land and Pasture, with 20. acres of wood for a Parke: and moreover to have a Court-Leet here, with Free-warren, and fishing in all his demesn lands belonging thereto.

2. Claus. 5. E. 4. m. 21. In dorso. 3. Pat. 5. E. 4. p. 2. m. 11. 4. Godin Q. 31. This wealthy Alderman, by his Testament^b, bearing date 4. Febr. 9. E. 4. (and proved in August following) bequeathed his body to be buried in the Church of St. Peter in Cornhill, before the Image of St. George there. And gave to the Dean and Chanons of S. Steph. Chappell at Westminster and their successors an annuall Rent of 5. marks sterling, to endure for xx. years next after his decease; so that they should pray for his soul, and keep on Obit there during the said xx. years, with Placebo and Mass of Requiem by Note, for his Soul, and for the Souls of Sir Thomas Haseley Kt. and Annes his wife, and all Christian Souls. And willed, that his Son Harry should have this man-our of Wetherwaver to him and the heirs of his body lawfully begotten; and for want of such issue to his Son Thomas; with the like remainder to his Son John: as also to Eliz. and Anne, daughters of the testator. Bequeathing likewise an annuity of xx. s. sterling out of it, to the Parson and Wardens of the Church of Monkskirby, to keep an Obit, with Placebo and Dirige, and Mass of Requiem by Note, yearly, in the said Church of Monkskirby, for his Soul; and for the Souls of his Father and Mother; making a certain distribution in money to poor people there.

Which Henry, (the younger) dyed 19. E. 4. leaving Christian his onely child but 5. years of age; the custody of whose lands was committed to Thomas Points Esq. 21. E. 4. during her minority. This Christian first married to Will. Brown Esq. 37. H. 8. who being a Justice of peace in this County, from 18. H. 7. till his death; and making his residence here, built the Gate-house of timber now standing, as appears by the Armes carved thereon, which I have below exprest: but afterwards became wife to Humfry Dimock Esq., and dyed 29. Martii 36. H. 8. leaving Edw. Brown, her grand-child and next heire; (viz. Son and heire of John Brown, deceased in her life time.) Which Edward, the year following his grand-mothers death, sold it to Sir Fulke Grevill Kt. From whom it descended to Sir Fulke his grandchild, created Lord Brooke of Beauchamps-court, 9. Jan. 18. Jac. By which means it is come to Robert Lord Brooke, his heire adopted, together with Beauchamps-court, and other fair possessions.

I have now but a word or two more to say, and then shall I leave this great parish of Monkskirby; which is to observe, that part of the old Roman way, called Fosse, leading through it, lyes open like a ditch, having not been filled with stones and gravell in such sort as in most other places it is. And, that on the West-side thereof stands an eminent, Tumulus, whereupon a Beacon is now situate, but anciently some noted Bush, as 'tis like, in regard it bears the name of Cloudstep-bath to this day. But touching these Tumuli I have already spoke in my discourse of Knightslow-hill, and therefore shall now say no more, then that 'tis hard to guess, whether this had at first its name from one Claudius a Roman Souldier, whose place of sepulture it was; or from the Brittain word Claude, signifying a ditch, because it is so near the Fosse.

Harborow

Harborow magna.

Following the stream of Swift, I come next to Harborow, commonly called Great Harborow, in wick parish there is onely one village more; viz. Little Harborow; but antiently they were not divided. In the Conq. time Ric. Forestarius (of whom I shall speak in Chesterton) held 4. hides and a half here, which were then valued at xx. s.; and whereof, before the Conquest, 4. Theins * were posselt. At that time there was one Anseisus who held also 4. hides more in this place; which in Edw. the Conf. time were the freehold of Bruning. These were likewise valued at xx. s., there being then a Priest (which shews that it had a Church so ancient) and a Mill rated at xvi. d. In that Record ^b it is written Herdeberge, which gives me occasion to conjecture, that the name at first arose, partly from the situation, and partly from the herds of cattell there kept, the old English word beorge signifying a Hill.

When it went out of the hands of these persons above specified I am not able to shew; but long it was not, ere that a family, assuming their surname from hence, posselt a great part thereof: howbeit the residue, in substance, with the advouson of the Church (being that part, it seems, which Anseisus held in the Conq. time) did very antiently come to the family of Langley: for it appears, ^e that Geffrey de Langley gave some part thereof to the Monks of Combe in H. 2. time; and that Geffrey, (his grandchild) in 39. H. 3. sold ^d to them all the rest that he had here, amounting to 2. carucats; reserving only the said advouson, and a rent of x. li. vj. s. sterling per ann. to himself and his heires, issuing out of those carucats, and payable in the great Church of Cobentre, on Christmas eve, Easter eve, Midsummer eve, and Michaelmas eve, by equall portions. But I returne to the line of Herdeberge.

Of these, Hugh de Herdeberg, was one of that number; who, being in armes against K. John, return'd ^v to obedience in 1. H. 3. having then ^v reftitution of his lands seized on for that offence. His grandson, Hugh, in 3. E. 1. was constituted one of the Justices for the gaol-delivery at Watwick.

Whose son Roger left onely two * daughters, betwixt whom the inheritance of this mannour happened to be divided, as it seemes; for it appears, that Ela the widow of Walter Hopton, in 33. E. 1. passing away her right to John Hulls and Isabell her sifter, and the heires of the said Isabell, it came to Ela one of the daughters and coheirs of the said Isabell; who, taking to her second husband John de Peyto, joyned ^r with him in the entayling thereof upon her issue by the said John; with remainder to Sir Walter Hopton Kt. and his heirs (son to the before specified Walter, as I gueſs). By which means it divolved ^a to Sir John Hopton Kt., whose posterity, in 1. H. 5. obtained ^b that interest which John de Langford, son of Henry de Langford, had here: for some title they had, it seems, by descent from one of the coheirs to Will. le Boteler, second husband to Ela de Herdeberg before specified, as the descent in Will. doth manifest. Of these Hopton's the last was Walter, who departed ^c this life in 1. E. 4. seized of the moitie of this mannour; leaving ^e Eliz. his sifter and heire then 30. years of age, and wedded ^d to Roger Corbet of Hopton in Com. Sa-lap, from whom descended Robert Corbet, who died ^f 30. Maii. 25. Eliz. leaving Eliz. and Anne his daughters and heires within age.

As for the other moitie 'tis plain, that John de Langley, first husband to Ela, one of the daughters and coheirs to John de Hulls, and descendant to Geffrey before mentioned, had it in the right of the said Ela; whose posterity past it away to Sir Baldwin Frevill, the elder, as it seemes: for plain it is, that upon the partition ^g of Frevill's lands, betwixt the sisters and heires of the last Sir Baldwin in 31. H. 6. the same moitie (there called the mannour) was allotted ^h to Thomas Ferrers Esq. in right of Eliz. his wife, the eldest of those coheirs: by which means it descended to his posterity, Lords of Tamworth-castle, as by severall ⁱ authorities appeareth. But as for the x. li. vi. s. rent, and advouson of the Church, I find ^k that Sir Peter Careswell Kt. son and heire to Sir Will. Careswell, second husband of Mary, wife to Geffrey de Langley, son and heire to the abovementioned John and Ela, obtained it; and by their deed ^l, bearing date 45. E. 3. granted them unto the before specified Sir Baldwin and his heires; by which means they divolved also, with the mannour, unto the family of Ferrers.

In An. 1291. (19. E. 1.) the Church (dedicated to All Saints) was valued ^m at vii. marks and a half; but in 26. H. 8. at ⁿ xiv. l. xiii. s. ii. d. over and above ix. s. vi. d. allowed for Procurations and Synodals.

Harborow-parva:

OF this place have I met with nothing, but the mention of what the Abby of Combe, and Monks of Stirby had; viz. ° Combe 3. Meis. and 33 acres of Land; and the Monks of Stirby the 4th part of a Kts. Fee.

Newbold super Avon.

THIS is one of those places which Geffrey Wirce (before spoke of) held in the Conq. days; out of which he gave^a to the Monks of S. Nich. at Anglers two parts of the Tythes of corne and cattell, and all the Tythe of Wooll and Cheese; as also of the mill; and a man to gather them. After which time, by the generall Survey, it is certified^r to contain 8 hides, then valued at C. s. and that Lenninus held it before the Norman invasion: But with Wirce his lands it came to Nigel de Albani, progenitor to the family of Moubray (as I have formerly intimated) which Nigel enfeoffed thereof Robert de Stutevill in H. 1. time, as it seemes: for in 12 H. 2. Roger de Moubray, son to the same Nigel, certified^r, that Rob. de Stutevill then held of him 8 Kts. fees de veteri scoffamento [id est, whereof his Ancestour had been so enfeoffed temp. H. 1.] the most whereof lay in Portk-Wire, where the chief seat of this family was.

From which Robert descended Roger, as the Pe-degree on the next page inserted sheweth; who granted away this Lordship to Roger Pantolf, his nephew (by Burgia his sister) to be held by the service of 1 Kts. Fee: all which was confirmed by the Charter^u of the said Burgia, and of Iseid Pantolf her grandchild.

But these Pantolfs enjoy'd it not long; for Will. the son and heire to the before specified Roger, died^w without issue, leaving his two sisters his heirs; viz. Burgia and Emma. Which Burgia gave^x her part to the Monks of Piptwell, and Emma married to Sir Robert de Waver Kt. (of whom in Chersterwaver I have spoke) which Will. Pantolf, before mentioned^y betook himself to a retired life, and resided in the Monastery of Piptwell, having a Chamber assigned him by the Monks there, where he determined to end his days, and to have been a good benefactor to them: but^z, on a time, the Monks removed him out of that lodging, in respect of an entertainment they gave to a great Judge, who travailed (it seemes) that way; which caused him to take such distast, that he presently left the House, and came to Monks-kirby, where he after dyed, giving^a to that Monastery what he intended to Piptwell; viz. the capitall mess. or Mannour-house of this Newbold, with 3. carucates of Land, and fishing in the water of Avon.

To Sir Rob. de Waver and Emma, succeeded^b Sir Will. de Waver Kt. betwixt whom and the Monks of Piptwell partition^c was made in 35 H. 3. of all the Lands that belong'd to the said sisters and heirs, in respect that Burgia had given her part to that Monastery, as I have said, being at that time surnamed de Bending. After which; viz. in 11 E. 1. the Abbot and Covent of Piptwell had (inter alia) Free-warren granted^d to them in all their demesne Lands here in Newbold. And in 13 E. 1. they claimed^e a Court-Leet and divers other privileges therein, for which they exhibited the Charters of K. R. 1. and K. H. 3. whereunto allowance was given. But, it seems that the Monks of Stirby, having the Mannour-house, obtained some further grant of Lands in this Lordship afterwards: for in 4 E. 1. I find^f, that they had the moytie of the Mannour (then written Newbold-Paunton) and in 33 E. 1. obtained^g power to keep a Court-Leet for their Freeholders and Tenants here, with other privileges. As also a Charter^h of Free-warren in all their demesne Lands of this place.

Yet I perceive, that Waver's interest in Penbold was not utterly quitted: for in 26 E. 3. it appearsⁱ, that Thomas de Waver held the 4th part of a Kts. fee here of Joane late Countess of Kent, heir to Stuteville, as the descent sheweth.

Which is it, as I think, that one Will. Barbour purchased in E. 3. time: for I find, that the said Will. bought certain Lands within the precinct of this Lordship, which descended^a to John his son, by whose daughter and heir called Agnes, wife to Richard Dalby of Brokhampton, they came to that Family, and had the reputation of a Mannour, whereof the said Richard died seized in 20 E. 4. leaving Robert his son and heir 30 years of age.

After the dissolution of the Monasteries, that which the Monks of Pipwell had here, came thus to be disposed of; viz. all those Lands called Penbold-grange to Edw. Boughton Esq. and his heirs, by a grant^b from the Crown in 33 H. 8. but the Mannour one Thomas Wightman obtayned; who, in 4 Eliz. sold^c it to Sir Tho Leigh Kt. Alderman of London; whose great-granchild, Francis Lord Dunsmore had a confirmation^d of it from the K. in 15 Car.

But the other Mannour, which belong'd to the Monks of Kirby, did the Boughtons of Walsford obtain, as it seems; for in 15 Car. Will. Boughton Esq; had the Kings confirmation^e thereof.

The Church (dedicated to St. Bornolph) belong'd to the Monks of Kirby very antiently; for Geffrey Wirce granted^f to them the greatest part of the Tythes. And by a confirmation^g thereof made to that Monastery from Roger de Stutevill, he relates to the grants, not onely of John his father, but of his Ancestours (he means the former possessors thereof) viz. Geffrey de Wirce, and Nigel de Alba i. In K. John's time G. Muschamp, then B. of Cobentre, confirmed^h it to the said Monks of Kirby; upon condition, that during the then Incumbent's time, whose name was Alardus, they might receive annually six marks out of it, and afterwards two parts of the profits to their proper use: but that, to the third, the Prior of Kirby should present a fit Clerke to the Bishop, who was to discharge Synodals, & all other duties belonging thereto.

In the year 1291 (19 E. 1.) it wasⁱ valued at xix marks, and the Vicaridge at v. marks: but in 26 H. 8. the Vicaridge^p was rated at viii l. xii s. over and above viiii s. allowed for Procurations and Synodalls.

As for the severall Monuments in this Church, I have represented them upon the ensuing pages: on the last whereof is this Epitaph.

Here lieth the Bodies of Edward Boughton Esq; and Eliz. his wife, daughter of Edw. Catesby of Lapworth Hall in the County of Warw. Esq; by whom he had issue two sons, Will. and Thomas; and one daughter, Katherine; which Thomas married Judith one of the daughters and coheirs of Henry Baker of South-Sowburie in the County of Essex Esq; and Kath. married Will. Combe of Straitsford upon Avon in the Countie of Warw. Esq; which Edw. died the 9th of August 1625. and Eliz. died the 12th of April 1619.

William the eldest son of the said Edw. married Abigaile the eldest daughter and coheir of the said Henry Baker Esq; and had issue Edward, William, Humfrey, Elizabeth, and Abigaile: which Abigail wife of the said William dyed the 21 of Febr. 1635. and Eliz. died the 14 of Jan. 1632 and Abigaile died the 4 of Sept. 1636.

bold, and involved therewith when that great Survey was taken by the Conq. whereof I make mention to oft.

That Stutevill's lands in penbold and this place (as a member thereof) were given to Pantolf, in marriage with Borgia, siter to Rog. de Stuteville, I have already shewed in penbold. As also, how that Will. Pantolf, dying without issue, Burgia and Enme his sisters became his heirs. Which Enme, being married to Rob. de Waver, brought the greatest part hereof to that family: in which it continued, and past with the Mannour of Therter-waver, as may seem by some Records which I have there cited.

As for what belong'd to the Monks of Pipwell, I find, that in 7 E. 6. the K. granted it to John Greene of the City of Westm. and Raph Hall of London Scrivener, and their heirs. Which John, in 1, & 2 Ph. & M. had licence to alien the same unto Eliz. Boughton; from whom, as it seems, they were afterwards granted to one Tho. Wighman Gent. for it appears, that, in 4 Eliz. the said Thomas had licence to pass them unto Sir Tho. Leigh Kc.

Little-Lawford.

Before the Norman invasion, this was possessed by the same Alvine, of whom I have made mention amongst the Earls of Warwick; and descended to Turchill his son, who held it in the Conq. dayes, one Leveva being then his Tenant thereof. By the general Survey & at that time taken, it is certified to contain two hydes, whereunto belong'd a Mill, all valued at xx s. viii d. and there written Lilleford. But from this Turchill it came to Henry, the first E. of Warwick after the Conquest; whose Grand-child, Eari William, gave it, as it seems, to Robert de Craft: for I find, that in 12 H. 2. the same Robert was certified to hold one Kts. fee of him de novo feoffamento. To whom succeeded Rog. de Craft (brother to the same Robert) in the possession & thereof, who granted the Mill here to the Monks of Pipwell in fee-ferm, for the rent of v marks of silver yearly: which rent was afterwards released to them by Roger his son, in consideration of xx marks given unto him by Walter de Parshull, son and heir of Simon de Parshull, who built the Chapter house at Pipwell.

Which Roger, afterwards granted this whole Village to John de Chavini and his heirs, it being then rated at 2 hydes (the just proportion that it was certified to contain in the Conq. time) id est, 8 yard land. For which grant he reserved the Rent of id. to be paid yearly at Easter to him the said Rog. and his heirs for all services, excepting foreign; there being for that the 5th part of a Kts. fee due. Which John de Chavini past it away to the Monks of Combe for C. marks of silver, Robert de Campanel confirming the grant in 2 H. 2. time. But, it seems that the Monks of Pipwell paid yearly to the Prior of Witby, at the feast of S. Botolph, x s. for the tyche of their Mill here (it being within the Parish of penbold super Abon, the Church whereof belong'd to the Monks of Witby, as I have already shew'd) Howbeit, afterwards they withheld that payment, in regard of their priviledge (viz. being of the Cistercian Order) yet did they, by Agreements, settle the x s. annuity to the said Prior and his successors for ever.

After which, in process of time, further difference growing betwixt the Monks of Combe and Pipwell, they of Combe required of Pipwell 6 acres of land, and xx s. yearly in money, for their interest in this Lordship of Little-Lawford, and in the capital Messuage. But the Register of Pipwell saies, that in the place where that capital Messuage stood, the Monks of Combe had divers Cottages; and that they also had the whole Lordship besides: so that they of Pipwell, having there no more than the Mill, with the crofts and holmes thereto belonging, did pay that xx s. yearly, quia Luna lucet in aqua.

Upon which differences, there was an Award made an. 1226. (10 H. 3.) by the Abbots of Stratford and Woburne, appointed for that purpose by a general Chapter of their order; whereby it was decreed, that the Abbot and Covent of Pipwell and their successors should for ever enjoy this Lordship with the Mannour-house and all the appurtenances, which heretofore they held as termers of Rog. de Craft, excepting 6 acres which the Monks of Combe were to have for quietness sake; and that the Monks of Pipwell should yearly pay to them of Combe, hereupon, xx s. sterling. So that, by all that hath been said, it appears, that Chavini had it from Craft; the Monks of Combe from Chavini; and they of Pipwell by force of this Award.

But afterwards, to the family of Craft it divolved again, it seems; yet how, I have not seen: for in 20 H. 3. Rog. de Craft answered for the 5th part of a Kts. fee here, held of the E. of Warwick. From whom descended Geffrey de Craft, who in 4 E. 1. stiles himself Dominus de parva-Lalleford; and from him Nich. who was the last of this line that had to do here, for ought I have seen. Neither can I further discover in whom the possession thereof rested for a long time after, untill that Geffrey de Allesley had it, which was about the beginning of H. 6. time. Which Geffrey married Margaret, one of the daughters and heirs of Henry Sutton Esq. Lord of Ditchford-Frery in this County, where I shall have occasion to make further mention of him; and was in Commission for assessing of the Subsidy granted to the K. in Parl. 9 H. 6. And in 12 H. 6. (with the rest of the principal persons in this Shire) took his oath for observance of the Articles concluded of in the preceding Parliament. In 17 and 18 H. 6. he was constituted one of the Justices of peace in this County; and departing this life, 18 Aug. an. 1441. left issue Elizabeth his daughter & heir, wife of Thomas Boughton (a Wesfordshire Gentleman, as I have heard) whereby this Lordship became transferred to that family, wherein it still continues.

Which Thomas, being constituted a Justice of peace in this County in 21 H. 6. so continued till the end of that K. reign, as appears by the sundry renewings of those Commissions. In 31 H. 6. he served in the Parliament as one of the Knights for this Shire; and in 38. was appointed, with others, to array and arm all persons, of body able, and estate sufficient, within this County, for the K. service. To whom succeeded Richard his son and heir, constituted Escheator for this County and Leicester in 13 E. 4. as also Sheriff in 20.

And Justice of peace in 22 E. 4. and 1 E. 5. Which Richard, being again Shiriff for these Countyes in 2 R. 3. as by the Indentures betwixt him and Humfry Beauso Esq; the precedent Shiriff, appears, had the fate to be slain on that K. behalf at Wostworth-field, as the tradition is: but therein is a mistake; for the Inquit: taken after his death expresseth, that he dyed 20 Aug. 3 R. 3. which was two dayes before the Battail: therefore 'tis like, that raising Forces in this County for the King, he was encountred by some of the Earl of Richmond's Troops in their passage towards Wostworth, and by that means lost his life.

Of whose descendants I find, that Will. his son and heir was Squire of the body to K. H. 8. and, in 27 of that K. reign, Shiriff of this County and Leicester. As also, that William, Grandson to the same William, underwent the like office for these Countyes in 17 and 32 Eliz. being in Commission for the peace the greatest part of that Q. reign. So likewise Edward, son and heir to the said William the most part of K. James his reign, having been Shiriff in 4 Jac. But further, as to their matches and otherwise, the Descent here inserted, which briefly points at what else I am able to say in relation to this family here seated, shall suffice.

Newnham-Regis.

Next below, on the bank of Avon, stands Newnham-Regis, where depopulation attending the inclosure, hath reduced it to a small number of Inhabitants besides the Mannour-house. In the Conq. Survey there is no direct mention of this place, so that to what it then belonged, I cannot well guess, but do conceive it to have been of the E. of Spellent's or Turchill de Warwick's possessions, in regard that it was of the fee of Roger E. of Warwick, whose father (Earl Henry) enjoy'd the greatest part of the said E. of Spellent's and Turchill's lands in this County.

From which E. of Warwick, the first that obtain'd it was Hugh fil. Ricardi, as it seems (of whom in Wroxhall I have spoke) who pass it unto Geffrey de Clinton, Chamberlain and Treasurer to K. H. 1. and he to the Canons of Kenilworth upon his foundation of that Monastery. Which Canons had special grants from them both, to acquit it of all secular services due to either of them, or to the King: in consideration whereof, the said Geffrey gave to the above mentioned Hugh ten marks of silver; to Margaret his wife two ounces of gold, and to Roger E. of Warwick two gold Rings, each having a precious stone therein: for it was held of the said Earl by one Kts. fee, as appears by K. H. 2. confirmation thereupon.

But this, for distinction from another Petonham within the same Hundred, is called Petonham-Regis, in respect that the K. was antiently possessor of it, as is evident also by the Quo warranto Roll of 13 E. 1. where the Kings Attorney, questioning the Prior of Kenilworth for it, alledged, that K. Richard the first was seized thereof. How this claim was determined, I find not; but, that the Canons of Kenilworth enjoy'd it till the dissolution of that Monastery, is plain enough; and had allowance of a Court-leet here, and divers other notable privileges.

After which suppression, it continued in the K. hands till 7 E. 6. and was then granted to John D. of Spothumberland and his heirs: upon whose attainder in 1 M. the Queen pass it to Sir Rouland Hill Kt. and Citizen of London. Of whom Sir Thomas Leigh Kt. and Alderman of the said City, soon obtain'd it, as may seem by his presentation to the Vicaridge in 1 Eliz. Which Sir Thomas afterwards settled it on Sir Will. Leigh Kt. a younger son, and the heirs male of his body; who inclosed it, and left issue Francis his son and heir, created Baronet 24 Dec. 16 Jac. whose son and heir Francis, advanced to the dignity of Lord Dunsmore, 11 Julii, 4 Car. and afterwards to be Earl of Chichester, now, scil. an. 1650. enjoys it.

The Church (dedicated to) is not presentative, nor hath in it any Arms or Monuments.

Arley.

Having now taken notice of all those places which lye contiguous to the River Avon, on its Northside; till the stream of Sow meet therewith; I must, in pursuance of my method, ascend to the head of that brook, which riseth Westwards from Atley, as the Map will shew, and not far from the skirts of Arley: And therefore to dispatch this corner of the Hundred, I will begin with Arley, whereof there is a member called Sioley, though little taken notice of now: but because I find, that antiently there is mention of it in Records, I must not omit it.

The later sillable of this Towns appellation is very frequently used, as we know, for terminating the names of sundry Villages; and if we ascend to the

the British for its original, we shall find lle in that language to be the same with locus in the Latine; but if to the Saxons, lep there signifieth ground untill'd, and in that sense we still use the word in relation to such land. As for the former, viz. Ar, 'tis British, and signifieth the same with super in Latine, which very well agreeth with the situation hereof, the greatest part of the Parish being high ground in respect of the ascent to it almost every way; so that then Ar-lei, is by interpretation, in effect, locus altus.

In the Conq. time, this was posselt by one Cristina, a great Woman; and with her other lands in this County came immediatly to Raph de Limesi, a Baron of eminent note, whose chief seat was at Walberle, in those dayes a remarkable place, though now there is nothing left thereof more than some grounds within the precincts of Solihull bearing the name, and that somewhat corrupted by length of time.

In the general Survey it is recorded for one hyde, the woods whereof contained a mile and half in length, and half a mile in bredth, all being then valued at lx s. and was (as it may seem) a member of Walberle; but it is there written Ablet in capital letters, the Clerk mistaking the R for a B.

Of this Raph de Limesi and his posterity, I am to speak when I come to Walberle, where I shall insert the descent of that family; whereby it will appear, that the daughters and heirs thereof were matcht to Lindesei and Odingsells, the former a Scot, the other a Fleming. Which family of Lindesei continued but a while; but that of Odingsells remained even till our fathers' memory, as in Long-Ichington I shall fully shew.

Touching this Mannour of Arlep, I find, that one Raph de Limesi, who lived in K. H. 3. time, had it; and granted the inheritance thereof to Richard de Limesy his brother, and to his heirs; which Richard had issue Peter. Howbeit, whether the above mentioned Raph de Limesi issued from some younger brother of the family of Limesy, whose descent I have plac't in Walberle, I am not able to say: but I have seen an antient Pedegree of Odingsells which derives him from that family, as son to the first Gerard, who lived in H. 3. time: expressing, that he quitted his paternal name, and called himself Limesi (to preserve the memory of his Grand-mother Bastia de Limesi, I presume, in that she was so great an heir) which was a course usual enough in antient time to do, as I have elsewhere observed.

Following therefore the guidance of that descent, I have put this Raph and his brother Richard, as younger sons to the said Gerard de Odingsells; and the rather, for that I conceive, that the same Gerard was Lord of this Mannour, in regard that he and his brother William had a trial at Northampton against Will. de Waverton and Gerard de Lindesei in 28 E. 3. concerning the advowson of this Church; though afterwards it did not constantly accompany the possession of the Mannour, as most in those elder times did: For Will. de Odingsells of Solihull (son to the before mentioned William) had it in E. 1. time; and yet afterwards Peter de Limesy presented (as will appear by the Institutions.)

To return therefore to the said Peter (son of Richard) whom I find thus posselt of Arlep, as abovesaid: He had Free-warren granted to him and his heirs here in 4 E. 2. and being a Knight in 5 E. 2. assisted the Earls of Lancaster, Hereford, and Warwick, in the beheading of Piers de Gaveston; for which, with the rest, he had his pardon in 7 of that K. reign. In 9 E. 2. he was in Commission for choosing of foot-souldiers in this County for the wars of Scotland: and the same year one of the Knights for this Shire in the Parliament then held at Lincoln: In which Parliament the Commonalty giving unto the K. a writ towards the charge of his wars in Scotland, the foot-souldiers elected as aforesaid were released by the K. command, this Peter being, with others, assigned for levying the said sixteenth.

In 11 E. 2. he was in Commission for enquiry who they were that furnish themselves with Arms, and retained souldiers, horse or foot; or did confederate themselves by private meetings in this County. And, the same year, being constituted Sheriff of the Counties of Salop. and Staff. had the custody of the Castles of Shrewsbury and Bridgenorth committed to his charge. In 14 E. 2. he was in Commission for the Goal-delivery at Warwick; but afterwards in the rebellion with Thomas Earl of Lancaster; for which his lands being forfeited, were seized into the K. hands: and dyed at Porke the Monday next before the feast of the Epiphany in 18 E. 2. but whether a natural death or not, the Record doth not specify, leaving issue John de Limesy his son and heir, then 24 years of age, on whom this Mannour was settled by the grant of Kic. de Limesy, his Grandfather.

What became of this John de Limesy, or what issue he had, I find not: but plain it is, that in 2 E. 3. Sir Roger Corbet of Caus Kt. and Amicia his wife, granted unto Sir VWill. Camvile Kt. son of Thomas Camvile, the reversion of this Mannour; as also of the Mannour of Sibbesdon in Leic. which Sir Roger had a daughter also called Amicia, wife of John de Odingsells, as in Long-Ichington appeareth.

The next mention I meet with of it, is in 19 R. 2. where it appears, that Sir Roger Corbet of Uygh Kt. dyed seized of a third part thereof, leaving Thomas his son and heir aged 23 years. But in 5 H. 4. after the death of Sir John Odingsells of Long-Ichington, it was found, that Sir Raph Rochford Kt. then held it, with Slowley, of him the said Sir John, by the service of one Kts. fee. As also, in 8 H. 5. that Thomas Corbet of Uygh then deceased, held 8 mess. and 4 yard lands; and that Thomas his son and heir was 28 years of age. Unto which Sir Raph succeeded Henry Rochford Esq; who past to Thomas Bate Esq; all his title therein; of whom Edw. Lord Ferrers of Chobyn obtain'd it, in 35 H. 6. But further mention thereof in Records have I not seen till 7 E. 6. there being at that time a Fine levied of it betwixt John Poley Esq; Pl. and Rob. Greene and others before, but to what uses I know not. Nor afterwards till 13 Eliz. that Tho. the son of VWill. Skeffington (of Skeffington in Leicestersh.) accomplished his full age. Which Thomas, being then posselt of it, had issue VWilliam, whose posterity do now enjoy it.

In an. 1291. (19 E. 1.) the Church (dedic. to) was valued at vi marks; but in 26 H. 8. at six l. vi s. over and above ix s. vi d. allowed for Procurations and Synodals. The patronage whereof, in 12 R. 2. belong'd to Sir Rob. Grey of Rothesello Kt. and Sir John Clinton Kt. by turns.

Sloley-hall; which shews, that some person of note hath antiendly dwelt there.

The first mention I find thereof is in 20 H. 2. where the Shiriff accounts for the profit of certain lands here, then belonging to Reginald de Eton, who was in rebellion against the King; in which Record it is written Slalet. But in E. 2. time, Peter de Limesy was posselt thereof, with Arley; both which were then seized on for his rebellion, (as I have before declared.) Since which time it hath gone with Arley (as a member thereof;) But in 9 H. 5. it was found^b, that Richard Sloley of Sloley, held of the K. in Capite, one mess. and four acres of land here, by Sergeanty; that is to say; giving to the King upon his expedition with his Army towards Scotland, one Pole-axe, or xii d. in silver for all services. Which Richard dyed 8 H. 5. leaving John Porter, son and heir of Agnes Porter, sister of Henry Sloley, father of the said Richard, his next heir, then aged 40 years.

Astley.

WIrhin the precincts hereof is the head of Sow, of which Brook there is a member of this Lordship that hath its name, viz. Souley, now scarce taken notice of, but by a few scattering houses, called Souley end: howbeit, in the Conq. time, it was of more regard, for it is mentioned in Domesday-booke by the name of Soulege.

Before the Norman invasion one Alsi posselt this place; but after the Conquest, Robert E. of Mellent had it; at which time it was rated for one hyde, having woods extending to one mi^e in length, and half so much in breadth. As for the name, there is no question but that it first arose from the Eastern situation from some other made habitable before: for in the Conq. Survey^d, it is written Estleja, id est; locus orientalis; but corruption in speech hath, in time, changed it to Astley, as hote Towns, antiendly written Eston, are into Aston.

c Domesday lib.

That the greatest part of the E. of Mellent's lands came to the first E. of Warwick of the Norman line, I have given a touch already in Hill-Morton: as also, that Philip de Estley is certified to hold 3 Kts. fees of Will. E. of Warwick, in 12 H. 2. de veteri feoffamento; by which 'tis plain, that his Father or Grandfather was enfeofft of them in H. 1. time. Of which 3 Kts. fees, this Estley was part, as by those Records I have there cited appeareth; and held of the Earls of Warwick, with Wedington, Hill-Morton, Milberton, and Derston-jabet, by the service of holding the Earls stirrop, when he did get up or alight from Horseback.

Being to speak historically of this family (which was the stock whence the Astleys of Hill-Morton, and Wolbey in this County; and of Watnall in Staffordsh. are of younger branches descended, I have set down the Pedegree, so far as it relates to this place, beginning with the before mentioned Philip de Estley, for his fathers name I cannot discover: and have fixt thereunto that part of Grey's descent, as, through Astley's daughter and heir, became Lords thereof.

That they took for their Arms Azure a cinqfoile ermine, which hath so near a resemblance to the bearing of the antient Earls of Leicester, is very well known. And that it hath been no unusual thing for younger branches, or those who held their lands of such great persons, or had other near relation to them so to do, I could manifest by sundry examples; which was the case here, in part, if not in all these instances: for Thomas de Estley, son to Philip, was not onely Bayliff to Simon Montfort E. of Leic. (who had that Honour conferred on him by K. John, in regard he had married Amicia the eldest sister and coheir of Rob. Fitz-Parnel E. of Leic.) as appears by a Fine that he gave to the King, 9 Joh. viz. fourscore marks and a palfrey, to be discharged of the issues required of him for that Earls lands whil't he had to do with them; but held certain lands by military service of that Honour.

In 12 Joh. this Tho. de Estley gave a Fine to the K. of C. marks, that he might not go beyond Sea: the Record expresses not whither; but 'tis plain, that the K. went that year with a great Army into Ireland, and settled that Realm in obedience to him: therefore thither it was, without doubt, that he had command to attend him. After which, viz. in 17 Joh. being in Arms against the K. with the rebellious Barons, he was committed Prisoner to the Castle of Bedford, whereof Falcaus de Breant then had the custody: But in 1 H. 3. submitting to obedience (or rather being forc't thereto by the wisdom and courage of the famous Will. Marshall, then E. of Devon, who had the tuition of the young K. and government of the Realm) he had his lands, which were forfeited for that offence, restored to him; and in 4 H. 3. was in Commission for the Goal-delivery both at Warwick and Leicester.

So also in 5 H. 3. for seizing into the K. hands all the demesns whereof K. John was posselt at the beginning of the wars with the Barons; and likewise to take Eichaets, as well those lands which were belonging to Normans and Britons, as other strangers, that either came to the K. hands or his fathers, before the said war, in the war, or after it; and to certifie the stock thereupon, with the value, as also in whose possession they were. But after this do I find no more mention of him, than that he wedded Maud, one of the sisters and coheirs to Rog. de Camvile of Creek in Northampton. and that he left issue Walter; of whom K. John exacted Scutage for military service in Wolston, in 16 of his reign, as of all others that held by that tenure. Which tax being so great, viz. 3 marks for every Knights fee, was never paid, in regard that the Barons hereupon took occasion to rebel; at which time they brought in Leves, the eldest son to K. Philip of France, took the City of London, and grew very outrageous, as our Historians relate.

This Walter was posselt of lands in Whitchford; which, in 17 Joh. were given by the K. to Alice de Moyun (of whom I shall speak more fully when I come to that place.) But in 1 H. 3. he received favour of the K. as his father had done; and in 19 H. 3. answered for one Krs. fee in this County two marks upon payment of the Aid for marriage of Isabell, the K. sister, to the Emperour.

To him succeeded Thomas; who was a Kt. in 26 H. 3. and then constituted one of the Justices for the Goal-delivery at Warwick; so also the year following, in which he paid to the K. 15 l. for his Release.

In 32 H. 3. he was sent with divers other great men into Galloghne; but within few years after, taking part with the rebellious Barons in 47 H. 3. joyned with those that seized upon the K. profits in this County and Leicester. which the then Shirriff Will. Bagot had in charge to receive; and grew so eminent for his activeness, that upon the Agreement in 48 H. 3. betwixt the said K. and the Barons; wherein the K. to satisfy them, submitted to those unreasonable Articles, called Provisiones Oxonii, which they by power had formerly forc't him unto, constituting several persons persons of greatest trust in all parts of the Kingdom to secure what they had so got; he was the onely man deputed in Warwickshire, for that purpose, having the title of Custos pacis.

Touching their giving battail to the K. at Lewes, in May, 48. H. 3. and how both K. and Prince were there made prisoners, I must refer my Reader to our Historians; observing onely, that, during the time the King was thus in their hands, they made use of his great Seal, doing what they listed in his name; and in particular made a Charter to Thomas de Eftley, son of this Thomas, for a Mercate and Faire at Hill-Morton, which beares date 15. Jan. 49. H. 3. (as I have already, in my discourse upon that place, intimated.) But see the success: after they had got the whole Kingdom into their power; the Ring-leaders of them fell at emulation about sharing the spoil, and superiority in command: which caused such irreconcilable animosities, that contrivances were layd for each others destruction; Clare E. of Glouc. making what party he could to ruine Monfort E. of Leic. who had both the K. and Prince in his custody at the Castle of Hereford: yet, when he had considered his strength, and found, that of themselves it would be very difficult and hazardous, if possible, to effect; rather than he would fail of his ends, he was willing to take in the Royallists to his aid; which could not be well accomplish'd, he knew, without the presence of the K. or Prince for their countenance.

Whereupon plots were layd for the Prince his escape; which taking effect accordingly, an Army was rayled within two months, and at Chebam gave battail to the E. of Leic. and his complices, where they had a suddain and fatall overthrow. In which conflict Monfort himself being slain; and with him duodecim milites vexilliferi, saith Math. Paris, whereof this Thomas de Eftley was one; scarce a man of note escap'd with life, that was not made prisoner: but touching the particular circumstances hereof, having occasion to speak further in Kenilworth, I shall now pass them by.

This victory so obtained, the King rewarded those, which adventured their lives for him in that battail with the possessions of his vanquish't Rebels; amongst which, he gave to Warine de Bassingburne the lands of this Thomas de Astley. Which Warine, in 50. H. 3. obtain'd a charter bearing date at Kenilworth 22. Oct. for leave to fortify his house at Bassingburne in Cambrydogsh. and this at Astley, and to embattle the walls of them both: but 'tis not very probable that he did any thing thereupon at this place, in regard it was so soon granted away again by him, as I shall presently declare. For that the posterity of those who had thus forfeited and lost their lives, with the rest that were not slain, except the Sonns of Montfort E. of Leic. were by that Decree, called Dictum de Kenilworth (whereof I shall speak elſewhere) admitted to composition, is not unknown to those who have any cognisance of our English History: I shall therefore here omit the relation thereof, and descend to such particulars as concern the family of this Thomas.

And first, to manifest what commiseration the K. had to Edith his wife, do observe, that whereas his lands in Astley, Wetinton, Willeby, and Copston, in this County; Ullham, and Creek in Portsmouthsh. Brouton, Cotes and Hecham, in Leicestersh. were all bestowed on the said Warine, and whereof the value, by extent, was certified to be 15 l. 16 s. 11 d. per ann. he notwithstanding gave unto her those in Willeby, Hecham, and Wetinton, valued at 34 l. 18 s. 1 d. ob. per ann. for the maintenance of her self & children during her life; paying to the same Warine and his heirs, only one mark at the Feast of S. John Baptist yearly.

I now come to Andrew, his son and heir. This Andrew, compounding with the said Sir Warine de Bassingburne, according to the Edict before specified, had a grant from him of those lands: but for raising of money to that purpose, was constrain'd to pass away his Lordship of Little-Copston, before specified, to the Monks of Combe, and their successors for ever; from whom he received for the same cccxx. marks sterling: which sum was to fit him for his voyage to the Holy-Land, as by the originall Charter appeareth. Shortly after which, the said Andrew was received into favour, giving security for his faithfull demeanour towards the K. and his heirs; Rog. le Strange of Shropsh. and Nich. Haverham of Portsmouthsh. by their speciall acts in Court, undertaking for him therein. And being thenceforth put into the condition of a loyall subject, as to purchase of lands or any other thing (the K. confirming the grant made to him by the said Warine) he was, in 12. E. 1. joyn'd in Commission with Raph de Hengham, (a learned and eminent Professor in the Law, of that time, and afterwards chief Justice of the Common pleas) for taking Assizes of Novel-disseisin, Mort d'ancestor &c. in this County.

In 13. E. 1. he claimed by Prescription, a Court-leet, Gallows, power to punish the breakers of Assize of bread and beere, free-warren, with other privileges, in this Lordship with it's members; viz. Perston-Jabet, Wedington, and Wilverton; and had allowance of them. After which; seil. in 28. E. 1. Edm. de Bassingburne brought an Assize of Mort d'ancestor against him for this manour before the then Justices Itinerant, but prevailed not therein, as it seemes. Of his farther publique employments, I finde, that in 24. E. 1. he had summons (with divers other great men) to be at Newcastle upon Tine, the first of March, there to attend the K. with Horse and Armes to vindicate the injuries done by John K. of Scotland. As also the next year following, to be at Newcastle again, upon St. Nicholas day, to attend Pr. Edward, who then went as Generall against the Scots. And afterwards, the same year, was enjoyned to be at London, the Sunday next after the Octaves of S. John Baptist, furnish't with Horse and Armes to wait upon the K. in his expedition beyond Sea (into Flanders and Gascoine): but, it seemes he was dispens't with for his personal service in that voyage: for I finde, that John de Clinton and he were then assigned by the Prince (who during the K. absence was deputed his Lieutenant here in England) to make choyce of such Knights and others of this County, whom they should think fit, and to retien them by wages for attendance on the said Prince at London on the Octaves of St. Michael the same year. And, that in 26. E. 1. he had command to be at York at the feast of Pentecost, accoutred with Horse and Armes to march against the Scots; which was the time that K. Edw. had the victory at Falkirk in Scotland.

This Andrew gave (or rather sold) to the Canons of Orbury a wood, lying within the precincts of Chilverscoton, called Herewardshay, which which his Father had of the grant of Tho. the son of Thomas the son of Seherus de Stoke. And dyed in 29. E. 1. leaving Nicholas his son and heir aged 24. years; who, doing his fealty had then livery of his Fathers lands. Which Nicholas in 1. and 3. E. 2. being constituted one of the Commissioners for conservation of the peace in Warwicksh. and to see the Statute of Winchester observed, in 5. E. 2. was a Knight, and bore for his Armes a Lion rampant, as by his Seal appeareth. But, in 7. E. 2. attending the K. in that unfortunate expedition against the Scots, was taken prisoner in the battail of Stribeltn, where many a gallant Englishman had the same fate, or lost his life. The time of his death I cannot certainly point out; but he dyed without issue: for I find that Thomas his nephew, viz. son of Sir Giles de Astley his younger brother (and with him taken prisoner at Stribeltn) became heir to the estate: and in 19. E. 2. had livery of his lands, being then of full age. Which Thomas was a Knight in 10. E. 3. and such a man whose pious and noble actions gave no small lustre to this family. For, in 11. E. 3. he founded a Chantry in the Parish-Church here at Astley, of one Priest to sing Mass daily for the health of his soul, and for the soul of Eliz. his wife (daughter to Guy de Beauchamp E. of Warwick) as also for the souls of his Father and Mother, and all the faithfull deceased; to which he had licence for the amortizing of 8. mess. 2. carucates of land, pasture for 2. horses and 4. Oxen, crj. s. viij. d. rent, with the appurtenances lying in Astley, Wolbepe, Spilberton, and Willoughby in this County.

In 12. E. 3. he was assigned one of the Commissioners for conservation of the peace; and to be assistant to Ric. E. of Arundell, and Tho. Lord Berkeley for arraying of all men in this Shire, according to their several estates and faculties. The same year he had licence to grant the advowson of the Church, here at Astley, to the Guardian and Priests belonging to the Chappell of our blessed Lady therein, for the health of his soul, and the souls of his ancestors, and all the faithfull deceased; which, by Rog. Northburg, then B. of Cob. and Litch. was appropriated thereunto 8. Kal. Oct. following. Who, thereupon reserved these pensions; viz. to the Chapter of Litchfield 5. s. to the Chapter of Cobentre as much; and 13. s. 04. d. to the Cathedral of Litchfield, to be payd at the feast of S. Mich. th' Archangel yearly out of the profits thereof. Which Chantry, as appears by the Bishops said Instrument of Appropriation, consisting of 4. secular Priests; one called the Custos, or Warden, and another the Subwarden, was founded for the good estate of the said Thomas de Astley, the Lady Eliz. his wife, and of Dame Alice and Alice, Mothers to them both, their heirs and successors; as also Roger then B. of Cob. and Litch. and after their decease for the health of their souls, and of the souls of Sir Walter de Astley and Isabel his wife, Sir Thomas de Astley and Joane his wife, Sir Andrew de Astley and Sibill his wife, Nich. de Astley and Alice his wife, Sir Giles de Astley (father of the said Thomas the founder) Sir Thomas de Wolvey and Alice his wife; and of Sir Thomas de Clinton Knight.

For augmentation of which number to seven Priests and one Clerk, in 14. E. 3. he obteyned licence to amortize 2. mess. 3. yard land and half, 2. acres of wood, and 2. s. - 8. d. rent in Wol- broke, Hapstord, and Bedworth. In that year he was joyn'd in Commission with the Bishop of Worcester, the Abbot of Stoneley, and Prior of Erdbury to supervise the ninth of Sheaf, Lamb, and Wooll for this County granted to the K. in Parliament. And the next year did he grant to the Prior and Covent of Crebury and their successors 1. mess. and 36. acres of land lying in Wolbepe.

Thus was the heart of this worthy person still more and more enlarged, as we see by these his pious concessions; and yet, thinking all not enough, procured licence of the K. for the changing these Chantry-Priests into a Dean and Secular Canons; and to grant to them and their successors the perpetuall patronage of the Church of Hill-Morton, which was appropriated thereto by the said Rog. Northburgh Bishop of Cobentre and Litch. 3. Cal. Martii the same yeare, with reservation of x. s. annuall pension to be payd out of the profits thereof at the feast of S. Michael th' Archangel. Whereupon he then began to erect a most fair and beautifull Collegiat-Church in the form of a Cross, dedicated to the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin, with a tall spire covered with lead, whereof I shall say more anon. Which foundation consisted of a Dean and two Canons, who were to be secular Priests, each having their lodgings appointed to them, with particular lands out of the before mentioned possessions so given; the Dean being to provide a Priest, as perpetuall Vicar there, and by him presented to the Bishop, by the the B. to be instituted, and by his mandate to the Chapter of his Church, to be admitted, having v. Marks by the year, quarterly, for his salary: And likewise another priest with a fit Clerk to serve the Parishioners in the said Church.

Shortly after which; viz. in 20. E. 3. did Tho. Beauchamp E. of Warwick grant thereunto the Church of Long-Stanton in Cambrydgeshire. Nor was it long after, that the before specified Founder added more: for, in 36. E. 3. I finde that he gave ix. marks and x. s. yearly Rent, issuing out of lands situate in Ulburn and Creek in Northamptonsh. and lxv. s. v. d. ob. q. rent out of lands in Shustoke, Stungley, and Pum-Caton in this County. And lastly his son, Will. Lord Astley, in 12. R. 2. xl. s. yearly rent issuing out of the manour of Bentley, to John de Plompton Vicar and then Sacrist, and to his successors for ever.

Having now done with the endowment, I have a word or two more to say of the Founder, relating to his publique employments; which is, that in 33. E. 3. he was the first in ranke authorized by commission in this County for arraying of men in the K. absence, according to the Statute of Winchester. As also in 35. constituted one of the Justices of peace in this Shire. And that, by Elizabeth daughter to Guy de Beauchamp E. of Warwick, he had issue Sir Will. de Astley, and Sir Thomas, both Knights, with Giles his third son, from whom the Astley's of Wolbepe are descended (as I have already shewed). Of which Sir Thomas, in respect he had some publique employments, of note, in this County, I shall say something, leaving his posterity, by Eliz. daughter, of Richard Harecourt, son of Sir Will. Harecourt Kt. whose cofin and next heir she was, seated at Wadthull in Staffordshire, where they still continue.

In 2. R. 2. he was in Commission for taxing a Subsidy in this County. In 8. for collecting a Clauſ. 8. xv. and x. having been one of the Kts. for this ſhire in the Parliament, wherein they were granted. He was alſo the ſame year retain'd by Indenture for one whole year to ſerve the K. in an expedition which he then perſonally made into France, with three Archers well armed and fitted for the war, receiving for himſelf xii. d. per diem beſides the accuſtomed reward; viz. in proportion his part of ccc. marks for thirty men at Armes by the quarter; and for every of his Archers 6. d. per diem; of which he was to receive a quarters pay in hand; and to have the benefit of all ſuch priſoners as himſelf or his Archers ſhould take, except he or they did fortune to take the K. of France himſelf or any of his ſons, or Captains generall; or any perſon that acted in, or were contrivers of the murder of Jo. D. of Burgoine.

Of which family; viz. of Watthull, was the famous John de Aſtley; who, on the 29. of Aug. Anno 1438. (17. H. 6.) maintaining a Duel on Horſback within the ſtreet called St. Antoine in Paris, againſt one Peter de Maſſe a French-man, in the preſence of Charles the vii. K. of France, pierc'd the ſaid Peter through the head, and had (as by the Articles betwixt them was conditioned) the Helmet of the ſaid Peter, being ſo vanquiſh'd, to preſent unto his Lady. And on the 30. of Jan. 20. H. 6. undertook another fight in Smythfield within the City of London, in the preſence of the ſame K. H. 6. with Sir Philip Boyle, an Arragonian Knight; who, having been in France, by the K. his maſters command, to look out ſome ſuch hardy perſon, againſt whom he might try his ſkill in feats of Armes; and miſſing there of his deſires, repaired hither. After which combat ended (being gallantly perform'd on foot, with Battail-axes, ſpears, ſwords and daggers) he was knighted by the K. and had an annuity of c. marks given him during his life. Nay, ſo famous did he grow for his valour, that he was elected Knight of the Garter, bearing for his Armes the Coats of Aſtley and Harcourt, quarterly, with a label of 3. points Ermine, as by a very antient MS. book ſewherein the Enſignes of thoſe Kts. of that honourable order are depicted, appeareth.

But I return to the before ſpecified Sir Will. de Aſtley (eldeſt ſon to Thomas, founder of the ſaid Coll. Church.) He was in Commiſſ. for the Peace, upon the ſeverall renewings thereof, from 17. R. 2. till 6. H. 5. And in 3. H. 4. assigned to enquire concerning the diſturbers of the Laws, and framers of Lyes. In 4. H. 4. for arraying of men: In 6. to treat with the people for a loan of money to the K. and left iſſue one only daughter, by whom the inheritance of this great Houſe devolved to the Grey's of Ruthin. But before I ſpeak farther thereof I muſt add a word or two more of this family of the Aſtley's, in reference to them as they were Barons; which is, that Thomas, who was ſlain in the battail of Ewelham, is reputed by our Hiſtorians ſo to have been: for before 49. H. 3. have we no particular ſummons to Parliament to diſtinguiſh the Barons from other great men. But his ſon Andrew was ſummoned in 23. 24. 25. 28. 32. 33. and 34. E. 1. Nicholas in 30. E. 1. as alſo in 2. and 3. E. 2. And Thomas (who founded the Coll. Church) in 16. 22. and 23. E. 3. as appears by the Records of thoſe times. Howbeit William never had ſummons. Which inſtances, do ſhew, that what is now claim'd as due by cuſtome, was not ſo eſteem'd in thoſe days.

To this William ſucceeded Joan his daughter and heir, firſt marry'd to Thomas Raleigh of Farnborough in this County. Which Thomas, by his Teſtament, bearing date here at Aſtley the Wednesday after the feaſt of St. Luke the Evang. 6. H. 4. bequeath'd his body to be bury'd in the Quire of this Coll. Church, and ten pounds for performance of his Obit: and gave xx. marks alſo to find a Prieſt to ſing Maſs, for his Soul, the ſpace of 3. years. He likewiſe bequeath'd a bowl of ſilver, with a cover to the Lord Aſtley, and to the Lady Joan his wife a diamond, with a ſilver bowl and cover. To every Yeoman ſervant of that houſe vi. s. viii. d. and to every groom iii. s. iii. d. After whoſe death, which hapned at that time, as by the Probate of his will appeareth, he marry'd to Reginald Lord Grey of Ruthin, whoſe poſterity, by her, poſſeſt this place for divers generations, and were advanced to great honour (as I ſhall ſhew anon) for which reſpect it will not be amiſs to take ſome notice of this Reginald, (their common anceſtor) and whence he ſprung.

He was ſon of Reginald Lord Grey of Ruthin, ſon of Roger by Elizabeth the Daughter of John Lord Haſtings of Bergabenny, and Iſabel his wife, one of the daughters and heiſt to Will. Valence Earl of Penbroke; by means whereof he became heir to the laſt John Haſtings E. of Penbroke, as I ſhall ſhew more fully when I come to Willongley. Which Rog. was firſt ſummoned to Parliament in 28. E. 1. by the name of Roger de Grey Chivalier: but his ſon Reginald had in all his ſummons the addition of de Ruthin, the Caſtle of Ruthin being his ſeat, and granted by K. Edw. 1. to Reginald (Lord Grey of Wilton) his grandfather.

Betwixt this Reginald (who had great poſſeſſions in Wales) and Owen Glendowr there grew ſome difference, about a Common lying between the Lordſhip of Ruthin, and the Lordſhip of Glendowr, whereof Owen was owner, and took his ſurname. Which Owen, during the reign of K. R. 2. was too hard for the Lord Grey, being then a ſervitor in Court to K. Ric. (with whom he was at the time of his taking by the D. of Lanc. in the Caſtle of Flint): But, after K. Richard's depoſall, the Lord Grey, as better friended than Owen, entered upon the Common. Whereupon, Owen, having many friends and followers in his Countrey (as thoſe that be great with Princes commonly have) put himſelf in Armes againſt the Lord Grey, whom he meeting in the field, overcame, and took priſoner, ſpoiling his Lordſhip of Ruthin; ſo that many reſorted to him from all parts of Wales, not knowing but that he was in as great favour then as in K. Ric. days: others alſo putting in his head, that now the time was come, that the Britons, by his means, might recover again the honour and liberties of their anceſtors. The Lord Grey therefore thus made priſoner, was conſtrain'd to ranſom himſelf at ten thouſand marks, the King conſenting, that the Lord Roſſe and Willughby, with other of his friends and allies ſhould endeavour to raiſe the ſaid Fine, in regard (as the Record expreſſes) the King knew him to be a loyal and valiant Knight.

After which, viz. in 9. H. 5. he was retain'd by Indenture to ſerve the K. in his warrs beyond Sea for half a year, with ſix men at Armes, himſelf accounted one; and 18. Archers mounted, armed and arrayed according to their ſeverall conditions, taking per diem, for himſelf 2. s. and for each of his men at Armes 12. d. with the accuſtomed reward, and 6. d. a piece for his Archers: As alſo to have the benefit of all priſoners they ſhould take, excepting Kings, Princes, or any of the Royall blood; blood, and especially Charles the Dauphin of Wennois, or any that murdered John Duke of Burgoyne, or were consenting thereto. And in 3. H. 6. was again^w retained to serve the K. for half a year in his French warrs, under the command of John D. of Bedford (the Kings uncle, then Regent of France) with xx. men at Armes and 60. Archers, for the like wages.

Of his children, by the first wife, from whom the Earles of Bent are descended, it concernes me not, here, to speak: but by this Joane (the heir of Astley) he had issue Sir Edward Grey Knight, who wedded^{*} Eliz. the daughter of Henry Ferrers, and grandchild and heire to Will. L. Ferrers of Grobby, in whose right^x he was L. Grey of Grobby. Which Edward, having been in Commission^y for the peace in this County 21, 22, and 23. H. 6. was in 28. H. 6. appointed^z, with others, to treat with the people for a loan of money to the King; and dyed^a in 36. H. 6. leaving Sir John Grey his Son and heir, aged 25. years, and Edm. Grey a second son, created^b Lord Lisle by K. E. 4. in right of Eliz. his wife, daughter to John Talbot Visc. L'isle (sister and heir to Thomas son of the said John) and afterwards made^c Visc. L'isle by King R. 3. (viz. 28. Junii. 1. R. 3.) Which Edward was, with others, in 4. H. 7. assigned a Commissioner^d for choosing of Archers in this County for relief of the Dutchy of Britanny; and dyed in 7. H. 7. (1492.) as may appear by the Probat^e of his Will, whereby he bequeathed his body to be buried in the new Chappell of our Lady, begun by himself to be built in the Colledge of Astley, where the body of Eliz. his late wife was interred: but he had another wife, called Jane, whom, by the said Will, he appointed to cause certain lands to be amortized, to endow and find a Priest perpetually to sing in the said Chappell for his Soul, and the Souls of his late wife Eliz. as also the said Jane, and all Christen Souls.

Of his descendants the Pedegre before inserted taketh notice; I shall therefore return to Sir John Grey, his elder brother, the heir of this Lordship. This Sir John marryed Eliz. the eldest daughter of Ric. Widvill, Earl Rivers. (as is sufficiently manifested by our Historians, in regard that K. E. 4. afterwards made her his wife^f, the said Sir John being slain in the battail of St. Albans 39. H. 6.) and had issue by her Sir Thomas Grey Knight, created^g Marq. Dorset 18. Apr. 15. E. 4. who sat^h in his habit at the upper end of the table that day amongst the Knights in S. Edwards Chamber: but for near relation and affection to the young King (murdered by Ric. D. of Glouc. the then Protector, his unnaturall uncle) was, 18. Oct. in 1. R. 3. attaintedⁱ of treason. Whereupon King Ric. by his Letters^j pat. bearing date 2. Aug. 2. R. 3. granted this Lordship to the above mentioned Edward Visc. L'isle, and the heires male of his body: But in 1. H. 7. the Marq. being again restored^k, posselt himself thereof; and, by his testament^l bequeathing his body to be buried here, in the Coll. Church, before the Image of the Blessed Trinity (in the midst of his closet, within the same Colledge, on the South side) dyed^m 20. Sept. 17. H. 7.

By which Testament he willed, that his Executors should cause to be said for his soul, in every of the 4. Orders of Friers in London, an hundred Masses by the Fryers in each place, with as much hast as might be after his decease. And that c. marks should be disposed in Almes to poor people at his buriall. Likewise, that the Hospitall of Lutter- worth in Leicesterth. of his patronage, to be appropriate to the said Colledge of Astley, if the Dean and his Brethren, or their successors could obtaine such appropriation to be lawfully made within 3. years after his decease; to the intent that they should especially pray for the Souls of K. E. 4. and Q. Eliz. his consort, and all Christen Souls.

By the Lady Cecily his wife (daughter and heir to Will. Lord Bonville, marryed afterwards to Henry E. of Wiltth. who likewise bequeath'dⁿ her body to be buried in the same Chappell, where the Marq. her husband was interred, appointing a tombe to be made over the place of their sepulture) he left issue Thomas^o of Dorset; which Thomas impaled^p 30. acres of wood and pasture, for to make that parke, here at Astley, now called the Little-parke: and enlarg'd^q the great parke, here, with 90. acres of land, in 12. H. 7. taken out of the precincts of Astley; which, to this day, bears the name, of Astley-laund. And by his Testament^r, bearing date 2. Junii 22. H. 8. bequeath'd his body to be buried in the Church of Astley, neer unto his father; appointing, that his mothers will should be observed for the maintenance of two Priests in the Chappell there; as also, that his Executors should, with all speed and diligence, after his Funeralls were performed, and debts payd, make and build a Chappell here at Astley, according to the will of his father, with a goodly tombe over his father and mother: which being done, to make another tombe in the midst of the Chancell, where he himself resolved to be buried. And after that should be finished, then to build an Almshouse for xiii. poor men, there to inhabite, and to be for ever nominated by his Executors, during their lives, and afterwards by his heires; each of them to receive xii. d. a week for their maintenance, with a livery of black Cotton yearly, price 4. s. which said payment he appointed should be made out of the Rents and profits of his manours of Bedworth and Parkinton, and all such lands and tenements as were in the occupation of the Lord L'isle, reputed or taken as parcell of the same Lordships, the surplussage to be bestowed in repaying the said Almshouse and keeping his Obit yearly. And dyed the same year, as may seem by the probate of his said Testament, leaving issue Henry; who marryng the Lady Frances, eldest daughter to Charles Brandon D. of Suff. and Mary the Q. of France, his wife, was, in her right (by reason her two brothers dyed without issue) created^s D. of Suff. 11. Oct. 5. E. 6. In whose time it hapned that the Monasteries were dissolved; for effecting of which work, his father in law Charles Brandon D. of Suff. was not a little active, as may appear by the large share he had of their possessions. And there want not circumstances to shew, that this Henry, then Marq. Dorset was stirring enough therein: for amongst other the lands belonging to those religious Houles, he had all that appertain'd to this Collegiate Church, granted^t to him and the Lady Frances his wife and his heirs 7. Aug. 37. H. 8. which he enjoy'd not long: for leaving issue onely 3. daughters, (Jane, the eldest, wedded^u to Guilford Dudley 4. son to John D. of Northumb. Katherine, the second, first^v to Henry L. Herbert, eldest son to the E. of Pembroke, and next (for she was divorc'd^w) to Ed. Seimour E. of Hertford: The 3. viz. Mary, to Martin Keys Sergeant-porter to Q. Eliz.) upon the death of King Edward 6. he was allured, through the ambition of the said D. of Northumb. (whose aim was no less than to have the whole sway of the Kingdom) to countenance the proclaiming of his daughter, the Lady Jane, to be Queen, pretending the designation of K. Edw. by his will. Which attempt not thriving, Northumberland, with some others lost their heads: Howbeit, the D. of Suff. though favoured, as not deemed so speciall an instrument therein as the other, could not rest quiet, it seemes: for finding that Q. Mary had a purpose to match with Philip, son to the Emperour Charles the 5. he came into this County and Leicester sh. and set out Proclamations to incense the people against it: whereupon the E. of Huntington was sent with a power into these parts to prevent all danger; which occasioned him, seeing he was forsaken, to put himself under the trust of one Underwood (as 'tis said) a keeper of his Park here at Attley, who hid him some few days in a large hollow Tree there, standing about two bow-shoot South-westwards from the Church: but, being promised a reward, betray'd him; so that it was not long ere he lost his head on Tower-hill.

After which, the Lady Frances, his widow, married to one Adrian Stokes Esq. who, holding this Lordship, as part of her dowrie, much defac't the Church before-specified, as not onely by tradition of the Inhabitants, but a Presentment upon oath in 1. Eliz. may appear; which manifesteth, that he caused the tall and costly spire made of timber, together with the battlements, all covered with lead, to be pull'd down, being a land-mark so eminent in this part of the wood-land, where the ways are not easy to hit, that it was called the Lanthorn of Arden. As also the two fair Iles, and a goodly building, called S. Annes Chappell, adjoining, the roofs of which were likewise leaded. By reason of which sacrilegious action, the steeple, standing in the midst, took wet, and decayed, so that, about the year 1600, it fell down to the ground, and with it a great part of the Church, Ric. Chamberlain Esq. being then Lord of this mannour, by the grant of Q. Mary to Edw. Chamberlain his Father (of the family of Chamberlain of Spirburn in Oxfordsh.) who, with some contribution from the Country, did, about the year 1607, begin the building of the Tower again; but, in stead thereof, took totally away all the west part of the Church, with the North and South cross Iles, making that which was the Quire the body of the Church, but pulled down the other beautifull Chappells on the North & South-side of the Quire, setting up that which stood on the North-side at the East end for a Chancell, wherein were the monuments of Edw. Grey Visc. Lisle and his 2. wives: And in that on the South side of Thomas Grey Marq. Dorset and his Lady, with their statues in Alabaster excellently cut; and in the vault underneath the same their bodies; that of the Marquess embalmed and wrapt in cerecloth many double in a coffin of lead; which, through the vain curiosity of some being opened, his corps was found as intire, and free from any seeming corruption, as if he had been but newly dead.

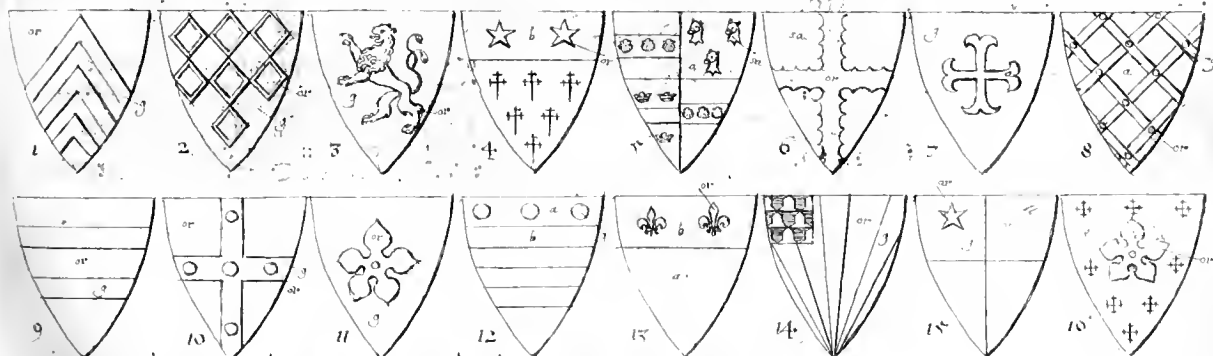

At the pulling down, and translating of which Chappell, it was resolved that the monuments should be set up againe in the Church, the said corps with the Coffin of lead being accordingly removed thither: howbeit, this good intention afterwards cooled, and the statues of the Marquess and his Lady were cast into the Beisfey, that of the woman having a Coronet on her head; and those of the other thrown into an old out-house amongst lime and rubbish; all which I my self have seen.

But, as to the succession of this Lordship, it is now come to Richard Chamberleyn Esq. son and heire to Rich. Chamberlein Esq. Register of the Court of Wards, by conveyance from Richard Chamberlein afore said (father of Jane, wife to the Register of the Court of Wards) and Edw. Chamberlein, grandson and right heire to the said Richard. Which Edward lately dyed without issue.

In An. 1291. (19. E. 1.) the Rectory was valued at x. marks: but in 26. H. 8. the yearly revenues of the Collegiat Church were certified at xlvii. l. viii. d.

In the middst of this Church (before it was pull'd down, by reason of the steeple's ruine, as I have observed) was a fair raised monument for Thomas Grey, the first Marq. Dorset of his family, and his Lady, whereupon their statues were excellently cut; and under the same a vault, adorned with the pictures of Bishops, Cardinalls, and Monks, in which their bodies lay; but by the fall of the steeple, before specified, it was totally broken and spoiled.

In the Chappell which stood on the Sout hside of the Quire, stood likewise two fair monuments; the one of Thomas the second Marq. Dorset, and his Lady, on the heads of whose statues were Coronets; and the other of Edw. Grey Visc. L'isle & his Lady; on the sides whereof were xvi. persons, and eight of them in religious habits. Both which monuments, at the removall of the same Chappell to the east end of the Quire, where it now serveth for a Chancell, were pull'd down, and utterly defaced.

In the same Quire, before the said alteration, were also some other monumentall stones of marble, with portraitures in brass upon them, besides those whereof I have already taken notice; upon one of which was this Epitaph.

Bedworth.

Following the stream of this small Brook, called Soto, I come next to Bedworth (a place very well known in regard of the Coal-mines there.) As for the name thereof, I conceive it did originally proceed from some one that posselt it in the Saxons time, whose name was Bede; for that the said appellation was then in use, those who are conversant in our English Histories do well enough know; the later syllable, worth, signifying a habitation.

In Domesday-book it is written Bevetworo, the v wanting a stroke through it d; which, with the Saxons, stood for th; and by that Survey is rated at 4 hydes, the woods extending to one mile in length, and half a mile in breadth, all being then valued at xl s. and whereof Edwyn, Earl of Mer- cia, was posselt before the Norman invasion; but afterwards by the E. of Mellent, most of whose lands in this County, his brother, the E. of War- wick, within a short time had: from whom some one of the family of Hastings obtained it (as it seems;) for I find, that they held it by Kts. ser- vice of his descendants, together with Willep, whereof I have already spoke.

I am of opinion, that the families of Turville and Craft were enfeofft thereof by Hastings; for it is evident, that they antiently posselt it, mention- ing being made of William de Turvill in 1 Joh. and in 20 H. 3. that Simon de Turvill and Rog. de Craft held one Kts. fee here. But towards the later end of H. 3. time, Will. de Charnells had to do here, though I am not able to say upon what title, unless it were by descent from Beatrix, his mother, whom I conjecture to have been the heir of Craft, (as in Bilton you may see.) Neither can I discern how or when Turvill absolutely quitted his in- terest in this place; for in 20 E. 3. Will. de Charnells and Oliver de Turvill answered for half a Kts. fee here, which they held of the heirs of Hastings. And yet I find, that in 28 E. 1. Will. de Charnells wrote himself Dominus de Bed- worth; and in 9 E. 2. Henry de Charnells (his fa- ther) is solely certified to be Lord thereof. Wan- ting therefore such light as might guide me in the full discovery of the successive Lords thereof, I have added so much of the descent of both these families, viz. Turvill and Charnells, as I have found by Record to have had relation thereunto.

Of these, John Charnells was the last (for ought I have seen) that had it; but of that family so posselt thereof, or of the Turviles, have I not seen any thing very memorable, other than the founding of a Chantry in this Church, at the Altar of our blessed Lady, by Philip de Turvile, the Parson here presented in 28 E. 1. as his Institution mani- festeth. Which was performed in 6 E. 3. and endowed with a good proportion of land, some lying in Eccleshale, but the greatest part in Bed- worth, the ordination thereof being made by Rog. Northburgh B. of Cob. and Lich. 5 Id. Julii, an. 1332. (the same sixth-year of E. 3.) whereby it appears, that the said Philip was then a Canon of Lich.

In 4 H. 4. there being a Fine levied betwixt Sir Will. de Astley Kt. and others, Plaintiffs; and John Attehale, and Joane his wife Deforc. of 24 mess. 5 carucats, and 9 yard land, 46 acres of meadow, 12 acres of pasture, 32 acres of wood, and 12 marks 1x s. rent, lying in Bedworth, Astley, Cozley, and many other places, with th'advouson of the Church, those lands, with the said advouson, were thereby vested in the said Sir Will. de Astley and his heirs; paying yearly to the said John and Joane, onely during the life of Eliz. the widow of John Charnells, xl. sterling, and after her decease xx marks yearly to the same John and Joane, during their two lives, in case they survived her. But in 10 H. 6. it was certified, that John Clerke of Cobentre Gentleman, and the Lady Margaret Astley, widow to Sir Will. Astley before mentioned, held this Mannour by the service of half a Kts. fee. So that it seems, either the Mannour past by vertue of that Fine, or else was granted to the Lord Astley by some other Act: for it ap- pears, that from that time the heirs of Astley were owners of it; and that Regin. Lord Grey of Ruthin (who married the heir female of Astley) leas'd the Mannour-house and demesns there for years, in 18 H. 6. As also, that Thomas, the second Marq. Dorset, descended from the said Regi- nald (as the Pedegree in Astley sheweth) by his Testament bequeath'd it to Edward, one of his younger sons, for life; assigning out of it to the poor of his Hospital, which he appointed to be founded at Astley, their stipends and liveries; but the inheritance remained to his heir: and so, escheating to the Crown, by attainder of Henry D. of Suff. (as in Astley is manifested) was in 2 Eliz. granted unto Gerard and others, to hold in Capite. Howbeit afterwards, viz. in 44 Eliz. to Clement Fisher Esq; and his heirs, together

Smercote magna.

THIS hath been of long time a depopulated place, lying, for the moſt part, if not all, in Bedworth pariſh, and in the Conq. Survey^h is joyn'd with Soule (now called Soule-end in Aſtley pariſh) the E. of Mellent then poſſeſſing them both, which are certified to contain one hyde, having woods of a mile in length, and half as much in bredth. In that Recordⁱ they are written Smercote and Soulege, and valued at 5 s. having been the free-hold of one Sexi in Edw. the Conf. dayes. After which, till H. 3. time, have not I ſeen any more thereof; but then did Roger de Craft bring an Aſſize ^k againſt Will. de Charnels and others for common of paſture and certain lands lying here, and in Bedworth. And in 13 E. 1. Will. le Boteler of Warrington had a grant^l of Free-warren in all his demein lands lying in Ce- cleſhale, Folkeshull, and this place. Which ſaid Charter was exemplified^m by Sir Tho. Boteler Kt. in 15 H. 7.

But the ſubſtance of both theſe Smercotes did, as it ſeems, belong to the Hoſpital of S. John Bapt. in Cobentre, whereof I ſhall treat in its due place; and after the diſſolution thereof, was paſtⁿ, with divers other lands of that kind, to John Hales Gentleman, and his heirs, in 37 H. 8. from whom it divolved to Charles Hales, late of Peckland Eſq; deſcended from a younger brother to the ſaid John.

Following the ſtream of Sow, it leads me next into the precincts of Cobentre, now a County of it ſelf, but originally part of this Hundred, where- of, taking my leave for awhile, I purpoſe to ob- ſerve what memorable places are or have bin with- in that Cities liberties; all which by the guidance of this torrent, together with Shitburne, that paſ- ſeth through the Eſterne part thereof, I ſhall, with- out much thwarting my reſolved method, induſtri- ouſly performe.

Hawksbury.

ON the Eaſt ſide of this Brook lyeth Hawks- bury in the Pariſh of Sow; which antiently belonging to the Priory of Cobentre, had the reputation^o of a Mannour, the rent or ferm whereof, in 26 H. 8. was certified^p to be C s. Upon the diſſolution of which Monastery, it was, in 34 H. 8. granted^q out of the Crown, by the name of the Mannour, Meſſuage, and Ferm of Hawksbury, and Hawksbury-grobe, to the Mayor, Bayliffs, and Commonalty of the City of Cobentre, and their ſucceſſours, who are ſtill owners thereof.

Nicholas; but the number of hydes which it then particularly contained, cannot be known, in regard Folkhill and it are there joyned together, which were then certified to be ix hydes, and valued at xii l. In that Record it is written Anestle, which differs nothing in effect from the present name: but the original thereof was Heantfge, (as I think) which, for easiness of pronunciation, is thus turn'd to Anstle: for being so, it is significant as to the situation, hean in the Saxon high, and fge a path-way.

That these lands which belong'd to the said

Countess, came afterwards to the Earls of Chester, I shall in Cobentre declare at large: but the first particular person that I find posselt thereof (and by grant without doubt from one of those Earls) was Roger de Burchervill, or Buschervill, in 30 H. 2. it being then held by him for half a Kts. fee. This Rog. de Buschervill gave some lands lying here, to the Monks of Combe: so also x did one Henry de Buschervill; by a daughter and heir of which family it devolved to Ireys, as the descent here inserted doth shew, Thomas le Ireys in 27 H. 3. being certified to hold it by half a Kts. fee.

Tho. Fitz-Lucian, Baro de Donnore-Agnes de Boschervill, D. de Ansty-in Ultonia, infra reg. Hib.

Which half Kts. fee (inter alia) did belong to Hugh de Albany E. of Arundel, then newly deceased, as part of the inheritance belonging to Mabel his mother, one of the sisters and co-heirs of Ranulph E. of Chester, as in Cobentre is hew'd.

This Thomas le Ireys was made the K. Eschactor in Warwicksh. 26 Junii, 37 H. 3. and had issue Geffrey; who, being a Knight, bore for his Arms Azure, upon a fesse arg. 3 escalops, with a bend gules. To whom succeeded Henry, who, in 17 E. 2. was rank'd in the number of those Knights and Esquires of this County that were then certified into the Chancery: but leaving no issue male, this Mannour, by Maud, one of his daughters and heirs, came to the family of Culy; and so, ere long, descended to Eliz. the wife of John Stanhop, as cousin and heir to Sir Rog. de Culy. Which Eliz. released all her right therein to John Deincourt of Blankney, husband of Margerie, sometime wife to Sir Rog. Culy, mentioned in the pedigree. But this title so obtain'd by Sir John Deincourt; did not long hold firm; forasmuch as the said Eliz. had joyn'd with the before specified John Stanhop, her husband, in levying a Fine of this and other Mannours in Pottinghamsh. and Leicestersh. T. Pasch. 3 R. 2. by which it was conveyed to Raph Adderley and his heirs: so that, in 3 H. 4. Raph, son and heir to the said Raph, recovered it by a Judgement in the Court of K. Bench: which Judgement being questioned as erroneous by Rog. Deincourt, son and heir to the said Sir John, in the Parl. of 5 H. 4. a Writ of Scire facias was granted to enquire thereof.

The particulars of what was done therein, I have not found: but it seems the same Roger prevailed; for it appears, that in 8 H. 4. by his deed of Release, dated ult. Nov. he quitted all his title therein to Sir Ric. Stanhop Kt. son to the before specified John and Eliz. which Sir Ric. dyed seized thereof 14 H. 6. leaving John his Grandchild, his cousin, and next heir. To whose Grandchild, viz. Sir Edw. Stanhop Kt. K. H. 7. by his Letters Pat. dated 22 of his reign, released all his right therein. Which Sir Edw. for the sum of 352 l. sold the same to George E. of Sherbourn, 23 Dec. 22 H. 7. but further than this can I not trace it.

The Chappel here, with all the Tythes, &c. thereunto belonging, was restored to the Monks of Cobentre, as their right, by Ranulph Earl of Chester in H. 1. time, it being then built for the advantage of poor people, as Wythin, Allesley, and Shilton were: and being appropriated thereto by R. Molend, B. of Cobentre; in anno 1260. (44 H. 3.) had no Vicar endowed; but the Prior of Cob. found a Curat removable at pleasure, unto whom he allowed of the small tithes to the value of C s. per annum.

Exhall.

Now come to the other side of Sow, upon which I first meet with Exhall, whereof there is nothing at all recorded in the Conq. Survey, it being then involved with Folkeshall, as 'tis most probable; which, with Ansty, is certified to contain a greater number of hydes than otherwise ('tis like) they would of themselves have been rated at. The first mention I find of this place, is in that Charter of Ran. E. of Chester (in K. Stephen's time) whereby he granted to the Monks of Cobentre a certain portion of his waft, lying here, and in Beresley, by estimation 80 acres, in exchange for one Cart of those two that E. Ranulph his his Grandfather allow'd to the said Monks for fetching of fuel, &c. out of his woods belonging to Cobentre. By which grant it appears, that this was of the possessions belonging to the Countess Godeva (of whom in Cobentre I shall speak) and came to the Earls of Chester, as the rest of those did.

Touching the name, there is no doubt but that it was originally occasioned from some antient inhabitant there; Acca perhaps, for that was in old time an appellation much used. But who it was that the E. of Chester first enfeoffed hereof, I could never directly find: howbeit by circumstances I do conceive it to have been Mauritius le Butiller; for in 27 H. 3. the heir of the said Maurice was certified^m to hold half a Kts. fee in this place, belonging to the heirs of the said Earl, and held x of them as of their Mannour of Cobentre. Which family of these Botillers had their chief seat at Werington in Lancash. as the Charter^v of Free-warren, 13 E. 1. granted to Will. le Botiller in all his demesne lands there and here, manifesteth; and continued possessor of this Mannour untill 25 H. 8. that Sir Tho. Butler, of Werington above-said Kt. past x it to Julius Nethermyll, an Alderman of Cobentre; whose great Grandchild, John Nethermyll, sold it to Sir John Garret, Alderman^a of London, in our memory.

The Church, being originally but a Chappel belonging^b to the Conventual Church in Cobentre, was in an. 1260. (44 H. 3.) appropriated^c thereunto by R. Molend, B. of Cob. and Lich. and had^d afterward a Curat serving therein, but removable at the will of the Prior; who, in 26 H. 8. received in small tithes to the value of C s. for his stipend.

Newland.

THIS, being in the parish of Crhall, but antiently an out-wood^e belonging to Cobentre, pertained to the Prior and Covent of that place; and had its name originally from the new inclosure, as the appropriation^f of it to the said Monastery in 44 H. 3. manifesteth. After which, in time, it came to be reputed a^g Mannour; and, containing^h 270 acres, viz. in woods, pasture, and wast, at 25 foot to the perch, was, in 6 E. 3. imparktⁱ, and continued to the Monks of Cobentre till the dissolution of that Religious House: but afterwards, viz. in 26 H. 8. the House being then in the possession of Mich. Gameswell, was granted^k out of the Crown to John Wade and Tho. Gregory. Which Mich. in 4 & 5 Ph. & M. purchased^l the rest, by the name of the Mannour of Pewland, alias Pewland-park; and in 1 Eliz. past^m it to Steph. Hales (son of Tho. Hales, sometime an Alderman of Canterbury, but of the antient family of Hales of Hales-place in Kent, as their descent sheweth.) Which Stephen dyedⁿ seized thereof 27 Martii, 16 Eliz. leaving Charles his son and heir then of full age, for his eminent knowledge in the Laws, afterwards made one of the K. Council at Porke; from whom is descended Stephen Hales (his great Grandchild) the present owner thereof, an. 1640.

Folkeeshull.

FOLLOWING the stream of Sow, I come next to Folkeeshull; which in the Conq. Survey^o is joyn'd with Anstle (as I have already shew'd) and certified to be part of the lands that the Countess Godeva held; in which Record^p it is written Fochestwelle: but the next mention I find thereof is in that Charter^q of Ranulph E. of Chester (in K. Steph. time) where he acknowledges (inter alia) the Chappel of Folkeeshull to belong to the Monks of Cobentre, in right of their Conventual Church, whereof it was originally a member, and thereupon restored to them. After which, have not I met with any thing of it worth observation till H. 3. time, that Rog. Montalt and Cecilie his wife, in that notable grant^r by them made, of the whole Mannour of Cobentre to the before specified Monks, amongst the services of sundry persons excepted out of the said gift, do in particular reserve the homage and service of Vitalis de Folkeeshull, Will. le Botiller, and James de Andelegh in Folkeeshull. Which Cecilie was one of the sisters and co-heirs to Hugh de Albany E. of Arundel, son of Mabel one of the sisters and heirs of Ranulph Blondewill E. of Chester, as in Cobentre shall be manifested. But the particular extent of what each of those persons held here of the said Roger and Cecilie, can I not exactly point out: howbeit, in that part which Will. le Botiler held, he had Free-warren granted to him and his heirs in 13 E. 1.

Neither do I know how the family of Boys came to have an interest here; but that they had, may seem by the entail^s which Will. de Boys made of it, with divers other Mannours, upon Will. la Zouch and Maud his wife, and the heirs of their two bodies, in 21 E. 1. which Maud was heir general to the said W. de Boys, as in Weston I have shew'd. And yet I find, that Milicent de Montalt (one of the daughters and co-heirs to George de Cantilupe, and wife of Endo la Zouch) dyed^t seized of this Hamlet (for so the Inquis. calls it) in 27 E. 1. leaving Will. her son and heir, then 22 years of age; which, by that Record, was then certified to be held of Rob. de Montalt by the service of x s. 1 d. per ann. So that by both these authorities it appears, that Zouch had it; and I think there is no doubt to be made, but that his title grew by the same Maud: for, besides the above recited entail, the Charter^u of Free-warren here granted in 7 E. 2. to the said Will. is also jointly to her, and that together with the other Mannours of her inheritance.

But it seems the Monks of Cobentre had a large share in this Village, notwithstanding the interest appertaining to Zouch; for in 9 E. 2. the Prior of Cobentre was certified^x to be Lord thereof. I shall not need to cite authorities to prove, that the inheritance of what Zouch had here continued long to his posterity, in regard that the same, which I have voucht in Weston, do shew no less; yet when it past from that family, have I not seen, nor to whom: but the next^y possessor of this Mannour that I meet with, was Will. Stansfeild, who had it in 18 E. 4. and so likewise the greatest part of H. 7. reign: and after him^z Rob. Stoke Esq. (son and heir of Tho. Stoke) in 14 H. 8. from whom it descended to^a Will. Stoke, temp. E. 6. But the next and last mention that I find of it, is, that VWill.

5 Esq. 30. Willoughby Esq; dyed ^b seized thereof 30 Eliz. leaving Gilbert his son and heir 27 years of age: from whom it came, about the beginning of King James his reign, to one Tho. Cotton de Com. Midd. Esq; and from him by mean conveyance to Ric. Hopkins Esq; the present owner thereof.

As for that which the Monks of Cobentre had here, it was after the dissolution of that Monastery granted out of the Crown by parcels, and at several times to sundry persons, whereof 'tis not worth while to make recital.

Rot. R. Molind. m. 4. d Reg. Pr. de Cov. f. 22. a. The Chappel appropriate * to the Pr. of Cobentre by R. Molend B. of Cob. and Mich. in 44 H. 3. had ^a antiently a Cuiat removable at the will of the Prior, unto whom belong'd for his Salary, the small tithes and oblations, with the tithe of fagors and hay, and all dead mortuaries, it being then reputed for a member of St. Mich. Church in Cobentre. But in 26 H. 8. the Stipendary serving therein, had ^a onely so much of the small tithes as were rated at Cs. per annum.

Henley.

THis is in the parish of Folkshull, and had its name, at first, from the rising ground near which it stood, hean in our old English signifying high: but of what extent it was antiently, can I say but little; for now there is no more left of it than the Mill; which, being still called Henley-mill, preserveth the memorial of its name, otherwise there would be no badge thereof.

The first mention I find of it, is in 34 E. 3. where Sir Rob. Gresley Kt. and Elen his wife, granted ^f it by the name of the Mannour of Henley iuxta Cobentre, which then extended into Folkshull, Weston, and Sow, unto Sir Baldwin Frevill, Kt. and Dame Ida his wife, and to the heirs of the said Sir Baldw. which Sir B. had other Mannours and lands of good value near at hand; and therefore, perhaps, this falling out to be depopulated, was afterwards involv'd with some of them; for I find not when or how it ever past by particular name out of the line of Frevill. But the Monks of Cobentre had ^s something here; of which, being of no great moment, I shall omit further to speak.

Tackley.

ON the North-east side of this brook is Tackley, a place long since depopulated; so that there is not at this time any memory thereof by the vulgar, other than certain grounds called Tackley in the parish of Folkshull. But the first and chief mention that I find thereof, is in that grant ^b made by Rog. de Montalt & Cecily his wife, to the Monks of Cobentre, of the whole Mannour of Cob. in H. 3. time; in which, amongst certain exceptions there made, he reserves to himself and his heirs the homage and services of John le Pover and Alex. Deyvil, in Tackele. Now, as to the extent of these services, they were, it seems, for a whole Krs. fee; for so le's doth the Inq. taken 3 E. 1. after the death of Rob. de Montalt testify; and that Urian de S. Pere then held the one half thereof, and Will. D'Umvill the other: but after that time I have not seen a word more in Record of this place.

Wykin.

A Little below lyes Wykin, antiently written Wike, and Witkey, signifying in our old English, the reach or bent of a river, and therefore very applicable to this place: but in the Conq. Survey there is no mention of it; whence I conclude, that it was then involv'd with Cobentre, or Folkshull: for it is evident enough, that the E. of Chester enjoy'd it with the rest of those lands that belong'd to the Countess Godeva, E. Ranulph (the first) restoring ⁱ to the Monks of Cob. the Chappel here, as their right, being a member of their Conventual Church.

Whether Walter Briton, who lived in H. 2. time, was enfeofft hereof by one of those Earls, I am not sure: but I find, that Alice his widow, for the health of the soul of the said Walter, as also of her father and mother, and of her own soul, gave ^k to the Monks of Combe the Mill of this Village, standing towards Sow, with a mess. lying near the same; which grant was confirm'd by James le Bret, her son. Yet was it not long that the Monks retain'd this Mill; for Steph. de Segrave (then Lord of Calndon) had a grant ⁱ thereof from them to himself and his heirs, in consideration of a pound weight of white Incense to be yearly paid to the Monastery of Combe, at Easter. But the first whom I certainly find to be posselt of this Mannour, was Walter de Langley; unto which Walter with Alice his wife, K. H. 3. in 41 of his reign, granted a Charter ^m of Free-warren here: the homage and service of which W. for his lands here in Wykin, did Rog. de Montalt and Cecily his wife reserve ⁿ to them and their heirs. when they past away the Mannour of Cobentre to the Monks: which service was the 8 part of a Krs. fee, as by sundry Records ^a appeareth.

This Walter, in 7 E. 1. held ^r 1. carucat of land and a Water-mill here, in demesn, and then also had 18. servants holding 5 yardland and 2 acres at will, performing divers servile labours for the same; and likewise Assize of Bread and Beer in this place. At that time had ^q also Nich. de Segrave 1 car. of land and a Water-mill in demesn, here, with 2 crofts, which certain Freeholders held. But the Mannour continued in the family of Langley, as long as the Male line lasted; viz. till E. 3. time (as I shall demonstrate when I come to Pinley, their principall seat) and then, viz. in 40 E. 3. Sir John Trillow (the younger) Kt. and Joan his wife, Daughter ^a and heir of Geffrey de Langley, granted ^s it to Sir Baldw. Frevill Kt. and his Heirs: to whom also, for better confirmation of his title, Sir Peter Careswell Kt. Son and Heir to Sir Will. Careswell, by his deed ^t bearing date the Munday next after the Nativ. of our Lord, 45 E. 3. releas't all his right in the same; which, it seems was an estate for life, and possibility of the inheritance: For I find, that in 4 E. 3. Will. Careswell and Mary his wife, Mother to the last G. de Langley, procured Tho. de Langley a Priest (who was Heir Male of the family) to levy a Fine ^u of this and other Mannours, whereby they were settled on the said Will. and Mary for their lives, the remainder to Geffrey the Son of Geffrey

Geffrey de Langley and the Heirs of his Body ; and for want of such issue to the right Heirs of the said W. de Carewell : And that upon the death of Baldwyn, Son and Heir to the before specified Sir B. his 3. Sisters became his Heirs (as in Tamworth I shall shew) whereupon this Mannour devolved to Margaret, the second of those coheirs, first married to Sir Hugh Willoughby Kt. and afterwards to Sir Ric. Bingham one of the Justices of the Common Pleas : which Marg. dyed seised thereof 8. Jan. 8 H. 7. leaving her Grand-child Sir Henry Willoughby Kt. Son of Rob. Son of her the said Marg. and Sir Hugh, her Cosen and next Heir then 30. years of age ; From whom descended Sir Francis Willoughby late of Spidleston Kt. who, by his deed bearing date 24. Maii 38. Eliz. sold it to Ric. Green, Father of Richard the present owner thereof an. 1640.

The Chappell, here, was built and dedicated in H. 1. time, at the instance of Ran. E. of Chester ; Rog. de Clinton then B. of Cob. consenting thereto for the advantage of poor people in times of Hospitality, the Buriall of the Inhabitants being reserved to the Mother Church of Cobentre, unto which all the Tithes belonging were appropriate by R. Molend. B. of Cob. and Lich. an. 1260. (44 H. 3.) the Monks of that House appointing a Priest to celebrate Divine Service three Days in the week, besides the chief Festivalls, for which he antiently received all living Mortuaries, Alterage, Tythes of Wool and Lamb, with other small Tythes for his Salary ; and held the 4. part of a yard land in Wylkin, belonging to the said Chappell, at the will of the Prior ; which small Tythes in 26 H. 8. were rated at C. s. per an.

Caludon.

OF this place there is no mention in the Conq. Survey ; nor in any other Record of a long time after, that I could ever yet see ; nevertheless the name is much more antient, being made up of a British and Saxon word (as I guess) the first part viz. Calod signifying Moss, and the later Dune or Don, an ascending ground, in respect that the surface of the hill, near which it is seated, is of a mossy condition.

That it was originally a Member of Cobentre and involved therewith, as also posselt by the E. of Chester, need not to be doubted ; forasmuch as 'tis apparent, that Ranulph, the last, gave it to Stephen de Segrave and his Heirs, to hold by the service of a fore-Sparhawk, yearly : And that Rog. de Montalt and Cecily his wife, when they past all their right in Cobentre to the Monks, made particular exception of the homage and service of Gilb. de Segrave and his Heirs for what he held of them here. In the family of which Segrave it continued whilst the Male line lasted ; and afterwards came to Moubray by Marriage of the Heir Female ; and by the like means to Berkley. But because these great persons (for the most of them were Barons of this Realm, and the rest of a superior rank) had not here their principall residence, I shall bask the story of them, further then what immediatly concerns this place.

Of the before specified Gilb. de Segrave I find, that he bore for his Armes three garbs with a label of five points ; perhaps in respect of the relation he had to the E. of Chester in the tenure of this Lordship. And that Nich. (his Son) as Lord of this place, in 7 E. 1. was certified to hold here 2. car. of land, a Park containing 20. Acres, a Pool called Franchebay and 2. Water-mills ; having onely one Freeholder called John de la Hay, who held 3. Acres of land for 3. s. Rent, Homage and Suit of Court. After which, viz. in 27 E. 1. he obtain'd a Charter of Free-warren in all his demesne lands here. To whom succeeded John de Segrave his Son and Heir ; who in 33 E. 1. had Licence to fortify his Houle, here, with a Moat, and to wall and embattle it with Lime and Stone ; and so strengthened to hold it to himself and his Heirs. After which time, 'tis very like, that he and his descendants, whilst the Male line lasted, made it sometimes their seat : for it is evident, that in 13 E. 3. John his Grand-child had summons, amongst the rest of our Warwicksh. Kts. to be in readines, sufficiently furnished with Horse and Armes, on the Feast day of St. Laurence to attend the K. into France. Which last mentioned John leaving issue Eliz. his Daughter and Heir, wedded to John de Moubray of Arholme in Lincolns. (a great Baron) this Lordship, inter alia, divoly'd to that Family.

Hence it was, that Tho. Moubray D. of Posff. (son to the said John and Eliz.) being accused by the D. of Hereford for certain words spoken in dishonour of the K. (R. 2.) having challenged the said D. to a Duell, appointed at Cobentre upon Wosford-green, where lists accordingly were set up, went upon the day assigned, on a Horse barded with Crimson Velvet, embroydered with Lions of Silver and Mulberry-trees : the issue of which business is sufficiently known to all that are but indifferently acquainted with our English History. But after three descents more, was this Lordship by Female issue, transferred, as it seems, to John Howard D. of Posff. Son and Heir to Sir Rob. Howard Kt. by Margaret one of the daughters to the before specified Tho. Moubray : For by certain Depositions it appeareth, that K. H. 7. immediately after Wosworth-field, where the said John, fighting on K. R. 3. part was slain, gave it unto Sir Gilb. Talbot Kt. his near servant, who came in person to take possession thereof : But it was not long that Howard had it ; for by a Fine levied in 10 H. 7. did Maurice Berkley, Son to Sir James Berkley Kt. and Isabel the other Daughter to the before specified Tho. Moubray D. of Posff. entayl it upon his Heirs Male : for corroboration of whose estate therein, it was afterwards, by partition betwixt Howard and him allotted (inter alia) to his share : whence it descended to George Lord Berkley ; who by his deed of Bargain and sale, dated 14. Junii 7. Car. sold it to Tho. Morgan of Wetton-sub-Wettheley Esq.

The Chappell here, now ruinous, was antiently a Presentative, as the Institutions of the following Incumbents do manifest.

Below Caludon, there is not any other place of note situat on the Banks of Sow, within the liberties of Cobentre; so that now I must ascend to the head of Shirburn; which beginning above Allesley, being increast with severall torrents, passeth through Cobentre; and on the verge of that Cities Liberties hath its confluence with Sow. The first villages, bordering upon this little Brook, are Allesley and Coundon; both which, heretofore, were Members of Cobentre, yet neither of them now are within those bounds (though the later be in the Parish) but do still continue part of Knightslow-Hund. as all that Cities liberties heretofore was.

Allesley.

OF this there is no particular mention in the Conq. Survey, it being there involved with Cobentre, whereof it was then a Member; and of the Parish, as appears by that Licence, which R. Clinton B. of Cob. temp. H. 1. granted for building of the Chappell here, at the request of Ran. E. of Chester, in the behalf of poor people, (as was also then allow'd to the inhabitants of Andy and others whereof I have already spoke) with reservation of Sepulture to the Mother Church. As for the name, I suppose it proceeded from some antient possessor thereof in the Saxons time; which probably might be Alsi; for that was an appellation then in use.

When it came first to the family of Hastings, or how, I cannot positively say; yet confident I am, that it was before the Marriage of Henry de Hastings with Ada Daughter to David E. of Hunt. by Maud the eldest Sister, and one of the Coheirs to Ran. the last E. of Chester of that name; because I find it not assigned to the said Maud amongst the lands and fees, in partition allotted to her: But the first mention thereof that I have met with in Record, is after the death of the said H. de Hastings, in 34 E. 3. it being then in the K. hands by reason of the minority of his Heir, and held of the Crown; as in right of the Earldom of Chester; which the K. in 23. of his reign had taken into his own hands, giving satisfaction for the same to the Sisters and Heirs of Ranulph, the last E. of that name. In which 34. year I find, that one Raph de Jerdele a Heremite, had an annuity of three Quarters of Wheat, allow'd him by the K. out of this Mannour (whereof he had the custody for the reason above expressed) which yearly allowance the said Heremite had used to receive out of the Mannour of Jerdele in Northampton belonging to the same Henry.

The next year following did the said H. enlarge his Park, here, having obtained 24. Acres of Wedge-wood wast from Osbert then Abbot of Stoneley to that purpose. And from him it descended to John, his Grand-child (as the Pedegree in Fillongley manifesteth) who in 7 E. 1. was certified to hold it of Rog. de Somery (Husband of Nichola one of the Sisters and Coheirs of Hugh de Albany E. of Arundell, son of Will. de Albany, and Mabel his Wife one of the Sisters and Coheirs to Ran. E. of Chester before specified) by the service of one Kt. Fee; which John had then 26. servants here, holding xx. yard land and a half, at will, paying certain Rents, and performing severall services in time of Harvelt: As also 22. Cottagers holding so many Cottages, at will likewise, paying certain small Rents, and performing the like services; with xi. Freeholders occupying 6. yard land and a half and 17. acres, for severall Rents, and suit to his three weeks Court: And moreover 40. acres of out-wood, with an antient Park containing 30. acres; whereof 12. were parcel of the Mannour of Stoneley, but by what authority inclosed within that Park not then known: And lastly Freewarren and Weyfs within his liberties here, as also Court-Leet, Gallows, Assize of Bread and Beer, for a passrey, yearly, payable to the King. All which liberties, with certain other Priviledges did he claim within this Mannour by Prescription in 13 E. 1. alledging that himself and his ancestors had enjoy'd them time out of mind.

From whom descended John de Hastings E. of Penbroke (his great Grand-child, as the Pedegree in Fillongley sheweth) which Earl entayling x his lands, as there appeareth (and his issue Male extinguish't) this Mannour (inter alia) came, by force thereof to Sir Will. Beauchamp Kt. second Son to Thomas Beauchamp E. of Warwick; which Will. being afterwards summoned to Parl. as Lord Bergavenny, had issue Richard, whose Daughter and Heir Eliz. brought this Lordship unto the family of Nevill (as in Fillongley is also more fully shew'd:) In which line it continued till Sir Henry Nevill, late Lord Bergavenny sold it, in our time to Sir Henry Compton Kt. of the Bath, now scil. an. 1640. owner thereof.

Upon the brow of an hill, in the Park here at Allesley, do appear some ruins of building, which as the Inhabitants say, were of a Castle; but in Record I cannot find, that it was ever so termed.

That the Church was originally but a Chappell belonging to the Priory of Cobentre, and the occasion of its building I have already declared. In 33 H. 3. there were certain persons delegated by the B. of Cob. and Lich. who, with the consent of the Monks of Cobentre, and the then incumbent, presented by the Lord Hastings, did ordain that the said Incumbent and his successors should have of the profits belonging thereto, all oblations, obventions, tythes, and other emoluments; reserving 6. s. 8. d. yearly to the said Church of Cobentre in lieu of all burials: and excepting also the tythes of Allesley-Park, and all personall tythes, which were used amongst the oblations to be offered upon Sundaies, in regard that the Lord Hastings (being Patron of the Church) had released to the Church of Cobentre all his right of common in Cobentre and Coundulme, and the Hamlets adjacent; which Ordination bears date on the day of St. Tiburce and Valerian an. M. CCXLIX. (33. H. 3.)

In an. 1291. (19. E. 1.) the Church (Dedic. to All Saints) was valued at xii. marks; but in 26. H. 8. at 17. l. 18. s. 8. d. over and above 8. s. yearly Coundon.

This was originally a Member of Cobentre (as I have said) and involved^b therewith in that grant of E. Leofric. made to the Monks, upon the foundation of the Monastery & Edw. Conf. though it be not particularly named in his Charter. By the Conq. Survey it appears, that the proportion belonging to the Monks in Condone (for so it is there written) extended to three virgats of land: as also that the words were three furlongs & 30. perches in length, and 3. furlongs in breadth; all being valued at 22.s. And in the same Survey it is also recorded, that Will. fil. Corbucionis (of whom I am to speak in Studley) had one virgat of land, here, at the same time; with woods containing half a mile in length and four furlongs in breadth; all which were then valued at 4.s. but there it is written Con- delme; so that, in regard the name at that time is so variously recorded; and altered, out of doubt, by corrupt pronunciation from what it first was, I shal not trouble my self to guess at the Etymology thereof.

In 41 H. 3. the said Monks of Cobentre had (inter alia) Free-warren granted to them in all their demesne lands here. And, in 44 H. 3. the tythes of this place, amongst other of their Mannours were appropriated to them, as belonging to Trinity Parish (one of the Churches in that City.) In 53. H. 3. I find, that John Beneth (of Allestey) held the xx. part of a Kts. Fee, here of Henry de Hastings; (Lord of Allestey) which I suppose to be the same that is certified by the Conq. Survey to have been in the hands of Will. fil. Corbucionis before specified: the extent whereof was, in 7 E. 1. signified to be but half a yard land and two acres, then in the hands of three Freeholders: So that the Monks of Cobentre being owners of all the rest, had a yard land thereof in demesne, and nine Freeholders, who held half a Carucat and 12. acres, paying severall Rents, doing suit of Court twice a year, and performing certain servile work in Harvest. In this village had the said Monks also a Court-Leet, gallows, with Assise of Bread and Beer by the grant of K. H. 3. As also weyfs, estreys, Felons-goods, and for Heriots the principall vessell; the names of what they so held in demesne being a certain grove, named Fowles-moze, and a parcell of ground called Wytors-field. The greatest part of which lands, together with the tythes, were, after the dissolution of the Monasteries, granted unto Ric. Andrews; Gent. and Leonard Chamberlein Esq. but how they have past since, is not much materiall for me to enquire.

Coventre.

Following the stream of Shirburn it leads me next into Coventre, still a City of eminent note, yet much short in glory and Riches to what heretofore it hath been, as I shall shew anon: but for the originall of its name I can give no positive reason; and therefore, whither the first part thereof, viz. Coben was occasioned by some Covent of Religious persons, antiently founded here, as some think; for there was a Monastery of Nuns long before the Priory, as I shall shortly manifest; or whither from this little brook, of which others conceive the true name to be Cune, I will not stand to argue. Sure I am, that the last Sillable thereof; viz. Tre is British, and signifieth the same that villa in Latine doth: from whence I conclude, that the first plantation here, hath been of very great antiquity, though when, or by whom made I cannot expect to discover, having so little light of story to guide me through those elder times. And as certain is it, that a great part thereof, and probably the most antient, stood on the bank without Bishop-gate, North-westward of the City; for no less do the foundations of much building there discovered, and a place yet called S. Nicholas-Church-yard, testify.

But touching that Monastery of Nuns, all that I find is no more but this; viz. that in the year of Christ 1016. Canutus K. of Denmark, and that infamous traytor Edricus invading Merca with an Army, burnt and wasted divers towns in Warwick, at which time the said House of Nuns, whereof St. Osburg a Holy Virgin had been sometime Abbess, was destroyed. What this Osburg was (I mean for her parentage) or when she lived I have not seen: for John Capgrave, a learned man, and diligent searcher after our English Saints, makes no mention of her: I shall therefore descend to K. Edw. the Conf. time; about the beginning whereof I find, * that the Noble Leofrick Earl of Mercia founded a goodly Monastery for Monks in the place, where the other stood; which Monastery was the chief occasion of all the succeeding wealth and honour that accrued to Cobentre, as I shall sufficiently demonstrate, when I come to treat in particular thereof; for of its beginning, growth, riches, greatness, honour, and dissolution I purpose to speak at large; and therefore referring my discourse concerning the same, and all other the Religious Houses, Churches, &c. here, to their proper place, I will take notice of what I find otherwise memorable touching this City. And because this great Earl and his Countess were the most eminent Benefactors that ever it had, I shall here make a brief Narrative of them, so far at least as they had any relation to this place.

The first of his Progenitors, concerning whom I have any historical authority, was Leofrik Earl of Chester in the time of Ethelbald K. of Mercia, about 900. years agoe; whose descendants to this our Leofrik, the Pedegree, which in this discourse I have inserted, doth succinctly point out. As to the time of his advancement unto the Earldom of Mercia (which contains the most of the Counties in this Midland part of the Realm) I can say nothing. In the days of K. Ethelred he was stiled Leofricus Comes, at large; which might be of Chester, onely by descent from his ancestors. By K. Canutus he was made a Capt. Generall of his forces: an. 1018. and grew afterwards in high favour with the said K. In the time of Hardi Canutus he was called Merciorum Comes: and though that in the beginning of Edw. the Conf. days he is stiled onely Comes Herefordiensium; yet do I conceive that he had that title attributed to him in such sort as Edwyn, his Grand-child, had of Comes Warrwici (as I shall hereafter shew) those Counties being included within his Mercian territories.

That his power was very great in the times wherein he lived, appears by these instances: * First, that after the death of Cnut, and great debate who should succeed him in the kingdom, he, with the Barons on the North of Thames, advanced Harold surnamed Harefoot, Son to the said Cnut, unto the Crown. And next, that Hardi Canutus being dead, he was one of the chief that raised * K. Edw. called the Confessor, at that time in Normandy to the regall throne, and afterwards with intire affection defended * him from the malice of Earl Godwyn.

This Leofrik wedded * Godeva, a most beautiful and devout Lady, Sister to one Thorold Shireff of Lincolnb. in those days, and founder * of Spalding-Abby: As also of the stock * and lineage of Thorold Shireff of that County in the time of Kennulph K. of Mercia. Which Countess Godeva, bearing an extraordinary affection to this place, often and earnestly besought * her Husband, that for the love of God and the blessed Virgin, he would free it from that grievous servitude whereunto it was subject: but he, rebuking her for importuning him in a matter so inconsistent with his profit, commanded that she should thenceforth forbear to move therein; yet she, out of her womanish pertinacy continued to solicit him, inso-much that he told her, if she would ride on Horse-back naked from the one end of the town to the other, in the sight of all the people, he would grant her request. Whereunto she returned, But will you give me leave so to do? And he replying, yes; the noble Lady, upon an appointed day got on Horse-back naked, with her hair loose, so that it covered all her Body but the Legs, and thus performing the journey return'd with joy to her Husband: who thereupon granted to the Inhabitants a Charter of freedom; which immunity I rather conceive to have been a kind of manumission from some such servile tenure, whereby they then held what they had under this great Earl, than onely a freedom from all manner of Toll, except Horses, as Knighon affirms: In memory whereof the picture of him and his said Lady were set up in a South window of Trinity Church in this City, about K. R. 2. time, and his right hand holding a Charter with these words written thereon.

I Lurke for the love of thee
Doe make Cobentre Tol-free.

But besides his foundation and endowment of the Monastery, here, at Cobentre before specified, of his proper patrimony, was he a great Benefactor * to divers other Religious-houses; viz. Leominster in Herefordsh. Menloc in Shropsh. S. Werburgs, and St. John's in Chester; Worcester and Cobham, both in Worcestersh.; to all which he likewise gave divers rich ornaments. To the Abby of Burton super Trent in Staffordsh. he also granted * a large part of Austrey in this County: and departing * this life in a good old age, at his house in Bromley, 2 Cal. Sept. 1057. (13 Edw. Conf.) was honourably interred * in the Monastery here at Cobentre, before mentioned, unto which he bequeathed * it, with a great quantity of Gold and Silver. By some Authors he is called Comes Leicestria; but 'tis plain, by what I have already cited, that it should be Cestria.

And now before I proceed, I have a word more to say of the noble Countess Godeva; which is, that besides her devout advancement of that pious work of his, in founding this magnificent Monastery (for my Author * says it was instigante uxore sua Godeva omnem thesaurum (saith another *) eidem Ecclesia contulit, &c. She gave her whole treasure thereto, and sent for skilfull Goldsmiths; who, with all the Gold and Silver she had, made Crosses, Images of Saints, and other curious ornaments which she devoutly disposed thereto. Neither did her zeal to Gods service and honour rest here; for, over and above all this, she built * the monastery of Stow near Lincoln, dedicating it to the blessed Virgin; and endow'd * it with the Lordships of Network, Flatburgh, and Martineville, giving possession of them by a fair Jewell, and rich Bracelets curiously wrought, as her Charter imports; whereunto were witnesses K. Edw. the Conf. himself, Aldred Archb. of York, Wlfric B. of Dorchester, E. Leofrik, her Husband, with divers more great Earls and others.

But I am not certain of the time when she dyed; neither do the particular of all the lands, which the Earl her Husband and she had, any where appear, inasmuch as there are but part of them pointed at in Domesday-Book. Those in this County, which that Record mentions to have been held by

To the before specified Leofrik succeeded his son Algar; but leaving his story to another work, as not so proper for this place, all that I shall further say of him is, that he was not onely E. of Chester, after his fathers death, but likewise of Mercia; and that, departing this life in an. 1059. he had sepulture in the Monastery here at Cobentre. Nor of his issue will it be pertinent for me to say more, than that Lucia (at the length sole heir to her father and grand-father) had to her third husband Ranulph, the third E. of Chester of that name; who by Maud his mother being also nearly allyed to the famous E. Leofrik, and this Marriage (as the descent sheweth) had title fair enough to the lands and honour of her grand-father, father, and brothers had not the Conq. sword disposed thereof otherwise. But, it seems, that though the same Ranulph was the next heir in blood likewise to Hugh (commonly called Lupus) E. of Chester, after the decease of Earl Richard without issue, yet did he not obtain the possession of that Earldom (whereof this City was afterwards reputed part) but by purchase from King H. 1. viz. giving up all the inheritance of her the said Lucia; and not onely so, but a round summe of money, which was not all payd of a good while after: for I find that, in 5. Steph. Ranulph Earl of Chester, his son, was certified to be indebted to the King a thousand pounds de debito patris sui, pro terra Hugonis Comitiss, as the Record expresseth.

Having thus stated the succession of this Earldom from the noble Leofrik, I shall pass by the story of those Earls, and onely take notice of what relates to them as touching this place, where where they had an eminent seat, bearing the name of a Castle in those elder times. Wherein I find 2, that Ranulph the first, before specified, caused the Chappells of Allestey, Ansty, Shulton, & Wipkin (all hamlets then within the precincts of Cobentre) to be built, and that Ranulph his son, (commonly called Gernons,) who was a man of great action in that turbulent time of King Stephens reign, taking part with Maud the Empreiss and her son Henry Duke of Normandy (afterwards K. by the name of H. 2.) to whom he was by affinity near allyed (having wedded Maud daughter of Rob. Consul. E. of Glouc. one of the base sons to K. H. 1. brother by the fathers side to the said Empreiss) being repuls'd at Lincoln, halted to his Castle here at Cobentre; of which finding the K. forces posselt, he presently rays'd a strong Fort to besiege them; whereof the K. being advertis'd, he made all the speed he could to relieve it: but in that attempt many of his men were slain, and himself wounded; yet after a while having gotten more strength, and adventuring again, he routed the Earl, who escap't not without divers wounds.

Some great injury had this Earl done, it seems, to Walter Durdent B. of Chester, for which he dyed excommunicate: for it appears^d, that B. Hugh, his son, with Maud his Countess gave the village of Stibichale, adjoining to Cobentre, with a mill next to the Park, and some other grounds thereabouts to the said B. and his successors, for his absolution and the health of his soul in recompence of that damage. Which Hugh, being one of those that rose in rebellion against K. H. 2. in 18. of his reign, on the part of young Henry, so animated his tenants here at Cobentre, that they took up Armes on his behalf; for which they were put to fine f in 21. H. 2. But, that he was a munificent friend to the Monks of this place, what I have said in my Story of the Priory will manifest. It seems, that the Cobentre-men, for their disloyall actions before pointed at, had their libertyes seised on by the K. which were not fully restored to them till after the death of the said Hugh: for I find, that in 28. H. 2. they gave 8 xx. marks for the K. confirmation of them.

To which Earl succeeded Ranulph, the last of that name; whose respects were so much to this place, that he confirm'd^b to his Burgesies here (for so in his Charter he styles them) that they should well and quietly hold all their possessions in free Burgage, as they did in his fathers time, or any of his ancestors. Granting likewise to them all such freedoms as the Burgesies of Lincoln enjoy'd; and prohibiting all his Constables and officers from impleading them at the court of his Castle; but that they should have a Portmote, (id est a Town-court) of their own, in which they might freely hold plea of all things to him the said Earl or themselves belonging: and choose some one man among themselves well skill'd in the laws and customes, who in his stead should be Judge over them, and dealing impartially might do him equall right. And if any one should happen to fall into the said Earls mercy, that he should be amerç'd by his Bayliff and Burgesies of the Court. And whatsoever Merchants they should bring thither for the advantage of the town, that they might reside peaceably there without being injur'd or unjustly impleaded. And if any forrein Merchant should deal unfittingly, he to make satisfaction for it in the Portmote, in the presence of the Judge. To which Charter were witnesses Roger Constable of Chester, Rob. de Mohaut, Steward, Raph de Meisnilwarin and divers others.

Hereunto also did K. H. 2. add his Confirmation; in which are these particulars by way of enlargement; viz. that if any of them should happen to make a forfeit to the Earl, he should be acquit thereof for xii. d. And if by the testimony of his neighbours he were not able to pay so much, they to qualify the sum to the measure of his ability: As also that the said Burgesies should not be lyable to lend unto the said Earl, or those that belong to him any Rent, or annuall payment, but upon condition that their Cattell might be in safety. And lastly whosoever should come to inhabit there, that from the day of his beginning to build for two years following, to be free from all payments whatsoever.

And in 2. H. 3. did this Earl procure a Charter from the K. for an yearly Faire here, to begin on the feast-day of the holy Trinity, and to continue for 8. days.

But dying without issue, he left his 4. sisters or their children his heirs (as the Pedegree sheweth) whereof Mabel, the 2. marry'd to Will. de Albany E. of Arundell; who being dead before the E. her brother, and so likewise Will. E. of Arundell her eldest son; Hugh de Albany her second son (then Earl) came to share in that great inheritance; unto whom this town of Cobentre was in partition^a assigned for his capitall Seat. And of Kts. fees, in this County, these^m; viz. Henry de Hastings 2. Will. de Hardreshull 1. In Kingsbury 1. in Eccleshale half one, In Ansty as much; In Allestpath the 4. part, In Wipkin the 8. part; and in Willerton the 4. part: but the names of those that then held them I forbear here to mention, having specified them in the particular places.

Which Hugh lived not above x. years after: for on the Nones of May 1243. (27. H. 3) he departed this life, Cum jam vix metas adolescentia pertransisset saith M. Paris, and was bury'd in the Priory of Wymandham in Norm. of his ancestors foundation; leaving^a a great inheritance to his 4. sisters, or their descendants: of which Mabel the eldest, marry'd to Rob. de Tatshall, Isabell to John Fitz-Alan, Nicholas to Rog. Somery, and Cecily to Rog. Montalt: so that in the next year following, viz. 28. H. 3. partition^a being made of the possessions so descended to them, the same Cecily had the Castle and mannour of Rising in Norm. with our Cobentre, and many other great Lordships for her part.

Which Rog. de Montalt was one of the Earl of Chester's Barons and Seneschall^m of Chester; and in 30. H. 3. had a Charter^x of Free-warren granted to him in all his demesn lands, dat. 26. Martii. But in 33. H. 3. I find, that Geff. de Langley (of whom I shall speak in Witley) had a great suite with him for diverting the stream of the River in Cobentre out of its antient course. In 34. H. 3. intending a voyage to the Holy-Land, and wanting money for his support therein, he was furnish'd with a very large summe by the Monks of Cobentre. In consideration whereof he, with the before specified Cecily his wife, of whose inheritance this fair Lordship was, joyn'd together in the sale^a of it; as also of the advouson of S. Mich. Church, and all the Chappells thereto belonging unto the said Monks in fee-ferme. In which sale were excepted cepted to them and their heirs, their mannour-house at Cheplemoze, with the Park inclosed, and the Religious-house of Friers-Minors situate near the said Park; with free liberty also to the said Roger and his heirs, whensoever they should come in person to Cobentre for hunting and hauking within the precincts of the said mannour.

And likewise excepting the homage and services of Gilbert de Segrave in Caloudon, Will. de Olney in Ashull, Vitalis de Folkehill in Folkehill, Walter D'eyvill in Whitley, Stoke, and Cobentre, Rob. de Stoke in Stoke, Miles Gerbold in Whitley, and Hugh de Loges in Sow, and their heirs; with all Reliefs, Eschaets, and other duties in respect of those lands. And also excepting the homage and services of Hugh Despencer in Lughtbrough, Raph Bracebrigge in Bynnesburg, Will. le Buteler in Eccehall, and Folkehill, and their heirs, Rob. Tusser in Bereffley, and of Wido fil. Roberti: James de Audeley in Folkehill, and Eccehall, Walter de Langley in Wpkin, Tho. le Ireyes in Anky, Tho. de Nevill and Walter de Coventre in Stoke; Gilb. de Preston, John le Pover, and Alexander D'eyvill in Lackley, and their heirs; with all Reliefs, Eschaets, &c. to the same lands belonging: And all military services, Reliefs &c. wheresoever, within the Realm of England belonging to the said mannour of Cobentre.

And excepting to all his Freeholders such liberty as they had heretofore used to enjoy, either in the woods or mannour of Cobentre, so that they should not be disturbed by the said Prior and Covent, or their successors. Excepting likewise the Hospitall of Sponne for Lepers: as also, that the said Rog. and Cecily and their heirs, whensoever they should come and reside there, might have sufficient wood for fellow, and to make into Charcoale for their own use, without wast; and for pales to repair the inclosed Park, as often as need should require, by the oversight and delivery of the Foresters belonging to the said Prior and Covent. And that the Friers of St. John's Hospitall, in Cobentre, should have in the woods before mentioned one cart load every week by oversight of the said Foresters. Other reservations there are, but these which I have mentioned are the most memorable.

In consideration of all which the said Prior and Covent were to pay yearly unto the same Rog. and Cecily and their heirs at the mannour-house of Cheplemoze before mentioned c.li. sterling; viz. on the Ostaves of St. Andrew, the Ostaves of S. Mary in March, the Ostaves of S. John B. and the Ostaves of S. Michael; and x. marks annually for the Nuns of Wolestworth, at Easter and Michaelmas by even portions, under the penalty of x. li. and a clause for distress.

And besides a Fine^b levied in the same 34. year of H. 3. by the said Roger and Cecily for warranty of the premisses, so granted, did the said Cecily in her widowhood, by her deed^c of Release quit all her interest in the said mannour, according to the tenor of the before specified grant: As also in the Hospitall and Chappell of Sponne (sometime pertaining to the Abby of Wasingwerk in Flint, as her said Release imports.)

The next thing, which falls out in order of time to be taken notice of, in relation to this place, is, that here^d it was, that those persons elected for the determination upon what terms such as were disinherited for their activeness in that notable Rebellion against K. H. 3. should redeem their lands, met, and resolv'd thereupon. Which Decree of theirs, is notwithstanding called Dictum de Kenilworth, in regard it was then publish'd in the K. Camp at that famous six months siege of the Castle (as in Kenilworth I have already intimated.)

After this; viz. in 3. E. 1. upon the extent^e of this mannour after the death of Rob. de Montalt's son to the before mentioned Roger, the mannour-house called Cheplemoze, with the Park and Mill in the Park, were valued at 5. marks per annum; the Rent of Assise belonging thereto 39 li. 09. s. 07. d. and the perquisites of Court 6. s. 8. d. And in 13. E. 1. had the Burgesies and Inhabitants here, the K. Letters Pat. bearing date 3. Aug. giving them authority to take Toll of all vendible commodities, that should be brought hither for the space of 3. years, from Michaelmas next ensuing, towards their charge of paving the town; viz. for every Horse-load of Corn a half-penny; for Every Horse, Mare, Oxe, or Cow, a half-penny: And likewise upon every thing els, which for brevities sake I omit. But it seems, that xx. years afterwards this work of paving was not fully done; for in 23. of the same K. reign they had another^b Pat. to take Toll upon the like Commodities, and granted Balivis & probis hominibus de Cobentre, whereas the other was Burgensibus & probis hominibus; which shews that the originall of their Bayliffs, was betwixt the 13. and 33. E. 1. though the very time, when they were constituted, be not recorded.

After which, viz. in 9. E. 2. the Prior of Cobentre and Rob. de Montalt were certified to be Lords of this place, with its members: which Rob. (being brother and heir to Roger, son to the last mentioned Robert) with Emme his wife, in 1. E. 3. levied a Fine^c of all their interest here, by the name of the mannour of Cheplemoze with the appurtenances; 96. li. 6. s. 8. d. yearly Rent, and the services of the Prior of Cobentre; thereby entayling the same upon the heirs male of his body, and for want of such issue on Isabell Q. of England (Mother to K. E. 3.) during her life; and after her decease on John of Eltham, brother to the said King, and the heirs of his body, and for lack of such issue on the said K. Edward and his heirs for ever. For settling whereof as abovesaid, he had the Kings license^d dated at Peterborough 8. April.

Hitherto have I taken notice of the most remarkable passages touching Cobentre in generall: but now that I am come to the vesting of Cheplemoze in the royall line, it will be most proper (I conceive) to observe what els is notable in relation thereto, in order of time; reserving what I have further to say of Cobentre in generall to be afterwards spoke by it self. First then, that the situation of this mannour is upon the Southern side of the town, the Map, to those that know not the place will demonstrate: but as to the antiquity of its name can I say little, having not met with any mention thereof till 34. H. 3. that Rog. de Montalt and Cecily his wife do, in their grant of Cobentre to the Monks, except it by the name of their mansion, or mannour-house of Cheplemoze: yet, that the seat, which the E. of Chester had in that very place, was much elder, is not to be doubted; in regard 'tis apparent, that their Castle (concerning the siege whereof in K. Steph. time by E. Ran. the second, I have already spoke) stood there. For in that ample Charter^m made by Hugh Keviliok E. of Chester to the Monks of Cobentre, in H. 2. time, in pointing out the boundaryes, dividing the Earls part and the Priors asunder; he traces the same from S. Mich.-Church-yard, and so, juxta litem portam mei Castell, are his words. Now, that this Gate he means was not far off Cheplemoze, the place where it stood doth sufficiently testify; being at the end of that passage now called Cyep-ster-lane, entering into the great High-street, and retaining the said name of Broad-pate to this day. From which testimony may also be observed, that the circuit of the outer ward to that Castle was of a large extent, considering that it did reach to far North towards the town.

Having said thus much as to its situation, and antiquity, I shall proceed with the succession thereof; wherein I observe, that K. E. 3. having in the Parl. begun at Wesmin. on the munday next after the feast of S. Matthew the Apostle in xi. year of his reign, advanced Edward his eldest Son (commonly called the Black Prince) unto the Dukedom of Coynwall, did (inter alia) for his better support of that honour, by his Charterⁿ bearing date 1. Oct. the same year, settle upon him the reversion of this mannour, after the decease of Q. Isabel before specified, (John of Eltham E. of Coynwall, tenant in remainder, being then dead without issue) to hold to him the said D. and to the eldest sons of him and his heirs Kings, of England, Dukes of that place successively, and not to be severed from the said Dukedom; upon the death, or not existency of such Dukes, to revert unto the Crown together therewith. Wherunto the said Q. Isabel, by her Letters^o Pat. dated 10. Dec. in the same year, did signify her assent; and in regard of her estate therein, made attourment.

After which, were there divers great privileges granted to this place; viz. in 18. E. 3. that the tenants to the said Q. should, during her life, be free from pavage, passage, paage, lestage, stallage, tallage, carriage, pesage, pikage, and terage, throughout all the Kings dominions: and that she should, within the precincts thereof have Return of writts, as also felons goods, Fines for trespasses and for licences of concord; amerciements, redemptions, issues forfeited, year, day and waft, with divers other. And the next year following did the same K. further grant⁹ to the before specified Q. during her life, and to the said Prince, in reversion, and his heirs, a Court-Leet within this mannour, with power to hold pleas of all such things as usually were determined before the Justices of Assise for the County of Warwick: and likewise to have Return of writts, goods of felons and fugitives, within the precincts thereof; with a gaol for the safe custody of felons or other transgressors.

And in 21. E. 3. had one Will. le Galeys licence^e to found a Chantry here, consisting of three Priests; whereof one to be the Warden; and to build a Chappell there in honour of the Blessed Virgin, with a convenient mansion for them: as also to amortize thereunto five mess. lying in Cobentre. Which Priests were to celebrate divine service daily for the good estate of the said K. E. 3. Q. Isabell, his mother, Edw. Prince of Wales, and of the said Will. le Galeys during their lives; and for the health of their Souls afterwards; as also for the Souls of Edward late King of England (the K. father) and of John late E. of Coynwall

(his brother) and all the faithfull deceased. After which, viz. in 50. E. 3. I find, that the said Prince gave 123. mess: 6. cottages, and 2. gardens lying here in Cobentre, which were parcell of this his mannour of Cheplemoze, unto the Abby of Wale-Rogall in Cheshire of Cisterc. Monks, founded by the K. his father in 11. of his reign. And the same year did he dy^e seized of this mannour, leaving Ric. his son and heir 9. years of age and a half (afterwards King by the name of R. 2.) in whose days the Park here was not without Deer, it seems; for in 8. of his reign, granting^m to one Tho. de Quinton the keepership of its pasturage for 6. years, paying c. s. per annum to his Exchequer, he reserv'd sufficient grasse for them.

In which 8. year, the walls on the South part of this City being not built, the Mayor, Bayliffs, and commonalty thereof humbly besought the K. to give them leave that they might go forward with that work (concerning which I shall speak more fully anon) who thereupon granted license^e to them to do; on condition that they should include within their walls his said mannour place, standing within the Park of Cheplemoze, as the Record expresseth: which Park was a woody-ground in those times: for, in 11. R. 3. the K. assigned⁹ Ric. Clerk, then keeper thereof, to cause as much underwood there to be cut down as would make 3000. fagots, and with the money arising by the sale of them to repair the pales. And in 9. H. 3. Rob. Castell the K. Steward of this mannour, was appointed⁹ to cause 12. oaks within it, to be fallen for repair of the House; as also more underwood to the value of 40. l. for defray of such charges as he should be at therein. After this, viz. in 16. H. 8. I find, that the K. made a lease^e for 21. years of this his mannour, with the herbage of the park and conyes there, to Geffrey Whalley Prior of Walscroft in Leicester-shire for 21. years, for the rent of 13. li. 09. s. 05. d. ob.

And in 3. E. 6. did that K. by his Letters^o Pat. bearing date 19. Julii, grant it with the said Park unto John E. of Warwick and his heirs, as being part of the possessions annexed to the Duchy of Coynwall (by Charter, and not in Parliament) to hold in Capite. Which John, on the 12. of Aug. following, made a lease^e of the premises unto the Mayor, Bayliffs and Commonalty of this City for the terme of 99. years, to the uses and intents following; viz. that they and their successors, for the relief of the poor of the said City, should yearly take to pasture in the said Park, the number of 80. kyne or heyfers, and 20. geldings of such poor Inhabitants of the said City and Suburbs, as should not have elsewhere nigh thereto sufficient pasture; paying yearly for every Cow or heyfer 1. d. and for every gelding 2. d. But after his attainder, which hapned in 1. Maria (as in Warwick I have shewed) the said Mayor, Bayliffs and Commonalty, by the mediation of Rob. E. of Letc. (son to the said John) obteyn'd a grant^s thereof from Q. Eliz. to hold to them and their successors for ever in fee ferme (the Rent reserved being ix. li. per annum) whereupon they covenanted^s with the said Earl to observe and perform the trusts before specified, for the behalf of the poor Inhabitants, as by an Indenture dated 4. Apr. 10. Eliz. appeareth.

HAVING now finished my discourse of Cheplemoze, I return to Cobentre it self; of which the last observable matter that I took notice was touching the paving thereof in 33.E.1. To the end therefore that it may appear by what degrees it ascended to that beauty and strength in the walls and other buildings of note : as also to those priviledges which it now enjoyeth, I shall in order of time proceed to declare.

In 2. E. 3. the Monks of Cobentre, with the inhabitants thereof obteyn'd a Pat.^b for taking Toll of all vendible commodities that should be brought thither to sell for six years, towards their charges of inclosing the same. And at the request of John of Eltham E. of Cornwall (who had an estate in reversion in the mannour of Cheplemoze, as I have there declared) for two years more after the end of those six : upon condition that the said Earl should not be charged towards building of the gates. Which Pat. bears date at Leicester 6. Jan. the same year : The particular proportions of Toll little differing from those, which were assessed upon every thing for pavage, as is before intimated. After this, in the 6. year of the said K. the Inhabitants of this town had license to erect a Common Conduitt, of xx. foot long and x. foot broad in any of the streets thereof that they should think fittest for their conveniency and benefit. And, within 2. years following, for their better encouragement in prosecuting their affairs, obteyn'd a grant to them, their heirs and successors of freedom from Toll, pavage, pontage, and murage for all their merchandise throughout the K. dominions : in consideration whereof he received a fine of ten marks from them. But it had not then the reputation of a City, or a Borough ; and the Record gives this reason, eo quod in Quintis-decimis Regi Concessis non contribuit ultra summam c. marcarum.

In this K. reign it was, that Cobentre grew up to a very flourishing condition, as by what I have said, and shall further shew, appeareth : for in 18. E. 3. at the instance of Q. Isabel (who had an estate in Cheplemoze for life) as also in consideration that the reversion thereof was vested in Edw. then Prince of Wales, D. of Cornwall, and E. of Chester, the K. by his Letters Pat.^b bearing date 20. Jan. did make it a Corporation, consisting of a Mayor and Bayliffs, which the Inhabitants should have power to choose and make out of themselves yearly : who, taking their oath according to the accustomed manner in the like cases, might from thenceforth do all things appertaining to those offices. And that they, their heirs and successors for ever, should thenceforth also have power to hold plea, as well of trespasses, contracts, and agreements, as of all other things hapning within the town. And for the better tranquillity of the said Inhabitants, and of all merchants repaying thither, the K. then granted, that from thenceforth there should be a Common Seal, by his Royall direction, consisting of two pieces, according to custom, for Recognizances of debts there, according to the form of the Statutes-merchant made and published : the greater part whereof to remain in the custody of the Major for the time being, and the lesser in the hands of a certain Clerk to be there deputed by the said K. his heirs and successors according to the tenure of the said Statutes. And that the said Major and Clerk from thenceforth should receive Recognizances of debts according to the tenor of those Statutes : as also to give in charge, and commit them to due execution. And lastly, that there should be a Prison made in that part of the Town belonging to the said Q. for the chastizing of malefactors there taken ; wherof the Mayor and Bayliffs for the time being to have alwaies the custody and charge.

The xii persons that purchased these liberties for Cobentre, being Nicholas Michell, Henry Dodenhale, Walter Whitweb, Roger Hunt, Will. Trymelei, Geffrey Freberne, John Rushall, Rob. Thymbler, Ric. Kerseley, Will. Walsale, Maurice Norfolk, and Will. Wellyngbright. Whereupon, about two years after, they elected a Mayor, viz. John Ward ; and after him continued the like yearly choyce, as by the Catalogue of them, which I have at the end of my discourse touching this City inserted, may appear. And in the year 1355. 29 E. 3. did they begin to build the walls (by vertue of the K. license in 2 E. 3. before mentioned) Richard Stoke, at that time Mayor, laying the first stone at the gate, called New-pate, where they began the work : but whether they did vigorously proceed therein, I cannot say, rather supposing that they were restrained : For afterwards, when Edw. the black Prince came to enjoy that interest here, which was settled upon him by the entail before mentioned ; having granted the same to the Mayor, Bayliffs, and Commonalty thereof, to hold in Fee-ferm (for so doth that Pat.^b dated at Westm. 20 Nov. 37 E. 3. import) he gave them license to enclose this City (by that name it is there called) with a wall of lime and stone embattailed, to hold to them, their heirs and successors, of him the before specified Prince and his heirs for ever. Whereupon, the next ensuing year, these good men of Cobentre, considering with themselves the great charge that would be required in thus fortifying the Town, obtained license (3 Nov.) from the K. to tax all the Tradesmen and Inhabitants thereof, according to their estates and faculties ; and to collect all such sums of money as should be levied for that purpose. For effecting whereof accordingly, the Mayor and Bayliffs then being, with Thomas de Nassington, Will. Wolfe, and Will. Corby, were appointed Assessors : out of which tax were excepted the lands and goods of all Ecclesiastick persons.

And to the end, that the great charge, which they were to undergo in making these walls, might be the better born amongst them, the K. being very desirous to further the work, granted a Commission (dated 3 Julii, 40 of his reign) unto the Mayor and Bayliffs then being, together with Wil. Catesby, Nich. Michell, Will. Botoner, Ric. de Stoke, Henry de Dovedale, and John del Tofte, giving them power to levy and receive these customs following, viz. of every tun of wine 2 s. of every quarter of malt 4 d. of every Ox 4 d. of every Hog and Calf a peny, and every Sheep a farthing, sold in this Town for the space of 5 years then next ensuing, towards the alleviating their charge. But this assessment much pinching the Victuallers, about 4 years after they made a grievous complaint to the K. alledging, that they were almost undone by it. Whereupon, by his Pat.^b dated 14 Febr. 44 of his reign, he revoked the former Commission ; commanding nevertheless, that the Merchants and other rich men should be taxed with the meaner sort, according to their several abilities towards the support of that cost in building those walls.

That Cobentre then flourish'd very much, may be be discerned by so great and costly a work as this of the Walls, Gates, and Towers still remaining, and second to none in England, appears to be : as also by that incomparable structure of St. Michael's steeple, begun in ann. 1373. 47 E. 3.

 Henry Clerke being Mayor, and finished in ann. 1395. 18 R. 2. the year of Richard Lichfeld's Mayoralty. Neither did it want any advantage that by the K. favour could well be had : for, to the end that they might securely enjoy all those liberties and privileges granted by K. H. 2. H. 3. Edw. 2. and E. 3. which are together contained in the Charters ^b of 15 and 20 ^c of E. 3. K. Ric. 2. in 1 of his reign, made them an ample confirmation ^d : and not onely so, but in the same year did constitute ^e John Percy, Adam Bonner, Henry de Keel, Simon de Lichfeld, John de Herdmyke, and John Tostes, Justices for conservation of the peace within the Town of Coventre, with power to hear and determine matters of felony and trespass. And moreover, was out of his Princely goodness so indulgent to them, that by his Pat. ^f dated 4 Maii, 8 of his reign, he ratified the Charter of license made by K. Edw. his Grandfather in 37 E. 3. for building and embattailing the walls : and thereby granted them liberty to dig as much stone in his Park of Cheylesmore, as should suffice for so much of them as includes the Mannour-house of Cheylesmore, with the making of one Gate near the said park adjoyning to the House of Friers-minors (which is now called the Gray-frier-pate. And likewise, that towards the support of that charge, the Mayor and Bayliffs should for the space of 5 years then next ensuing, have his Ferm of sealing woollen cloaths here, to the value of xxiiii l. sterling.

 And in 11 of his reign, vouchsafed such freedom to the Mayors, after that time to be elected there, that they should not go before the Barons of his Exchequer for to take their oathes : neither ^h that the Mayor, nor any of the Commonalty should from thenceforth be put to collect Tenths, Fifteens, or other taxes out of the compass of the Town. And in 15 of his reign bestow'd ⁱ upon them as much stone out of his Quarries in the park at Cheylesmore, as served to build the great Gate in Spon-street near his Chappel of Wabelake. And lastly, towards the end of his reign, by the assent and mature deliberation with his Council, (as the words of his Charter ^k import) did he grant and confirm to the said Mayor, Bayliffs, &c. and their successours, that they might make improvement and commodity of all the Gates, Towers, Walls and Bridges about the Town; and of whatsoever purpessures, as well in lands as waters, made or to be made : as also of all the waft ground within the following limits. viz. from Rabets-Ash to the Mill called Passyngtons-milne; and from thence to the corner of the stone wall of Cheylesmore-park : and from thence by the wall and pale of the park to Baronesswell; and thence to the house of John atte Tate; and so, leaving the Mannour and Park of Cheylesmore, with the Church of the Friers-minors. on the left hand, from thence to the corner of Crabtree-scild; and so under Crabtree-scild by a certain high way unto Spon-Church; thence to Dudmanes-well; and thence to the Church and Churchyard of St. Nich. thence to Wottercrosse; thence to Barnall-quarelle; thence to Gosford-green, and Rabets-Ash before mentioned. All which was so given to them towards the repair of their walls, and payment of the Fee-ferm, and other charges incident unto them.

By which Patent the Mayor, Recorder, and 4 of the most substantial Inhabitants, had power to enquire of, hear, and determine all causes and complaints that might concern the office of Justices of peace touching Labourers and Artificers; so that the Justices within the County of Warwick should not intermeddle in this Town nor the Suburbs thereof in any of those cases. And that they the said Mayor, Bayliffs, &c. should have the benefit of all fines, issues and profits accruing by their said Justiceship, as fully as any of their predecessors ever had; with all other customs and privileges granted to them by the same K. progenitors.

The next observable passage relating to this City, is, that in 21 R. 2. the lists were here ^a appointed and set, for deciding that difference by ^a Gosford green. combat, which was betwixt Henry D. of Heref. and John D. of Norfolk. the K. himself being then present. The coming of which Dukes accordingly, viz. the D. of Hereford from Baginton-castle, and Norfolk from Caldon, I have in those places already toucht.

But in K. H. 4. time, I find nothing memorable, excepting that the K. held a Parliament ^l here in ann. 1404. 6 of his reign; the place ^m of that Convention being a great Chamber in the Priory. Wherunto, by special precept to the Shiriffs in their several Counties, no Lawyer, nor any person skilled in the Laws, was to come : which Parliament was ever since called Parliamentum indolentium : and well it might be so; for ⁿ these, taking into consideration the K. supply with money for defence of the Realm, in respect of the then imminent danger from the Scots, Welsh, &c. concluded to do it by devesting the Church of its temporal possessions. Whereupon there grew a hot contest betwixt the Clergy and Laity; the Kts. for the Shires alledging, that they had often served the K. in person against his Enemies, spent their estates, and exposed themselves to manifold perils, whilst the Clergy sate idle at home, and stood him in no stead. To whom the Archb. of Cant. answered, that the Clergy had assisted as much as they, by giving Tenths as often as they gave Fifteens; and that their Tenants, for the number of fees they held, did personally serve in the wars as well as theirs : And that, besides all this, they were not wanting, day nor night, by Masses and Prayers to implore Gods blessing for the K. and all that served him. But the Speaker of the Commons (Sir John Cheyne by name) with a stern countenance said, that he valued not the prayers of the Church. Whereupon the Archb. replied, that it might easily be seen what would become of the Kingdome, when devout addresses to God, wherewith his Divine Majestie was pleased, were set so light by. Much ado there was; but to conclude, the worthy Archb. (viz. Tho. Arundell) standing stoutly for the good of the Church, preserv'd it at that time from the storm impending.

Coventre being thus grown to such a height of splendour by those strong and high walls, with so many beautifull Gates, stately Turrets, and other eminent Buildings, as also by the privileges and liberties granted thereto from so many Kings; and now of late honoured with the K. presence in his Parl. there held (as I have said) raised no little joy.

joy in the hearts of its wealthy Merchants, as may appear by what I am about to say; who shew'd themselves no niggards of their riches there acquired, further to promote the glory thereof: For in 6 H. 5. I find^o, that John Leder, and John Efterton, both of Cobentre, gave no less than 20 mess. John Preston one mess. and 20 s. rent: and the said John Leder, Ric. Southam, Laurence Cook, and Will. Dilcock, 25 mess. 27 acres of land, and 13 s. rent, all lying within the precincts of Cobentre, to the Mayor and Commonalty thereof, and their successours, towards the support of such charges as they were like to undergo for the publick affairs of this place. And in 2 H. 6. Will. Babington, and Will. Botoner, taking into consideration the charge in repair of those Walls, and other necessary disbursements for the general advantage of this Corporation, bestow'd another messuage on the said Mayor and Commonalty, and their successours, for the uses abovesaid. At which time the said K. confirm'd^o unto them the Charter of K. Edw. 3. for the Mayor and Bayliffs, with other their liberties and jurisdictions.

But above all the favours vouchsafed by former Kings, that of the same K. H. 6. in 30 of his reign, must have precedence: which K. ob specialem & internam affectionem, quam erga Civitatem sive Villam nostram de Cobentre; ac Majorum, Ballivos, & Communitatem ejusdem Civitatis, sive Villa, gerimus, &c. (for those are the words of his Charter^o) granted, that the said City with the Villages and Hamlets of Radford, Keresley, Folkeshull, Ecclethale, Ancsty, Calwedon, Wykene, Benley, la Mode-end, Stoke, Byggynge, Whittlesey, Wynley, Ashull, Bozewell, Harnhale, and Whaberley; as also part of Sow, and that part of Styrbichale lying within the liberties of Cobentre; all which were within the precincts of the County of Warwick, should, from the feast of St. Nicholas (viz. 6 Dec.) next ensuing the date of his said Charter, be an entire County of it self, incorporate both in deed and name, distinct and altogether separate from the said County of War. for ever, and no parcel of the same County; but from thenceforth called the County of the City of Cobentre for ever. And that the Mayor and Bayliffs of the said City should thenceforth also for ever be elected at the same time and place, and according to the same manner and form as they had used to be in the reign of K. Edw. 3. of famous memory, by vertue of his Letters Pat. or in the time of any of the K. progenitors. And that the Bayliffs of the said City, from the morrow after the feast-day of S. Nic. then next ensuing, should be Shiriffs of the County of the said City for ever: and yet nevertheless, that they should still execute the office of Bayliffs according to the form and effect of the franchises and liberties granted by any of his said progenitors, and before that time used. And that they which were to be Shiriffs of the said City, as aforesaid, should in all future times after they had that office, take their oaths before the Mayor for the time being, and no other, and in the Guild-hall of the said City, and not eliwere, according to due form, for the just and faithfull execution of that office within the County of the said City. And that the Mayor for the time being, by his Letters Pat. under the Seal of his Office, should forthwith certifie into the K. Court of Chancery the names of such Shiriffs so sworn as aforesaid: which Shiriffs once every month, upon the Tuesday, should hold a Court for ever; executing all such power and jurisdiction within their liberties as other Shiriffs within their Bayliwicks use to do; all Writs and Precepts, for the future, to be directed to them that had used to be directed to the Shiriffs of Warwicksh. and executed by them in case the said City and Hamlets had not been so made a County of it self. Which Shiriffs should annually make their accounts in the Exchequer before the Lord Treasurer and Barons, or before the Barons, touching the issues of their said office, or by their Attorneys.

And moreover, that the Coroner of the said City, and his successours, should thenceforth be Coroners of the County of the said City for ever; and execute that office in as ample manner as any other Coroner within any County of the Realm had used to do. And that the said Coroners for the time being, should be also Clerks for taking Recognizances of debts there, according to the form of the Statute for Merchants made and provided, the lesser part of the Seal for taking such Recognizances to be alwaies in their custody.

And further, by the same Charter did the said K. grant, that the Mayor and his successours within the said City and Hamlets, should exercise the office of Clerke of the Market there; and levy and receive all issues and profits arising thereby, to the use of them the said Mayor, Bayliffs and Commonalty of the said City for ever: As also the office of Steward and Marshall of the K. Household. And lastly, that they the said Mayor, Bayliffs and Commonalty, with all the Inhabitants of this City, should be free from Toll, passage, pontage, murage, and pavage, for all their goods and merchandize throughout the whole Realm of England and Ireland, and enjoy whatsoever privileges and franchises they or any of their predecessors had used to do. Which ample Charter bears date at Westm. 26 Nov. 30 of his reign, and was confirm'd^o by K. Edw. 4.

Having thus shew'd by what degrees Cobentre arrived to this height of greatness and freedom, I will proceed with what I have further found relating thereto, in general: whereof the first which is remarkable, was that Parl. 1 in 38 H. 6. wherein Ric. D. of York, Ric. E. of Salisbury, Ric. E. of Warwick, with Edw. E. of March (afterwards K. by the name of E. 4.) and many others, were attainted; the Lords House being^o then in the Chapter-house of the Priory: which Parliament by some of our Hist. is called Parliamentum diabolicum*, the Acts made in it being nulled by the succeeding Parl. Next, that in 7 E. 4. the K. and Qu. kept their Christmas here: and in 9 E. 4. that Ric. Widvile E. Rivers, with John his son, were beheaded^o upon Bosford-green, on the East part of this City. But how the same K. Edw. was afterwards foyled by the Lancastrians, and forc'd to fly beyond Sea, and of his landing in Wolverness, ann. 1470. 10 E. 4. I refer to the relation of our Historians, and shall prosecute the mentioning of what else concerns this place; which is, that the K. being also landed and advanced to Pork, Ric. E. of Warwick (then turn'd to the other side) came^o hither from London upon Midlent Sunday, and brought with him store of Ordnance, and other warlike provisions, staying here till after Palm-sunday, within which time K. Edw. came to Leicester, and thence to Combe-

The Prospect
Couentre Crosse

Abby, and on the morrow to Cobentre towns end: but finding that the E. of Warwick kept this City against him, he passed by, and lodging at Warwick that night, marcht thence to London. After which it was not long ere he met with his enemies near Barnet, and vanquishd them, where the stout E. of Warwick lost his life: So that K. Edw. by this Victory, and that near Leekesbury shortly after, having utterly subdued all his opposers, came to Cobentre; and remembering the disloyalty of these Citizens in adhering to the E. of Warwick against him, took the Sword from the Mayor (whose name at that time was John Bett) seizing their liberties and franchises; whereupon they gave 500 marks fine for the re-enjoyment of them, and render of the Sword. Touching which Sword, the first mention that I find, is in 7 R. 2. viz. that it was then carried after the Mayor (whose name was Jayn Deister) but in 11 R. 2. before the Mayor, scil. John Tosse; and so (for ought I have seen to the contrary) hath been ever since. About 4 years after which reconciliation so made with K. E. 4. I find, that he came with his Q. to Cobentre, and kept S. George's feast there (ann. 1474. 14 E. 4.) the Prince having come before him, and received a present of Cl. and a Cup from the Citizens, at which time he was one of the Godfathers to the Mayors child.

The next thing of note is, that K. H. 7. after that signal Victory at Bolworth-field, where R. 3. was slain, came hither with his Army, and lodg'd at the Mayors house (by name Robert Onley) whom he Knighted; at which time the City presented him with Cl. and a Cup.

The Cross.

I Now come to speak of that stately Cross here, being one of the chief things wherein this City most glories; which for workmanship and beauty is inferior to none in England: the building whereof was begun in ann. 1541. 33 H. 8. and finished in ann. 1544. 36 H. 8. as by an old MS Chronol. of the Mayors appeareth: but the name of its Founder is now utterly lost, for ought that these Citizens can tell of it. To the end therefore, that they may not still continue ignorant of so eminent a Benefactor, I shall here, by the help of that judicious Antiquary (my worthy Friend) Gervase Hollies of Osimesby in Com. Linc. Esq; revive his memory. It was Sir Will. Hollies Kt. sometime Lord Mayor of London, and son to Thomas Hollies of Stoke near this City (as I have evidently found amongst the Registers in Gildhall; and not son to Will. Hollies of London Baker, as Stow hath erroneously affirmed.) Who bearing a special affection to this City, in regard he was born so near, gave order for the structure thereof, as the words of his Testament* (bearing date 25 Dec. 33 H. 8.) which I have here inserted; do import. — And furthermore, I give and bequeath unto the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Cobentre, and to the Commons of the same, 100 l. sterling, to the intent and purpose hereafter ensuing, that is to say, to make a new Cross within the said City: whereof delivered in hand to Mr. Warren, Draper of the said City, the 24 day of August last, xx l. in ready money: And also more paid to Mr. Overby the hands of Salt my Baylie of Morall, 70 l. in ready money; and so resteth unpaid Cx l. sterling, which I will and desire my Executors see to be delivered and paid unto the said Mayor and Aldermen of Cobentre aforesaid, to the use and intent aforesaid, within one year after my decease, &c.

This Sir William was father of Sir Will. Hollies of Houghton in the County of Not. Kt. the wonder of his Country for a great and settled hospitality; and of so honest and honourable a nature, that he is yet mentioned in those parts by the name of good Sir William. Which last named Sir Will. was great Grandfather to that learned Gent. before expressd, as also to the present E. of Clare, an. 1638. And having thus taken notice of his munificence in erecting so noble a Monument, I hope the mention of (Eliz.) his Ladies Charity, though the poor of London were the object thereof, will not be thought impertinent, considering that it is not elsewhere taken notice of. Which was, that by her Testament six Almshouses for six poor men or women should be built out of her goods and chattels; and lands to the yearly value of xl. be bought; out of which, weekly, every one of the Almshouse-people should receive 7 d. the remainder to buy coals to make them fires; which was accordingly performed in St. Helens parish by Andrew Jud Alderman of London, and Thomas Scopham (her brother) her Executors: Howbeit hitherto hath it not been publickly known that she was the Foundress, forasmuch as Stow and others do attribute the work wholly to the same Sir Andrew Jud, passing by this pious Lady without any memorial for the same.

In that place where this Cross is now situate, there stood formerly another; which having been set up in ann. 1423. 2 H. 6. was taken down in ann. 1510. (2 H. 8.) but for what reason, I find not.

The next most memorable thing, in order of time, relating to this place, is that purchase by the City, made in 34 H. 8. from the Crown, of much Monastery-land lying in and near thereto, viz. the great Orchard containing 8 acres, and the little Orchard 2 acres: One Rode lying within the precincts of the Priory; a Pool called New-pool, containing 1 acre; a Mess. called the Wote-house, with divers lands thereto belonging; a Wood called St. Cleres-grove, with a Water-mill, and divers particular parcels of land lying in Radford. Certain mess. and lands in Wigging, alias Stoke-Wigging, with a large field called Barnal-field. Divers other grounds called the Stripe, Swan-croft, Watsons-meadow, Parble-field, Windmill-fields, and Crowmote. The mess. and ferm of Hawksbery, and Hawksbery-grove, with a certain Mannour-house there, moated about; as also a number of particular grounds lying in Sow, Folkehill, and Wolpin; together with the House of Friers-minors (commonly called the Gray-friers) with its whole site and circuit. All which, and much more, that for brevity I omit to particularize, were for the sum of 1378 l. 10 s. granted to the Mayor, Bayliffs, and Commonalty, and their successors, by the K. Letters Pat.* dated 19 Julii, 34 of his reign, to be held in Capite by the xx part of a Kts. fee, and paying 7 l. 13 s. 2 d. yearly to the said K. his heirs and successors.

After which time, viz. in 6 E. 6. that the lands and possessions of the Gilds and Chantries came to be disperst, they made the like purchase from the Crown: for, in consideration of the sum of 1315 l. 1 s. 8 d. they had a grant^a of whatsoever belong'd to Corpus-Christi, and the Trinity Gilds: As also to those Chantries, called Dereton's, Forde's, and Wysford's-Chantries (alias, Forde's-Almes-houses) and Copston's-Chantry: together with divers lands lying in Weston, Binsbury, Alspath, Merden, and Gallesby, in the Counties of Warw. and Leic. pertaining to them. And likewise of Shepey's, Hape's, Preston's, Allesley's, Percepe's, Loginton's, and Cellet's-Chantries; with lands in Costozd. street, &c. pertaining to the Chappel of St. George: and divers rents belonging to the Priests of St. Michaels-Church; with lands in Starton given for the maintenance of Obits.

But it was neither the lustre of their beautifull Cross, nor all those large and easy acquisitions, that did any whit balance the loſs this City sustained by the ruine of that great and famous Monastery, and other the Religious-houses, &c. which had so lately preceded: for to so low an ebbe did their trading soon after grow, for want of such concourse of people that numerously resorted thither before that fatal dissolution, that many thousands of the Inhabitants, to seek better livelihoods, were constrain'd to forsake the City: intomuch, as in 3 E. 6. it was represented unto the D. of Somerset, then Protector, by John Hales, a person of great note in those daies, and whose memory is still famous here; that there were not at that time above 3000 Inhabitants, whereas within memory there had been 15000.

To recompence which decay of trade, in 6 E. 6. they obtained a Charter^y for another Faire to be kept here annually, beginning 21 Oct. and to continue two daies after. But, after this time, till 19 Jacobi, I find nothing else memorable that relates to this City in general, other than what I have already mentioned in my discourse of Chep-lesmore. Which King then granted them a most ample confirmation^z of all their former Charters, Liberties, Priviledges, Lands, and Rents. As also, that the House where they usually assemble for their City-affairs should be called the Council-house of the said City: and that those, who then were, or after that time were to be elected thereunto; should be called the Council of the City. And moreover, that the Mayor, Recorder, Bayliffs, and other Officers, should yearly be elected on their Leet-day, to be held within a month after Michaelmas by xxxi persons nominated of those, who have formerly born the principal offices in the City. And likewise, that there should be ten Aldermen in the ten wards, as formerly had used to be: And that the Mayor, Recorder, and those ten Aldermen should be Justices of peace within the same City and County thereof. As also, that the said xxxi persons should have power to tax themselves and all other the Inhabitants within the walls of the said City, to the charge of repairing the said walls; so as alwaies it discharge not those who of right or custome are liable thereto.

By which Pat. had they likewise a grant of two new Faires; one to be held upon the first of April, and the other upon the 16 of August, with such Tolls as are taken in Smethfield, within the suburbs of London. And that they should take Recognizances for the peace, and good behaviour, and for appearance at the Sessions within the said

City. And further, that they should have a second Council consisting of 25 persons, called the Common-Council of the said City, to prepare the affairs thereof for the Mayor and greater Council: And to have the government of such Orphans of Citizens of that City, and of their estates, as shall be commended by their own parents to the tutelage of the Mayor and Aldermen thereof; in which case the Corporation, to secure the Orphans portions to whomsoever that trusts them, and pay six pounds per Centum for their maintenance. And lastly, that the said Mayor, Bayliffs, and Commonalty might have liberty to purchase lands in Mortmayn to the value of 300 l. per annum, to the general behoof of this City; provided, that such lands be not held in Capite, nor Kts. service. Which Pat. bears date 18 Julii, 19 Jac.

Having now done with what concerns the City in general, I will here subjoyn a Catalogue^b of the Mayors thereof.

Sampson Hopkins.

Coming now to speak of that great, and sometime famous Monastery, called the Diory of Co-ventre, (of whose Founder I have already made mention.) which for the antiquity of its foundation, and ample revenues, excelled all other in this County; I shall be bold, before I proceed in the particular story thereof, to digress a little, and take a short view of the original and increase of a Monastick life: as also of the Benedictine Order, whereof this Monastery was.

That the word Monachus, which is derived from the Greek word Μοναχ, signifieth such a one as doth solitariam vitam degere, I need not stand to demonstrate: but who it was that may be said to have been absolutely the first that begun this course of life, I find no direct certainty. Divers ascribe it to the Prophet Samuell; others to Helias and Helysem, that liv'd in poor Cottages and desert places near the River Jordan; and long after them S. John the Baptist: To whom may be added some of the Apostles, as also St. Mark the Evang. and by their example certain others, viz. Paul the Hermite, S. Anthony, S. Hilarion, S. Basil, and S. Hierome: but of these Paul the Hermite was of greatest note for his retired living: who, to avoyd that cruell persecution which ragged under Decius, betook himself to the vast solitary wilderness, where he lived 93 years unknown to any. But in the times of these men they had no certain Rule: for every one being free, regulated himself as he saw best for his spiritual advantage, exercising devout prayers, frequent fastings, hard studies, with mean and slender diet, which they acquired by the labour of their hands, thereby giving great examples of pious living to all posterity. So that S. Anthony is the first unto whom some do chiefly refer the original of this Monastick profession, in regard he first so wonderfully raised up the desires of all to lead this kind of life; and instituted a Rule for Monks, as S. Basil did afterwards in Cyrene, and S. Hilarion in Siria. Which Anthony lived in the desert of Thebes (a part of Egypt) and there built a Mo-

nastry; where, with Sarmatus, Amatus, and Macharius, his disciples, wholly exercising himself in devout prayers, he fed upon nothing but bread and water; being so famous for his holiness, that Helena the mother of Constantine, commended her self and her son by Letters to him, and dyed in the wilderness in the year of Christ CCCLX. aged 105 years.

But about 166 years after the death of Anthony, one Benedictus Nursinus, born in Umbria, a region of Italy, having long lived in much solitude, at length came to Sublacum, an eminent town of the Latins, distant from Rome near xl miles: And to avoyd company, in regard many for his sanctity resorted to him, shortly betook himself to Cassinum, a very antient place in that Countrey; and there settling himself, gathered together the disperst and singly wandring Monks into one Monastery, instituting certain forms and rules for their observance: Howbeit, the first that gave laws and rules to Monks was Basil, Bishop of Cesarea in Cappadocia; who about the year of Christ CCCLXIII. being very famous for his learning and piety, obliged such that should enter into Orders to vow poverty, chastity, and obedience to their Superiour: But Benedict assign'd to his Monks a special kind of habit, and appointed them a certain form for praying, slender diet, and a new rule of abstinence: And that, except in case of sickness, they should wholly forbear flesh. Which sort of Monks increased exceedingly; yet, differing in some particulars from their first rule, did in time subdivide themselves into several companies, according to their particular fancies: whence grew the Cluniacenses, Camaldunenses, Vallis-Umbrenses, Montolivenses, Grandimontenses, Cistercienses, Silvestrenses, Celestines, and Hermenites of S. Hierome. Which Monks of S. Benet's rule, as their tradition is, do wear a black coat loose and divided down to their heels, with a cowl or hood for their head, that falling over their shoulders is shorter than others use: and under all have a woollen white coat; as also a hair shirt, with boots to the knees; their heads being shaved with a razor below the midst, by reason whereof the top of the head so shaved is called Corona.

And now that I am thus come to speak of their shaving, it will not be amiss to shew upon what occasion this custome was taken up by the Monks. Dum beatus Petrus Antiochia predicaret (saith my Author) whilst S. Peter preach't at Antioch, the Gentiles, by way of contumely towards the name of Christians, shaved the very top of his head, which afterwards was held a great honour to the religious, and those of the Clergy. But further of such shaving see P. Stellartius de coronis & tonsuris, lib. 3. cap. 1. And here might I adde somewhat touching the usage to the Monks of this order in the time of their sickness, especially towards the point of death; as also of washing the body being dead, with the ceremonies of burial, were it proper for this place: but I will conclude with inserting the form of their admission into the Monastery. Ego & frater A. promitto stabilitatem meam, & conversionem morum meorum, & obedientiam secundum regulam S. Benedicti Abbatis, coram Deo & omnibus Sanctis ejus, in presentia domini Abbatis N. ad monasterium S. Mariae Covenria: And shall refer my Reader to Clem. Reinerus his Apost. Bened. in Anglia, for further satisfaction in the particulars of their rule.

Ordinis Benedictini Monachus,

Touching the beginning of a Monastick life here in England, if we look after the particular persons, who in times of persecution fled to woods, caves, and deserts for preservation, it will be hard to point out the first that so retired themselves: but if we consider their first being gathered into any Covent, then certainly those of Glastonbury in Somersetsh. and Wangoz in Chesh. will have the preheminance; in the later whereof, as ^b Beda testifieth, there were so great a number, that being divided into 7 parts, each having a several Ruler; every part was no less in number than 300, all which lived by the labour of their hands: Howbeit, these cannot be said (for ought I know) to have lived 'under any other Rule than the Essians in Palestine, of whom Polydore^b speaketh. And therefore to come unto those times that the Order of Benedictine monks was first transplanted into England, we are not to look higher than Austin the Monk; who, about the year of Christ 595.

MS Hist. Gloucest. eccl. in bibl. Bodl. p. 193. &c. (as faith mine Author^k) was sent into England by Pope Gregory; whereupon Episcopal Sees were established in sundry places, and Monasteries built for Monks observing the rule of S. Benedict; so that shortly after there were none in England but of that order, which first began to be exercised in the Abby of Glastonbury; whereas before that time they lived after the manner of the Egyptian Covents (saith he:) And which was so famous in ancient time, especially through England, that before the Norman Conquest there was scarce a Monastery of any other, as I have specially observed.

Having thus pointed at the original of a Monastick life, and of this distinct Rule, I shall now go on with the story of this particular Monastery. That Earl Leofrike was its Founder, I have formerly intimated. And now touching this great and famous work, I will begin with the observation made thereof by our most ancient and authentick Historians—Quod monasterium, saith

1f. 254. b. n. 50. R. Hoveden^l, speaking of this, inter cetera bona opera quæ in sua vita gessit ipse (meaning Earl Leofrik) & uxor illius Dei cultrix, & S. Maria semper Virginis amatrix devota, nobilis Comitissa Godiva, de suo patrimonio à fundamentis construxerunt, & id terris sufficienter locupletaverunt, ornamentis variis ita ditaverunt, ut in nullo Monasterio totius Angliæ tanta copia auri, argenti, gemmarum, lapidumque pretiosorum inveniretur, quanta tunc temporis habebatur in illo. Nay Will.

ms. Malm. f. 165. a. Malmesb. addeth^m further, that it was enrich'd and beautified with so much gold and silver, that the walls seemed too narrow to contain it; inso-much that Rob. de Limesy, B. of this Diocels in the time of K. W. Rufus, scrap'd from one beam that supported the Shrines, 500 marks of silver. And touching its dedication and number of Monks, take this from an approved writerⁿ; Anno domini MXLIII. constructum fuit monasterium Coventrense à memorande recordationis duce Leurico, & uxore ejus Godiva; dedicatumque eodem anno ab Archiepisc. Dorobernensi Edzio, quarto Non. Octob. post Pascha, Abbate Lefwino cum XXIII monachis in eodem instituto.

o. W. Malm. f. 165. a. n. 20. Here^{*} the noble Founders, before recited, were both buried; yet not in the Church, as afterwards was frequent, but in the two porches. Of which excellent Lady it is recorded, that she bestowed all that vast treasure, she had been storing up during her whole life, upon this place; and even at the point of her death gave a rich chain of precious stones, directing it to be put about the neck of the blessed Virgins image; so that those that came of devotion thither should say as many prayers as there were several gems therein.

p. Ex Reg. Priorat. de Cov. in Scac. penes Remem. Regis, f. 75. a. And for the endowment^p thereof, did the said E. Leofrik, by the advice and licence of K. Edw. the Conf. and Pope Alexander, at the dedication of the Church to the honour of God, and his blessed Mother; as also of S. Peter the Apostle, and the holy Virgin S. Osburg, and All Saints, give, besides the one half of this town, in which the said Monastery was situate, xxiii Lordships for maintenance of the Abbot and Monks there serving God, with food and raiment, viz. Wynnton, Peltonham, Chrotham, Achenton (Episc.) Bluton, Satham, Greneburgh, Wyrthingbury, Perston upon Abon, Wrothlyk, Wisperton, Chester-ton, Sotham, Rupton, and the one half of Sow, all in this County: Perston in Gloucestersh., Saltwarp in Worcestersh., Cherton in Derb., Chesh., Hyldesby and Wynwilk in Northamptonsh. Bur-

bach, Barwell, Scraptoft and Pakinton in Leicestersh. with the liberties of Sac, Soc, Tol, and Theme: Whereunto were witnesses the King himself, Edzi Archb. of Cant. Aldred B. of Worcester, Wolff B. of Lich. Manni Abbot of Chesterham, Godwin Abbot of Winchcomb, Alfric Abbot of Perthore. Of Earls, Godwyn, Harold, Siward, and Ordgar of Debensh. with Alfwald of Wynterton, Wawen of Wotton, and many other eminent persons. Which Charter^q was first confirmed by the said K. Edw. who added these further privileges thereto, viz. that the lands so given, as before is exprest, should be free from taxes for setting forth souldiers; as also for building of Bridges or Castles, and all payments to the King, Bishop, or any other person. Next by Pope Alexander, who at that time by his Apostolick authority added, that it should not be subject to any Diocesan Bishop, nor judiciary power, of what order or dignity soever: and that the Monks here serving God should have liberty to elect their Abbot out of themselves, or any other congregation where they pleased. Whose Bull bears date in the year from our Saviours incarn. MXLIII. (1 Edw. Conf.) and afterwards by W. Will. the Conq. and other succeeding Kings.

q. 1b. b. r. Cart. 22. E. 3. n. 6. per Inspect. By which great immunities and privileges 'tis easy to be seen in what glory this Monastery then stood: Nor can we doubt but that the people had it in very high esteem; considering that it was as well the chief of all the Religious Houses in these parts, as the onely one of Monks in this County; and also honoured with an extraordinary Relicks, viz. the Arm of the famous S. Augustine, Bishop of Hippo, plac'd in a silver Shrine, whereupon were graven these letters, Hoc brachium S. Augustini Egelnodus Archiep. rediens à Roma ad Papiam emit C. talentis argenti & talento auri. But the particular lands that were by the Conq. Survey recorded to belong thereto in this County, and certified^r under the title of Terra Ecclesie de Coventren, are not directly the same that be contain'd in the foundation Charter, though more in number; the names whereof I will here onely recite; for, as I come to the several places, I shall speak at large of them. Fflunger, Graneberge, Surland, Dirbingerte, Wilsbele Condore, Cobintone, Sucham, Sowa, Alchetone, Icetone, Coburberie, Herdelwiche, Hunitone, Cedelethunt, Cestreton, Wasmertone, Pelweham, and Radelwei: Howbeit in some of these they had not the whole Lordship.

Having thus manifested how amply it was endowed with lands and privileges, the next thing that I am to observe, is, how the government thereof came into the Bishops hands, which hapned in the time of K. W. Will. Rufus, in this sort.

u. Ex Rot. pervetusto penes D. & Cap. Lich. Shortly^u after the Norman Conquest, there was one Peter consecrated B. of this Diocels (then including Chester as well as Coventre and Lichfield) in whose time Lamfrank Archb. of Cant. held a Synod at London, wherein it was decreed, that Episcopal seats should not be in petty towns: by vertue whereof this was removed from Lichfield to Chester. To which Peter (who dyed and was buried at Chester) succeeded Rob. de Limesy (of whom I have formerly made mention) which R. upon the death of Lewynus Abbot of Coventre, obtain'd from the K. the custody of this Monastery; and, by the authority of a Bull^w from Pope Paschal the first, removed his seat from Chester hither. Hereupon^x the B. settling at Coventre, and having the government of this Monastery (as I have said) the name of Abbot became thenceforth utterly suppress'd supprest and extinct, in regard that the Episcopal dignity therein overtopt it: So that the succeeding Priors (for so were they called which had the rule) were but as substitutes to the Bishops in whom the Abbacy virtually was. But this B. was neither a friend to the Monastery nor to the Monks, as it seems: for, besides his scraping so much silver from one beam, as I have already intimated, he suffered the buildings to decay for want of repairs, pill'd the Church of many rich ornaments; and as for the Monks, he kept them to poor and miserable commons, not regarding their regular living, nor any thing that might advance learning among them; to the end, that being thus brought low, and in ignorance, their thoughts should not soar so high as to consider the redress of these his so great injuries.

Of the other Bishops which successively resided here at Cobentre (this being their Cathedral as well as Litchfeld) I shall onely recite the names, their stories being already written by Godwyn, viz. Rob. de Peche, Rog. de Clinton, Walter Durdent, Ric. Peche, and Gerard de Puella; all which, in their several times successively, did stile themselves Coventria episcopi onely; and had a fair palace at the Northeast corner of S. Michael's Churchyard, being very near to the Monastery. But the first who bore the name, and had the office of Prior here, was one Lawrence, of whom I find frequent mention in K. Steph. and H. 2. reigns; whose successors I shall insert elsewhere; and therefore will now proceed with the relation of such memorable passages as concern this Monastery, and of the further enlargement or diminution of its possessions, according as they hapned in order of time.

In which progress the first thing I find observable, is, that in 7 Steph. the times being then turbulent, Rob. Marmion (whose seat was the Castle of Tamworth) being a man potent in Arms, and a great adversary to the E. of Chester, posselt himself thereof, turn'd out the Monks, and fortified the Church with the buildings belonging therunto, making deep trenches in the fields adjacent; which he so covered, that they could not be seen, to the end that they might be an impediment to an enemy whensoever any approach should be made: but it so hapned, that as he sallied out with some forces upon the E. of Chester's drawing near; and not remembring whereabouts those places had been digg'd, he fell with his Horse into one of them himself; and by that means, being surprized by a common souldier, had his head presently cut off: whose destruction in that kind is by our Historians observed to have been as a just judgement of God for prophaning this sacred place.

After this, viz. in 15 Steph. I find, that the Monks of Cobentre granted unto those of Dabentre in Northamptonsh. the Church of Abby, with 3 yard land thereto belonging; and the Church of Had-don, with two yard land, excepting the tithes and such other benefits which were due to the Church of Wintock (whereof it seems these were originally members). In consideration whereof, the Monks of Dabentre were to pay yearly to this Monastery 1 pound of Incense before the feast of the Nat. of our Lord. Which grant was made in the time of Prior Laurence, and begot much love and mutual affection from these Religious Houses to each other: for shortly after was there an agreement made betwixt them, that if any Monk of Cobentre should be, by the consent of his Prior and Covent sent to Dabentre, out of their great affection to that House, he ought to be freely received, and reside there in that regular way, as if he were one of the same Covent, untill he should be recalled by the Pr. of Cob. and in case he did depart this life during such his abode there, all solemnities to be perform'd for him as for a Monk of Dab. And the like were they of Cob. to perform to those of Dab. touching such as should be sent thither from Dab. And that if any of either Covent did happen to dy elsewhere, one Priest of each Monastery, his death being known, should celebrate 3 Masses for him, his service with Placebo and Dirige to be also perform'd in the Covent, with the corrody belonging to a Monk for that day, and his name registred in the Martyrologe. And when any of the Priors of either Monastery should dy, a Trentall to be sung in the other Covent over & above the services before recited. And moreover every year a Mass of the Holy Ghost to be celebrated, as well for the living in each Monastery, as for the dead. And lastly, that in all things, both spiritual and temporal, where each might assist o-ther, they should effectually afford their aid.

About this time was it, that Ranulph, surnamed Gernons, E. of Chester, bearing a great respect to these Monks, gave them liberty to have 2 carts going to and fro twice every day, except Festivals, into his woods about Cobentre, to fetch thence whatsoever they might need in order to the repair of their buildings, fuel for their fire, or trowse for their hedges. And being fully assured that the Chapel of S. Mich. here in Cob. and all the rest within the town and without, with the tithes, oblations, and rights to them belonging, situate within his fee, did justly belong to them, he made them his Charter of Recognition, and confirm'd them to this Monastery for the health of his soul, as also for the souls of his father, mother, and all his progenitors. After which, viz. in 12 H. 2. upon return of the Certificats touching Kts. fees, the Prior of this House signified, that he had 7. and a third part, with two fifths and a tenth, de veteri feoffamento; and as much in demesne as countervail'd ten Kts. fees.

And in 29 H. 2. was there an exchange of land made betwixt these Monks and Hugh Keviliok, the succeeding Earl; for license whereof they gave xx marks to the King. About which time the said E. granted to them a free and ample Charter, as well of protection as confirmation of their possessions; forbidding all his tenants from hindring their Market, or meddling ought therein without the good liking of the Monks. And to the end that posterity should not be ignorant which were the metes and bounds betwixt both their fees, that is to say, of the Priors part and Earls part, he by the same Charter fully describes them, including the lands of the said Monastery within these following limits, viz. beginning at S. Mich. Churchyard, and from thence directly going to the Wood-gate of his own Castle, leaving the houses of Will. de Repyndon, and Will. the son of Ric. Forthwy (tenants to the Monastery) on the North part, and the E. fee on the South: And so passing down to the river of Symthesford, and from thence ascending the brook to the Mill of Ger. le Vinter of Hull and Radeford even unto Cum-dealm (modo Coundon) and so coasting aside betwixt the grounds of Rob. Scot of Ailewardliche near Blakemoze, being the lands of R. Beaufiz and Anketill Locard on the one part, and the E. wood called Hatelwood on the other part; and thence by the brook of Endemere to the high-way leading from the midst of Harnall near to Stoke as far as the gibbet, and thence descending by Wisseles to the brook called Coleford; and so along that brook and the ditch, hard to the land of Will. Hakun, and thence to the walls of the said Monastery.

To which Hugh succeeded Ranulph, surnamed Blundevill, in the said Earldom of Chester, and feignory here; who ratified to these Monks the recognition and confirmation made by E. Ran. his grandfather of the Chappell of the S. Mich. and all the rest; viz. Ansty, Schilton, Wapkin, Witney, Whitley, Witney, Stoke, Strichall, Eccleball, Folkeball, Bareley, Whaberley, Sponne, and Billele within his fee, in all which he solemnly invetted them on the feast-day of S. Abdon and Sennes in the month of July 3. R. 1. by his gold Ring, which with his said Charter he offered upon the Altar. To which Chappell of S. Mich. he likewise conferred the Tithe of all his lands and possessions, here in Cobentre; and that under the penalty of a curse upon his officers, servants and heirs, in case they should not make due payment of them accordingly. And besides this did he give to the said Monks in exchange for one cart of those two, which E. Ran. his grandfather, by his Charter granted them to have going too and fro in his woods for necessary Housebote, Firebote, and Heybote, (as I have formerly signified) 280. acres of land, being part of his wood and wast in Cecleball and Berley, according to 25. foot the perch, (the metes & bounds whereof are in this his Charter perfectly set forth). Which wast he gave them liberty to inclose, reduce into tillage, or otherwise to use for their best commodity.

But I now come to that sad misfortune which befell these Monks about this time; the story whereof is briefly thus. Hugh Novant, a Norman by birth, having been brought up to learning in the university of Oxford, and consecrated Bishop of this Dioces towards the later end of H. 2. reign; at the same time that he had the Bishoprick confer'd upon him by the K. had he also a grant of the Priory in such sort as Rog. de Clinton his predecessor enjoy'd it; viz. in demesne with the Barony, wherein he received homage of the Freeholders, and found the Monks all necessities according to his own pleasure: but during the life of the said King Henry did he not possess what was so granted to him. Whereupon he came to K. Ric. 1. (his son and successor) and purchas't a confirmation of his fathers grant: And besides all this obteyn'd a render of the House by Moyse, the then Prior at Reding, in the presence of Baldwin Archbishop of Cant. the Bishops of London and Rocheſter, and many other persons of note. After which the said B. holding a Synod in the Church of this Monastery, wherein some things were agitated tending much to the prejudice of the Monks, as it should seem, though the particulars are not recorded, he so much incens't the Monks that they rush't in upon him, and with a Crois of that Church broke his head: whereupon complaint being presently made to Will. B. of Ely, Chancelour of England, and at that time not onely the Popes Legate, but Governor of the Realm in the absence of K. Ric. then on his journey to the Holy-Land, that the Monks had shed his blood even before the Altar; he forthwith decreed that they should be expelled, and secular Canons plac't in their room: which judgment the proud B. soon put in execution; and by strong hand turning them out, did, to justify himself therein, forthwith dispatch Letters to Rome, whereunto he had got the hands of other Bishops, signifying, that the Monks of Cobentre had deserted their Rule, and were contaminated with secular poulutions; thereupon petitioning his Holyness that he might have the free disposall of that Monastery. Unto which Letters the Pope gave no present answer, expecting to have heard what the Monks could say for themselves: but they, being much impoverish't by the Bishop's oppressions (for he was then a potent man, having the custody of the Countyes of Warre and Leich. committed to his charge for severall years of King Ric. reign) were not able to send to Rome in their own defence; so that the B. had his desires fulfill'd, the poor Monks being scattered up and down to seek their fortune in the world. In which banish't condition they continued during the whole life of that B. who lying upon his death-bed at Bec. in Normandy, in the last year of K. Ric. reign, became so sensible of his great iniquities; and in particular of the injuries done to these Monks, that he deplored the same with abundant sighs and teares; earnestly desiring that prayers and intercessions should be made unto God for him. And not then knowing how to make other satisfaction than to end his dayes in their habite, with great mourning besought the Abbot of Bec. that for the love of God, and shame of the Devil, he would vouchsafe to grant him the habite of a Monk, to the end that he might have them to be his patrons in the world to come, whom he had so persecuted in this. Which being accordingly fulfill'd, he disposed all his gold and silver, jewels and plate to Houses of Religion, and unto the poor; and by way of satisfaction for his manifold transgressions condemn'd himself to the pains of Purgatory usq; in diem Judicii cruciandus, and so dyed.

At which time there was resident in the Court of Rome one Thomas a Monk of Cobentre; who being expell'd with the rest, was studious to obtain a restitution of this Monastery to its former condition; and therefore waited all opportunities, though through want he was often forc't to beg his bread: and when news was brought of the Bishops death, being then in good hopes to be heard, he exhibited his petition to Pope Innocent the third (then newly created and sitting with his Cardinals in the consistory); which so soon as his Holyness had read, in an angry mood he bad the Monk withdraw, telling him, that other Petitions to the same purpose had been exhibited to Clement and Celestine, his predecessors, but rejected, and therefore his expectations were vain. Unto which the Monk with bitter tears replyed, Holy Father! my Petition is just and altogether honest, and therefore my expectation is not vain; for I expect your death, as I have done your predecessors; for there shall one succeed you who will hear my Petition to purpose. But the Pope, taking notice of these expressions from the poor Monk, and much wondring at them, said to the Cardinals, Hear you not what this Devil hath spoken? scil. I expect your death as I have done your predecessors; immediately turn'd to him and said, Brother, by S. Peter, thou shalt not here expect my death, for thy Petition is granted; and forthwith before he went to dinner directed his Letters mandatory to Hubert Archbishop of Canterb. that upon sight of them he should presently go to the Church of Cobentre, and thence put forth the Clerks, and reinvest the Monks: which the said Archb. did accordingly xv. Kal. Feb. 1198. (ult. R. 1.) And because Moyse the Prior was dead in the time of their banishment, he constituted in his stead one Joybert a Norman; who for his eminent ment wisdom in worldly affaires, had the government also of Cobentre, Wenloc, and Bernundsey committed to him. Which Joybert was no sooner entred upon his charge, but he speedily, with the consent of the Monks elected Geffrey Muschamp Archdeacon of Elfbeland to be B. as being a man from whom they expected nothing but fair regard.

The Monks therefore thus reestablish'd took into consideration the conveniences of their House and all other securities that might tend to their advantage, as appears by what I shall instance: for in 5. Joh. they procured an alteration^b of the Parcket, but how the Record expresses not; in consideration whereof they gave a Fine of 5. marks to the King. And the next ensuing year did they obtain the K. speciall Letters^b of protection for themselves, their tenants, and all their possessions: as also such a privilege, that they should not be impleaded for any of their lands except before the K. himself, or his chief Justice, for which they gave 2. palfreys. The like Charter^b of protection had they in 11. E. 3. and, besides another, of sundry privileges; viz. Sok, Sak, Tol, Them, Infangenthef, Hamsoene, forstal, blodwithe, fithwithe, wardwite, and Mundbriche: And that they and all their tenants, except those which held by Knights service more than half a Kts. fee, should be quit of Murder, Robbery, suit to the County or Hundred-Courts, Ayd to the Shiriff, view of Frank-plege, and repair of the K. Castles or pooles. In consideration of which favours they payd to the K. a Fine of 60. marks; towards the rayling whereof they had Aid^a of their Cobentre-burgers. In the same year had they a grant^b of an yearly Faire to last for 8. days, beginning on the day of S. Leodigarius the martyr, which falls out Oct. 2. And in 16. H. 3. did Geffrey, the then Prior, purchase^a of Gerard de Allespath half a hide of land in Old-Fil-longley to the use of this Monastery.

Touching such extraordinary charges whereunto they were subject in this K. time, I find, that in 13. H. 3. they gave a Fine^a to be exempt from sending souldiers in person for the expedition then beyond Sea; and to have power for levying Scutage of their tenants for ten Kts. fees, which they held of the King in Capite; viz. 3. marks pro quolibet scuto towards that service. As also in 18. H. 3. a Fine of 25. marks, that they might not send souldiers to the Kings Army in Wales. In 20. H. 3. they answered xx. marks for 8. Kts. fees de veteri seoffamento, upon collection of the Aid for marrying of Isabell the Kings sister to the Rom. Emp. In 26. xv. marks, by way of Aid, upon the K. transference into Gascony. In 29. 10. li. for x. Kts. fees, upon the Aid for marriage of the Kings eldest daughter. Towards their better support of which burthens they had the K. Letters^a of recommendation to all their tenants, for the receiving Aid from them; which bear date in Octob. 33. of his reign.

But, it seems, that these taxes fell thus heavy upon them, before they had in any reasonable measure recovered themselves out of the low condition wherein they had been cast by the oppression of Hugh Novant the B. before-mentioned: for I find, that in the time of Prior Roger (who died about the 32. of this Kings reign,) there being a great league of friendship betwixt the Monks of this Monastery, and the Canons of Derley, in Derley, these of Cobentre represented their miserable miserable condition unto those of Derley, not only with very lamentable expressions, but with tears; protesting, that their wants were so great, that the whole Covent was like to be dispersed, except they had present succour; and therefore humbly besought the Canons of Derley, that they would vouchsafe to receive some of them into their Monastery, there to have subsistence for a while, quousq; oriens ex alto, miseratio altissimi, nostro felicius illuxerit occidenti, are their words. Of which great good will, that had been for a long time before, betwixt these two Religious houses, I find this testimony^a, that by way of mutuall curtesies, the Monks of Cobentre used to send unto them of Derley Needles and Sope; and they of Derley to these Saddles and riding-furniture.

But after this they received, as well from the King as others, divers great favours and benefits for the advantage of their Monastery: For in 34. H. 3. it was^a, that they obteyn'd in fee-ferme from Rog. de Montalt and Cecily his wife all their interest in the mannour of Cobentre, with the advouson of the Church of S. Mich. and the Chappells thereunto belonging; excepting their capitall seat called Cheplemore, and the Park, with the House of Friers-Minoys; and the homage and services of their freeholders, whose names I have particularly exprest already in my discourse of the said Roger. And in 41. H. 3. had they the Kings Charter^b of Free-warren in all their demesn lands of Cobentre, Cundalme, Sow, Waplenhale, Frankton, Werton, and Herdwike, Sutham, Dlethon, Dfechurch, Wasperton, Honnyton and Backwood, with divers other places in this County and Leicestershire. As also in 44. H. 3. an appropriation^a of S. Michaels Church before mentioned, with all the Chappells thereunto belonging; viz. Ansby, Shulton, Wylm, Stoke, Wilsney, Sow, Stitchall, Folkethall and Sponne; and of Trinity-Church with it's Chappells: the Chappell of S. John, with the Hospitall; the Churches of Copley and Allespath, the Church of Herdwike, and it's Chappells, with Archidiaconall jurisdiction there: The Church of Backwood, with Archid. jurisdiction also; And likewise the whole Tyches arising in their demesn-lands, wherefoever. In 46. H. 3. the like appropriation^a for Dfechurch. And in 51. H. 3. a confirmation^a of their foundation Charter by E. Leofrik, with the Bull of Pope Alexander the first: As also a further grant of freedom from doing suite to the County or Hundred-Courts, and to the Shiriffs-Turn. And that they should have a Coroner within the town of Cobentre that might answer before the Justices Itinerant, for whatsoever concern'd that office: and moreover a Merchants-Gild, with all privileges thereto belonging; and that they, their tenants, nor their goods should be distreyned for any debt not properly their own, or for which they were sureties.

And after this, ere long, suffering great losses by reason of such excursions as young Montfort and his fellow Rebels in Kenilworth Castle, or the Kings Army, during the six months siege thereof, did make; had they the Kings Letters-Pat. for recommending their wants to all their tenants, and desiring them that they would so contribute to their relief, as that they might expect recompence at God's hand, and thanks from him. And in 5. E. 1. license^a to inclose certain wast-grounds near Cobentre, which (inter alia) were granted to them in fee.

fee-ferme by Roger de Montalt and Cecily his wife. So that the state wherein this Monastery stood, about those times, was thus represented by a special Inquisition taken shortly after; viz. that, consisting of black-Monks, it had therein a Cathedrall Church: and that the Prior and his Covent, together with the Chapter of Witchfield, did elect the Bishop, these having the first voice: That the Prior, here, was also Lord of this town, a moytie whereof, with the whole Barony, he held of the K. in Capite, by the service of 2. Kcs. fees in the Army: And had a weekly Mercate on the Fry-day; and a Faire every year, enduring 8. days, with a Coroner, and Free-warren in all his demesn-lands: which moytie he held as freely as Earl Leofrik did the same of K. Edward the Conf. And that he the said Prior with his tenants, being privileged of murther, had Gallows, Pillory, Tumbrell, Assise of bread and beere; as also fealty of his Burgers, and appearances at his Court twice in the year: for all which the Charters of K. H. 3. and divers other his progenitors were then exhibited.

And Moreover, that he held the other moytie, called the Earls part; with the outwood wherein the Inhabitants claymed Common of pasture for all manner of Cartell, and other commoning in the woods belonging to the Abby of Stonely, of the heirs of Roger de Montalt, by the service of ex. marks per annum, according as in the Fine levied betwixt the said Roger and Cecily his wife; and the said Prior and Covent is more at large contained: which heirs held it of the K. as of the fee of Chester. In which half the said Prior had once in the year a Faire lasting six days, about the feast of the holy Trinity; with Gallows, Pillory, Tumbrell, Assise of bread and beere; and fealty of all the Burgers; as also two appearances yearly at his Court. By which Inquisit. likewise appeareth, that the whole town was then exempt from Toll, excepting for Horses, whereof the Burgers were onely freed; but that the said Burgers had Toll of Horses for their own tenants there inhabiting: and that the same Prior had three Mills here, with the ponds thereto belonging; and two pools in demesn. All which immunities and privileges were in 13. E. 1. pleaded by the Monks; who then likewise manifested, that they had time out of mind enjoyed two great Courts every year in this place; and weyfs: and that the Priors Bayliff used ever to go along with the K. Bayliff to execute all such precepts as concern'd the Crown: As also, that the town of Cobentre answered for xii. having Free-warren Infangthef, Assise of bread and beer, Mercate, and Faire, with all things belonging thereto; Pillory, Tumbrell, and a Coroner of their own: And that they were quit of Murther, Robbery, Suite to the County or Hundred-Courts, Ayd to the Shiriff, &c.

Touching the Mercate they had here, it was kept in that part of the town called the Priors-half, as it seems; where still it continues, that being the place peculiar thereunto: for in E. 2. time, upon a suite commenced by the Prior against one Will. Gumppe and others, for selling divers wares in Cric-street every week upon the Friday in their houses and shops; who pleaded, that they did so by vertue of the Charter antiently granted to them from the Earl of Chester; in which was contain'd, that they should enjoy as ample liberties as the Burgeses of Lincoln; and added, that the said

Earl in his time had a Faire in that street, and so likewise his heires, till such time as the before-mentioned Roger de Montalt and Cecily his wife demised that street to the predecessors of the said Prior; judgment was given for the Prior with lx. li. damages; and command that they should not sell their commodities any where upon the Friday, but in the Priors part. But in E. 3. time, after the possession of Cheylesmore came to the hands of Q. Isabella, there grew some dispute touching the extent of the Priors part; so that, by an Indenture tripartite, bearing date 29. E. 3. made betwixt the said Q. with the Mayor and Commonalty on the one part, and the Prior and Covent on the other, the division betwixt their said parts was by metes and bounds there described, in manner following; viz. beginning at the stones or pillars near the Crosse of S. John Bapt. Hospitall, including Northwards all Bishop-street; and so all along towards the Common-Quarry, neer the garden of Ric. Buckmore: and thence streight on, taking in all S. Nicholas-street, even to the high-way leading unto Radford: and so through the midit of Radford to Broad oak towards the East; and thence to Whittemore, environing that mannour; and so to Blakemore, and Tuenetford: and thence turning aude by a little brook running from Endemere towards Cobentre into Swanneswell-pool: and from that pool by a hedge and ditch of the Priory, neer to the gate called Derugate to Cresimphne; and thence on the back-side of Cric-orchard, including the Bishops-palace, and so to the wall of the Priory well-yard, and along by the gate of the Monastery to the corner of Trinity-Churchyard, where the Butchers use to be: and from that corner directly along by the west-gate of the Priory, and the guest-stable-wall to the running river; and so thwarting the brook, excluding S. John's-Hospitall and the Bake-house belonging thereto unto the Crosse or pillars before mentioned. So that whatsoever is included within those bounds was the Priors part, and all the rest the Earles part.

Divers other Covenants are contain'd in the said tripartite Indenture, whereof the Friday-market for cartell and timber, is one of the principall, which was agreed to be kept in Bishop-street, and Cook-street, as it had wont to be; but that the said Prior and his successors should take no Toll, except for Horses onely; And that the sale of all other vendible commodities whatsoever, in this town, should be by the ordering of the Mayor and Commonalty, and their successors for ever.

As for the severall messuages and lands purchased by the Monks of sundry freeholders within the precincts of Cobentre; as also in their other Lordships, in E. 2. time and afterwards, I shall decline the particular mention of them, in regard, that there is not any thing very notable to be observed, either of the persons from whom they were acquired, or of the lands themselves.

The next thing that, in order of time, I meet with, which may be reckoned worthy of note in relation to this Monastery, is, that the Clergy, and people of the Archdeaconry of Cobentre did in Anno 1410. (12. H. 4.) make an humble representation to John Keterich B. of this Dioces, that the memory of the holy Virgin S. Osburg (unto whom this monastery was specially dedicated) grew famous for many miracles in those days; for as much as divers weak and infirm people, which came to her tombe combe, situate in the Priory-Church, and there and elsewhere imploring her prayers and merits, had been restored to bodily health and soundness: And therefore did petition the same Bishop, that her Birth-day might be solemnized, and the said virgin revered in Hymnes and Psalmes, with other devout suffrages. Whereupon the B. caused a Synod of the Clergy of this Archdeaconry to be convened in the said Church the 13. of Octob. in the same year; wherein it was determined, that her said Birth-day should be solemnized and kept, as a double Festivall throughout the whole Archdeaconry every year for ever, and in as compleat a manner as the Feast of their Church's dedication.

But I now come to that fatall Survey in 26. H. 8. the forerunner of its dissolution; wherein I shall not descend to particulars, but only represent what the yearly revenue thereof was then certified to be; viz. 731. li. 19. s. 05. d. Out of which the Fee-ferme rent to the Crown, reserved by Reg. de Montalt (as I have shewed) with all other Pen- sions and annuall payments amounting to 249. li. 05. s. 09. d. being deducted, the clear remainder was 499. li. 07. s. 04. d. per annum. Amongst which deductions I find that 14. li. 13. s. ii. d. per annum: was reckoned for bread, beer, and two messes of meat daily; viz. as much as would suffice for two Monks, and allowed to the poor of S. John's Hospitall (within this City) upon the first foundation thereof. And 06. li. 13. s. 04. d. in money, bread, wine, and other victuall distributed to poor people on Maunday-thursday, yearly, at the washing of their feet. And also 12. li. 11. s. 04. d. for the yearly maintenance of poor Schollars in the said Monastery. And 26. s. 08. d. for to keep the Anniversary of E. Leofrik the founder, and of the Countess Godeva his wife. At the time of which Survey Henry Marq. Dorset was high Steward, and had 04. li. per annum Pension; and Will. Gevyns Receiver-generall, who had 10. li. per annum annuity.

But behold the instability of these terrestriall things; what the pious Founder, and all other its worthy benefactors had, with great zeal to Gods glory, so cheerfully given and bestowed on the structure, endowment, and adorning of this sometime famous Monastery; and that with such heavy imprecations and curses upon any that should take away or diminish ought thereof, as the Charters before cited do manifest: Against which violators of the Church its patrimony, the representative body of this Realm had also, so often, in terrorem, propounc't solemn curses in open Parliament; as whosoever shall cast his eye upon our Statutes and publique Hist. may discern; was subverted, torn away, and scattered in 30. of King H. 8. reign, after it had stood neer 500. years, the glory of all these parts: at which time the very Church it self, though a most beautifull Cathedrall, and the mother-Church of this City, scap't not the rude hands of the destroyers; but was pull'd in pieces and reduc't to rubbish: For the countenance of which sad Act, the then Prior and Covent, seeing the fate of some others that refus'd, was no less than to be hang'd up at their gates, were brought to make surrender of the same into the hands of Commissioners for the Kings use, as appears by their publique Instrument under Seal, bearing date 15. Jan. in the year abovesaid, with all the names of those that subscribed thereunto, which I have here subjoyned, with their severall yearly Pensions that were granted to them during life.

Which Priors had place in Parliament amongst the Barons of this Realm, as appears by all the writts of Summons in every Kings reign.

The succession of the particular Mannours, which belong'd to this Religious house, I have pointed at, as they lye in my way: All therefore that I now have further to do in relation unto it, is to observe what became of the site thereof; wherein I find, that K. H. 8. by his Pat. dated 28. Julii, 37. of his reign, granted it to John Combes gent. and Rich. Stansfield, and their heirs, with divers mess. gar- dens, mills, &c. thereto belonging; to hold in Free Burgage. From whom it came afterwards to John Hales, as it seemes: for I find, that in 15. Eliz. he dyed, seised thereof, leaving John his nephew; (viz. son to his brother Christopher) his heir: but none of that family do now enjoy it.

o Chantryes

Chantries in, and adjoining to the Priory.

Leicester's Chantry.

THis Chantry was founded in 2. E. 3. as appears by the Covenants & for Ordination thereof made betwixt Henry the then Prior, and Rob. de Leicester and Will. de Leicester, Canons of Litchfield; whereby the said Prior doth undertake for himself and his successors to find two secular Priests to sing Mass daily in that Cathedrall at the Altar of the holy Trinity, the blessed Virgin, K. Edward the Confessor, Edmund Archb. of Canterbury, and All-Saints, standing in the body of the said Church; for the good estate of the same Church, and for the soul of the before specified Prior; as also for the souls of Henry and Letice, father and mother of the said Prior; Robert and Will. de Leicester above mentioned, Geffrey and Elene their father and mother; and of their brethren and sisters. And likewise for the souls of Sir Will. de Bereford, Frere Hugh de Rothwell, Walt. de Langton, and Roger Northburg then Bishop of Cobentre and Litchfield. But of this Chantry, all that I find more is, that upon the Survey^a taken in 26. H. 8. it was certified, that Thomas Jackson and William Parden were then the Priests belonging thereto, each of which had a stipend of 4. li. per annum paid by the Prior, and were removable at his pleasure.

Copstons Chantry.

THis Chantry, adjoining^a to the wall of the Priory, was founded^a by Will. Copston in 19. E. 1. the revenue^a of it, in 26. H. 8. being xi. li. viii. s. ii. d. per annum, over and above reprises; and Anthoni Molinex Dr. of Divinity then Warden thereof. It seems, that, upon the dissolution of the Monastery in 30. H. 8. it was translated into S. Michael's Church; for^a there I find it in 37. H. 8. and of the clear yearly value of xi. li. vii. s. ii. d. ob. above all reprises.

The next particular whereof I come to speak, is the two large and beautifull Churches, dedicated the one to S. Michael, the other to the holy Trinity; both which heretofore stood within the same Cemetery with the Priory Church.

S. Michael's Church.

OF this, the first mention that I find^a, is in K. Stephen's time; for then did Ranulph E. of Chester render it to the Monks of Cobentre, by the name of the Chappell of S. Michael, being satisfied by the testimony of divers persons, as well Clergy as Laytie, that it was their right. Which act of his E. Hugh his son and successor confirmed^a. Hereunto also did E. Ranulph, the last of that name, give^a the tythe of his lands and rents in^a ibid. Cobentre for the health of his soul, and of his ancestors souls; commanding all his Officers upon pain of a grievous curle to make due payment of them accordingly. What colour of right the Bishop had in the advowson thereof I find not: but it seemes that a claime he made thereto; so that in 32. H. 3. the Prior and he came to an agreement: whereupon the said Prior, to purchase the Bps interest, parted with the perpetuall patronage of the Churches of Ruyton and Wobenhull, then selling them upon the Cathedrall of Litchfield, whereof since that time they have been Prebends. By which Accord it was concluded, that after the deceases of each of those Priests, then Incumbents of the particular Chappells belonging thereto, the Monks should provide secular Priests, and other fit Ministers to serve in the said Chappells, and to allow them competent maintenance. And, what to the vicaridge of S. Michael should, by the Bishops Officiall and the Archdeacon, and two other discreet men on the Priors part chosen and sworn, be assigned, out of the fruits of the said Church, the value of xxiv. marks per annum.

And moreover, that the Prior and Covent should pay, out of the fruits thereof to the Archdeacon of Cobentre, for his Procurations, four marks. And because that the Cathedrall of Litchfield, had of ancient time used to have xxx. marks yearly out of the profits of this Church, it was by the same Agreement further concluded, that the same summe should be payd yearly thereto for the time to come, at the Feasts of S. Michael and Easter, by even portions, out of the Rectory of Southam, (the patronage whereof belong'd to the said Monks). Which Accord bears date at Warwick 3. Kal. Julii Anno 1248. (32. H. 3.) But in 44. H. 3. this Church was appropriated^a to the Monks; and in Anno 1291. 19. E. 1. with its Chappells, valued^a at 50. marks; and the vicaridge at 8. marks and a half.

The tall and beautifull steeple; which, for its excellent workmanship and height, is inferior to none in England, was^a more than xxii. years in building; being begun in Anno 1373. 47. E. 3. and finished Anno 1395. 18. R. 2. But I find^a, that in 12. H. 6. there was a new work begun upon this Church, yet what in particular I cannot directly say: howbeit, by the fashion of the building, do I conceive, that the whole body of the Church, or the greatest part thereof, was then built in that form we now behold it.

In 26. H. 8. the Vicaridge, before exprest, was rated at 65. li. 10. s. 06. per annum, out of which being then annually paid 02. li. 15. s. 04. d. to the Archdeacon of Cobentre for Procurations and Synodals: to the Prior of Cobentre for an yearly Pension c. s. and to the Dean and Chapter of Litchfield 33. s. 04. d. the clear value amounted to 56. li. 00. s. 10. d.

THIS was founded by Laurence Shepey of Cobentre in 4 E. 3. & endowed with one mess, and two Shops, for the maintenance of a Priest to Sing Mass daily, at the Altar of St. Laurence within the same Church; for the soul of the said Laurence; and of the souls of his father and mother; Maud his wife; Adam Stranydelf and Alice his wife, with all the faithfull deceased. Whereunto, in 11 R. 2. John Shepey, Dean of Lincoln, added the gift of one more mess, for the maintenance of two Priests to Sing Mass at the said Altar, for the soul of Laurence, the Founder (his grand-father) Jordan Shepey, his father: as also for the good estate of him the said Dean, whilst he lived; and afterwards for the health of his soul, and the souls of all the faithfull deceased. In 37 H. 8. the value thereof, certified at 59 s. 07 d. per an. was allowed by the last Prior of Cobentre to the Curat of Sow, in augmentation of his Salary; in regard that the small Tythes of Sow, that were all he had for his maintenance, were then worth but six pounds per an.

After this, viz. in 45 E. 3. John de Burgh, Priest, Will. Liberd, John de Pountfreit, Ranulph Palmer, and Thomas Telvertoft, gave x two messs. with the appurtenances here in Cobentre, for the maintenance of a Priest to Sing Mass daily at the Altar of the blessed Virgin, within this Church, for the souls of Henry Dilcock, and Margery his wife, Robert de Watton and Maud his wife; and of Will. de Shepey and Alice his wife.

THIS was founded in 12 R. 2. by Henry del Hay of Cobentre, Girdler; and endow'd with three messs, lying here in Cobentre, for the maintenance of one Priest to Sing Mass daily at the Altar of All-Saints, within this Church; for the good estate of the said K. R. 2. and of Q. Anne his consort: as also of him the said Henry, during their naturall lives, and afterwards for the health of their souls. The Revenue whereof in 37 H. 8. being certified at 21 s. 07 d. per an. over and above reprises, was by the last Prior of Cobentre given to the Vicar of Folkestull in augmentation of his living, whereof the value then extended to no more then 03 l. 18 s. per an.

Preston's Chantry.

THIS was founded by John Preston of Cobentre in 13 H. 4. for two Priests to Sing Mass daily at the Altars of the holy Trinity, and the blessed Virgin, within this Church, for the good estate of him the said John, during this mortall life; and afterwards for the health of his soul; as also for the Souls of his Parents and Benefactors, and all the faithfull deceased; and endow'd with six Messs: and one Shop, with a Chamber over it, situate here in Cobentre. All which in 26 H. 8. were valued at 05 l. 09 s. per an. over and above reprises: but in 37 H. 8. at no more then 04 l. 06 s. 11 d. per an.

Pyseford's Chantry.

THIS was founded by one Will. Pyseford, and endowed with lands, for to find one Priest, to Sing Mass daily within this Church; and to maintain six poor men and their wives, such as had been honest House-holders, and were fallen to decay, within the City; viz. 07 d. ob. a week to every Couple, to pray for the souls of the said William and his Parents for ever: Howbeit, the certain time of its foundation I have not seen; but the lands and tenements thereunto belonging, being, by the Survey taken in 37 H. 8. valued at 26 l. 09 s. per an. the Priest had out of it 6 l. yearly for his salary; the residue being for the maintenance of the before specified poor people, and discharge of other payments concerning the said lands and Chantry.

Hereof, all that I have met with, is onely, that there was an yearly stipend^b of Cvi. s. viii. d. payd to a Chantry-Priest, singing Mass daily in this Church of St. Mich. by the Company of Dyers in the City of London.

Marler's Chantry.

i lb. f. 6. a.

IT doth not very clearly appear, that this Chantry was in St. Mich. Church: but in regard that there be circumstances, which make it probable, I have fixt it so. It was founded by one Ric. Marler, as his last Will doth manifest; by which he assigned certain Rents to be yearly received by the Wardens of this City, for the time being, to find a Priest to Sing daily Mass in a Chappell, built over the Grave of him the said Richard, for the health of his soul and all Christen-souls; and to keep divine Service in the Quire; whose stipend was nine marks per an. But the foundation of it, is of no antiquity; for there were no more than two Chantry-Priests successively belonging thereto; viz. Henry Marler, and Ric. Branker; which Ric. was living in 37 H. 8.

Percye's Chantry.

This, being the antientest Chantry of any that were founded in Trinity-Church, was endow'd in 23 E. 3. by Nich. Percy, John de Fylingley, and Henry Molling, with six mess. one shop, six acres of land and 40. s. rent, lying in Coventre, for the maintenance of one Priest to Sing Mass dayly at the Altar of All-Saints, for the good estate of the said Nich. and Beatrice his wife; and of John Percy, Priest, whilst they should live in this world; and for their souls after their departure hence: as also for the souls of John Percy, and Peter Percy; and of the father and mother of the said Nicholas, with all the faithfull deceased. But afterwards was there another Priest added thereto; towards whose maintenance in 9 H. 4. Will. Botoner, John Eggeston the elder, and John Drye of Coventre Priest gave one mess. and 24. acres of land lying in this City. The value of all which, was in 26 H. 8. certified to be 10. l. 10. s. per
 an. over and above reprises: but upon the Survey ther; Q. Philipa his consort, and of all their children. As also for the good estate of the said Will. Henry, and the rest aforementioned: And likewise of all the Brethren and Sisters of the Fraternity of the Holy Cross of Coventre, whilst they lived, and for their souls after their decease: And for the souls of all the said K. progenitors; and of the ancestors of the said Will. de Davynre, &c.

 For the maintenance of which two Priests, they gave 7. mess. 14. shops, and six acres of land, lying in this City.

Lodyngton's Chantry.

This was founded in 16 R. 2. by Will. Haynton, and John Bromcote, Priests; for one Priest to Sing Mass in this Church, for the good estate of Alice the Widow of Roger de Lodyngton; and for her soul after her departure out of this world: And for the soul of the said Roger de Lo-dyngton, his father and mother, and of all the faithfull deceased. The clear Revenue whereof in 37 H. 8. being certified at 02. l. 00. 03. d. per an. was allowed to the Vicar of Erhall, in augmentation of his living; the small tythes belonging thereto, extending to no more than 03. l. 06.
 s. 08. d. per an.

The Chantry of the Holy Cross.

This was founded in 30 E. 3. by Will. de Davyn-tre, Henry Molling, Rob. le Spenser, Gilb. de Peek, Ric. de Fylyngley, John Luk, Ric. de Godesvowes, Ric. de Northampton, Geoffrey de Peek, John le Baxtere, Henry de VVhitmore, Adam de Keresleye, and Ric. Teynton of Coventre, for two Priests to Sing Mass dayly at the Altar of the Holy Cross, in this Church, for the good estate of K. Edm. the 3. and of Isabell Q. of Engl. his mo-

Corpus-Christi Chantry.

ALL that I find of this Chantry, is, that the Prior of Coventre presented three Priests unto it successively in E. 3. time: but when it was founded, by whom, or how dissolved I cannot say.

And besides all this an allowance in bread, beer, and two messes of meat, as much as was sufficient for two Monks, every day, given^s by the Monks of Cobentre to them at the foundation of this Hospitall.

Other lands and rents they had, as is evident by the Survey, taken in 26 H. 8. but when, or by whom bestowed I have not seen; the value of all being then certified, to extend unto 99. l. - 13. s. - 06. d. per an. Out of which I will onely instance such of their reprises as are most observable; viz. 33. s. - 04. d. yearly to the Mayor and Chamberleyns of this City, towards the repair of the walls: 26. s. per an. in bread and beergiven to poor people at the Gate of the Hospitall, by the Ordinance and foundation thereof: 60. s. yearly in renewing of 20. All which, with the other deductions not mentioned, amounting to 32. l. - 10. s. 04. d. per an. leave the clear yearly value, as it was at that time certified, 67. l. - 03. s. - 02. d.

But this Hospitall (with most else of the same kind) being dissolved in the Parl. of 37 H. 8. was, by the said K. Letters Pat. ^w dated 23 Julii the same year, with all the lands and possessions thereunto belonging, granted unto John Hales Gent. and his heirs; which John, being an active man in those days, and Clerk of the Hamper (an Office then of no small benefit) and having accumulated a great estate in Monastery and Chantry lands, resolved to erect a lasting monument to his memory (for he had neither child nor wife) and thereupon, designing the foundation of a Free-School here, and that the King should have the honour thereof, (for which respect he had no little favour in his purchases, as I have credibly heard) obtained license^x for the amortizing of lands thereto, of CC. marks per an. value, converting the buildings to that use; on the front whereof is this following Inscription.

SCHOLA REGIS HENRICI OCTAVI

Howbeit

Howbeit, till the 15 of Q. Eliz. reign, (which was the year wherein he dyed) this School, so by him begun to be founded, was not certainly endowed: but then did his Executors; viz. Thomas Docura of Dffelep in com. Berff. Elq. and Bartholmew Hales of Snytterfeld in this County of War. Gent. in accomplishment of the trust reposed in them by the said John, by their deed dated 5 Martii, convey and assure unto the Mayor, Bayliffs and commonalty of this City, the site of the said Hospitall and lands thereto appertaining, with divers mess. Gardens, &c. lying also in Cobentre, and belonging to the late dissolved Priories of Cobentre and Kenilworth; together with certain Mills, called the White frier-mill, Waste mill, and Wyll-mill; to the intent, that, out of the profits of the premises, the sum of xx.l. yearly should be paid to an able Schoolmaster for to teach Grammar in the said School; and x. l. to an Usher, (the Schoolmaster having for his habitation the mansion-House wherein the late Master of the said Hospitall did dwell, and the Usher another House, within the site of the said Hospitall.) Lii.s. per an. to a Musique-master, for to teach at three convenient times in every week so many of the Schollars of the same School, to sing, as should be willing to learn: And to a Bayliff to gather up the said Rents, and see the Houses kept in reparations xxvi.s. viii. d. yearly; the residue to be employed in repaying of the same Houses, and the overplus to augment the living of the said School-master and Usher.

The Gray-Friers.

THE place where this quondam Religious house stood, is very well known to all that have observed any thing of Cobentre; in regard the spire-steeple, which was part thereof, is yet standing, giving occasion unto strangers that pass through the town, to think that there is still a Church in that place. But before I descend to speak in particular of this Friery, it will be proper, (I conceive) to say something of their Order, in generall; and next of their propagation in this Kingdom.

First therefore, as to their originall, we shall find, that St. Francis (a person famous for his strict and holy life) was the man from whom this Order sprung; whose birth-place (being of a noble extraction) is said to have been at Assise in Umbria (a Province of Italy.) And that, in the very time of his youth, betaking himself to divine studies, no whit regarding the transitory pleasures of this present world, he afterwards neglected his patrimony, which was not small, wore a coul and hair-shirt, went barefoot, and macerated himself with frequent watches and fastings. As also, to the intent that he might make choice of voluntary poverty, he resolved to enjoy nothing as his own, no not so much as food for his body, otherwise than what he received in Almes from good people. And moreover, if he had any thing left, after a slender refreshment, he ever bestow'd it on the poor, reserving nothing for the morrow. That, in the night time he always slept in his cloaths, lying down upon a Matt, having no pillow for his head but a stone: And thus, going barefoot with an Evangelique preparation, did embrace an Apostolique life, preaching upon Sundays and Festivalls in Parish-Churches; which did so much the more work upon the hearts of his auditory, by how much he was a stranger to all carnall desires. The Statutes of which Order, to this day observed, together with some other strict Rules, he presented to Pope Innocent the third: which, together with the circumstances of his reception, and their confirmation, I shall for brevity pass by; and the rather for that they are at large set forth by my Author, and confirm'd by the said Pope, in the year of Christ 1207. (9. Ioh.)

To this relation I shall briefly adde what a later author hath of him; viz. that when he first betook himself to this regular life, he wore shoos and a Lethern Girdle; but revolving in his mind, that our blessed Saviour gave command to his Apostles, that they should not have two coats, nor any purse, he put on a single coat of plain wool, girt himself with a cord, and went barefoot. And at the length, that he might live an Anchorite, betook himself to the Apenine-mountains, and in Averne (at the foot of them) continued in great solitude; where devoting himself wholly to divine contemplations, he branded his body with the marks of our Lords Passion, and called those Minors which he chose, from the first, to be his companions in that Rule, as a manifest token of his humility; to the end that they, being mindfull of that slender appellation, should be free from all pride, which is oft times the companion of sanctity.

His Rule being confirmed by Honorius the third; and two years after; viz. an. 1229. Gregory theix. canonizing him for a Saint, no humane institution increased so much as this, in a short time, did: for they were soon spread over the whole Christian world; Terram repleverunt fidei & Math. Westm. In towns and Cities they dwelt by tens and seavens in a Covent; and possessing nothing, but meely living by the Gospell, in food and rayment they manifested their voluntary poverty; and going bare-foot, girt with a knotty cord, gave the greatest example of humility imaginable.

Touching their first coming into England, I find it was in an. 1224. 8 H. 3. viz. two years before the death of S. Francis: but how well the Monks lik't of it let us hear one of them speak, An. 1224. Oh dolor! O plus quam dolor! O pestis truculenta! Fratres Minores venerunt in Angliam. For which grievous complaint I need not look further, as to the reason, than Math. Westm. who modestly gives this character of them. They were diligent instruments for the Pope in all his affairs (saith he) sometimes as Messengers or Legats; sometimes in gathering up Taxes, alwaies sedulous for his advantage: neither were they slack in Preaching, signing with the Cross, and assisting the sick in making of their Testaments; which employment did not a little hinder the Monks, both in point of profit and power.

I come now to speak of their fixing here, in Cobentre. That they had not any Charter of foundation for this House: nor indeed any formal grant in writing of the place whereon it stood, is no wonder; considering that, being not endow'd with lands, they wholly liv'd on the charity of others (as we see these beyond Sea do at this day, going constantly by couples with wallets on their shoulders to receive Almes.) And as for their habitation here, with the Church; 'tis certain that the structure of both was wholly made at the cost of good people; so great a respect did the world in those days bear towards them, by reason of their devout and austere lives. For it appears, that in an. 1234. 19 H. 3. Raph Fitz-Nicholas, then Sherriff of Warwicksh. in his account makes mention of shingles allow'd by the K. for covering their Oratory here, and delivered out of the woods at Bentlow for that purpose; which, being but xi. years after their first coming into England, doth argue clearly, that then was the time they first settled in Cobentre; the ground whereon this House was built, being allow'd unto them by Ranulph the last of that name Earl of Chester, out of his Mannour of Cheplemoze, as is evident. And therefore upon the grant of Cobentre, made in Fee-ferme to the Monks by Roger de Monte and Cecilie his wife, 34 H. 3. it, together with the Mannour-house and Park of Cheplemoze were reserved to the said Roger and Cecily and their heirs.

It seems that these Friars had afterwards also many good Benefactors: for so fair a Church as that hath been, by view of the steeple yet standing, could not be built without very great cost. But that the same structure was made in E. 3. time, I am induc'd to believe; partly from the form of its fabrick; and partly because I find, that Edw. Prince of Wales (commonly called the Black-Prince) by his Charter bearing date 14. Dec. 32 E. 3. gave leave to these Friars (of whom, as the same grant expresses he was Patron) for to take so much stone out of his Quarry in the Park of Cheplemoze, as they should have occasion to use about their buildings and walls. And likewise liberty to have a Poitern, from their mansion into his Park, to carry out any of their Covent that should be diseased, so that they were not to go further then the said Quarry: The Key of which Dore to be alwaies kept by the Warden of the same Friars, or his substitute; and no other to pass that way but such as were sick.

And as I am of opinion that then was the time of its building; so do I imagine, that some of the Hastings were good Benefactors thereto, in regard that divers of them lay buried in a Chappell of the same Church, called Hastings's Chappell, and some in the very habite of Friers-Minors, so great an esteem had they of this Order. Wherefore, to fortify my conjecture, I have here added a very notable memoriall touching those honourable persons of that family, who lye here interred.

That this Order of Friars was very much esteem'd and revered by all sorts of people, is evident enough. For whosoever shall take notice of such bequests, as by the Testaments of most men and women were made in ancient time, may find, that as they seldome neglected to give more or les to one or other Religious house of this Rule; so, if they were persons of quality, they did frequently make choice of their sepulture in them, as I shall have occasion to shew in some part of this work. Neither was it the least policy of these Friars to obtain from great persons such a disposall of their bodies, considering how they were imployed and trusted in making their Testaments (as I have already shewed:) For where ever they sped in that kind, they were sure to have a good Legacy from the Testator, and not without hope, by so fair an example, to obtain no les advantage from his posterity: So that Tho. de Walsingham, speaking of the buriall of Q. Elianore's heart in the Church of the Friers-Minors at London, did not without cause complain of them in these words

—Qui (meaning the said Friars) sicuti et cuncti fratres reliquorum Ordinum, aliquid de corporibus quorumcunque potentium morientium

p In bibl. Cotton. [sub effigie Vesp. D.9.]

Before the suppression of the Monasteries, this City was very famous for the Pageants that were play'd therein, upon Corpus-Christi-day; which occasioning very great confluence of people thither from far and near, was of no small benefit thereto; which Pageants being acted with mighty state and reverence by the Friers of this House, had Theaters for the severall Scenes, very large and high, placed upon wheels, and drawn to all the eminent parts of the City, for the better advantage of Spectators: And contain'd the story of the New-Testament, composed into old English Rithme, as appeareth by an ancient M.S. intituled Ludus Corporis Christi, or Ludus Coventriae.

I have been told by some old people, who in their younger years were eye-witnesses of these Pageants so acted, that the yearly confluence of people to see that shew was extraordinary great, and yielded no small advantage to this City.

The next thing whereof I am to take notice, in relation to this Friery, is K. H. 8. Survey, in 26. of his reign: At which time it did appear, that they had no lands or tenements; nor other possessions spirituall or temporall, but onely a liberty in the Countrey to receive the Charity of good people. This being so, I expect that some may demand why it was not dissolved in 27 H. 8. when the lesser Houses went to wrack. Whereunto I answer, that the Act for that purpose, extendeth onely unto Monks, Channons, and Nuns: but if it be askt, why these were then so sheltered from the first storm; the reason, I think, is apparent; viz. there was nothing to be got by their ruin, forasmuch as they had no endowment of lands, &c. though God was as much dishonoured by the lewd lives of the Friers for want of good government (as the preamble of that Act imports, in case it say true) as by any other whose Houses were certified to be of less value then C C. l. per an. which favour we see gave these poor Friers liberty to breath here a while longer in expectation of their ruin; viz. till 30 H. 8. that all the great Houses were dissolved; they being then forc'd to subscribe an Instrument, whereunto their Common-Seal is affixt; and in which the error of that Regular course they had practised, is confessed; whereby they surrendered this House into the said K. hands, as the Copy thereof (being not ordinary, and therefore here inserted) doth manifest.

Which said House or site, was in 34 H. 8. granted by the K. (inter alia) to the Mayor, Bayliffs and Commonalty of this City and their successors for ever. 1 Pat. 34. H. 8. p. 5.

Near unto the ruins of this Friery, is there an Hospitall (now called the Crab-Frier-Hospitall, in respect of its situation) touching the Foundation whereof, and its successive Benefactors nefactors, I shall not need to say any thing more, then what the Inscription upon the walls there, do declare.

May the 4. an. 1529. Mr. William Fourd of this City, Merchant of the Staple, founded this Almehouse, for five men and one woman; and gave to each of them five pence a week for their maintenance. Afterwards Mr. William Pisford, his Executor, gave other lands, and appointed six men and their wives to be placed therein, and each couple to have seven-pence half penny a week. But Mr. William Wigston, having power from both of them, to alter, adde, or diminish their wills; for the better ordering of the said House, did ordain, that there should be but five men, and their wives, and a Nurse; and each couple to have seven pence half penny a week, and the Nurse the same.

In the seventh year of King James, the lands given to this Hospitall, were questioned as concealed from the Crown; and were again purchased by the City; who have ever since maintained the charitable uses, with a great addition out of the Chamber of the City.

In the year 1621. the City added another man and woman at their own charge; so that there is now six couple, besides the Nurse; each couple being allow'd two shillings weekly, and the Nurse one shilling a week, although there be not any advance of the Rent to the City. Mr. Simon Norton, Alderman of this City, gave towards the maintenance of one man and woman in this Hospitall, for which the City doth allow two shillings a week also, as the rest have; so that there is now seven couple, and a Nurse in this Hospitall.

The white Friers.

ON the South-east part of this City stood the Friers-Carmelites, commonly called the White-Friers, another sort of Mendicants. The first institution of which Order, as divers Authors affirm, having been Elias the Prophet, at Mount-Carmell in Syria; where, living a retired life in the service of God, he gave example unto many devout Anachorites to repair thither for solitude: but these being disperst over the whole mountain, in private Cells, were at length by Almeric Bishop of Antioch, reduced into one Covent; at which time they elected out of themselves a Superior, and first began the foundation of a Monastery, where the Chappell of the Blessed Virgin stood; viz. near the fountain of Helias. Howbeit, the observance of this life began not till the days of Pope Alexander the third, about the year 1170. Nor till the time of Innocent 3. near 40. years after, had they any direct Order, that Albert B. of Hierusalem prescribed unto them (thus living in the wilderness) a form out of St. Basills Rule, and a parti-coloured mantle of white and red, such a one as Helyas the Prophet antiently used; which afterwards Honorius iii. altered; conceiving it not to be so proper; and in sted of the party-colour, appointed that it should be all white, calling the Covent of these Freres the family of the Blessed Virgin; in regard the white colour, being least spotted, doth best accord with Virginity.

But the first mention that I find of their propagating in this Realm, is in an. 1250. 34 H. 3. at which time Sir John de Vescy of Alnwick in Northumberland (a great Baron in those days) returning from the Holy-land, brought into England this Order of Friers, and built for them a Monastery at Holme, in Northumberland) then a desert place, and not unlike to Mount-Carmell before mentioned. Yet here, in Coventre they settled not till an. 1342. 16 E. 3. that Sir John Poultney Kt. (4. times Lord Mayor of London) erected this House for them; whose Armes cut in stone are still extant over the Gates thereof.

With lands they had no endowment; but, as the Grey-Friers, before spoken of, lived on the charity of good people; which was not slender; so high an opinion had the strictness of their Rule and austerity of their lives obtained; there being few persons of quality, residing within many miles, that by their Testaments gave not liberally to them, as by that of the Lord Bassett of Wynton in 7 R. 2. appeareth, where by they had no less then a Legacy of CCC.l.

Further mention, after which time, I find not, till 1 H. 5. that the K. granted a licence to Will. Botener of Withibroke to give unto them a piece of ground lying here in Coventre, containing 141. foot in length and 45. in breadth, for the enlargement of their habitation; in consideration whereof they were to celebrate the Anniversary of John Percy and Alice his wife deceased. But shortly after the foundation of this Religious house, was there one William, a Frere thereof, who became very famous for his learning, and was commonly called Guilhelmus Coventre; of whom Balans in his sixth Century pag. 461. maketh large mention, and of the works that he wrote; whereunto I refer my Reader.

In 22 H. 7. did Sir Thom. Poultney of Spilberton Kt. (lineall heir to the before specified Sir John) by his Testament, bearing date 3. Apr. bequeath his body to be buried in the Chancell here; appointing, that at his Funerall 24. torches, each having his Armes upon them, should be born by xxiii. poor men, every one having a Gown with the Libberds-head behind and before.

Upon the Survey taken in 26 H. 8. it was found, that there were certain Burgages in Coventre, belonging to these Friers, which yielded 03.l.-06.s.-08.d. per an. rent. And that the oblations in the Chappell of our Lady, did, one year with another, amount to 05.l.-18.s. per an.

Will. Kyng.

No Penſion being allow'd to any of them.

After which this Houſe, with all that belong'd thereunto, excepting the rent of xx. s. per annum, due to Mereton's Chantry, before mentioned, was (inter alia) by the Kings Letters pat.ⁱ dated 27. Aug. 36. H.8. granted to Sir Raph Sadler Knight, and his heirs, to hold in Burgage; which Sir Raph ſold it to John Hales (of whom I have ſpoke in S. John's Hoſpitaſſy;) who made it his habitation, as it ſeems: For by his laſt Will & Teſtament dated 17. Dec. 15. Eliz. appointing it to be ſold, he there calls it by the name of Hales-place, alias White-Friers in Cobentre. This was that John whom the learned Leland calledⁱ Hales with the club-foot; which lameneſs and deformity was occaſioned (as I have heard) by a wound with a dagger, that caſually, in running fell forth of the ſheath into the dirt; ſo that as he ſtept forward the ſole of his foot did hit upon the point thereof. He dyed 5. Cal. Jan. Anno 1572. (15. Eliz.) and was buried in the Church of S. Peters the Poor in Broadſtreet London, as his Epitaph in Stow's Survey^m, which I have here inſerted, imports.

Dominus Johannes Hales, à pueritiâ literis de-ditus, & excellenti ingenio, docilitate, memoriâ, ſtudio, & induſtria ſingulari: adjunctâ linguarum, diſciplinâ juris, Antiquitatis, rerum divinarum atq; humanarum magna & multiplici doctrinâ inſtructiſſimus. Evaſit innocentia, integritate, graviſ-sima etiam agrotationis, & rerum diſſicilium diuturnâ perſeſſione; & in patientia ornaſſimus fuit.

5. Cal. Jan. 1572. clauſit anima & corporis. Reliquia hoc loco ſita ſunt.

But notwithstanding the before-ſpecified appointment, it was not accordingly ſold: for John Hales Eſq. deſcended from Chriſtopher his eldeſt brother, now enjoys it as his heir. At the death of the before ſpecified John, the Church was compleatly ſtanding, as appears by that Inquiſ. but it continued not long after: for about....Eliz. Mr. Edward Boughton, obeyning the materials, built his houſe at Cauſton therewith.

The Gilds.

THE next thing that I am to take notice of, is the ſeverall Gilds or Fraternities founded in this City, wherewith I will now go on in their order; obſerving by the way, that Gild proceedeth from the Saxon word gelo and gilo, which ſignifyeth money; becauſe that ſuch, as were either for charity, religion or merchandize ſake aſſociated, did caſt their moneys, goods, yea, and ſometimes lands together, for the publique ſupport of their own common charge. Theſe had their annuall Feaſts and neighbourlike meetings: which cuſtome as Sir H.

Spelman obſerves, was very antiently uſed by the Franks, Longobards, and other Nations; and is ſtill continued by the Germans, who call the frequent yearly banquets of the country people, made at their common charge, Gilden. As to the direct time when theſe had firſt a beginning in England, there is nothing of certainty to be found, for as much as they were in uſe long before any ſmall Licenſes were granted unto them for ſuch meetings, or for conſerring lands or Rent towards the ſupport of their publique expences in what ſort ſo-ever, as by what I have obſerv'd in Stratford ſu- per Avon will appear.

The firſt and moſt antient of theſe Gilds, here in Cobentre, was founded in 14. E. 3. at which time the King granted licence to the Cobentre- men, that they ſhould have a Merchants-Gild, and a Fraternity of Brethren and Siſters of the ſame, in this town; with a Maſter or Warden thereof to be choſen out of the ſame Fraternity: and that they might make Chantries, beſtow Almes, do other works of piety, and conſtitute Ordinances touching the ſame, with all appertaining thereto.
And in 17. E. 3. by another Pat.ⁱ dated 25. Maii, did give leave unto John Holland Prieſt, John Lem- man, Thomas Porter, Ric. de Stoke, Peter de Stoke, and Will. Welnesburgh, that they ſhould enter into a Fraternity, and make a Gild, conſiſting of themſelves, and ſuch others who were content to joyn with them, to the honour of S. John Baptiſt. As alſo to purchaſe certain lands tenements and Rents, to the value of xx. l. per annum, lying within the liberties of Cobentre, for the founding of a Chan- try of fix Prieſts to ſing Maſs every day in the Churches of the holy Trinity, and S. Michael in Cobentre aforeſaid, for the ſoules of the Kings
Progenitors; and for the good eſtate of the King;
Q. Iſabell his mother, Q. Philippa his conſort, and their children: As alſo of Walter de Cheſthunt, and Will. de Belgrave during their lives here on earth; and for their ſoules after their departure hence; and for the good eſtate of the ſaid John, John, Thomas, Rich. Peter, and Will. and the reſt of the ſaid Gild, with their benefactors; And likewise for their ſouls, and for the Soul of John of Eltham. late E. of Cornwall, and of all the faithfull de-ceaſed.

Which Gild, being ſo founded as aforeſaid; within two years after the ſame K. Edward, at the requeſt of Q. Iſabell his mother, granted licence unto her, to give and aſſigne thereunto, a parcell of land with the appurtenances ſituate in Cobentre, and called by the name of Wabbelake, containing cxvii. foot in length, and xl. foot in breadth, to build thereupon a certain Chappell, to the honour of our blessed Saviour and S. John Baptiſt, for two Prieſts, to ſing Maſs daily for the good eſtate of the ſaid K.
Edward, Q. Iſabell his mother, Q. Philippa his conſort, Edward Prince of Wales, and of the Brethren and benefactors of the ſame Gild, whilſt they lived in this world; and for their ſoules after their departure hence: As alſo for the ſoules of John of Eltham E. of Cornwall, and the ſoules of the ſaid Brethren and benefactors, with all the faith-full deceaſed. Which Chappell was finiſht within the compaſs of 5. years, as it ſeems by the Dedication thereof 6. Non. Maii An. 1350. 24. E. 2.

IN 38. E. 3. Henry de Kele, and Tho. Orme of Cobentre founded another Gild to the honour of the holy Trinity, having license to purchase lands, within the liberties of Cobentre, of x. marks yearly value, for the maintenance of two Priests to sing Mass daily in Trinity Church, for the good estate of the K. Q. Philippa his consort, and their children: and after their departure out of this world, for the health of their souls; as also for the souls of all the Brethren and Sisters of the same, and their benefactors for ever. Which Gild, being in 16. R. 2. united to that of S. John Baptist before mentioned, was, upon that conjunction, and afterwards to bear the name of the Gild of the holy Trinity, our Lady, and S. John Bapt. the Fraternity thereof having then license to purchase lands for the maintenance of ix. Priests to sing Mass daily in the said Chappell of Babbelake, for the good estate of the K. and Q. as also of his Uncles, viz. the Dukes of Aquitane, and Lanc. York, and Glouc. with their children: So that presently it began to be endowed with lands, Richard Clarke, Richard Dodenhale, Simon de Langham of Cobentre, John Suward, Roland Danet, and Henry atte Hey Mercer, giving x. 2. mcs, and 24 s. rent in Cobentre; And John Percy, with divers others, 140. 1. Mill, 92. acres of land, 1. acre of meadow, 1. acre of wood, 20 l. 17 s. 01 d. ob. rent, and the rent of 2. Hens yearly thereunto; the Brethren whereof in anno 1399. (1 H. 4.) had license from the Bishop for celebrating divine service in the said Chappell, so that the mother-Church might not receive prejudice thereby.

More addition of lands also do I find hereunto; viz. in 10. H. 4. of 1. mcs. in Cobentre, given by Will. Broke, parson of Loobzok, John Broke, his brother, and John Barbour of Bishops Echington. And in 6. H. 5. of 4. mcs. one tofte, one garden, and xi. acres of land, with the appurtenances, by John Preston, and Will. Whitchurch, merchants of Cobentre; and of lands to the value of 50 l. per annum by Henry Smyth esquire, and others in 23. H. 7.

S. Katherines Gild.

ANother Gild, do I find, that Tho. de Ichyn-ton, Nich. Pake, Will. de Tutebury, Will. de Overton, Clark, Peter Percy, Ric. de Darkere, Sim. Wareyn, John Vincent and John de Pakyn-ton gave a fine to the K. for license to found in 17. E. 3. to the honour of S. Katherin: but this, as it seemes, was united to those of the holy Trinity, our Lady, and S. John Bapt. whereunto belonged a fair and stately structure for their Feasts and meetings, called S. Mary-hall, situate opposite to S. Michael-Church on the South part; and built about the beginning of H. 6. time, as may appear by the form of its fabrick, and other testimonies: the windows whereof are adorn'd with sundry beautiful portraitures and Armes; that towards the North, of severall K. in their surcotes, whose names placed under them, are as followeth; Rex Will. Conquestor. Rex Rich. Conquestor. Rex egregius Henricus quintus. Rex magnanimus Henricus quartus. Constantinus Anglicus. Imperator Christianissimus. Rex Arthurus, Conquestor inclitus. Rex illustris Henricus tertius. Rex Henricus sextus.

A la reverence, honneur, & en le nom de trois personnes en Dieu, le Pere, Fils, & le saint Esprit, la puissant Trinite, & de sa douce miere la Virgine Marie, seynt Johan Baptistre, seint Katherine, & tous les saints de ceel, certaines bones gentes & Burgeses de la ville de Coventre, en salvacion de leur almes, ont ordeignes une Gilde pur eux, & pur aultres queux voillent entrier en la dite Gilde, & certeynes poyntes profitables, desoubt escriptes en mayntenance de la dite Gilde.

1. La premier point est que les Friers & Soers de la dite Gilde troveront & averont tresses Chapeleyns sages couvenables & de honeste & chaste vie; & soient yci eslus par les souveraynes de la cele Fraternite pur lier, prier & chauntier pur toutz les frers & soers de la dite Gilde, & pur tous le bien-faitours a ycele. Et que chescun iour soit la office en leur chapel pur icelle ordeigne; ceste asavoir, Matynes, Messes, Vespres, & Complin chaume per Note; & apres complin un Antym per Note de la virgine Marie, oue cync serges de cere ardaunts devant la ymage de la dit Virgine: de queles Chapeleyns chanteront chascun iour certeynes Messes; ceste asavoir Messes de iour par Note; une Messe de la Seint Trinite, une de nostre Dame, une Messe de S. John Baptistre, une Messe de S. Katherine, & une Messe de Requiem, ensemblement ove aultres Messes come partient a eux a faire.

2. La second point este, que si aucun prosd'homme de la dite fraternite gen soun poir ad este bien voillaunt al estat de ycele, par fieu, enwe, roborie, ou par aucune aultre aveynure de secle, que ne soit my de sa folly demesme, chiece en poverté; le souvereyne de la compaignye, & ses compaignons luy aprestent une porcion d'argent de la dite fraternite pur marchander & profiter, sur la surete qu'il peut fair sauns riens prendre de gain. Et si aucun tiel soit enfebly per malady ou vean lessé que mesmes ne peut travailler, yl serra troue a la costage de la dite Gilde couvenablement soloune de que soun este demaunde.

3. La tierce point este, que nul home ne semie q'est apertement alose de felonye, homycide, lecherie, basardour, de forcerye, ou heresy; ne pur comun contekur, ne de nule vice abominable, que nul tiel soit rescue en la dite Fraternite. Et si par avigne que soit, que nul de eux apres le temps q'il soit entre en la dit Fraternite, change sa vie en aucunes des vices susdites, il serra garny par la Mestres & ses compaignons de cesser & retourner a sa bone vie, & s'il ne veut cesser de sa malveyse vie, il serra ouste hors de la dite fraternite a tous iours.

4. Le quart point est, que en chescun an soient faits quatres sollemnites, ceste asavoir le feste de la seynt Trinite, la Assumption nostre Dame, seint John Baptistre & S. Kateryn pur les freres & soers queux sont en ville, & de ces queux voillent venir de pais, solempnement a la reverence avant-dit.

5. Le quint poynt este, que en chescun an soit fait quatres Anniversaries, pur tous les almes des Friers & Soers de la dit compaignie a Dieu comendes, & pur tous les biens seffours de ycele.

6. Le sixieme pointe este, que chescun Friere d'eux en tous places quant lieu & temps demande, parlera & procurera a la dite fraternite l'amye & la bonte, q'il peut bonement faire, par quey l'estate de cele compaignie le meultes peut acrestre, & estre main- teine, & chescun d'eux avera autre parfitement de coer & naturellement serra pur aultre par reason del alliauns de cele Fraternite; Et que nule home de cele Fraternite ne soy si feel de soy bander de male- faire, contekier ne nule poynt de contek, ne d'aultre male mayntenance par reason de mayntenance de la dite compaignie sur la peyne de voyder le compaignie pur tous iours.

7. Le septiesme point este, que tous les Chap- pelleyns queux chauntout pur la dite Fraternite, soient charges par leur serement, qua a quele temps que aucun Frere ou Soer de la dite fraternite, si bien hors de ville en quele place git ou dedeins, de- vie, que chescun des dits Chapeleyns chanteront pur l'alme de celuy a Dieu commende par noun de son Baptisme par un an apres si mort continuel- ment.

8. Le vtieme poynt este, que a quel temps que as- cun Freres ou Soers de la dite Gilde deins ou hors de ville, ou outre le mare, & le Mestres de la Gilde eut soit garny al serra assembler tous les Chapeleyns de la Gylde, Clerks & autres bones gentes de la dito Fraternite queux ferount Dirige per Note solempne- ment; & la iour prochein suant Messe per Note a la Chapel de S. John Babelake, & offerount illeques en mesme la manoir q'est affaire pur celuy que devie en ville. Et que le Bedeman alera par tote la ville a prier pur l'alme a les constages de la dite Gilde.

9. Item ordeigne este, que si aucun Frere ou Soer devie en poverté; & n'ad my de ses biens propre, dount estre ensevely que devie, soiet il ensevely ho- norablement come il appiert a une Frere & Soer as les costages de la Gylde.

Hac est ordinatio & regula facta & constituta per assensum totius Fraternitatis Gylde S. Trinitatis, S. Mariæ, S. Johannis, & S. Katherinæ, pro Capellanis ejusdem Gylde faciendis; ac pro sanitate corporis ac animæ valde utilis.

Et quod ad horas Vesperarum, hostia sint aperta durante hora Vesperarum in Ecclesia parochiali.

The Oath.

Ye shall be good and true , and each of you shall be good and true to the master of the Gild of the holy Trinity, our Lady, S. John, and S. Katherine of Coventre , and to all the Brethren and Sisters of the same Gild ; And all the good Rules and ordinances by the said Master and his Brethren afore this time made , and hereafter to be made , and your days of payment truly for to keep to your power, to God you help and all Saints.

Petition.

Master we beseech you at the reverence of the holy Trinity , that you will vouchsafe to receive us to be Brethren of this place with you.

Nay so great a reputation had this Fraternity far and neer, that K. H. 4. and K. H. 6. with divers of the principall Nobility, Bishops, and other eminent persons thought it no dishonour to be admitted thereof , as by this ensuing Catalogue , where many more are registred, may be seen.

Hæc sunt nomina fratrum & sororum Gildæ S. Trinit. S. Mariæ , S. Johan. Bapt. & S. Katherinæ Coventriæ , viva & mortua subscripta.

And it is observed, that the annuall Master of this Gild was he that had been Mayor the year before; who, during his continuance in that office, sat next to the Mayor in all publique meetings. The Oath of which Master I have likewise here inserted.

I shall be good and true to the Brethren and Sisters of the Trinity-Gild, S. Mary, S. John, and S. Katherine of Cobentre; and all lawfull points and Ordinances of this place, afoze this time ordeyned truly to kepe to my power; and in especiall all the ordinances that been or shall be the generall days ordeyned, truly kepe and observe. Also I shall truly receibe, and true accompt yeild, as well of my receipts, as of all other things that longen to the Master of this Gild; and the arerage of my accompt, if any be, truly pay or depart from my accompt; and all other things truly doe that longen to the office of the said Master; So help me God and all Saints. Also I shall once before Candlemas next coming, with 6. or 4. Brethren of this Yeild, oversec all the tene-ments of the same Yeld.

Upon the Survey taken in 26 H. 8. it appears, that Mr. Reb. Glasmond, being then Warden of this Colledge of Babbelake (for by that name it was then called) had viii l. per ann. stipend; and that there were 7 Priests more, which had iii l. xiii s. iii d. per ann. a peice for their Salary. But in 37 H. 8. upon the Survey then taken, I find, that the revenue of all the lands belonging to the said Gild amounted to Cxi l. xiii s. 8 d. out of which (inter alia) was then paid 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. per ann. to a certain Priest called the Warden of the Chappel of Babbelake: And to eight other Priests celebrating divine service there, 37 l. 6 s. 8 d. per ann. To the Master of a Grammar-School there 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. per ann. To two Clerks singing there 8 l. per ann. To two Boys also singing there 2 l. per ann. To divers poor men which had formerly been Brethren of the said Gild 10 l. in money according to the ancient use. To Tho. Gregory Clerk-Controulor of the same Gild 6 l. per ann. And every Priest having likewise a Chamber within the precinct of the same Babbelake, worth 4 s. per ann. a peice.

Bond's Almshouses.

*i lb. f. 3. b.
(k) Lel. Itin.
vol. 4. f.
190.)*

Here was moreover within this place of Babbelake an Almshouse founded by one Thomas Bond (a rich Merchant of Cobentre) wherein, at the time of the said Survey, were ten poor men and one woman kept, to pray for the souls of the said Tho. Bond, his grandfather, father, and all Christian souls: All which were at that time maintained at the charge of Tho. Bond, grandchild to the said Thomas, by whose last Will the said Almshouse was to have been built, and such poor maintained, with a Priest; and to that end certain lands put in Feoffees hands, of 49 l. 11 s. 7 d. per ann. value: Out of which was paid to those poor people every Saturday 6 s. 8 d. which amounted to 17 l. 6 s. 8 d. per ann. To the Priest celebrating divine service, 13 l. 6 s. 8 d. per ann. and 20 s. for a gown. In toto 14 l. 6 s. 8 d.

For 38 yards of black cloth, to make gowns for the said poor men per ann. 3 l. 16 s. 0 d. In Alms given to the poor yearly, 13 s. 4 d. For 20 load of wood yearly for the said poor people 1 l. 3 s. 4 d. per ann. For the Bayliffs fee, 2 l. per ann. In toto xliii l. viii s. xi d. ob.

But this being dissolved by Act. of Parl. (as all other Chantries, Gilds, and the like Fraternities were) in 1 E. 6. (I mean what belong'd to the Gild) was by the K. Letters Pat. dated 12 Dec. 2 E. 6. granted unto the Bayliffs and Commonalty of this City, and their successors, to hold in Bur-gage by the service of 1 d. per ann.

Touching which Almshouse, I shall further adde, in memorial of the said Tho. Bond, and other its Benefactors, the Inscription upon the walls thereof.

This Hospitall was founded A. D. 1506. by Mr Tho. Bond, Draper, sometime Mayor and Alderman of this City, for ten men and one woman: who gave certain lands for maintenance thereof, which his son John Bond continued during his life. But Tho. the son of John, claimed those lands as his own; whereupon the City sued him in Chancery, and had a Decree against him, which cost them a great sum of money for certain lands valued then at 20 l. per ann. In the seventh year of H. James, the said lands were questioned as concealed from the Crown: which lands and tenements the City were enforced againe to purchase of the K. to their very great cost and expences. Notwithstanding, the City have continued the charitable uses as formerly: and as the lands have been improved, so hath the maintenance of the old men been bettered, and each mans place is now worth eleven pounds by the year.

Mr S. m. Norton, Draper, Mayor and Alderman of this City, An. D. 1641. gave 300 marks for and towards the maintenance of one man, and one boy, in this Hospitall of Babbelake, and one man and woman in Gray-Friers-Hospitall: which man and boy are accordingly placed in this House; and the City at their own charge makes their maintenance equall with the rest of the Hospitall-men and boys.

6. p. 6.)*

In the year 1560. this Hospitall for Boys was first erected in the place where now it is, being a House of the Cittyes; and was for some years mainteyned by the Cittie, and the charity of well disposed people, of Cittizens and Strangers, till Mr Wheately in An. 1566. selded some lands towards the mayntenance thereof: and other Benefactors since have given, in all, with his gift, about 96 l. per ann. Which being not sufficient to maynteine xxi Boyes, and a Purse, and place them out Apprentices, the Cittie both make up the rest, being above 40 l. a year, one year with another.

Corpus-Christi-Gild. } In Mill-lane.

THis Gild was founded in 22 E. 3. by Reb. Chaundos, John de Wynwik, Clerk, John de Wyndfore, John de Weston, Tho. Chaloner, Will. Prest, Henry de Busseby, Nich. le Hunt, John Prest, Will. de Teynton, Gilb. de Pulteney, John Russell sen. Ric. le Gouere, John de Busheley, Rog. de Tuwe, Nich. Floutere, Ric. Coupere, Peter Percy, and Nich. Pake, in honour of the body and blood of our blessed Saviour, for one Priest to sing Mass daily for the good estate of the same King E. and of the said Rob. John, &c. above specified, during their lives in this world, and for their souls afterwards, as also of all the faithfull deceased. Unto which, John Scardeburgh of Coventre, John Wedon, and divers others, granted 29 mess. and a half, 8 acres of land, and 18 d. yearly rent, all lying in Coventre, in 15 R. 2. The lands and tenements belonging whereunto, were, by the Survey taken in 37 H. 8. certified to be yearly worth 36 l. 10 s. 8 d. Out of which was annually paid to 4 Priests performing divine service in the Churches of the holy Trinity and S. Mich. viz. to each of them 4 l. a peice. In toto 16 l. To poor people, such as had formerly been of this Fraternity, Cs. per ann. And in obits yearly, Cs.

Of this Gild was Prince Edw. a Brother, being so admitted 18 E. 4. as he was also of Trinity-Gild before mentioned.

Sheremen and Taylors Gild. } adjoining to Gosford-gate in S. George his Chappel, as is said.

THere was yet one Gild more, viz. of the Sheremen and Taylors, founded (it seems) in R. 2. time, to the honour of Christs Nativity. Which K. gave them license to purchase lands in this City, of 8 marks per ann. value, to find a Priest to sing Mass every day, for the souls of the Founders thereof, and all the faithfull deceased. Whereunto K. H. 6. in 17 of his reign, added his license for their purchasing of more lands to the value of x marks per ann. and that they should choose 4 men of their Fraternity, yearly, at the Feast of the Nativity of our Lord, to be Masters or Governours of the same; and to have a Common Seal; as also power to plead in any of the Kings Courts as a body corporate.

From which Gilds or Fraternities there is no doubt but divers Companies in the Cities and Corporations through England took their first patterns for obtaining such priviledges and immunities as at this day they enjoy.

And now that these Citizens had thus associated themselves into the several Fraternities before mentioned, they began to have an opinion, that if any more such Gilds were allowed in this place, they might receive some inconvenience thereby: And therefore, in 1 H. 5. procured a declaratory Patent from the K. that thenceforth there should not be any new Gild erected. But the young people, viz. Journeymen of several trades, observing what merry-meetings and feasts their Masters had, by being of those Fraternities, and that they themselves wanted the like pleasure; did of their own accord assemble together in several places of the City, and especially in S. George's Chappel near Gosford-gate; which occasioned the Mayor and his Brethren, in 3 H. 6. to complain thereof to the King; alledging, that the said Journeymen, in these their unlawfull meetings, called themselves S. George his Gild, to the intent that they might maintain and abet one another in quarrels; and for their better conjunction had made choyce of a Master, with Clerks and Officers, to the great contempt of the K. authority, prejudice of the other Gilds (viz. the holy Trin. and Corp. Christi) and disturbance of the City. Whereupon the K. directed his Writ to the Mayor and Justices, with the Bayliffs of this City, commanding them by Proclamation to prohibite any more such meetings.

Having thus taken notice of all that is, or hath been within the Walls, which is worth observation, I come to the Suburbs, where I find nothing considerable but the Chappel or Hospital of Sponne, on the West part of this City. This Hospital was founded in H. 2. time by Hugh Kevelioke E. of Chester: who, having a certain Knight of his household, called Will. de Auney, a Leper, gave in pure Alms for the health of his soul, and the souls of his ancestors, his Chappel here at Sponne, with the site thereof, and half a carucat of land thereto belonging, for the maintenance of such Lepers as should happen to be in the Town of Coventre. In which Chappel was anciently one Priest at least, to celebrate divine service for the living and the dead. And with him had also wont to be certain Brethren and Sisters, together with the Lepers, praying to God for the good estate of all their Benefactors.

But this Hospital, upon the grant of the Mannour of Coventre to the Monks in 34 H. 3. by Rog. de Montalt and Cecily his wife, was (inter alia) reserved to the said Roger and Cecily, and their heirs; which Cecily had Coventre by inheritance from those Earls. And in the Release made to the said Monks of the premisses by her the said Cecily in her widowhood, is said to have been sometime belonging to the Abby of Wasingwerk in Flintsh. But clear it is, that the Monks shortly after appropriated it to their own use; though they held it not so very long: for I find, that it came at length to the Crown, together with the Mannour of Cheplemoze; and therein continued till 14 E. 4. But then did the K. pass it away to the Canons of Stabley in this County, and their successors, by the name of Libera Capella S. Marie Magd. apud Sponne juxta Coventre, with all the lands, tenements, &c. thereto belonging, in pure alms, to pray for the good estate of him the said K. and of Q. Eliz. his consort, Edw. his eldest

The Arch-deaconry of Coventre.

AND now before I leave this City, I may not omit to observe, that so much of ~~Warwick~~ as is within the Diocess of ~~Covent~~ and ~~Lich.~~ is called the Arch-deaconry of ~~Coventre~~, by reason that the Bishops for a long time seating themselves in ~~Stafford~~ have constantly assigned some eminent and grave Divine to reside here, to superintend the Clergy of these parts in their stead; who hath made his Visitations annually according to ancient custome for that purpose, and been stiled the Arch-deacon of ~~Coventre~~. As for the title of Arch-deacon, it is of no less antiquity than the primitive times of Christianity; the use then being, that the Deacons did elect out of themselves one whom they knew to be most eminent for his industry, and gave him that title: Howbeit of late years he who was more grave and prudent than the rest, hath commonly been advanced to that place. But before I proceed to speak of the particular Arch-deacons here, it will not be amiss to say something in a more special manner of the Office; forasmuch as what hath appertain'd thereto is not very commonly known. I shall therefore transcribe the substance of what I have met with, from a very good Authority, and no less ancient than H. 8. time.

Instructions for my Lord Wilber-Seall concerning the Bishop of Lincolne, and his Archdeacon touching the Bishop his demand of Prestations.

What apperteynth to th'office of an Arch-deacon, and whereupon his reverence, and what heretofore hath thereunto appertayned.

Procurations.	Fines of Testaments.
Sinodals.	Vacations of Benefices.
Peter-pens.	Installations of Abbots.
Pensions or Indemnities.

Procurations be dewe for visitation. Th'arch-deacon is bounde verely to visite all his Arch-deaconry thowheoute; then to enquire of all crimes and misgovernance of the people, as well the Clergie as the lae, by Church wardens and other; and to refozme whatsoever they finde otherwise then well, other committede haynously against the Lawes of God, or th'ordnance of the Prince for a quiet Common-wele, dissuant to Gods lawes, to Mans-lawes, and politike order of the worlde; to refozme the same, other by godly persuation and good advice, by commination, or by paynes and penalties, according to the humilty and umble subjection of the offender, and repentans of his offenses. For this his visitation he hath Procurations.

Sinodales.

Sinodals be dewe for the same kept at Ester by th'Arch-deacon, or his officers; calling together the Parsons, the Vicars, and Parish Priests, diligently enquiring of every of the same doe and have done their dewties according to the Lawes of God, Lawes of the Prince established, and th'ordnance of the Church accustomed; and have godely and diligently ministerede all Sacraments and Sacramentals to their parishioners at Ester then past, and for the yere before. For this kinde of Visitation Sinodals be dewe to the Arch-Deacon wiche the Bishop wolde now in any wise have, because of a Decretale that saith, quod Episcopo debentur Sinodalia, and for that Text. Now wolde the Bishop turne from his Peter-pens, calling them Prestations or Pensions, and wolde have them now dewe for Sinodals, wiche the Arch-deacons have had and enjoyed this 3. 6. 8. hundred yeres, without let, interruption, or contradiction of any Bishop. My Sinodals be not xli. by yere, and yet must I give to my Official 5 marks fee yerely, and as much to my Register, and also bere their costs yearly in riding to the sene, 4 or 5 l. so have not I xli. clear for my Sinodals. But put the case that these Sinodals were the Bishops, yet wherefore should I be bounde to gather his Sinodals; or why should I give 20 nobles fee to my officers to serve him, and to be his Collector. Dicat Apollo.

Peter-pens.

ALL Arch-deacons of England gathered Peter-pens of every ffer-household within every parish one peny, which were granted eight hundred yeres past by ~~Ed. Hyvo~~, and after confirmed by ~~Inas~~, then by ~~Offa Rex Marchiorum~~, by ~~Arnulphus~~ and other moe so following, and by ~~Ed. John~~ for his time. After some antique Authoys they were granted for a yerely Prest, or a perpetuall yerely subsidy. Episcopo Romano prestabantur in subsidium, saith divers Authoys. Others say they were given to a Schole in Rome, to the maintenance of English Scholars there, as ~~Fabian~~ and ~~Guido~~, with other: but now th'Arch-deacons, after the pens gathered, paid the same in part or all to the Collector of Rome, saving the Arch-deacon of Lincolne and Sarum; these payd the pens gathered to the Bishop, the B. payd to the Collector, and had his acquittance by the name of Peter-pens. Th'Arch-deacons had their acquittance of the B. by the name of Prestation-money; so the B. of Lincolne payd, but he gathered none: th'Arch-deacon gathered and payd, not to the Collector, but only to the B. Soe finally, seeing the B. never gathered Peter-pens, and yet payd them to the Collector every yere, and th'Arch-deacons gathered them yerely, and payd none to the Collector, but only to the B. what should the B. his demaunde other be then for Peter-pens.

To prove that this worde Prestation is very Peter-pens, hit is to manifestly declared in the B. of Rome his own lawe, in an Epistle decretall send Episcopo Cantuar. & Suffraganeis suis. The B. of Lincolne is one of his Suffragans, and perchance it was ment for him that was then B. of Lincolne, if he were as nigh scrapping as the B. that now ys at this present time. Textus est in capitulo de Censibus, in the Decretals, ea qua de avaritia verba sunt hac. Ne gravetis parochias & ecclesias vestras propter visitationem beati Petri, cum feceritis collectam denariorum. Glossator Bernardus, one of the B. of Rome his Secretaries, expoundeth hoc verbum Collectam. Collecta, inquit, est prestatio quedam, quam Anglici solvunt ecclesia Romana, & debet esse moderata, &c. See the Prestations is taken for Peter-pens in the B. of Rome his own law.

Pensions or Indemnities.

BE these, when a Church is impopere to an Abbepe or College, then the Arch-deacon for ever lefeth his Induction-money; and in recompence of that, he shall have verely out of the said Benefice for impopere it d. or s. for an verely pension, more or lesse, as hie is agreed at the tyme of the impopzation. And this money is calld Pensions, or Indemnities: And like as the Arch-deacon conservatur indemnis, by this his verely pension payd in the lew of the Induction, even so Episcopus conservatur indemnis, and hath a like Pension for his indemnity in the lew of his Institution, which he likewise calleth his Pension.

The first that I meet with, who was honoured with this office of Arch-deacon, is Ric. Peche, son of Rob. Peche B. of Coventre in H. 1. time, and advanc'd to be Arch-deacon by his said father: which Ric. afterwards became B. also of Cob. in H. 2. time, upon the decease of Walt. Durdent; but being a very devout man, and Founder of the Monastery of S. Thomas near Stafford, when he grew aged he left his Bishoprick, and took upon him the habit of a Canon-Regular in that Religious House, where he departed this life, and was buried.

The next, though not his immediate successor that I find, was a man, who became afterwards very eminent, viz. Will. de Kilkenny, being afterwards for a time Chancelour of England, and also B. of Ely. Homo egregia corporis formâ pradius; facundus, prudens, & legum municipalium admodum peritus, saith Godwyn. He dyed on the feast day of S. Mathew the Apostle, ann. 1256. 4 H. 3. being then in Spain Embassador; but his heart he appointed to be buried at Ely.

His immediate successor, as I believe, for he was Arch-deacon in 3 Job. was a man extraordinary famous for his learning, and a great Divine, whose memory is yet very pretious in our Universities, viz. Alexander de Hales; a Catalogue of whose learned Works are to be seen in Balauus de Script. Britannicis.

This Alex. in his age became a Frier at the Corde-liers in Paris; where, departing this life, he was buried near the steps ascending to the Quire; and hath over his grave a Monument of black marble, about 2 foot in height from the ground, with this Inscription engraven upon it.

Gualterus Coventriensis immortalis vir dignis memoriâ, in eadem celebri Warwicensis comitatus urbe, & natus, & educatus, ab honestis illic civibus originem duxit. Operam bonis literis sedulam admodum Oxonii impendebat, ubi gratissimum fuit optimarum disciplinarum emporium. Illustria ejus facta accurate, sed sparsim, à diligentissimo Lelando, chartis præcipue historicis, commendata sunt. Eo etenim teste historiam est magno aggressus animo, quam etiam inchoatam ab origine Britannorum, ad sua tempora, Ann. viz. Dom. 1226. majoribus animis deduxit. Secutus est autem hos potissimum authores Anglos, Galfridum Monumetensem, Rog. Hovedenum, & Henr. Huntingdonium; ita tamen ut multa addiderit non sine fide, quæ nuppiam apud illos leguntur. Unum certe defuit homini, alioqui claro: nam quamquam fide, & lucido ordine nuppiam, facundia tamen sapientiusculè destitutus erat. Quod non authoris, sed ætatis potius vitium fuit. I Have now done with Cobentre; which, as it much increaseth in wealth by Cloathing, and making of Caps; so since those trades have decayed, is now not a little fallen from the glory it anciently had. And being next to take view of those petty villages and places of note that environ it, I shall for my more orderly proceeding, begin with them that are on the Southwest side thereof, and conclude with those on the Northeast part.

Whaburley.

This is the first I meet with on the South-west side, where now no more than one single house is to be seen: but heretofore it was otherwise; for in K. Steph. time it had a Chappel, being of the E. of Chester's fee with Cobentre. And in 7 E. 1. Rog. Gopil possedit it, having then two yard land in demesne, and ten Free-holders, who occupied two yard land and a half, with an acre and a half, paying certain rent unto him, and doing suit to his 3 weeks Court. But the inheritance of the E. of Chester's fees coming to Montalt, (as I have elsewhere shewed) from whom Q. Isabell had an estate for life with reversion to the D. of Cornwall; this was by the said Q. included in that Charter made by her to the Mayor and Commonalty of Cobentre in E. 3. time, whereby she granted to them Return of Writs, goods of felons and fugitives, with cognizance of all pleas in Cobentre, and the Hamlets adjoining: As also in K. H. 6. Charter, by which Cobentre, with divers villages thereabouts, was made a County of it self, distinct from Warwickshire.

Asthall.

This place, being utterly depopulated, is now only known by a little thicket of trees, called Asthall-grove. But the first mention I find of it, is in 34 H. 3. upon the grant made by Rog. de Montalt and Cecily his wife, of Cobentre to the Monks; in which the said Rog. and Cecily did (inter alia) reserve the service of Will. de Olneie therein, for it seems he then held it. But in 3 E. 1. it was certified, that Oliver de Aubeny held half a Kts. fee here of the Mannour of Cobentre. And in 34 E. 1. by a Fine levied between Will. D'aubeny pl. and Amicia the widow of Oliver D'aubeny deforc. it was entailed upon the said Will. and the heirs of his body, with remainder to his two brothers, viz. Raph and John; and for want of issue by them, to Oliva and Isabell their sisters, and to the heirs of Isabell. By vertue of which entail Raph de Aubeny came to enjoy it, as it seems: for I find that he past it away to Will. Barret, Lord of Passenham in Portsmouth. Which Will. by his deed bearing date the morrow after the Assumption of our Lady, 22 E. 3. granted it to Henry E. of Lancaster; who in 35 E. 3. dyed seized of it, leaving Maud and Blanch his daughters and heirs. And this is all that I can say to the succession of it, by reason it hath been parcell'd out by sale to sundry persons.

OF this place is there no memorial now left, but a double moat which beareth the name: neither is there any thing of antiquity thereof, that I have seen, much materiall.

Horewelle.

This is also now, and hath been long depopulated. But in 7 E. 1. the same Oliver de Aubeny (Lord of Asthall before specified) was owner thereof, and held it of Rog. de Montalt; having at that time one carucat of land and a half in demesne, and suit of Court twice a year; with 7 Free-holders, who held 29 acres of land, paying certain rent, and doing suit to his 3 weeks Court. But it seems that the Monks of Stonley had it soon after: for in 12 E. 1. they obtained a Charter of Free warren in all their demesne lands in Stonley, and divers other places, whereof this is one; that which they had here, being 2 carucats of land, as in 19 E. 1. was certified, and a certain Cell. Which petty Cells were made use of by the Abbots in those daies, as places of penance or punishment to such Monks, as either for any offence committed, or some displeasure from their Superiour, were thither sent. But more of Horewelle I find not, other than that it is included within the County of this City, by K. H. 6. Charter before specified.

There is no mention of this place in the Conq. Survey; so that we must conclude it to have been then involved with Cobentre; and that as a member thereof it came to the E. of Chester: for in K. Steph. time Rannulph E. of Chester possessed it. What injury that was which this E. Rannulph had done to Walter Lurden, then B. of Cob. and to his Church, doth not directly appear: but certain it is, that he dyed & excommunicate for the same; so that E. Hugh his son and heir, past^b this Mannour of Stivichale (for so it is written) unto the said B. and his successors, for his fathers absolution, and for the health of his soul and his ancestors souls.

It seems that the same B. granted it unto Steph. de Nerbone and his heirs, to hold by the 4 part of a Kts. fee: for I findⁱ, that the heirs of Margery his daughter and heir, enjoy'd it: and that the said Stephen gave^k to Will. the son of Raph de Filungele, and his heirs, two yard land lying in this village, in consideration that he fought a duell for him. What he was that wedded the said Margerie, I know not; but a son he had by her, who calls himself Ranulphus de Stivichale, filius & bares Margerie de Nerburne, dominæ de Stivichale. Which Ranulph was he (as I suppose) who past this Mannour unto Walter de Langley (Lord of Wimley) for in 7 E. 1. it was certified^m, that the same Walter de Langley held the moytie thereof of the heirs of Marg. de Neyrburne, by the service of a Roie yearly: at which time the said Walter had 3 yard land here, held of him in villenage, and the restⁿ by Free-holders: but the Court-Leet the Bishop still kept. And the same year following, the said Walt. was found^o to dye seized of this whole village, having four yard land therein; which together with the rent from his free-holders and villains, & a Mill, extended to 8 l. 5 s. 3 d. ob. per an.

To whose posterity it continued whilst the male line lasted; and then, with Wimley, Wilkin, and other Lordships, descended to Joan the daughter and heir of that family, first wedded to John the son of Sir Alan Cherlton Kt. and afterwards to Sir John Trillow Kt. (as in Wimley I shall fully manifest.) This very like that Sir John Trillow and she past it unto Sir Baldwin Frevill Kt., about 40 E. 3. For I find^p, that Sir Peter Careswell Kt. son and heir of Sir Will. Careswell, released all his title therein to the said Sir Baldwin, as he also did in Wimley and Wilkin: but what right he had, I am not very certain, except that intimated in my discourse of Wilkin were it. After which, upon the partition of Frevill's lands (whereof in Lamiworth I shall speak at large) it fell to Thomas Ferrers Esq; in right of Eliz. his wife, eldest sister, and one of the co-heirs to Sir Baldwin Frevill Kt. as appears by the partition^q made 5 Oct. 31 H. 6. To whose posterity it continued for divers descents: But in 16 Eliz. I find, that Thomas Gregory dyed^r seized thereof, leaving Arthur his son and heir 34 years of age, whose son, John, now enjoys it.

The Chappel here, being a member belonging to the Church of S. Mich. in Cobentre, was therewith appropriated^s to the Monks, ann. 1260. 44 H. 3. Which Monks did antiently use^t to find a Priest to celebrate divine service therein 3 daies every week; but the bodies of the dead were^u carried to Cobentre. In H. 6. time, there was an Anchorite mured up here; who in those daies had a Legacy given^v to him by Edith Rugeley, widow unto Nich. Rugeley of Dunton in this County.

Returning now to the other side of Cobentre, I discern Carelesley first in my view; of which I find no mention till K. Steph. time, that Ran. E. of Chester rendred^x the Chappel to the Monks of Cobentre, as he did Stivichale and many other, it being then written Herellesey. From which E. it came to Montalt, as Cobentre, whereof it was originally a member, did; part of it in 34 H. 3. being held^y by the heirs of Rob. Tuscher, and Wido fil. Roberti, of Rog. de Montalt and Cecilie his wife. Which Rog. and Cecily then granting away the Mannour of Cobentre in Fee-ferm to the Monks, did (inter alia) reserve^z to them and their heirs the homage and services of those persons. But the inheritance of what the heirs of the said Robert and Wido had, was not considerable: for it appears^a, that the substance of this village past from the before specified Rog. and Cecily to the Monks in the said 34 year of H. 3. as parcel of the Mannour of Cobentre. Which Monks had Free-warren there, and Heriots of all their tenants, with the tithes appropriated^b to them as belonging to S. Mich. Church in Cobentre.

Whitmore.

This, though it be for the most part woody, yet is in some places so moorish, as that the ground beareth nothing but moss; which being in one place white, gave occasion (doubtless) for its name. But it was antiently a member^c of Radsoy; and partly by the grants^d of several devout people, as well as purchase, became of so large an extent, as that in 6 E. 3. the Monks of Cobentre, obtaining license^e from the K. made it a Park; which, according to the measure in those daies, contained 436 acres of wast and woods. But coming to the Crown, upon the dissolution of that Religious House, it was in 1 E. 6. granted^f to Sir Raph Sadler Kt. (inter alia) by the name of Whitmore-grange in the parish of the holy Trinity in Cobentre: And from him soon after convey'd to John Hales (of whom I have in S. John's Hosp. made mention) who dyed^g seized of it, 26 Dec. 15 Eliz. leaving John his nephew (son of Christoph.) his next heir: who in ann. 1586. built a very fair house upon part of it, called New-House: which by John Hales Esq; his son and heir, was sold in our time to Sir Ric. Burnaby Kt. and by him afterwards to . . . Cooke, who soon past it away to Sir Christopher Telverton of Effon-Mauduit, in Com. Southampton. Kt. of the Bath, the present possessor thereof.

Radford.

This little village takes its name from the soyde through which the road-way from Carelesley to Cobentre lyeth: and though it be not particularly mentioned in E. Leofrik's Charter to the Monks of Cobentre, yet was it then granted^h thereto, as being included within that moytie of Cobentre belonging to the Monastery, and in the parish of the holy Trinity. After the dissolution of which Religious House, the lands here were sold out to sundry persons; so that it will not be of moment, as for any historical respect, to look further after them.

Arnhale:

This place (now reduced to one house) being a memberⁱ of Cobentre, was involved in that grant made by E. Leofrike to the Monks, upon his foundation of that Monastery, whereof I have already spoke, though it be not particularly named therein: and after the dissolution thereof, granted k (inter alia) to John Hales and his heirs, by the name of Harnall grange, with the pastures thereto belonging, and the pool called Harnall pool, or Swanwell pool, lying within the precinct of those grounds. Which John dyed seized thereof in 15 Eliz. leaving John, the son of his brother Christopher, his nephew and heir.

Stoke.

OF Stoke, which in our old English signifieth a village, there is no mention in the Conq. Survey, it being then as a member of Cobentre posselt by the Earls of Chester, as may seem by that render^l of the Chappel in K. Steph. time, made by E. Ranulph to the Monks. Which Chappel, being within the parish of S. Mich. was appropriated^m to the Monastery therewith in 44. H. 3. From these E. of Chester it came to Rog. de Montalt by the marriage of Cecily, sister and one of the co-h.irs unto Hugh E. of Arundell, whereof in Cobentre I have spoke: of whom several persons held lands here in 34 H. 3. as appears by their reservationⁿ of the services due upon those tenures, at such time as the Mannour of Cobentre was by them past in fee-ferm to the Monks; the names of which persons were Walter D'eywill, Rob. de Stoke, Thom. de Neuville, and Walt. de Cobentre.

In 7 E. 1. the said Rog. de Montalt, being Lord of this Mannour, had^o here two Free-holders occupying one carucat of land: but the Prior of Cobentre had then 4. who held half a yard land, 2 acres and a half, with a croft and a meadow. At that time also had^p Nich. de Segrave 2 yard land here posselt by Free-holders; and^q Tho. de Arden one, in the tenure of 3 Cottiers. Which Nich. and Thom. held the premisses of the said Rog. de Montalt. But here was an ancient family that had their denomination from this village; the first whereof that I meet with, being^r Scherus de Stoke, son of Hugh le Harper of Stoke; who gave^s to the Monks of Combe a wood called Harpers-wood with a mess. garden, &c. in this place, about K. John's time. From which Seher descended Tho. de Stoke of Stotfold in Staffordsh.

who bore^t for his Arms fretty, with a boars head cooped in a Canton. And from him^u Will. de Stoke; of whom in 22 H. 8. Horne purchased^v this Mannour. Who, reserving to himself part of the demesias, sold the same soon after to the Mayor, Bayliffs, and Commonalty of the City of Cob. and their successors, unto whom it now belongeth.

In this place the Monks of Cobentre had the largest proportion, as appears by that Survey^x taken in 26 H. 8. But the Hospital of S. John in Cobentre had a part^y, paying xii d. per ann. chief rent to the Mannour of Stoke. All which having been purchased by sundry Citizens of Cobentre, is now adorn'd with many fair Summer-houses.

The Chappel, whereunto the Inhabitants of Witley anciently resorted, had^z heretofore Divine service performed therein thrice every week at the Prior of Cobentre's charge; the tithes whereof were appropriat to the Monks, who allowed to the Priest serving the Cure therein Cxii s. per ann. or tithes to that value, as in 26 H. 8. was certified^a: but since the later end of Q. Eliz. time it hath been a Presentative; as the Institution of these several Incumbents doth manifest.

Biggin.

THERE is now no other memorial left of this place, than a Ferm-house, called by the name of Biggin Hall; anciently written Bugging; which in our old English signifieth the same with dimus, and is in the North parts of this Realm still retained in that sense, divers Mannour-houses being there so called. In 7 E. 1. the Prior of Cobentre, then owner thereof, had^b 8 servants who held 4 carucats of land here; by performance of certain servile labours. Which lands were after the dissolution of that Religious House, granted^c (inter alia) to the Mayor, Bayliffs, and Commonalty of that City.

Bisseleie.

I NOW return to the river Shitburn; which, being issued out of Cobentre, leaves Bisseleie on its Eastern bank. This hath been very anciently depopulated, as it seems: for since K. Steph. time, that Ran. E. of Chester acknowledged^d the Chappel then here (inter alia) to belong unto the Monks of Cobentre, I have not seen any thing notable thereof.

Shortley.

A Little lower lyes Shortley, anciently a member^e of Cobentre, and held of the E. of Chester's heirs by the service of 2 l. 17 s. per ann. a pound of Pepper yearly, and Heriots. But before 17 E. 1. I find it not particularly mentioned; at which time there was a Fine^f levied thereof betwixt Geffrey de Langley pl. and Ric. de Waldeshof and Beatrice his wife deforc. Whereby it appears, that at the request of the said Ric. and Beatrice, the same Geffrey granted an estate for life therein to Hugh de Vienna, with remainder to him the said Geffrey and his heirs. Which Geff. was a younger son to Geffr. de Langley, of whom in Witley I have spoke. From this Geffrey it descended unto Edmund de Langley his son, and heir: who having issue Joan a daughter, gave it in marriage with her (as it seems) to Edmund de Chesterton; for the same Edmund de Chesterton was seized thereof in 42 E. 3. as appears by his feoffment^g then made to Sir Fulk de Bermingham and others.

How he was justled out of it, I know not: but within 4 years after, viz. 46 E. 3. I find, that Sir Baldwin Frevill the elder, Kt. enfeofft ^h Sir Will. Beauchamp Kt. and divers moe, in this Mannour; with Wintley, Wolpin, and other lands, to stand seized of them to certain uses (as in my discourse of that family, when I come to Tamworth, shall be shewed:) and in 49 E. 3. dyed ⁱ seized thereof, leaving Baldwin his son and heir 24 years of age. Which Baldwin dyed in R. 2. time, leaving his heir within age, and what estate he had herein, to Joyce his widow; who taking to husband Sir Adam Teshale Kt. was in R. 2. time with him impleaded ^k for the title hereof by John Brandesley, in right ^l of Eliz. his wife, daughter and heir of Roger Chesterton, son and heir of Edmund Chesterton before mentioned, and Eliz. his wife, daughter unto Edm. de Langley, from whom the said John and Eliz. claimed.

How this difference determined, I have not seen: but in 4 H. 5. by a Fine then levied ^m betwixt Sir John Berkley Kt. John Brut the elder, with others plaintiffs, and Edw. Chesterton deforc. it was settled upon the said John Brut and his heirs. In which Fine it appeareth, that the above mentioned John Brandesley held it by the curtesy of England for life. It seems that the heir male of this line afterwards came to possess it again: for in 22 E. 4. Will. Langley dyed ⁿ seized of it, leaving John his son and heir 16 years of age; at which time the proportion of land that he had here was certified to be C. acres of pasture, wherein a certain Mannour-house had in former time stood, but then was utterly down and wasted.

How it came to the Crown, I know not: but I find that K. H. 8. in 12 of his reign, granted ^o it to Edw. Langley Esq; and his heirs. Which Edw. in 17 H. 8. was seized ^p thereof; and past it, as I guess, to Rog. Wigston Esq; and Will. Wigston his son and heir: for it appears ^q, that in 30 H. 8. they were seized thereof. But the said Will. in 37 H. 8. (his father being then dead) granted ^r it to certain Feoffees to the use of Edw. Pyc of Marstoke Esq; and the heirs of his body. Which Edw. in 3 E. 6. sold ^s it to Giles Forster then of Walshall Esq. But the said Giles, within less than a month after, in consideration of 200*l.* sterling, re-conveyd ^t it to certain Feoffees to the use of the before specified Will. Wigston: who, being so seized thereof, by his deed ^u bearing date 29 Martii, 1 M. being then a Knight, sold it to Edw. Aglionby of Walshall Esq; and to Kath. his wife, sister of the said Sir Will. After which I have seen no more thereof, than that James Fitz-Herbert of Stoke juxta Coventre, and Ric. Fitz-Herbert of Shulton in Com. Leic. Gent. in 33 Eliz. aliened ^v it to Edw. Brabazon of Castwell in the same County of Leic. Esq; and Mary his wife.

The Charter-house.

W^{ithin} the precincts of Shortley sometime stood a very fair Monastery of Carthusian Monks: but before I speak of its foundation, it will be proper enough to digress a little in shewing how and when that Order first began, with the strictness of their Rule.

The Author ^x thereof was one Bruno, born at Colein in Germany, a very learned man, and Philosophy-Professor in the University of Paris: where, being present at the Funerall of his friend that had been a man of good conversation; and observing that whilst they were celebrating the office for the dead, the Corps raised it self up on the Bier, and uttered at several distances these words, Iusto Dei judicio accusatus sum, Iusto Dei judicio judicatus sum, Iusto Dei judicio condemnatus sum, he became so astonisht, as that, considering if such were the condition of one whose life had been free from any eminent vice, what should become of himself and many others that were in no better state; he thereupon, with six more of his company, who were moved with the same apprehension, resolved to seek some desert place, where they might end their daies in an austere and mortified course of living, without any disturbance of worldly matters: which at length they found in the Diocess of Genoble, at a place called Carthusie, in the mountainous parts of a vast wilderness; and obtaining an assignation thereof from the Bishop, erected a Monastery, instituting most severe and strict Rules for himself and his Covent; viz. wearing hair shirts, never to feed on flesh, on the Fridays to eat nothing but bread and water; to live apart in particular Cells, and thither to have their diet singly brought them, except on certain Festival daies when they dined together: Not to converse with each other but at certain times: None to go out of the Monastery but the Superior and Procurator, and they onely about the affairs of the Covent.

Their habit a white loose coat, with a cowl of the same; but when they go out, a case of black stuff all over it, being shaved and shorn just as the Benedictines are. Into their particular Cells, which are low built, and do contain 3 or 4 several rooms on the ground-floor onely, having behind each of them a little garden environ'd with an high wall, is their diet brought to them by Lay-brothers, and put in at a little door in the wall, near the entrance thereof; unto which there is a lock, whereof the key is kept by him that serves them. At the hours of publick prayers they meet in the Quire: But women are not permitted to come within the precincts of their Monastery, nor a man to speak with any of them without special licence given by the Superior.

The Lay-brothers are not shaven; but their hair on the head is cut short and round; their habit being the same with the Monks, saving the scapular, which reacheth but a little below the middle, and is girt close to them.

Which Institution by Bruno was in the year 1080. as Polydore affirmeth; but others ^z say in ann. 1084. Howbeit they observe ^a the Rule of S. Benedict as to their diurnal and nocturnal offices; yet have not antiently in any one Covent exceeded ^b the number of xiii persons.

Into England they were first brought by K. H. 2. in ^c ann. 1181. (27 H. 2.) who founded ^d a Monastery for them at Waltham in Somersetsh. whereof Hugh Bishop of Lincoln was the first Prior. But now returning to this in particular, I will begin with the time and occasion of its foundation.

Ordinis Carthusiani Monachus.

bibl. Har-
ton:

In the year 1381. 5 R. 2. Will. Lord Zouch (of Hartingworth in Northamptonsh.) having a desire to found a House of this Order near Co-ventre, in honour of S. Anne, obtained from Sir Baldwyn Frevile, the elder, Kt. 14 acres of land here at Shortley, where he purposed to build the House, resolving to endow it with sufficient possessions: but being the same year prevented by death, lying upon his sick bed, he appointed that C marks per ann. should be paid out of his lands, untill his heirs did procure as much in Churches appropriate to be settled thereto. Which Legacy, his Confessor, and others who were then about him, thought too large; and therefore prevailed with him, that it should be no more than 1x l. per ann.

The

The great affection that he had to the founding of this Monastery, occasioned him to procure from the House of Carthusians in London three Monks; viz. one Robert Palmer at that time Procurator there, and the originall mover in that business. John Netherby, then Vicar of the same Monastery; and Edmund Dalling: who accordingly came to Cobentre on the Eve of S. Andrew the Apostle, and began their abode in the Hermitage of S. Anne. In which place, associating to themselves three Monks from the Monastery of Beauvale in Potttingham-sh. and four more, who were then newly profest of this Order, they continued by the space of seven years.

But the Lord Zouch departed this life in Lent following; whereupon his good intentions and fair beginnings were prosecuted by others. For Rich. Luff, sometime Mayor of Cobentre, and John Bottoner his fellow Citizen, bestowed no less than 400. marks upon the Quire, Church, and Cloysters; with three Cells in the east part, next to the Chapter-house, and making of seven ponds. John Holmston of Stleford 180. li. towards the structure of the Quire: and with xx. li. of the goods of Will. Tilney, whose Executor he was, made the Cell at the West-corner of the Cloyster. The fourth Cell on the East side was built by Margery Byri of Delwarke; who thereupon, and for the Books of Isaiah and Jeremie, with Coments, bestowed xx. li. The fifth, being the utmost on the said East side, by the Lady Margerie Tilney of Retton; who gave x. li. also to the making of the East window of the Quire. The sixth by John Bokingham B. of Lincoln. The seventh next to it on the same side, by Thomas Beauchamp E. of Warwick.

And K. Rich. 2. returning from Scotland in the year 1385. (about the Nativity of the blessed Virgin;) and coming to Cobentre on Saturday within the Octaves of that Feast, at the special instance of Q. Anne his consort, with his own hands layd the first stone of the Church; viz. at the East end of the Quire; publicly protesting in the presence of his Nobles; as also of the Mayor and Citizens of Cobentre that he would be the Founder thereof, and bring it to good perfection. Neither were others slack in so pious a work: For the eighth Cell; viz. the third on the South side, was made with xx. li. given as a Legacy thereto by Adam Bottoner Citizen of Cobentre. The ninth, (next to it) by Sir Nigel Loryng Knight, at the procurement of Rob. Braybrok B. of London. The tenth, viz. the first in the West corner, out of the goods of Will. Tilney before mentioned. The eleventh, by John Morton Canon of Lichfield.

But further I cannot go, in the description of these Cells, in regard I have not seen any more of the history of its Foundation: Neither should I have delivered thus much, but that, by the care and affection of my worthy friend Mr. John Langley, whose delight and knowledge in Antiquities deserves greater commendation than I can in a few lines express, the fragment whence I had this, being a Manuscript of two leaves in Parchment, and written in R. 2. time, was redeemed from utterly perishing, having been by some ignorant person made the Cover to a School-boy's Book.

I shall now therefore proceed with what I have from our publique Records: wherein I find, that K. Rich. 2. by his Precept bearing date 18. Martii in the said fifth year of his reign, directed to Sir Baldwin Frevill Kt. Rich. Dodenhale then Major of Cobentre, and Rich. Luff; wherein he expresseth, that John Netherbury was assigned Prior of this House, so intended to be founded in Shottleyfield within the libertyes of Cobentre; And declaring the bounds of those 14. acres of land, so given by Sir Baldwin Frevill; viz. in length from the path-way leading towards London on the East part, to the river of Shitburne on the West; and in breadth, from the common road which goeth towards Warwick on the South part, to the Mill called Bushelmilne on the North part, doth command, that the said Sir Baldwin, Richard, and Richard shall deliver possession thereof unto the same Prior and Monks. Soon after which did the said K. grant license^b to these Monks, that they might obtain advousons of Churches to be appropriated, to the value of c. li. per annum, over and above what should be assigned for endowment of Vicars in the same. And within two years following bestowed^c on them the advouson of the Church of Walton super Trent in Derby-shire.

In 9. of his reign he gave^d them the advouson of the Church of Ecclesfield in York-shire. In 13. he granted License^e to the Monks of S. George at Bauquerville in Normandy, that they might settle their mannour or Priory of Edweston in Rutland upon them. And in 16. in recompence for the advouson of the Church of Walton before mentioned, which he had granted with the Mannour to John Delves esq. gave them license^f to purchase the Priory of Lymberg (alias Limbroke) in Hereford-shire with the parcells of Curtelington, and Abby-Mares; together with the advouson of the Vicaridges; all which belong'd to the Abby of Abenepe in Normandy.

Certain it is, that the strictness of their Rule begot an exceeding regard towards them from many good people, as by the increase of their possessions is evident: For in 17. R. 2. they had license^g to purchase from the Abbot of S. Sergius and Bachus in Normandy the Mannours of Swansey and Dip-Dyapton in Cambrydge-shire, with the advouson of the Church of Swansey, excepting 65. marks sterling annually due to the Warden and Schollars of Kings-Hall in the University of Cambrydg. And in 20. R. 2. from the Monks of S. Peters super Dinam in Normandy the Priory of Walton in this County, which was a Cell belonging to that Monastery. As also the Priory of Bagham in Lincoln-shire from the Abbot and Covent of S. Severus in Normandy. And now that they were grown thus rich in possessions, by his Charter^h bearing date 21. Maii in the 21. year of his reign, did he grant as ample protection to them, and privileges, both for the choyse of their Prior and otherwise as the originall House at Cartshute had, together with immunity from all Taxes and payments whatsoever.

Neither did his bounty to them stay here: for the next year ensuing he releasedⁱ unto them the payment of those 65. marks per annum to the Schollars of Cambrydg before mentioned; upon condition that they should find and maintain within the precinct of their House xii. poor Schollars from seven years old, till they accomplish't the age of 17. there to pray for the good estate of him the said King and of his consort, during this life; and afterwards for the health of their souls: as also of the soul of Qu. Anne late deceased, and for the souls of his Father & Mother, and all the faithfull departed. And to the end, that the service and worship of God might be yet further augmented in this Monastery, by a Covent of Monks which were Priests, he granted^a unto them the Priory-Alien of Lodges in Dorset-sh.

 which was a Cell to the Abby of Sponteburgh in Normandy; the Priory of Wotton in this County, which belong'd to the Abby of Couches in Normandy, with the Mannour of Spokenlane in Hertford-sh. parcell of the possessions belonging to the said Priory of Wotton: The Priory of Long- Benington in Lincoln-shire and Feldballyng in North. Cells to the Abby of Sabine in Norman- dy: the Priory of Wagh. in Lincoln-sh. belonging to the Monastery of Chirburgh in Normandy.
 Which said Priories-Alien were all seized into the K. hands by reason of his Warrs with France. But the most of these, last mentioned, were reassumed in 1. H. 4. (as in my discourse of Wotton, above-mentioned will appear.)

To which ample Donations K. H. 7. in 10. of his reign, added his License^a to them for appropriating the Church of Potters-Pirp in Northamp- ton-sh. of their patronage; and of Emond in Shrop-sh. whereof the Advouson belong'd to the Abby of S. Peter at Shrewsbury; in consideration that they should daily pray for the good estate of the said King, his Queen, and their Children; as also of his Mother: celebrating likewise once a week a Mass of the holy Ghost during the K. life, and a solemn yearly Obit for his soul after his departure hence. So that the full Revenue belonging thereto was by that fatal Survey, made in 26. H.
 8. certified^a to be clearly worth 131. l. - 06. s. 08. d.
per annum, besides all Reprises. Which undervalue though it exposed it to dissolution by the Statute of

27. H. 8. yet was the King pleased to shelter it at that instant, as by a clause in the Act he had liberty to doe: perhaps that he might get the better credit in his proceedings against the rest, by reason the Preamble of that Act had represented the Monks residing in the lesser Houses, to be persons that did highly dishonour God by the looseness of their lives; and therefore thought, through his favour to these of so strict a Rule, whatever was alleaged against the other, would be the sooner believed.

Amongst the Reprises recorded^a in that Survey, x 16. f. 29.
 besides the yearly Pensions and Almes paid by composition to the Hospitall of Okham in Rutland;
 To the poor of Potters-Pirp in Northampton- sh. To the poor of Wotton in this County; And to the Friers Carmelites in Cobentre, I find^a, that y 16. f. 30.
 53 s. - 04. d. per annum was allowed for expences^a in bread and beer at the washing of poor peoples feet on Maunday-Thursday. And 14. l. 10. s. per annum for bread and beer daily bestowed on the like poor, living in and near Cobentre, at the gates of this Monastery; viz. in 30. quarrers of Rye yearly at 5 s. a quarter, and 30. quarrers of Malt at 04. s. - 08. d. a quarter.

But it was neither their devout and strict lives;
 nor these charitable allowances that could preserve them from the common ruine, which befell all the rest of the Religious Houses in 30. H. 8. as the Instrument of Surrender, whereunto their publique Seal is affixt, bearing date 16. Jan. the same year, and subscribed by the particular persons whose names I have here inserted, with the severall Pen- sions granted to each of them for life doth manifest.

in the Conq. time it was involved with Cobentre, so that in his Survey it is not so much as mentioned:
 Neither do I find any thing of it till King Stephens days, that Ranulph Earl of Chester rendred^a the Chappell thereof to the Monks of Cobentre, with divers other of which I have already spoke.

As for the name I am of opinion that it was from the ascent whereon it stood, Pen in the Brittish language, signifying the head, top, or chief part;
 and Ule the same with Locus. It should seem that anciently it was a pretty village, otherwise there had been no cause for the Chappel; but till H. 3. time, that Geff. de Langley (a man of great note in those days) made it his seat, I have not seen any thing memorable of it. 'Tis very like that the neernes of its situation to Cobentre invited him to build here: for in 22. H. 3. he had a grant^a from the King, of certain timber trees out of Kenilworth-woods for that purpose. Of what extraction this family was,
 I know not, though they had divers fair Lordships in this County: but for as much as this was their chief seat, I do here resolve to take notice of what I have found memorable of them.

Pinley.

This place is now known to very few, depopulation having extirpated all its Inhabitants: but

The first mention I have met with, of this name and stock, is in H. 2. time; the K. confirming the grant made by one Geffrey de Langley to the Monks of Combe, of lands in Herdebergh (now called Harbrow-magna) in this County. 'Tis very like that the same Geffrey was the father of this: but if there were more than two, in a direct line, of that Christen name, I know not how to distinguish them. With Geffrey, whom I suppose to be the son of that Geffrey which was a benefactor to Combe, I will begin. He was first, Marshall of the K. Household; (an office belonging to the E. Marshall of England in fee: who by the K. consent, appoints a Knight under him to execute the same.) In which he so behaved himself, that the King took great notice of him for a thrifty servant; and for that cause afforded him much grace and respect, though others con'd him little thank, in regard he cut short the ancient allowance for the Kings own table, and lessened the old hospitality of the Court.

In 23. H. 3. he obtained a Charter of Free-warren in all his demesn-lands here. And in 26. H. 3. attended the King in that expedition of Gascoign, wherein the English suffered great loss: in which voyage he got such reputation with the King as accelerated (it seems) his further profit and advancement. For in 34. H. 3. he obtained a Patent to his own use, dated 29. Dec. of the whole benefit accruing by expedition of Dogs throughout all the Forests of England. And the fourth of March following, to be Justice of the Kings Forests from Trent Southwards. As also, within few days after, to be Governour of the Castle and Honour of Rockingham in Northampton-shire. The same year likewise upon the return of a Writ of Ad quod dampnum, had he license to stop up and inclose a certain High-way which interposed betwixt his House and woods here at Wintley, and to impark those woods. 'Tis not to be doubted, but, as he managed the business, his office of Justice in the Forests was very beneficiall to him; but with what credit he did the King that service, and inrich't himself, let us hear an impartiall relation from an Author of that time.

Sub eisdem siquidem temporibus, &c. About these times (saith he) a certain Knight called Geffrey de Langley, who was a Bayliff to the King, and a strict Inquisitor after all trespasses committed in the Forests, rode through most parts of England. In which Office he behaved himself with that cunning, srowardness and violence, in extorting vast summs of money, especially from the Northern gentry, as that the very Auditors themselves were astonisht at such a mass. And for the better carrying on this course of oppression, he rode with a great company of attendants well armed; so that if any of those against whom he thus proceeded did but seem to excuse themselves in a muttering way, their enemies being Judges, he presently caused them to be cast into prison. Neither did he use any proportion in the punishment futable to the offence: for, were it but the killing of a Fawn, or a Hare, and that crossing the way in a mans passage, though he were the greatest Noble-man that did it he would ruin him. So that this his cruelty made the memory of his predecessors precious: nay Robert Passelew himself in comparison of him was counted a Saint. Which Robert, being Justice of the Forests immediately before, had been the man that first brought him into that employment; whose good turn he requited with supplanting him, putting out all those under Officers that he had placed, and undoing them to boot. Whereupon the said Robert, considering the instability of these terrestriall things, forsook the Court and became a Priest.

Which ways of oppression and cruelty, rendred our Geffrey so odious, that the K. within two years thought best, in prudence, to remove him from that Office, least the peoples discontents should reflect upon himself. And therefore, the better to satisfy the world, he sent him away into Scotland, there to be one of the Governours unto his daughter the Queen of Scots: But the Nobles of that Realm, finding of what an insolent Spirit he was, would not long endure him there: whereupon he betook himself himself to the service of Prince Edward; in which he so managed the business, that he raised up many enemies to the King and Prince, as well as to himself: For being employed in Wales by the Prince; he so tyrannized, that in 40. H. 3. the Welch broke out into rebellion; which made him begin too late, to repent of his doings.

After this, it was not long ere that Symon de Montfort Earl of Leic. with divers of the Barons, taking advantage of certain miscarriages in government, occasioned by this Geffrey and such other who had abused the power and trust committed to them, put themselves in Armes under pretence of asserting the Laws, and subject's liberties; the particulars of which story I must not here stand to tell; but so much thereof as relates to the said Geffrey I shall briefly touch. Which is, that amidst those turbulent doings in 48. E. 3. he was trusted with the custody of Winchester Castle, as appears by his render thereof upon the Kings command, being then necessitated to submit unto a dishonourable truce with the Barons. Certainly he was a man of extraordinary note: for I find him in the Catalogue of those great men who stood stoutly to the King against his rebellious Barons, and lived to a great age; for he departed not this world till 2. E. 1. and then Walter his son and heir, doing his homage, had livery of his lands.

A younger son he had, named Geffrey; who was in the Welch expedition with his brother Walter in 41. H. 3. But of him and his descendants I have said something already in Shorthley; and shall have occasion to say more when I come unto Atherston super Stoure; and therefore now return to Walter. This Walter had his Christen name (as 'tis most like) from Walter Marshall Earl of Devonshire, under whom his father executed the office of Marshall in the K. household. And in 36. H. 3. obtain'd a speciall Pat. exempting him from serving on any Juries so long as he lived. The next year following he attended the King into Gascon; and in 41. H. 3. went into Wales with the Royall Army. In 3. E. 1. he was constituted one of the Justices for the Gaol delivery at Warwick. And in 7. E. 1. being certified Lord of this place, had here ten Cottiers holding nine Cottages, for which they payd severall Rents, performed divers services in Harvest, and gathered Nutts for one day: He had then also 3. Carucats of land, and 3. acres and a Water-myl in demein; and kept a certain outwood, containing 5. acres, inclosed as a Park, which had wont to be common.

The same year I find; that he was again a Justice for the Gaol-delivery at Warwick; and so likewise the year following, in which he dyed, leaving his son and heir, viz. John de Langley 22. years of age, who did his Homage, and had livery of his lands immediately after. And had also a younger son, called Robert, of whom and his posterity I shall speak in Wolthamcote Which John, who had the inheritance of this mannour; as also of Witkin and Spilcote, had summons to be at London, with many other great men, the Sunday next after the Oblaves of S. John Baptist 25. E. 1. to attend the K. in his expedition beyond Sea. And in 29. of the said Kings reign, had the like summons to be at Warwick upon Twede at the feast of the Nativity of S. John Baptist, to wait on the K. in his Scottish war, wherein he was knighted, as 'tis probable; for the same year he so stiled himself.

In 5. 6. and 7. E. 2. he was constituted one of the Justices for the Gaol-delivery at Warwick. In 8. he and Henry de Erdington were appointed to levy and collect in this County and Leicester-sh. the Scutage due to K. E. 1. in 34. of his reign, when his Army came together at Carleol, which was not till then received. And the next ensuing year was in Commission for making choise of one stout and able Footman in every village thought-out this County, to march with the King in person against the Scots: as also to see that they were sufficiently armed according to the Statute of Winchester. In 10. E. 2. he had the like employment for choosing one Footman in every village of this Shire for the war of Scotland; and to see them sufficiently arm'd with Haketones, Bacenets, Swords, Bows, and Arrows; as also with Slings and such other weapons that were proper for them. In 12. E. 2. he, with Rob. de Stoke were assign'd to collect an eighteenth in this County. In 13. E. 2. for levying and collecting Scutage for the Scottish war.

In 14. and 15. E. 3. he was again in Commission for the Gaol-delivery at Warwick. And in 18. entail'd this Lordship with other lands upon his son Geffrey and his heirs. After which I neither find more mention of him, nor any historical matter relating to his descendants, excepting of Joan his great-grandchild, and heir to this branch of that family; who being wedded to John the son of Sir Alan Charlton of Apley Knight, was forcibly taken from him by Sir John Trillow the younger Kt. and kept as his wife many years: during which time the same Sir John and she by their deed dated 39. E. 3. granted this Mannour to Sir Baldwin Frevill the elder Kt. and his heirs. Who for the corroborating of his title had a Release from Sir Peter Carewell Kt. son and heir to Sir Will. Carewell Kt. of all his interest therein, bearing date 3. Maii 46. E. 3. which Joan was afterwards reconciled to her first husband, but dyed without issue.

Upon the partition of Frevill's lands 31. H. 6. (whereof in Lambworth I shall speak) this Mannour was allotted unto Robert Aston elq. son and heir to Joyce, one of the three Sisters and coheirs to the last Sir Baldwyn. Since which it hath continued in the line of Aston till of late time: for in 39. Eliz. did Sir Edw. Aston of Witthall in Com. Staff. Knight dye, seized of it, leaving Walter his son and heir; who in 1. Caroli, or about that time, sold it to severall Cobentre-men, then his tenants to the particular parcells thereof.

Whitley.

A Little lower upon the Eastern-bank of Shiltburn stands Whitley, where there is now no more than a Mannour-house, with an old Chappell and a Mill to be seen: but antiently it was a village of divers Inhabitants; yet is there no mention of it in the Conq. Survey; for as much as it was then involved with Cobentre. As for the name I suppose it proceeds from a Brittish originall; viz. Cott, id est a wood; and by corruptness in pronouncing is come to be written Whit; the latter syllable Lev being also from the Brittish Ue, which is the same with locus, or sedes. Nor till K. Stephen's time have I seen it at all mentioned: but then did Ranulph Eal of Chester, of whose fee it was, render

In 34. H. 3. upon the passing of Cobventre in Fee-ferm, by Roger de Montalt and Cecily his wife, to the Monks; amongst certain reservations made to them the said Roger and Cecily and their heirs, are excepted the homage & services of Walter Deyvill and Milo Gerbold for lands they then held in this Whitley. Whereby it is clear, that they or their ancestors, were enfeoffed of what they had here from some of the Earls of Chester. Which Roger and Cecily in 7. E. 1. were found to be Lords thereof; but that the King had at that time four Freeholders here, who held one cottage, two yard land and five acres under severall rents. And that the said Roger then had one Freeholder, viz, Adam fil. Milonis, who held one yard land. It was then also certified, that the Prior of Cobventre had six Freeholders here, who occupied one yard land and half, two acres and half a rod, with a Water-mill. Of which tenants, who paid certain rents and did fute to his Court twice in the year, Raph de Whitley was one.

I am of opinion, that the said Milo Gerbold was the father of that Adam, who is stiled Adam fil. Milonis. This Adam fil. Milonis (for I presume it was he) was in 12. E. 1. called Adam de Whitley, and then certified to hold one yard land in this place by inheritance, of Sim. fil. Mauricii: Who had a grant of K. H. 3. of xxii. s. free yearly rent issuing out of those lands so held of the K. as abovesaid. Which Rent was in 31. E. 1. conveyed by Roger le Tayllur to one Adam de Okes and his heirs. Who, in 18. E. 2. was found to dye seized of certain tenements here, held of the King by the payment of a half-penny per annum called Warthe, at the feast of S. Martin, by the hands of the Shiriff of Warwickshire, Will. de Okes, son of Will. brother to the said Adam being his co. fin and heir and of full age. Which Will. in 18. E. 3. dyed seized of the same, leaving Philip his son and heir of full age.

But hitherto hath there been no mention of Whitley as a Mannour: howbeit, in 3. R. 2. it was found, that Thomas de Freberne dyed seized of it by that name, leaving Alice his daughter and heir then ten years of age. Nevertheless in 6. R. 2. upon a suite for the title thereof, it was found, that the said Thomas de Freberne had sold the inheritance thereof to one Thomas de Whitley and his heirs. Which Thomas de Whitley past it away to John Botoner and two others, to whom it was adjudged. What bargaining there had been for it I cannot declare: but in 19. R. 2. the King granted the custody thereof to Rob. de Malton Clerk, and Henry Wybbe, it being seized into his hands by reason of the Minority of Margaret sister and heir to John Palmer, son of William Palmer. Which Will. dyed in 16. R. 2. and his brother John in 19.

After this viz. in H. 6. time, I find that John Schiplew of Cobventre was seized of it, perhaps by some private deed to direct the uses unto that Fine levied in 2. H. 6. betwixt Will. Schiplew Clerk and others plaintiffs, and John Burton of Cobventre and Jan his wife deforc. But hence, for want of light, I must make a leap to Q. Marye's time; in the second year of whose reign Will. Starky gent. dyed seized of it: leaving Thomas his son and heir of full age. By whom, or his descendants it was sold to . . . Tate, as I have heard; which is like to be true: for in 43. Eliz. Will. Tate, son of Bartholomew Tate of Porthamptonshire was certified to be Lord thereof, and of full age.

A little below Whitley, the river Shirburne, quitting the libertyes of Cobventre (where with also I have now done) joyns with Sow: I must therefore ascend that stream again untill it bring me to its entrance of Knightslow-Hundred, which is just at Sow, a place taking its name from the brook neer which it is situat.

Sow.

Half of this village was given to the Priory of Cobventre, by E. Leofrike (the Founder) in the first year of King Edward the Confessor, and by the Conq. Survey certified to containe 3. hides and a half, whereof the woods extended to half a mile in length, and 4. furlongs in breadth, all being valued at 1x. s. But the residue thereof, the King and R. Venator then held; which R. Venator is also called Rich. Forestarius, and had here only one hide. The Records doth not expresse the particular extent of his woods; but declares, that those there belonging to the King, the Abbot (id est) of Cobventre and him the said Richard, were three miles in length, and one in breadth; which, with the abovesaid hide, being rated at the other half, were then also valued at 1x. s.

With the Priors part, wherein the Monks in 41. H. 3. had Free-warren I will begin. By the Record of 7. E. 1. it appears, that the Monks of Cob. had in this place one carucate of land, with a Mill in demesne, and ten servants holding five yard land by rent service; viz. plowing, harrowing, mowing, making and carrying hay, reaping corne, raking, and the like work. As also 13. Freeholders which held xii. yard land, paying each of them a certain annuall rent, and doing suit to the Priors Court twice in the year, for all services. And likewise the royalty of 80. acres of out-wood, in which all their Freeholders were to have house-bote and heybote: and moreover the Chappell appropriat, with half an acre of land adjoining thereto. Which said appropriation was made by Roger Menland B. Cobentry and Lichfield 5. Non. Nov. An. 1260. (44. H. 3.) whereby it appears to have been appurtenant unto the Church of S. Michael in Cobentry: but the greater Tithes; viz. corne, hey, wood, and of the Mill, the Prior held in his own hand: the rest viz. wooll, lambe, with all the small tythes being allowed to the Priest that served the cure there, who had also a house adjoining to the Churchyard and ten acres of glebe; which Priest was removable at the Priors pleasure, having neither Institution nor induction by the ordinary.

But, besides the particulars above exprest, they had likewise here a Mannour-house, Court-Leet, Gallows, Pillory, Cuckingstool, Felons-goods: as also power to punish the breakers of the Affize of bread and beer; to which Court did resort all the Priors tenants, in Bilney, Wilmhale, and Ruxton.

Some other grants there were made at severall times to the said Monastery by particular persons, having Freeholders in Sow; which being so intermixt with the rest, would hardly now be distinguished, though I should point at them as exactly, as by the help of Records I could: therefore I shall spare that labour, and observe, that, after the dissolution of that Monastery, the said Priors Mannour, nour, in 32. H. 8. being passed with other lands to Sir John Harington Knight and his heirs, to be held in Capite, there was then the remainder of a lease unexpired, which had been granted by Thomas Wygford Prior of Cobentre and his Covent to one Will. Allicock for 80. years, from the 29. of Sept. 26. H. 8. And that afterwards; viz. 32. Eliz. the Q. by her Letters Pat. bearing date 21. Martii, conveyed (inter alia) to Sir John Harington Knight (afterwards created Lord Harington of Erton) and John Read gentleman, this Mannour of Sow, so before leased. Which said Sir John, and John, by their deed of bargain and sale, bearing date 2. Junii the same year, past away the Mannour house to Edw. Lapworth and his son, with divers lands thereto belonging: from whom descended Alexander Lapworth the present owner thereof Anno 1640.

But the Royalty or Mannour, with some lands there, being reserved by the said Sir John Harington, were, by Lucie Countesse of Bedford, his daughter and heir, bequeath'd by Will (as I have heard) to Mr. George Purefoy of Belgrave in Leicestersh. who still enjoys it.

I now return to that part which Richardus Forestarius held. This, as Chesterton in Kineton-Hundred also did, went with Margery the daughter and heir of the said Richard unto William Crock: which William, leaving it to his son William who was hang'd for felony; it escheated to the Crown; but, by the favour of the King was given to Rob. de Brok, that had married Margery, sister to the said William, which Robert, leaving one onely daughter and heir, who was wedded to Hugh de Loges, it thereby came to that family; and so, through Loges his heir generall, at length to Peto, as will more clearly be discerned by the descent in Chesterton, where I have observed what is memorable of all those families. I shall therefore here, take notice onely of them so far as they had relation to this place and no further.

And first, concerning Croc I find, that though, by the abovesaid forfeiture, his estate here was confiscated; and that Loges had his interest by force of the Kings grant; yet did the said Loges think fit to strengthen his title by an agreement with the heir of Croc, as may appear by a Fine, that Gilb. Croc levied thereof in 1. Joh. to the use of the said Hugh Loges and Margeria his wife and their heirs; the proportion being the same; viz. 1. hide, as in the Conq. time the before specified Richardus Forestarius held. Betwixt which Gilbert and the Prior of Cobentre there had been suit concerning some claim that the said Gilbert made here, for conclusion whereof the Prior granted to him Husbote and Heybote, and the moytie of the third penny, which should be made of the paunage in Sow.

In 7. E. 1. the particulars that Loges posselt in this place, were certified for two Carucats of land, which he kept in demesne; with six Freeholders who held two Cottages, one yard land, a half and fourth part, and two acres by certain Rent and particular services; and xl. acres of out-wood wherein the Freeholders had reasonable estovers; together with a Court-Leet; all which he held of the King by Sergeanty, viz. to be Keeper of the Forest of Cank, though he had no originall grant to shew; but certifies that it was per antiquam tenuram sine Charta. Which words clearly manifesting, that grants by Deed, or Charter were not frequent in those elder times; it will not be amisse, (I suppose) to shew when such concessions first began, wherein I shall exhibit the authority of a most authentic Historian, I mean Ingulphus Secretary to the Conq. while he was only D. of Normandy, and afterwards Abbot of Crouland; who, being so great a Schollar, and withall a strict observer of the most eminent passages in his time, deserves much the more credit.

—Nam Chirographorum confessionem Anglicanam (saith he) que antea usq; ad Edwardi Regis tempora fidelium presentium subscriptionibus cum crucibus aureis, aliisq; signaculis firma fuerunt, Normanni condemnantes Chirographa Cartas vocabant, & Chartarum firmitatem cum cerea impressione per uniuscuiusq; speciale Sigillum sub instillatione trium vel quatuor rignonum asstantium conficere constituebant. Conferebantur etiam primo multa pradia nudo verbo, absq; scripto vel charta, tantum cum Domini gladio, vel cornu, vel galea, vel cratera, & plurima tenementa cum Calcari, cum Strigili, cum Arcu, & nonnulla cum Sagittis: Sed hac initio regni sui, posterioribus annis immutatus est iste modus.

The first sealed Charter that we have in England, being that of King Edward the Confessor upon his foundation of Westminster Abby; who, having his education in Normandy, brought into this Kingdom that and some other of their fashions with him; which afterwards came to be imitated by all others, though by the inferior sort not of a long time, as Mr. Lambert out of the History of Wattall-Abbey observes; where Ric. de Lucy, Chief Justice of England in H. 2. time, is reported to have blamed a mean subject, for that he used a privat Seal, when as that apperteyn'd, as he said, to the King and Nobility only.

But returning to Loges, I finde, that he held five tenements in this place of the Earl of Chester, by the service of conducting the said Earl towards the Kings Court, through the midst of the Forest of Banck; meeting him at Rottor-by-log, upon notice of his coming, and at Hopwas-by-log upon his return: In which Forest the Earl might, if he pleased, kill a Deer in his going, and another at his coming back; giving unto Loges, at each time he should so attend him, a barb'd Arrow. After which; viz. in H. 3. time, it appears, that Hugh de Loges granted to Will. Bagot and his heirs all his lands in Sow, to hold of him the said Hugh and his heirs by the payment of a pair of white Gloves, price 1 d. or 1 d. in money at the feast of St. Michael yearly for all services. Howbeit, this, though confirm'd by the King, 16. Febr. 54. H. 3. took not effect: For Richard de Loges, son of the said Hugh, commencing suite for the same land as his inheritance, proved, that his father was not compos mentis at the time when he sealed that Deed; and so recovered it again. Whereupon it became assigned, by the name of a Mannour (inter alia) unto Eliz. the widow of the above mentioned Richard in 28. E. 1. upon whose decease in 11. E. 3. it was found, that she held in downie certain lands here by petty-Sergeanty; viz. giving to the King one barb'd Arrow was often, and whensoever as he should pass through the road-way in Sow, towards Wales, to hunt there. How this Mannour came by descent from the family of Loges to Peto, the Pedegree in Chesterton will fully shew; in whose line it hath ever since continued till this present age.

In this parish are the hamlets of Attorbale, and Woodend, with the Mannour of Hauksbury: but of the two first have I not found any thing memorable, other than the grant of the moytie of the Mannour of Hastokehale (for so it was written) in 40 E. 3. by Alan Lisset and Margaret his wife to Thomas Langhurst and his heirs. And as for Hauksbury, in regard it is situate within the liberties of the City of Cobentre, I shall reserve what I have thereof to be there spoken.

This Church is not Presentative, nor is there any Arms therein, more than one Esccheon of Peto, with his quarterings.

Withibrooke.

THE stream of Sow being here augmented by the access of a rivulet which riseth above Withibrooke, I am to take notice of those places that lye adjacent thereunto; which are onely Withibrooke and Hopsford, as the Map will shew; the former taking its name of the brook, on the banks whereof antiently, as well as now, many Willows have grown: but of this place is there nothing recorded in Domesday-book; so that whether it were then involved with Donkirkby or Hopsford (I mean in the continent of hides certified of them in that Survey) I am not able directly to affirm; for that it was included in one of them there is no doubt, in regard that Moubray afterwards had it with those and other the lands which belong'd to Geffrey Wirce, then Lord of that place.

The first and most antient mention that I find thereof, is, that Richard de Morevill had it of Will. de Rudevill his kinsman, in exchange for the village of Lindlet in Leicestersh. by which deed it appears, that the said Richard had formerly granted it unto the same Will. de Rudevill. And that the ancestors of this Richard de Morevill were enfeoffed thereof by Nigel de Albani, father of Rog. de Monbray in H. 1. time, the certificate made by the said Rog. de Monbray in 12 H. 2. of what fees were held of him de veteri feoffamento, doth sufficiently manifest; in which it appears, that this Ric. de Morevill held 5 Knights fees. Which exchange was confirm'd by the said Rog. de Monbray.

This Ric. de Morevill gave to the Monks of Combe six yard land, with the appurtenances, lying in this Lordship, with his body to be buried in that Monastery at his decease. But how or when it pass'd from Morevill, I have not seen; so that, whether that grant which Ivo de Harecourt made to Rob. Bassett, whereby he pass'd unto him totam terram (suam) de Willbepa, & de Cepston, & de Withebroch, in frank marriage with Beatrice his sister, did contain the whole town of Withebroch, or onely some land that Harecourt had therein, I cannot determine.

The next mention I find thereof, is, that Nicholaus fil. Hulf, in 7 Joh. recovered the right of Presentation to the Church, against the Abbot of Combe. Which Nich. was afterwards called Nicholaus de Withibroe, as appears by the Record, wherein mention is made what he contributed towards that great sum, which Will. de Molbray gave to K. John for a Fine, that he might enjoy his inheritance, concerning which Will. de Stuteville impleaded him, and whereof I shall have occasion to speak at large in Brinklow. Betwixt this Nich. and the Free-holders of Withibrooke on the one part, and the Monks of Combe on the other, was there an Agreement made in 25 H. 3. concerning Common of pasture, and other matters, at which time he was a Knight. To whom succeeded, as Lord of this Mannour, Will. de Castell, in 37 H. 3. which William was a Benefactor to the Monks of Combe, by grant to them, and exchanges made with them of certain lands in this place; and in 41 H. 3. gave a Fine to the King of half a mark in gold for respiting his Knighthood: but whether he were son, or married the daughter and heir of the before specified Nicholas, I know not: howbeit, in allusion to his name, he gave a Castle for his Arms, as by his Seal appears: which Coat his Grandchild, William, altered, taking two bars, and putting the Castle into a Canton.

In 7 E. 1. Nich. de Castello (son to the last mentioned William) was the K. Remembrancer in the Exchequer. To whom succeeded another William, who, in 13 E. 1. paid a Fine of xl s. for replevin of his liberties at Withibroch, viz. Court-leet, and punishing the breakers of the Assize of Bread and Beer. Which William was Shirriff of the Counties of Warw. and Leic. 22 E. 1. and in 29 E. 1. received command to attend the K. at Berwic upon Twede on the Feast of S. John Bapt. who then, making a warlike expedition against the Scots, was victorious, as our Historians do manifest. 'Tis like he was made a Knight at that time; for the next mention I meet with of him, which was in 35 E. 1. shews him so to be.

He had issue George, a Knight in 4 E. 2. but deceased before the 9 of that K. reign: for in that year was it found, that Alice, his widow, held this Lordship. Which Alice, in 1 E. 3. procured a special pardon for Will. the son and heir to the above mentioned George, touching the sum of 28 l. 7 s. 2 d. of the 58 l. 7 s. 2 d. which was required of him to be paid into the Exchequer for the Kings use, as a debt due by Will. his Grandfather when he was Shirriff of these Counties.

To the last mentioned Will. succeeded George; who had a Patent in 47 E. 3. to free him from bearing the office of Shirriff, Eschaetor, &c. and in 51 E. 3. was one of the Commissioners for levying the subsidy of 4 d. upon every head (commonly called Pole-money:) but in 5 and 8 R. 2. did bear the office of Eschaetor for this County

In the Parliament of 10 R. 2. he served * as one of the Knights for this Shire: and in 11 R. 2. being in Commission*, with divers others, for the levying of the moytie of a xv. and x. in this County, at the later end of the same year was constituted Sheriff of this County and Leicestershire. After which, viz. in 13 and 14 R. 2. he was in a Commission for conservation of the peace. But the next and last that I meet with of this name is Robert de Castell (son of the said George perhaps) which Robert was Sheriff of these Counties in 12 H. 4. Knight for this Shire in Parliament 2 H. 5. one of the Justices of peace in 5 H. 5. In 7 H. 5. in a Commission to treat with the people for a loan of money to the King; and in 9 H. 5. again joyned in Commission for the peace in this County, being all that time Steward & for the Mannour of Cheplemoze (in Cobentre.) But how this Lordship past from that family, or at what time, have I not seen; nor any thing further thereof till 8 H. 4. that one Will. Botener purchased it of Thomas Compworth and Eliz. his wife, it being of the inheritance of the said Eliz. so that I suppose she was daughter and heir to Castell.

Which Will. Botener was of Cobentre (some wealthy tradesman, I presume) but, being settled here at Witthibroke, grew to be a man of some account in the world: for the same year that he purchased this Lordship, he was made a Justice of peace in Warwick. So likewise in 1 H. 5. Of whom I further find, that he gave a peice of ground, containing Cxli foot in length, and xlv foot and a half in breadth, lying in Cobentre, to the Friers Carmelites there, for the enlargement of their House, in consideration that they should keep the Anniversary of John Percy and Alice his wife deceased, for ever. And that in 12 H. 6. he is recorded amongst the other persons of chiefest quality in this County, for making oath as to the observance of divers Articles ordained in the Parliament then held: but from that time I have not seen any more mention of him. After which, viz. in 29 H. 6. this Mannour was settled by Fine upon Henry Everingham and Alice his wife, and the heirs of Alice; the other parties to the Fine being Thomas Wilkins and Rob. Bate. And in 15 H. 7. Humphry Grey dyed seized of it, leaving Edw. his son and heir 28 years of age. So likewise did The. Grey in 2 Eliz. leaving John his son and heir, who accomplished his full age 3 Dec. 4 Eliz.

As for that which belong'd to the Monks of Combe, within the precincts of this Lordship, it was after the dissolution past away to Thomas Broke and John Williams, and to the heirs of Broke, in 36 H. 8. by the name of a Mannour: which I suppose was a good quantity; for besides what I mentioned as given by Morevill, there were divers petty parcels bestowed on those Monks by particular men; of whom, being persons but of mean quality, I have omitted the mention.

This village was antiently of Monkskirby parish: for upon confirmation made by Geffrey Muschamp B. of Cobentre, of what his predecessors had granted to the Priory of Kirby, Witthibroke is there mentioned to be a Chappel belonging thereto.

By an antient composition made betwixt the Monks of Combe and Kirby, and the Incumbent of Witthibroke, I find, that the Monks of Combe should receive all the tithes of those lands, which they then held in Kirby & Witthibroke, paying to the Prior and Covent of Kirby two marks of silver yearly at the Feast of S. Botolph: and for such lands which the said Monks of Combe should after that time obtain within the parishes of Kirby and Witthibroke, they to pay unto the Monastery of Kirby their xiith sheaf. But the Priory of Monkskirby being granted to the House of Carthusians founded in the Isle of Arholme by Tho. Moubray D. of Bozſ. the said Carthusians obtained license in 22 R. 2. for the appropriation of this Church (dedicated to All Saints) to them and their successors for ever.

In ann. 1291. (19 E. 1.) it was valued at 8 marks; and in 26 H. 8. the Vicaridge at viii l. vi s. viii d. the Incumbent then receiving yearly just so much in money for his salary at the hands of the Prior of Arholme.

Monumental Inscriptions in the body of the Church.

Upon a Plate of Brass fixt on a Marble Grave-stone, this Inscription.

Pray for the soules of Richard Wright and Elisabeth his wife, the purchasid the Lordship of Hoppisford; which Richard deceased the first day of December in the year of our Lord MCCCCII. Of whose soules God have mercy Amen.

In the midst of the Chancel lyeth a fair Marble, with Plates in Brass upon it, whereon are the portraictures of a man and his wife, with this following Inscription.

Of your charite pray for the saullis of Christofer Wren gentill man, and Chryſtian his wife, the which Christofer deceased the xvj day of November in the year of the Lord MCCCCXXIII. On whose saullis, and all Chriſtian saullis, Jesu have mercy, Amen.

On

On the South-side of the Chancell is a raised Monument of Alabaster, with the portraiture of a man and woman drawn thereon in black lines, and this Epitaph on the verge thereof.

Here lyeth the body of Christopher Wright of Hapsford in the County of Warwick Esquire, who was one of the Justices of peace in the County aforesaid to our most gracious Sovereign Lady Queene Elizabeth. He deceased the first day of December in the year of our Lord, 1602. Whose soule God rest.

Above it against the wall is an Arch, within which is the Arms of Wright, viz. sable a cheveron engrailed Or, betwixt 3 flower de luces argent, with mantle helme and crest, empaling Purefoy; The Motto under his Coat,

RECTUM RECTE CHRISTO FERET.

And under hers,

Hopsford.

This is in the parish of ~~Withbrooke~~, and now little better than a depopulated place, there being no more left of the Mannour-house than the bare skeleton thereof, not habitable, and two mean Cottages. In the Conq. time Geffrey Wirce (of whom I have so often spoke) posselt it; by whose Survey it was certified to contain 3 hydes, and valued at xxx s. being there written Apleford, through mistake of the f for an l, and the h omitted; which letter was in antient time indifferently used or let alone in writing, as not being very essential. Howbeit Wirce his possessions coming antiently to the ancestor of Monbray (as I have formerly shew'd) this, as I believe, was granted by Monbray, soon after, unto Herbert Putot; for I find, that the same Herbert gave three yard land here to the Monks of Combe in the beginning of H. 2. time, which grant was confirmed by K.H. 2. and that it was de feodo Rogeri de Molbrai: But all that I have found memorable of this Herbert Putot, is, that in 4 R. 1. he, with William Bance (who was owner of Athorne in Kineton Hundred) were employed by K. R. 1. in 4 of his reign, to oversee the building of a Goal at Kineton in this County; and that he had a son called Eustace, who long enjoy'd not this place. For amongst the fees of Nigel de Monbray (son to the said Roger) Robert Hasteng is certified to hold a fourth and twentieth part of a Kts. fee in this Hapsford; in whose line it continued for divers descents; as I could instance at large: but in regard what I am to say historically of that family is to be spoke in Lemington-Hastang, where they had their seat, I shall onely point thereat by some marginal references.

Howbeit at length John de Lyouns having an estate for life therein, passing it in 31 E. 3. unto Will. de Catesby, Sir John Hastang Kt. not onely confirm'd the same, but granted to the said Will. the inheritance thereof, as by his Deed dated at Cobentre the year following, upon Saturday within the Octaves of Easter, appeareth.

From which William (being of Abby-Legers in Portsmouth.) it descended to his posterity, who enjoy'd it till H. 6. time: but then, there growing suits betwixt Sir Humf. Stafford Kt. (descended from Maud the daughter and co-heir of John de Hastings, as I shall more fully shew in Le-mington) and Robert Catesby concerning the right and title thereunto, an Arbitration was made by John Vampage and Will. Tresham, viz. that the said Rob. Catesby and Lettice his wife, should by their deed enfeof John Stafford, B. of Bath and Wells, then L. Chancellour of England, and the same Sir Humf. thereof; and of all other the lands in Happesford, which he the said Robert had obtained, as well by his own purchase, as by the purchase of his ancestors; to have and to hold to the said B. and Sir Humf. and the heirs of the said Sir Humf. for ever: and that the said Rob. and Lettice should hold the same during their lives, and the longer liver of them, paying to the said B. and Sir Humf. xiii s. iiii d. per ann. the B. and Sir Humf. giving to the said Rob. in consideration of the aforesaid grant, 38 l. of lawfull English money. Which Award, bearing date 1 Febr. 1411. 6. was confirmed by a Fine levied betwixt the parties aforesaid, the same year.

But the before specified Sir Humfry, leaving issue Sir Humfry his son and heir, attainted in Parl. 1 H. 7. the said K. in 8 of his reign, granted this Mannour, then in the Crown by vertue of the said attainder, unto his servant Sir Will. Vampage Kt. and the heirs male of his body. Howbeit, Humf. son and heir to the said Sir Humf. being restored in 6 H. 8. became again possessor thereof; and in 8 H. 8. past it to Sir Edw. Belknap Kt: who, by his deed bearing date 1 Junii, 10 H. 8. sold it to Ric. Wright, then of Happesford, and Humfry VVright his son and heir, in consideration of 312 l. 3 s. 9 d. sterling. Which Humfry, residing here, was in Commission of the peace in this County for divers years of Q. Eliz. time, and dyed the last year of her reign.

Brinklow.

Now passing on, receiveth another small stream; which, having its rise in Monks Kirby; runneth under Winklow; and so leaving Smite, (now a depopulated place,) on the North-west side thereof, and Combe on the other side, falleth into it about two miles lower.

This place hath its name, doubtless, from that eminent Tumulus, whereon the Keep, or Watch-tower of the Castle, which long ago was there, did stand: but whether it was because that this little hill, by our ancestors termed a low (for the reasons I have exprest in my discourse of Winklow Hill) stood upon the edge or brink of the natural ascent, overtopping the rest of the Country thereabouts; or from the British word Wynn, which is the same with Collis in Latine, 'tis hard to say. Leaving my Reader therefore to his own fancy, I shall first consider the ruins of that quondam Castle; concluding, that had it been a work since the Norman Conquest, our publick Records, or some other authorities, would have taken notice thereof: but that it was more antient, the diversion of that notable Roman way, (viz. the Fosse) for the raising such a Fort, doth no less argue, than the extent of that Pool; which from the said road (being the head thereof) covered the adjacent valley, even unto the skirts of Petebold-Revell. Howbeit, in Domelday-book there is no mention of it, forasmuch as it was then involved with Smite, and so consequently part of the possessions which E. Alberic had, and then in the K. hands; but afterwards given to the E. of Spellent and Leicester; and by him to Nigel de Albany, father of Rog. Moubray, together with Smite, as there I have more fully shewed; which Rog. held it of the said E. of Leic. by the service of one Knights fee.

And as it was a member of Smite, so was it of that parish: for in the time of H. 1. Samson de Albincio, the then Incumbent, by the consent of Rog. de Moubray his patron, granted to the Priory of Kenilworth with the Church of Smite, the Chappel here at Winklow; which gift Ric. Peche, B. of Cob. in H. 2. time confirming, declares that he did it according to the example of Rog. Clinton his predecessor, who dyed in K. Steph. time. Out of which Chappel G. Muschamp B. of Cob. in K. John's time granted, that the Monks of Kenilworth should yearly receive two marks. But afterwards, viz. in H. 2. time, I find, that Jeffrey de la Hay had some interest here; for he granted certain woods belonging thereto unto the Monks of Combe, as by his deed, whereby the limits of them are set forth, appeareth; for which he received xli marks: but in 20 H. 2. it is expressly called terra Rogeri de Molbrai: which Rog. gave a large part also of his woods to that Monastery; in consideration whereof, the Monks discharged a debt of 80 marks that he owed to the Jews: which grants Nigel his son confirmed.

To whom succeeded VWill. de Molbrai, the last of that family that had to do here: for whereas Rob. de Stuteville in H. 2. time had laid claim to the Barony of Rob. Grundeboef, his grandfather, which K. H. 1. had given away to Nigel de Albany, father to Rog. de Molbrai, who then possessed it (as I have already intimated in Petebold super Abon) and that there was then an Agreement betwixt them, whereupon Rog. de Moubray gave to the said Rob. Kirby-Poretho (in Portsmouth.) with the appurtenances, for ix Kts. fees, to the end that the said Rob. should make no further claim: yet because that the same accord had no confirmation in the K. Court, nor by his royal authority, VWill. de Stuteville, son to the said Rob. commenced new suits against the before specified VWill. de Moubray, in the beginning of K. John's time, which at length were determined by the said King and his great Council, in this manner, viz. that the said VWill. de Stuteville should relinquish his claim to the before specified Barony, in consideration whereof, VWill. de Moubray was to pass unto him ix Kts. fees, and xii l. rent; whereupon they were made friends in the presence of the King, then at Wue (a house of the B. of Lin. within the Province of Lincolns.) on the Sunday called Septuagesima, the second year of K. John.

But these ix Kts. fees were over and above the other ix; which, by the Agreement in H. 2. time, Stuteville had: for they were in augmentum, as the Historians, as also the Record touching that determination manifesteth. And for the xii l. rent above mentioned, this very Winklow was assigned to the said VWill. de Stuteville, excepting onely the service of one Samps. de Cornubia for what he held here by military service of the said VWill. de Moubray.

To which Will. de Stuteville succeeded Nicholas his brother; and to Nicholas, Nicholas his son and heir, who had a Mercate granted to him here by K. John, to be kept upon the Monday every week, and a Festre yearly upon the Feast of S. Margaret; which were confirmed to the same Nich. as by K. H. 3. his Charter, dated here at Winklow, 15 Julii, 2 H. 3. and attested with the Seal of Will. Mareschall (then Governour of the K. and Kingdome) manifesteth. But, after this, ere long, it came to the possession of Segrave; for in 24 H. 3. the K. granted to Steph. de Segrave a weekly Mercate here upon the Tuesday. It seems that it continued but a while in that family: for Joan de Stuteville, daughter and heir to the last Nicholas, and afterwards the wife of Hugh Wake, granted it to Albred de Wyttebiri, to hold by the service of a fore Sparhawk yearly, at Lammass, or iis. howbeit at that time the E. of Leicester held a Court here twice a year, as also pleas of Withernam, and had Assize of Bread and Beer in this place.

From which Albred descended John de Whitelbury, who in 9 E. 2. was certified to be Lord thereof: but after him I find no more of that family that had to do here, neither any thing else notable relating thereto, till 18 E. 3. that the K. gave licence to Will. the son of Sir Rob. Thorpe Kt. to grant it to the Monks of Combe and their successors for ever, it being then held of Thomas Lord Wake of Lyddell by fealty, and the service of a fore Sparhawk, or 2s. yearly. Which Thomas held it over of the E. of Lanc. by Kts. service. Whereupon the said Will. de Thorpe past it to them by his deed accordingly, assigning John Merinton and Philip Puresey to deliver possession thereof. Which act of his was not onely confirmed by the said Thomas Wake, but by John Lord Monbray, and Henry E. of Lanc. (who were superiour Lords of the Fee.)

Howbeit, out of that grant to the Monks of Combe was excepted a Watermill, with the Pool belonging thereto, as also xx acres of meadow, and ten acres of pasture (all which Sir John Rivell Kt. Eliz. his wife, and John their son, held for term of their lives, by lease from the said Will. de Thorpe) Which Pool was called Magnum vivarium de Winklow. But upon the dissolution of that Monastery, this Mannour coming to the Crown, was granted by Q. Mary in 4 & 5 Ph. & M. to Sir Rob. Lane Kt. and Anthony Throgmorton Esq; to be held in socage. Which said Sir Rob. and Anthony had license, the same year, to alien it unto Will. Daws to be held in capite.

Touching the site of the Castle, all that I find, is, that it came afterwards to Arth. Gregory of Stibichall (near Cobentre) who dyed seized thereof, 1 Dec. 2 Jac. leaving John his son aged 25 years. But further it is memorable of this Winklow, that our famous Antiquary John Ross (of whom I shall speak in Cupes-cliff) was descended of a family of that name, which resided here.

In ann. 1291. (19 E. 1.) the Church (dedic. to S. John Bapt.) was valued at vi marks; the annual Pension issuing out thereof in 26 H. 8. being 26 s. 8 d.

Smite.

Following the before specified rivuler, I come next to certain pasture grounds, called by the name of Ober-Smite, and Pether-Smite, where antiently two villages bearing that name stood, the depopulation whereof hath been very antient, it seems, for the vestigia of the towns are scarce now to be discerned. In the beginning of the Conq. time, this place was held of the King by E. Alberic, (of whom I have made mention in Clifton;) but at the time of the general Survey, it, with the rest of

of E. Alberic's lands, was in the K. hands, and committed to the custody of Geffrey Wirce (so often before mentioned:) but in that Record it is written Smitham, and then contained 6 hydes, the woods being half a mile in length, and as much in breadth, and all valued at vi l. whereof, in Edw. the Conf. time, one Harding was owner. Howbeit, by the Conq. or K. H. I. it was disposed of unto Rob. E. of Wellest and Leic. as it seems, and by him or his son to Nigel de Albany, whose son Roger de Moubray gave the Church to the Canons of He-nstworth at the request of Samson de Albeneio, the then Incumbent (which grant Ric. Peche B. of Coventre confirmed, as Rog. de Clinton, his predecessor, had done) and very soon after, viz. in K. Steph. time, granted the whole Lordship of Smith to Ric. de Camvill, and his heirs, to be held by the service of one Knights fee.

Ordinis Cisterciensis Monachus

Which Richard, being a devout and pious man, and much affecting the Cistercian Monks, whose Order had then been but newly transplanted into England: and finding that part thereof, which is situate in the valley, to be full of woods, and far from any publick passage; as also low and solitary, and so consequently more fit for Religious persons; gave ^{1b. & Cart. 35 E. 3. m. 12. per Inspect} unto Gilbert, Abbot of the Monastery of our blessed Lady of Waverley in Surrey, and to the Covent of that place, all this his Lordship of Smite, there to found an Abby of the Cistercian Order: Whereupon they presently began to build; and out of their own Covent planted some Monks here, dedicating the Church thereof to the blessed Virgin also, and calling it the Abby of Cumbe, in respect of its low and hollow situation; the word Comm in the British signifying vallis, or convallis, as doth also Cumbe and Combe in the Saxon: Consonant whereunto, the Vulgar in Yorksh. and those Northern parts, term a large hollow vessel of wood (such as they use to steep Barley for Malt in) a Cumbe to this day.

Which pious and bountifull gift was confirmed ^{Regist. de umbra, f. 6. 5 lb. 2.} by the said Roger de Monbray, about the later end of K. Steph. time; who, acquitting the Monks of the service of that Kts. fee due to him from Ric. de Camvill, as aforesaid, granted to them a very large compass of woods lying towards Wilsney, as the bounds of them do more fully shew, with dead wood for their use in his wood called Burchlet, where he also allowed them pasturage for Cattle, and to be quit of paunage for their Hogs. And afterwards ratified ^{1b. 34. a.} in H. 2. time, by Rob. E. of Leicester (of whom Rog. de Monbray held the said Kts. fee in Smite) at the desire of him the said Roger, the above specified Ric. de Camvill, and the Monks: who thereupon joyntly allowed, that the said Earl should be reputed the principal Founder of this Abby; and that they would perform for him and his heirs such duties, both in his life time, and at his death, as for their chief Founders.

And now, having briefly spoke in Cobentre of the beginning and increale of a Monastick life, by reason that Monastery was not onely the greatest, but the most ancient Religious House of Monks in this County; it will not be improper, I conceive, because this is the first that was here founded for those of the Cistercian Order, before I proceed further, to point at the beginning of that Rule, and when it was first propagated in England.

First therefore, for its original, I shall deliver the substance of what an approved Author^b hath thereof. In Burgundia est locus qui dicitur Molisium, &c. In Burgundy, saith he, is there a place called Molisime, where, in the time of Philip K. of France, Robert, an Abbot, having built a Monastery, and thither gathered a Covent of devout Monks, after a time searching diligently into the strict Rules of S. Benet, would have perswaded his disciples, that they ought to live by the labour of their hands, leaving Tithes and Oblations to the secular Clergy, abstaining also from any breeches either of cloth or leather: but they inclining to the custome observed in the Western Monasteries, which were instituted by S. Maure, the disciple of S. Benet, and of S. Columbanus; and of later time by S. Odo Abbot of Cluni, said, they would not recede from the same. Whereupon the said Robert departed from them, with one and twenty which were of his mind, seeking long for such a place, where they might live and observe S. Benets Rule as strictly as the Jews did the Law of Moses. And at the length Odo D. of Burgundy, favouring their devout purposes, bestow'd on them certain lands in a place called Cisteaur, in the Bishoprick of Chalons, where the said Abbot Robert, with the rest, for some time inhabited; by example of whose strict and holy life in that wilderness, many began to do the like. But, in time, the Covent at Molisime wanting a Pastor to govern them, complained to Pope Urban, shewing unto him the inconveniences that they sustained by reason thereof; who, having a paternal affection to both places, commanded Abbot Robert to go back thither, substituting some one of those Monks at Cisteaur to supply his room as Abbot there: whereupon he constituted one Alberic; to whom afterwards Stephen an Englishman of great piety succeeded.

This plantation at Cisteaur was in the year 1098. as the same Author affirmeth, with whom agreeth an ancient Chron: of the Church of Durham; further manifesting, that this Abbot Robert was an Englishman, his surname Harding, and a Monk of Shirburne; who in his younger years, forsaking his habit, went over into France for advancement of his knowledge in learning; and coming to the Monastery of Molisime, before mentioned, was there shorn a Monk the second time, and shortly after became Abbot. Which Monks increased so much by the great conflux of men to Cisteaur, that from thence almost 500 Abbies of that Order were sprung within the compass of 55 years: so that in a general Chapter held there by the Abbots and Bishops that were of that Rule; it was ordained, that from thenceforth there should be no more erected of that Order: for their Monasteries were built in desarts, and woody places, by their own proper handy-work; unto many whereof they gave special holy names as Domus-Dei, Clara-vallis, Curia-Dei, and the like.

But touching the first of that Order erected here in England, I find some difference amongst our Historians; some affirming it to have been Rebault in Yorksh. Bernard Abbot of Clerebault sending over part of that Covent to plant there, and to instruct the Monks thereof in that Rule; which foundation was so made & by Walter Espec in an. 1132. 33 H. 1. But that Waverle in Surrey preceded it (whereof this of Cumbe was a daughter) I am much the more confident, in regard 'tis clear, that Will. Giffard B. of Winchester was^b Founder thereof; which Will. dyed 25 Jan. 29 H. 1. four year before Rebault is said to be founded. And to confirm this that I say, hearken to what our old Poet^a Robert of Gloucester hath to that purpose.

Having said thus much of their original and first coming into England, I shall adde a word or two of the strictness in their Rule, and so proceed with my discourse touching the further endowment of this Monastery.

Knigh First for their habite, they wear no Leather or Linnen, nor indeed any fine Woollen Cloth; neither, except it be in a journey, do they put on any breeches, and then, upon their return, deliver them fair washt. Having two Coats with Cowles in Winter time, they are not to augment; but in Summer, if they please may lessen them: In which habite they are to sleep, and after Mattens not to return to their beds.

For Prayers the hour of Prime they so conclude, that before the Laudes it may be Day-break, strictly observing their Rule, that not one jot or tittle of their service is omitted. Immediately after Laudes, they Sing the Prime, and after Prime they go out performing their appointed hours in work; what is to be done in the day, they act by day-light: for none of them, except he be sick, is to be absent from his Diurnall hours, or the Compline. When the Compline is finished, the Steward of the House, and he that hath charge of the guests go forth, but with great care of silence serve them.

For Dyet, the Abbot assumes no more liberty to himself than any of his Covent, every where being present with them, and taking care of his flock, except at meat, in regard his Table is always with the strangers and poor people: nevertheless wheresoever he eats is he abstemious of talk, or any dainty fare: nor hath he or any of them ever above two dishes of meat; neither do they eat of fat or flesh, except in case of sickness: And from the Ides of September till Easter, they eat no more than once a day, except on Sundays; no not on any Festivall.

Out of the precincts of their Cloyster they go not but to work: neither there or any where do they discourse with any but the Abbot or Prior.

They unweariedly continue their Canonically hours, not peicing any service to another, except the Vigils for the deceased. They observe the Office of St. Ambrose, so far as they could have perfect knowledge thereof from Willam: and taking care of strangers and sick-people, do devise extraordinary afflictions for their own bodies, to the intent their souls may be advantaged.

Which Rules were duly observed by the first Abbot and Covent; but afterwards somewhat was abated of that austerity: but their habite is still white, and nothing different in the fashion from the Monks of St. Benedict's Rule, except a girdle, which these wear about their middle.

Being now to speak of the particular endowments which this Monastery had, I shall but only point at the Benefactors, with the places where those lands and possessions so given were situate, in respect that the substance of them were in this County, so that, as they fall in my way, I omit them not. And first touching the posterity of Camvill I only find, that Gerard de Camvill, son and heir to Richard the Founder, and Nichola de Haya his wife (Daughter of Geffrey de la Haya) gave to these Monks £. sol. to keep his Anniversary there for ever: but Nigel de Monbray added all the rest of the woods, which adjoynd to those that Roger his Father had bestowed on them before; Will. de Monbray son to the same Nigel confirming whatsoever his ancestors had given.

The other speciall Benefactors were these; Richard de Morevill, who gave certain lands in Wiltshire. Thurbert de Bilneie, with some others, a large part of Bilneie. Laurence Prior of Cobentre, with the Covent of that place, half a hide of land in the said town of Bilneie. Herbert Putot certain lands in Hopsford. Thomas the son of Laurence de Stoke xxiii. acres of land in Wiltshire, and all his errable land in Bilneie. Seber the son of Hugh le Harper of Stoke, a wood called Harpers wood lying in Stoke. Alice the wife of Walter Britton, Wiltin-mill which lyeth near Sow, and a messuage there. Rob. Cheiwode and Sibil his wife Purmill in Stretton super Fosse. Agatha le Strange, divers lands in Wiltshire (now Wiltston) Ric. de Frevile, Perston mill & Hamund de Thurville, lands in the same Perston. Will. de Berthun, Blakeden mill in the Parish of Lillington. Walter Spigurwell of Emkote certain Common of pasture in the said Blakeden.

In Church-Lawford were there divers petty parcells of land given to these Monks; some by Roger Hayrun, Lord thereof, and some by inferior men: So also in Anst, and Shulton, by Rog. de Buschervill and others. Little-Lawford was wholly bestowed on them by John de Chavini Lord of that Mannour. In Herdeberwe were divers small parcells of land given by ordinary persons; so likewise in Burthingbury.

In Little-Copston and Wolbey, by Rob. Basset and Reginald his son; which Reginald gave also the moytie of the Church of Wolbey. In Shirford and Womcote they had lands also given by Thomas Trove, Lord of Shirford, and others. And in Perston Jabet divers petty parcells by inferior persons; besides all that John de Merston (otherwise called John Jabet) had in that Village. Part of which lands in Perston were particularly assigned to find shoes for the poor that were dayly relieved at the Abbey-gate. Solikewise were certain lands in Bilney and some houses in Cobentre.

In Cotes (i.e. Coton juxta Church-Over) and Peuton, they had much of the grant of Hugh Bagot, Symon Bagot, and others. In Church-waver they had also divers small parcells bestowed on them by Rob. de Waver and others. In Holme (now called Wiggin) the Mill there, with certain lands. In Caldecote half a yard land given by Emme the wife of Will. Pladio. In Mapton two yard land granted to them by Hugh de Alneio. In Rodburne a large quantity given by Will. de Lichen. In Hodenhull very much by Will. Angerin, and divers more: And in Assancote severall parcells by sundry persons. In Lodbroke & the like, some whereof John de Lodbroke bestowed on them. In Harberbury Reginald Basset gave all that he had, which was a great proportion; many others bestowing severall parcells.

In Cobentre they had many houses, and divers parcells of small Rent given to them by sundry persons; all which Ranulph E. of Chester ratified. In Staffordshire, at Wrescote Will. fil. Wydonis gave them two hides of land, which Gervase Paganell (Baron of Dudley) confirmed.

But all these were antient gifts. To which were added the Mannour of Little-Copston, purchased by the Monks, of Sir Andrew de Asteley in H. 3. time, as I have there at large declared. The Mannour of Winklow granted to them by Will. the son of Sir Robert Thorpe Kt. in 18 E. 3. And the perpetuall Patronage of the Church of Stavesby in Northampton, obtained by them in 8 H. 6. Neither were the privileges, which they had throughout all their lands of mean consideration: for K. H. 2. granted to them Free-warren, Court-leet, Felons goods, Infangthef and Outfangthef; (id est power to judge any thief taken within their Fee; and to question any man dwelling with their own Fee; and taken for felony in another place; as also to judge him in their own Court.) To be free likewise from services to the County or Hundred-Court; and moreover for paying of Toll; and all other customes pertaining to the Crown.

To these K. Ric. 1. added an immunity from paying Toll, and repaying High-ways and Bridges. And K. H. 3. from giving any Fine for murder committed within their liberties. But such as they had from the Popes, were in generall, to their whole Order; Innocent the 111. in 6. Joh. exempting them from payment of any Tithes for those lands, which they husbanded with their own proper labour or charges; as well such as had been antiently tilled, as those that were but new broke up. And his successor, Honorius, extending that Privilege, as well to all such lands as they had obtained after the generall Councell (id est of Lateran) as what they had before; which Bull of his bears date at Lateran 7. Kal. Julii, Pontif. sui vi. Howbeit, by the speciall command of Thomas Becket Archb. of Canterbury, they were to pay Tithes to the Canons of Kenilworth for all that they had within the Parish of Smite, as fully as the said Church of Smite received the same before the Cistercian Monks were seated there, till that by complaint to Pope Urban the third, who appointed Baldwin, then Archb. of Canterbury to hear the matter, the same was otherwise settled; viz. that the Monks of Combe should thenceforth provide Divine service to be fitly celebrated in the Church of Smite, discharging all duties to the Bishop and Archdeacon for that Church. And touching viii. marks yearly which the Canons of Kenilworth were to receive, it was determined, that six marks thereof, which they had yearly out of the Church of Cherleton (id est Cherleton-Camville in com. Somerset) and the other two marks out of the Church of Winklow, which the Monks of Combe were content should be paid to those Canons, they for peace sake allowing two shill. yearly Pension to be paid at the Feast of St. Michael, towards the charge of Lights in the Monastery of Combe should suffice; upon condition, that if the Monks of Combe did till any ground out of which the Chappell of Winklow had wont to receive Tithes before this agreement, that they should still pay tythes for the same, except it were new broke up ground; as of woods reduced to tillage; and except Gardens and inclosures within the precincts of the Grange, there, belonging to the Monks, and what should arise by the keeping of Cattell; which Award was made an. 1187. (33. H. 2.)

Thus in great glory, plentifully endowed, stood this Monastery little less then 400. years, till that K. H. 8. a person whose sensuall disposition, suting so right with that corrupt age wherein he lived, finding Instruments fit for his sacrilegious purposes, contrived the destruction of it, and all the rest of those pious foundations that his ancestors and other devout persons had made; Of whose subtille practises for effecting that work, I shall in a short Corollary, before I finish this tract make some discovery: Amongst which that generall Survey and valuation, by Commissioners from him, in 26. of his reign, at Robin Hoods penni-worths, did not a little conduce thereto: At which time this Monastery, with all its Revenues, over and above reprises, was certified to be worth CCCii. l. xv. s. iii. d. per an.

Of their Hospitality to strangers, and great charity in dayly releif of poor people, I need not descend to particulars, our common Historians and the tradition of such, who were eye-witnesses thereof before that fatall subversion of those Houses, may sufficiently inform the world. I shall therefore onely adde what the certificate upon the before mentioned Survey takes notice of touching this Abby; viz. that by their Foundation, and a Decree by a generall Chapter of their Order, they bestowed in Almes on Maunday-Thursd. every year 4. s. - 8. d. in money, ten Quarters of Rye made in Bread at 5. s. the Quarter; three Quarters of Malt made in Beer at 4. s. the Quarter; and 300. Herings at 20. d. the Hundred, distributed to poor people at the gate of the Monastery: Their principall Officers being at that time these; viz. Thomas Howard D. of Posff. high Steward, whose fee therefore was v. marks per an. (which shews what respect the great Nobility had to those Religious persons) Will. Wilcock Receiver generall, whose fee was 6. l. per an. And Baldwin Porter, Auditor, his fee being xl. s. per an.

After which ere long, ensued the surrender thereof to the K. hands, viz. 21. Jan. 30. H. 8. by the then Abbot and his Convent, whose names, as they stand subscribed under their severall hands to their publick Instrument, & whereunto their conventuall Seal is affixed, with the Pensions granted to them, recorded in the Court of Augmentation, I have here inserted.

But

But of the Abbots, here, have I not found the names of more than these, which were immediately preceding the dissolution, viz. * VVill. Whittington, John Tolton, Oliver Adams, and Robert Bayte.

a Inq. super depopulat. 3.E.6.

As for the Curſes which were uſually pronounced by the Founders of theſe Religious houſes, whether they have attended thoſe violators of what they ſo zealouſly and with devout minds had dedicated to Gods ſervice, I will not take upon me to ſay: but ſure I am, that after K. H.8. had accompliſh'd this work, he thrived but a little (as I ſhall elſewhere in particular obſerve.) And how long ſuch poſſeſſions have been enjoyed by thoſe that had them, they that have look't into the courſe of this world may eaſily ſee. For this, whereof I am now ſpeaking, it was by K. E. 6. firſt granted to John E. of Warwick and to his heirs, 22. Junii 1 E. 6. and after his attainder (whereof in Warwick I have ſpoke) in 3. & 4. Ph. & M. Rob. Keylway had a leaſe of the ſite and divers lands thereto belonging for 40. years, at the Rent of 196. l. 08. s. 01. d. And afterwards another for 1x. years. Which Robert Kelway, in 23 Eliz. dyed ſeized in fee of certain lands belonging to this Monastery, Anne the wife of John Harrington Eſq. being his ſole Daughter and heir, and then 30. years of age.

Binley.

About a mile below Combe, the little brook before mentioned meeteth with Sow, which, paſſing gently on, leaveth Binley on its South-caſt ſide.

In the Conq. time the Monks of Cobentre held three hides here, whereof the woods were half a mile in length, and one furlong in breadth, all being then valued ſ at 1x. ſol. which they purchaſed of Osbernus fil. Ricardi, a great man in that age, as when I come to Aſton-Cantelow ſhall be ſhewed: but in Edw. the Conf. time, Aldgid, widow to Griffin was owner thereof. The other part of this village Hadulſus (in ſome places written Hadewolſus) progenitor to the family of Rokeby (and already mentioned there) poſſeſſed at that time, as Tenant unto Turkill de Warwick, it containing two hides, whereof the woods extended to four furlongs in length and two in breadth, all which were valued at 35. s. having been held by the ſame Hadulſus of the ſaid Turkill before the Norman Conqueſt.

Touching the name I ſhall but onely deliver my conjecture; viz. that it may probably be compounded of two Saxon words, Wilene, ſignifying to dwell, and ea, water; which, being contracted together came at length to be written according to the uſual pronunciation. And that this Etymologie is nor unfutable to its ſituation is plain enough; but now we write it Binley, as it is vulgarly called, though in all ancient authorities it be recorded by the name of Wilneſe.

As to the ſucceſſion of its owners, I ſhall firſt proceed with that part which the Prior of Cobentre held, whereof the Chappell dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a Member, having been confirmed to that Monastery by Ranulph E. of Cheſter in H. 1. time, and appropriated thereto by Rog. Menland B. of Cob. and Lich. in 44

H. 3. In K. Stephans time, or beginning of H. 2. Laurence, then Prior of Cobentre, granted half a hide, of that which they had here, to the Monks of Combe, to hold in Frank-almoign, paying to the Monastery of Cobentre viii. s. per an. viz. 4. s. at the Feaſt of the Nativ. of St. John Baptiſt. and 4. s. at Chriſtmas, for all ſervices: but how their portion came to be further leſſened I know not: for of a long time before the diſſolution, the ſaid Monks of Cobentre were reputed Lords of no more than a fourth part of this village. All which, with the tythes, were by K. H.8. (inter alia) granted to Robert Burgoine and John Scudamore, and their heirs, in 36. of his reign.

The reſt, very little excepted, was beſtowed on the Monks of Combe, ſoon after the Foundation of that Abby: for Thurbert, ſon of the above mentioned Hadulſus (who is in ſome places called Thurbert de Bilneja, and in other Thurbert de Rochebe) gave a large portion thereof, as by his Charter, where it is ſet forth by bounds, appears: whereupon it ſhould ſeem, that he and his wife betook themſelves to a retired life in that Monastery, the Monks giving them allowance of dyet during their lives; as alſo to Henry his ſon and heir two marks of ſilver; and to all the reſt of their children xii. d. a piece for their aſſent; which grant was confirm'd by Rog. E. of Warwick (in reſpect that the lands of the before ſpecified Turkill came, for the moſt part, to thoſe Earls) and afterwards by Earl William; the extent thereof being one hide, amounting to the 5. part of a Kts. fee.

About the ſame time Joſlinus the ſon of Raph de Bilneje gave to the ſaid Monks a good quantity of land and woods in this place, reputed alſo for one hide, and held by the 6. part of a Kts. fee: whereupon he had allowance of his dyet as long as he lived according to the proportion for one Monk; and as much for his mother. All which his brother Robert confirmed; in conſideration whereof he had a Horſe with two marks and 4. s. of ſilver. To this Robert ſucceeded Robert his ſon, who gave them alſo a large part in woods, which, is in his Charter, ſet forth by bounds: in conſideration whereof the Monks granted, that after his death as much ſolemnity ſhould be made for him in that Abby as for one Monk, in Maſſes and Prayers, and participation of all other benefits.

And not long after, did Henry de Rochebe, ſon and heir to the before recited Thurbert, not onely confirm what his father had given; but granted them the Mill here, and half his wood called Gunechet: for which, beſides the 2. marks he had in his fathers life time, they gave him 4. marks of ſilver more, with 7. s. to his mother; and to each of his brothers; viz. Will. Alex. Thomas Ingeram, and Ric. xii. d. a piece: And to him the ſaid Henry; as alſo to his mother, allowance of as much dyet as was the proportion for one Monk, during their lives. By which grants, and ſome others, that for brevity I paſs by, it appears, that the ſaid Monks of Combe had here in 7 E. 1. one carucat of land, a Water-mill; as alſo two Windmills, all held in demefn; five Cottages, ſeven yard land, and ſeven acres held by ſeven Freeholders at a certain Rent, homage and ſuit of Court. Foutry two acres of out-wood, whereof two were then incloſed within the Park of Bran- don, for which they had yearly 2. s. and 2 Buck. As also a Court-Lect, Gallows, with Adize of bread and beer.

Whereunto K. E. 1. added * power for them to take weyfs; and a Charter of Free-warren in 18 of his reign: but they paid * Tithes to the Monks of Cobentre for all, whether held in their own occupation, or let to ferme, except the meadowing of half a yard land, which Tho. the son of Laurence de Stoke sometime enjoyed; and of a croft which Geffrey, Lord of Bilney, heretofore held; as also of the Mills. For which meadow, croft, and Mills the Monks of Combe did pay yearly to those of Cobentre half a mark on the Feast day of the Circumcision of our Lord, by Composition. But of the Tithes of a certain wast within the limits of Bilnese, with the meadow adjoining; which, being reduced to tillage by the Monks of Combe, reacheth from the old field of Bilney almost to Ernestord, the Priors of Cobentre had released * their right to the Monks of Combe, reserving to their tenants Common of pasture therein.

All which lands, &c. being reputed Mannour, * were by that name granted * to John Dudley E. of Warwick, together with the site of the Monastery of Combe, and other lands belonging thereto, in 1 E. 6. And, coming again to the Crown by his attainder, past with Combe to Rob. Keylway, as I have there declared, and from him to Harington, as that did.

In this village also had * the Hospitalars two Cottages, held in 7 E. 1. by Freeholders of them: but these were originally of that which the Monks of Cobentre antiently had there: for it was then certified, * that they were held by the said Hospitalars of Rob. de Mortimer (which was, as he was descended, by heirs generall from that Os. fil. Ric. from whom the Monks of Cobentre purchased that they had here in the Conq. time, as I have already intimated.)

Within the precincts of Bilney, is there a place called Ernestord-grange, sometime belonging to the Abby of Combe; wherein the Monks in 7 E. 1. had 2 yard land in demesne, and 1 Freeholder that held 2 yard land and 4 acres, by the service of 2 s. and a half peny yearly, homage and suit to their Court at Bilney twice a year: out of all which, the Prior of Cobentre had * Tithes, whether the Monks held it in their own hands or not. Which Grange was in 36 H. 8. granted * by the K. to Tho. Brooke, and John Williams, and to the heirs of Brook. From whom it being soon after conveyed * unto Christopher Waryn and his heirs, to hold * by the lx. part of a Kts. fee, and paying 4 s. yearly into the Court of Augmentation at the Feast of S. Michael, descended * to Will. Waryn, his grandchild, aged 5 years in 14 Eliz.

Winnall.

Sow, having left Bilney, passeth next by Winnall; which, though it lye in this Hundred of Knightslow, is of the Parish of the Holy Trinity within the City of Cobentre. This, though it be not particularly mentioned in the Charter of Earl Leofrick, upon his foundation of the Priory, was then a member * of that half of Cobentre, by him given to the Monks: but the first speciall mention that I find thereof, is in 41 H. 3. at which time the K. (inter alia) granted * to the said Monks Free-warren here and in divers other places, where it is written Wynhale. Howbeit, in the appropriation * of all the Tithes in their leverall Mannours, which Rog. Meuland B. of Cob. and Lich. made to that Monastery an. 1260. (44 H. 3.) it is written Wynhal, and was first so called, as I guess, from the Wells, or Springs in severall parts thereof, Willas, and Willon, in our old English, being so called.

In * 7 E. 1. the Prior of Cobentre had here in demesne half a yard land, a fourth part, with 4. acres and a half of meadow; and 8. servants holding 3. yard land, by the service of mowing, making and carrying hay, and the like, with some Rent, six Cottagers and two Freeholders; the particulars which they held being exactly specified in the said Record. As also an out-wood containing 8. acres: but the said Priors tenants here, used to repair to the Court Lect held at Sow (as I have there observed.) After the dissolution of which Monastery, it was granted out of the Crown, as it seems, unto Sir Ric. Lee Kt. for in 36 H. 8. the said Sir Ric. had license * to alien it, with the Tithes, to John Hales Gent. whose Nephew and heir; viz. John Hales now of Cobentre Esq. (Grandson to Christopher, Brother to the said John.) enjoys it.

Baginton.

Sow, being gone beyond Winnall, within less than a mile, receiveth Schirburne; and so, hasting on its course, leaveth Baginton on her Southern bank; which, * before the Norman invasion was posselt by one Archil, but after * the Conquest Turchil de Warwick had it; and, as tenant to him, Alwin. By the Survey * then taken it is certified to contain 4. hides, there being a Mill rated at x. s. viii. d. per an. but all valued at 50. s. and recorded by the name of Wabechtone, by mistake of the d. for a b. But, whether the name had its originall from some antient possessor thereof, or from the Brittain word Bechan, which is the same with parva, and so might signify a small village, the later syllable, tone importing with the Saxons as much as villa in the Latine, I will not stand to argue.

The Lieger * book of Stoneley says, that before the Conquest it was a member of that Lordship; which is, doubtless, true: for, upon the confirmation * made of the Church of Stoneley to the Canons of Kenilworth in H. 2. days, Wathinton is there included as a Chapell belonging thereto. And in K. John's time, when Stoneley became first appropriat to the Priory of Kenilworth xx. s. Pension * was granted to it yearly by the Bishop out of this Chapell.

That the posterity of Turchil de Warwick were not permitted to enjoy any thing, as of their fathers inheritance, I am sufficiently satisfied from the authority of the black Book in the Exchequer, cited in my Introduction touching the Conquerors hard dealing with the native English: and therefore that which the said book of Stoneley affirms; viz. that K. H. 1. gave * it, with Ruppon to Sir Henry de Ardern Kt. is the more probable; yet that the father of the same Henry (viz. Seward de Ardern, son to Turchil) was suffered to hold it; and that they esteemed it as their own in right, the grant * of the said Henry under his Seal doth manifest; wherby, with the consent of Oliva his wife, and Will. his son, he grants Watehntime, which Rog. de Wirenhale held of his father and himself, to Filicia his sister; to hold to her and her heirs by the service of a fore-Hauke, yearly: in consideration whereof she gave unto him a gold Ring.

Whether the same Filicia dyed issueless, by which means this Mannour came back to the said Henry her brother, as her heir; or whether she quitted her title thereof to him, appears not: but certain it is, that the same Henry had it again; for by his deed & in writing, he gave it in Frank-marriage at the Church dore, with Letice his daughter, unto Geffrey Savage, the day that he wedded her. In whose line it continued till towards the later end of H. 3. time; but then, by an heir female, divolved to Ednesoure; from whom it shortly went by the like means unto Hertkull, as the descent here plac't will shew. After which it continued to the Hertkull's till R. 2. time, and then was passed to Sir Will. Bagot by Sir Ric. de Hertkull Kt. Of which families of Savage, Ednesoure, and Hertkull I will here take notice in an historicall way, in respect I do rather think that their residence was here, this being a Castle, (and standing till R. 3. time, if not longer) than at any other of their seats which they had in this County and Derbysh.

Of the first Geffrey Savage this is all I find; viz. that he is mentioned in the Shiriffs account of 5 H. 2. As also, that in 31 H. 2. Thomas de Arden had suites with him for two hides of land in this County; and that he had issue Helias and Geffrey, which second Geffrey gave to the Monks of Stonley two parts of his Mill, called Partsoy-mill, with the site thereto, due from his tenants of Hull and Wotton: And was also a Benefactor to the Nuns of Polestworth, granting unto them one Rob. de Weston, his bondman, with his issue. But, it seems, he was in some disfavour with K. Ric. 1. for, in 7. of his reign, he gave 50. marks pro habenda benevolentia Regis: in which year he came to an Agreement with Tho. de Arden concerning the Mannour of Wotton.

About the beginning of K. John's time, I find, that Henry de Armentiers impleaded him for a Kts. fee here in his absence, when he was beyond Sea in the K. service; for which he had afterwards tryall by Battail of which I shall more particularly speak in Wotton.

In 6. Job. it appears, & that being surety for Will. de Hardreshill, to the Jews of Porthampton of whom the said Will. had borrow'd a large sum of money, he was distreined for that debt; and thereupon necessitated to complain to the K. to whom he gave a fine of x. marks, that the said Will. might be compelled to pay it himself. In 5 H. 3. he was jyn'd in Commiss. with other persons of quality in this County, to be one of the Justices for taking an Assize of Novel disseisin, which Philippa Marmion had brought against Rob. Marmion the younger touching her dowrie of such lands as Rob. Marmion her husband dyed seized of in Tamworth and Widleton. And dyed the next year following, as it seems; for in that year did his son Geffrey (the 3.) pay his Relief and do homage & for half a Kts. fee he held of the K. in this County. Which Geffrey in 12 H. 3. was with Hugh Despenser in the K. Army; for which cause the Shiriff had command to resist those demands he made of him; (this being the time when Ric. E. of Coventry, the K. Brother, with divers of the Barons, put themselves rebelliously in Armes) but dyed in 15 H. 3. (the same H. De spenser having the custody of his heir as father to Petronill his wife) leaving issue Geffrey; who, being thus in ward, dyed without issue in 32 H. 3. whereupon Will. le Savage, his brother, then Rector of the Church of Peuton in this County, became heir to the estate, and doing his homage had livery of all his lands held of the K. in Capite.

This Will. the Parson, overlived his said brother Robert, and was a further Benefactor to those Nuns, giving them all such mess. lands, and rents which the same Rob. held in Fresle and Doden-hale, with his part of that land where the Chappel beyond St. Edith's-well in Pobele-wood was built; to the end, that out of the profits thereof a mark of silver should be yearly paid; viz. half at the Anniversary of the Lady Petronill his mother, and the other at the Anniversary of the before mentioned Rob. Savage, his brother: as also a stone of wax for the Lights at Mattens in the said Monastery; and dyed in 43 H. 3. seized of large possessions in this Shire, and in the Counties of Wilt-gorn: Staff. Linc. and Derb. leaving Tho. de Ednesoure, the son of Tho. de Ednesoure by Lucia his sister, and Philippa, then the wife of Hugh de Meynill, his other sister, his heirs; which said Tho. and Hugh had livery of those lands, doing their homage in 44 H. 3. whereupon the possession of this Mannour went with Ednesoure, Menill having of Savages lands in this County, penton before mentioned (as shall there be shewed at large.)

Of this Tho. de Ednesoure I find, that he was in Armes with the Barons against K. H. 3. whereupon his lands were confiscate, and given by the K. first to Stephen de Eddeworth, and afterwards (making other satisfaction to the said Stephen) to Philip Marmion (Lord of Tamworth.) But, by the Decree called Dictum de Bentilworth, repossessing them again, was in 7 E. 1. certified to be Lord of this Mannour, then held of Tho. de Arden by the service of half a Kts. fee; having in demesne 1 carucat, 1 yard-land and 4 acres, a water-mill and grove containing 1 acre of land and a half, with a park of 4 acres. As also xii. villains holding 4. yard-land and a half in bond service; xii. Freeholders occupying xi. yard-land and half and one acre by certain Rent and suit to his Court here at Bathkinton, and Freewarren; having appropriated to himself the fishing in the river Avon, on the one side, from Fintford bydige to the bounds of Stonley; as also the fishing of Sow on the one side, from the lands of the Prior of Cobentre unto Bathkinton-park. That he had likewise Court-Leet, Gallows, Assize of bread and beer, and all things else belonging to such liberties, but by what authority not known. Whereunto the said Tho. answered, that he used those privileges by vertue of a certain Cup that K. H. 1. gave to Leticia the daughter of Sivard de Arden then his Concubine; which allegation of his makes it not improbable, that the favour vouchsafed to Hen. de Arden from that K. for enjoying this with some of those other lands of his grandfather Turchills, before mentioned, was for her sake; for he much affected beautiful women.

But shortly after this; viz. in 13 E. 1. the said Tho. de Ednesoure was questioned by what authority he used those privileges here; who, pleading prescription, it was by the Jury found, that he and his ancestors had enjoy'd a Court-Leet, and Weyfs time out of mind: howbeit, as to his other claims he fell short, and so they were not allowed. This Tho. gave to the Monks of Stonley all his lands in Hull juxta Wotton (vulgarly now called Hill Wotton) and to the Nuns of Polestworth a piece of ground within his Lordship of Wadley Ednesoure, containing 125. foot in length, and 61. in breadth; in both which grants he is stiled a Kt. For his descent he was of a very ancient family; viz. of Conesoure in Derbys. whence his ancestors assumed the name; and in respect of his relation to the Ferrers, Earls of Derby (I mean by the tenure of his lands in that County) bore for his Armes a fesse betwixt three Horse shoes, as by his Seal appears; but dyed in 13 E. 1. without issue: so that Amicia his sister, the wife of Sir Walt. de Miriden Kt. and Ric. de Herthull grandchild to Joane his other sister, became his heirs which Sir Walter had then livery of her inheritance doing his homage.

This Amicia (upon the partition, it seems) had Baginton for her share; but over living Sir Walt. de Miriden, took to husband ... de Derley, whom she likewise survived, and in 20 E. 1. founded a Chantry in the Church of Bathkinton, endowing it with one carucat of land, and xxx. s. yearly rent; for doing whereof she had the license of the K. and of Will. B. then E. of Warw. the Priest to serve there being to sing Mass daily for the health of her soul, the souls of her ancestors and successors, and for the souls of the said W. Beauchamp, Maud his wife and their children, and of all the faithful deceased. And moreover gave one acre and half of land, one rood and three selions; lying in this Lordship, to one Ric. Deverell and his heirs, to provide for her and her heirs two torches, to be burning daily at the high Altar in the Church here at Bathkinton, at the elevation of the Host: as also to find one Lamp burning at all divine exercises in her Chappell there for ever; and dyed in 30 E. 1. leaving Ric. de Herthull her Coulen and heir; who, then doing his homage, had livery of her lands; in whose line they continued for divers descents.

Being now therefore to speak of these Herthull's, I shall first, in the generall observe, that this was an ancient family in Derbys. and Lords of Herthull, whence they assumed their surname, being owners of other good possessions in that County. This Ric. de Herthull was 30 years of age 30 E. 1. and became a man of much action and note in his time. In 29 E. 1. he had summons to be at Berwick upon Twede, thence to advance with the K. in person against the Scots. The same year was he one of the Commissioners appointed in this County for taxing of a xv. And in 30 E. 1. being one of the Kts. for this Shire in the Parl. then held at Westm. was joyn'd in Commission with the Shiriff to collect the Aid for Marriage of the K. eldest Daughter granted in the Parl. of 18 E. 1. In 34 E. 1. he served again in the Parl. as one of the Kts. for this Shire; and in 1 E. 2. I find him a Kt. as also in 7. one of the Justices for the gaol-delivery at Warwick.

In 14 E. 2. he had warning to attend the K. against his rebellious Barons at that time in Arms (whereof Tho. E. of Lancaster was the ringleader) but, being weak and ill could not himself go in person; whereupon he sent his son Ric. who served in that expedition under Raph Lord Bassor. This Sir Ric. gave to the Nuns of Polestworth, and to the Chappell of St. Nich. at Wadley (of which Mannour he was Lord) that mess. and half yard land which those Nuns had held of his ancestors in Wadley aforesaid. And on Will. Silvester Vicar there, and his successors, he bestowed a certain tenement, which Alan the precedent Vicar held, in the time of Will. Sauvage his ancestor. And dyed in 18 E. 2. leaving Adam his son and heir; who, doing his homage had livery of his lands, being then 32 years of age.

In 10 E. 3. this Adam was a Kt. but departed the world the next ensuing year, leaving Ric. his son and heir then aged 25. years: which Ric. being likewise a Kt. in 16 E. 3. was in 18. in Commission for assellessing of a xv. then granted to the K. in Parl. and in 20. with others, assigned in this County, to levy the Aid granted to the K. in Parl. for making his eldest son Kt. In 21 E. 3. upon the array of souldiers, being charg'd with two Hoblers, he was for some speciall respect (as the Record expresseth) by the K. Councell, discharg'd of one. In 33 E. 3. I find him in two Commissions, with sundry persons of the best quality in this County, for arraying of Souldiers according to the Statute of Winchester. In 40. and 42. one of the Kts. for this Shire in the Parl. then held. In 45. Shirriff of these Counties; and the same year one of those that was assigned for the assellessing of a subsidy then granted to the K. in Parl. The next year following for the assellessing of a x. and xv. in this Shire. In 50 E. 3. Shirriff once more; which office he also bore again in 1 R. 2. but in 5 R. 2. he sold this Lordship to Sir Will. Bagot Kt.

Two wives he had; viz. Alice daughter of Sir Giles Astley Kt. by whom he had his issue; and Mary who overliv'd him and dyed in 13 R. 2. leaving Will. his Grandchild, his heir ten years of age: which Will. in 2 H. 4. had livery of his inheritance, the K. then respiting his homage, but deceased the year following without issue, leaving Eliz. his aunt and heir; first married to Edm. Cokeyn Esq. (of Alsburne in Derbysh.) but then the wife of John Franceys of Inggelby; who, having issue by her, had livery of her lands, doing his homage: but of such her issue purposing to speak in Booley; I return to Sir Will. Bagot as Lord of this Mannour, the estate therein being convey'd to him by divers feoffees, into whose hands the said Sir Ric. had past it, Sir John Cokeyn (son and heir to the said Edm. and Eliz.) releasing also to him his interest.

This Sir Will. being a branch of that antient family of the Bagots in Staffordshire, (as may seem by the observation of one well vers'd in the antiquities of that County) in 6 R. 2. wrote himself of this place; and, the next year following, was constituted Shirriff of these Counties. In 11. of that K. reign he served in the Parl. held at Westm. as one of the Kts for this Shire; and in 12. in the Parl. held at Cambridge. So also in 14 again at Westm. in which year he was likewise in Commission for conservation of the peace in this County; and the next year following a Commissioner of Array. In the severall Parl. viz. of Winchester in 16 R. 2. of Westm. 17. 18. and 20 R. 2. he served again as one of the Kts. for this Shire: And upon renewing the Commissions for the peace in 20 and 22. R. 2. was joyned therein.

In that notable Parl. of 21. R. 2. (wherein the K. became so powerfull as our Historians do shew) he was a forward, ambitious, and active man; and being one of his chief favourites and Counsellors in that turbulent time, when Henry D. of Lanc. who had been formerly banish'd, landed at Rabenspur in Dorsetsh. fled with the rest of his fellows, to Wiltoll, there hoping to protect himself in that strong Castle: but, the discontented Lords, taking advantage of the K. absence (then in Ireland) quickly rais'd an Army of no less than 60000 and besieging that Castle, in short time took it, and therein all of them except this Sir Will. Bagot; who, having made his escape, fled into Ireland: and of those so taken, forthwith beheaded Will. le Scrope L. Treasurer, Sir John Busby, and Sir Henry Green. All which fell out in the 22. and last year of K. R. 2. whose despolall soon after ensued.

It seems, that this Sir Will. came back again into England with K. Ric. for, within a month after, the new K. began his reign, he committed him prisoner to the Tower of London, viz. 22. Nov. yet, on the 24. of Dec. following, the Shirriff of this County received command (for speciall reasons thereunto moving the K. as the Writ saith) that he should permit the B. of S. Davids, and other the feoffees of his lands in this County; amongst which this Mannour of Waginton is mentioned in the first place, to have possession of them: howbeit, though for what reason I know not, the 23. of Jan. following, he superseded the Shirriff as to that restitution: But this displeasure of the K. continued not very long; for the 12. of Nov. following he gave command to the Constable of the Tower, for his enlargement. It seems he was still popular; for in the Parl. held at Westm. the same year, the Commons petitioned, that he might be restored to his lands: whereunto the K. answered, that as he had allowed him pardon, so would he otherwise shew him Justice; which extended to his reception into grace: for in 4 H. 4. he served in the Parl. at Westm. as one of the Kts. for this Shire: And the next ensuing year, (the clouds being over) had a full Release from the B. of S. Davids and other his feoffees, of all their interest in this Mannour and the rest of his lands. But after this he lived not long; for on the 6. of Sept. an. 1407. (8 H. 4.) he departed this world, as may seem by that part of his Monumentall Inscrip. here at Waginton, where he lies interred with Margaret his wife, the sister and heir of Rob. de Wharton of Nottinghamsh. leaving issue Isabell his onely Daughter, married to Tho. Stafford of Pipe in Staffordsh. (son of Sir Tho. Stafford Kt.) nephew and heir to Edm. Stafford B. of Exeter, and one of the Kts. for this Shire in the Parl. held at Leicester 2 H. 5. as also one of the Esquires retain'd for life with Ric. Beauchamp E. of Warwick.

Which Tho. resided here at Waginton whil' it continued unfold; but that was not long: for Sir John Bagot Kt. one of the feoffees of Sir Will. Bagot's lands, by his deed dated upon Palm-Sunday 5 H. 5. (wherein making mention of the last Will and Testament of the said Sir Will. Bagot, made and published, by which he appointed that Margaret his wife should hold this Mannour during her life, the remainder to the aforementioned Tho. Stafford and Isabell, and the heirs of the body of the said Isabell lawfully begotten; and in case she should dye leaving no such issue, then to be sold, and the money received for the same, disposed and distributed for the health of the souls of him the said Will. and Margaret) did with the consent of the said Margaret, Tho. Stafford, and Isabell, sell and grant the reversion of this Mannour; (which ought, as he there expresseth, to have come to him the said Sir John Bagot, after the decease of the said Margaret, Tho. and Isabell without issue) unto Ric. Beauchamp E. of Warwick Will. Mountfort and others, their heirs and assigns for ever: the same Tho. Stafford by his deed dated the Friday before the feast of St. Luke the Evang. in the same year, confirming the grant.

Which Earl, by his last will and Testam. bearing ring date 8 Aug. 15 H. 6. appointed, that if it should please God to send him another son, his Executors should pass an estate to him (inter alia) of this his Mannour and Castle of Bathkington, and to the heirs male of his body, with remainder to his right heirs for ever. But departing¹ this life ult. Apr. an. 1439. (18 H. 6. and leaving Hen. his son and heir afterwards created² D. of Warwick, the said Henry enjoy'd it; and after him Ric. Nevill E. of Salisbury in right of Anne his wife, sister and heir of the whole blood to the said Duke; unto whom being also in that respect advanced to the same Earldom of Warwick the Executors to the same Ric. Beauchamp did, in accomplishment of his said last Will and Testam. deliver³ and confirm it (inter alia) upon condition, that he the said Earl and his Countess should forthwith grant it unto the Dean and Chapter of the Collegiate Church in Warwick and their successors in pure and perpetuall alms; which was accordingly⁴ performed. Whereupon it continued thereto till that grand dissolution of the Religious houses by K. H. 8. but then, by the Survey⁵ made in 26. of that K. reign, having been valued at 34. l. 14. s. it became swallowed up in the Crown; and by Letters Pat.⁶ dated 13 Apr. 36 H. 8. was thence granted unto Francis Goodere of London Gent. and his heirs; who dyed⁷ seized thereof 1 E. 6. leaving Henry his son 13. years of age.

Which Henry, being afterwards Kt. did by Indenture,⁸ bearing date 20 Jan. 37. Eliz. entayl it upon the heirs male of his body: but fayling of such issue, and desiring that his lands might continue to his posterity and name, married Frances his eldest daughter unto his own brothers son; viz. Henry Goodere, son and heir to Sir Will. Goodere then of Donkeshirby Kt. and settled⁹ this Mannour on them and their descendants; which Henry, being afterwards Knighted, and a Gentleman of the Privy-Chamber to K. James, but not so fortunate as to augment his estate by following the Court, engaged this Lordship to Sir Henry Raynsford of Clifford in Gloucestersh. and others, who in 16 Jac. sold it to William Bromley Esq. descended¹⁰ from Sir Walter Bromley of Bromley in com. Staff. Kt. temp. R. Joh. (the now seat of the Lord Gerard) whose family hath for many ages flourished¹¹ in the Counties of Staff. Salop: and Cheshire; and lineall heir¹² Male to the sometime famous Sir John Bromley, who, in 4 H. 5. recovering¹³ the Standard of Guyen in that memorable battail of Cozby, then gained by the French in a fierce charge on that wing which Hugh Stafford Lord Bourchier (his near kinsman) then commanded; had¹⁴ for that eminent service not onely the dignity of Knighthood confer'd upon him; but lands of great value in the Duchy of Normandy, with offices of speciall power and trust in those parts; as also an augmentation¹⁵ to his Arms; viz. the same Standard of Guyen for his Crest.

To which Sir John succeeded¹⁶ Sir John, his son and heir; who by his first wife leaving none but femal issue, amongst whom, by reason of a speciall Entail, a large inheritance was shared, afterwards wedded¹⁷ M. daughter of Ric. Widvile E. Rivers, by Jaquet Dutcheis of Bedford (a branch of the Imperiall family of Luxemburgh, and great grandchild to K. Edw. 3. by the Princess Isabell his eldest daughter) and by her had issue Thomas; whose direct heir male, is Will. Bromley Esq. (son to the before specified William) now Lord of this Man-nour; a person whose speciall endowments do shew, that he hath not degenerated from such his worthy ancestors; unto whom I have dedicated the Map of this Hundred, whereof he is so great an ornament, as by his Arms therein graven, with that honourary Crest before mentioned, which hath been born by them ever since, may be seen.

Of the Castle, sometime standing here, is there now, besides the moat, nothing remayning except heaps of rubbish; nor when it was demolisht have I yet found: but this is memorable thereof; viz. that when Henry D. of Hereford, and John D. of Posff. should have determined the difference, then betw^xt themselves, by a personall combat upon Gosford green, near Cobentre, in 21 R. 2. the said Henry then lodg'd thereat; and from thence advanc'd to the place appointed, upon his white Courser barded with blew and green velvet, gorgeously embroidered with Swans and Antelops of Goldsmiths work, and armed at all points.

In an. 1291. (19 E. 1.) the Church, here, (dedicated to S. John Bapt.) was valued at vii. marks: but in 26 H. 8. at viii. l. xx. d. over and above viii. s. allowed for Procurations and Synodalls.

Kenilworth.

Little more than a mile below Waginton, is the river of Sow more enlarged by a small brook coming from Kenilworth, of which place, before I pass further, I am next in order to speak.

Before the Conquest, it was a member^a of Stoneley, being ancient demesne of the Crown; and had, within the precincts thereof, a Castle^b situate upon the bank of Avon, in the woods opposite to Stoneley-Abby. Which Castle stood upon a place called Hom-hill, but was demolished in those turbulent times of warr betwixt King Edmund, and Cannus the Dane. By the Conq. Survey^c, it appears, that this which now beares onely the name of Kenilworth, was then in two parts; the one called Opstone, certified to contain three hides, being then held, immediatly of the King by Albertus Clericus, in pure Almes; upon which were resident two Priests: the woods whereof conteyned half a mile in length, and four furlongs in breadth; This being that part of Kenilworth which now the Inhabitants call the High-town, and situate upon the ascent on the North part of the Church. But the other, which in the same Record^d is written Chilnewode, and posselt by Rich. Forestarius, did then contain no more than three virgats, besides the woods, which were certified to be half a mile in length, and four furlongs in breadth. Hac duo membra (saith Domesday-book) jacent ad Stanleif manerium Regis.

That the name, originally, did proceed from some ancient possessor of it, whose habitation was there, is not to be doubted, the syllable Wode, which should be Wode (id est) Worthe and signifieth a mansion or dwelling place, manifesting as much: but whether his name was Kenelm, or Kenulph, for antiently it was written Kenilworth; or whether it were the above mentioned Rich. Forestarius, who had his seat there, which Richard in some very antient authorities, that I have seen, is called Rich. Chineu, I cannot positively determine; and therefore will not insist longer on conjectures. Certain it is, that it continued in the Kings hands till H. 1. time, and then was given^e to Geffrey de Clinton, a Norman; who (doubtless) had his first abode in England, at Clinton (now vulgarly called Clinton) in Orfordshire, and thence assumed his surname.

This Geffrey, if we may credit our Countreyman Ross, was grandson to Will. de Tankerville Chamberlain of Normandy, and Maud his wife, daughter to Will. de Arches, whose descent is derived from Wevia sister to Gunora Dutcheffs of Normandy: but of the certainty thereof I much doubt, considering that an authentique Historian^b, his Contemporary, renders him to have been of very mean parentage, and meely raised from the dust by the favour of the said King Henry, from whose hands he received large possessions, and no small honour, being made, both Lord Chamberlein and Treasurer to the said King, and afterwards Justice^k of England: which great advancements do argue, that he was a man of extraordinary parts. It seems he took much delight in this place, in respect of the spacious woods, and that large and pleasant Lake (through which divers petty streames do pass) lying amongst them; for he it was that first built that great and strong Castle here, which was the glory of all these parts, and, for many respects, may be ranked in a third place, at the least, with the most stately Castles of England. Neer unto which he also founded^m, at the same time, a goodly Monastery for Black Canons: of which Order it will not be amiss to take a brief view before I go on with my discourse of this particular Monastery.

The most received opinion is, that these Canons Regular had their first institution from S. Augustin Bishop of Hippo; wherefore I will succinctly deliver the occasion and ground thereof. This Augustin was born in the City of Tagaste in Africa, and, betaking himself to the study of Philosophy in his younger years, grew to be an excellent Scholar, and a famous Rhetorician, for which he became so eminent, that being sent for to Millain, there to teach Rhetorique, by the preaching of S. Ambrose then Bishop of Millain, he was reclaimed from the Heresy of Manicheus, where-with he had been tainted; And afterwards, coming to Hippo, at the solicitation of a great person, was, by Valerius then B. of that place, ordained a Priest; in which City he shortly instituted a Covent of Clerks, and lived according to the Rule constituted by the holy Apostles, instructingⁿ them in the Evangelique perfection; viz. love of Poverty, Obedience, and Chastity.

After which, upon the death of Valerius he became B. of Hippo; but notwithstanding, being desirous to continue his Religious Course of life, he founded a Monastery of Clerks, within the precincts of his Church.

Divers sorts of Religious persons have taken him for their Law-giver; viz. the Heremites, called Augustines, Canons Regular, &c. making all profession under his Rule. Their habite, as Polyd. Virg. affirmeth, is a white coat and a linnen surplis, under a black cloak, with a hood covering their head and neck, which reacheth to the shoulders; having, under it, doublet, breeches, white stockings, and shoes or slippers, and when they walk out a black corner'd cap, or a broad Hat; their Crowns being shaven, but not so much as other Monks. Thus much as to the Order.

With this Monastery so founded by the said Geffrey de Clinton, I will now proceed, in regard it was so signall a Monument of his piety, reserving my story of the Castle till anon.

By his Foundation Charter^r it appeares, that he gave to the Canons of this House, for the redemption of his sins; as also for the good estate of King Henry, whose consent he had thereto; and of his own wife and children; all the lands and woods of this Kenilworth, excepting what he had reserved for the making of his Castle and Park. Together with the Mannors of Salford, Illicote and Peunham in this County. The Church of Wotton, with a hide of land thereto belonging. Two hides in Winton; with the Churches of Clinton (in Orfordshire) and Barton in Portsmouthshire Granting further unto them, of pasturage; viz. that wheresoever his own Cattell & Hogs should he, whether within his Park or without, there also might theirs have liberty to feed. And their tenants Hogs to have the like freedom in all other, except his inclosed woods and Park, as his own tenants had.

Adding by another Charter^s the gift of a full tenth of whatsoever should be brought to his Castle; viz. either to his Cellar, Kitchen, Larder, Granary, or Hall-garth ; as well of all bought or given , either in Corn, Hay, Hogs, Muttons, Bacon, Venison , Cheefe , Fish, Wine, Hony, Wax , Tallow, Pepper, and Cumin, though they had been tithed elsewhere before, as of his own proper revenue. Together with all his Lambskins throughout every his Mannours, as well those as should be kill'd to eat, as of others that might dy casuallly.

Canonicus Regularis S^t Augustini.

To these large and munificent gifts, he added the Mannour of Hichenden in Com. Buck. which he had by the bounty of King Henry; and the Church of Stone in Staffordshire, which he procured of one Enisan, within whose Lordship it lay, by the consent of Nich. de Stafford, it being founded in his fee. But that which I call, here, the Church of Stone was a small Monastery founded in memory of Wolfsade and Ruffin, slain by King Wolpherus their father, in respect that they became Christians, being converted from Paganism, and baptized by that holy man S. Chad B. of Lichfield, near a thousand years since.

And besides these particulars did he likewise give to the said Canons, liberty to fish with boat and nets, one day in every week; viz. Thursday, in his pool, here at Kenilworth. But other particulars, of him, worthy of Note have not I seen any, except that false accusation of Treason made against him at Woodstock, where K. Henry kept his Easter in 30. of his reign.

To him succeeded Geoffrey his son and heir, Lord Chamberlain likewise to the King as his father was, and possessor of a great estate: for by the certificate of William E. of Warwick, in 12. H. 2. it appears, that he held of him no less than XVII. Knights fees de veteri feoffamento. Which Geoffrey wedded Agnes daughter unto Roger Earl of Warwick, with whom he had in marriage ten of those 17. Knights fees; id est a discharge from any service for them, except in some special cases: As also the Shrivalty of this County, to hold to him and his heirs, in such sort, as he the said Earl, had held, or might hold it of the King: and was a great benefactor to this Monastery of Kenilworth; not onely by confirming all his fathers grants thereto; but adding these particulars; viz. the land at Pewton, at the buriall of his father. The Mannour of Dakinton with the Church and Mill, there. The greatest part of Lemington with the Church and Mill. The Mill of Guy-Cliff. The Cell of Bretford, with lands at Wardfen and Wotton. The Churches of Willemeleghton (now called Wozmleghon) Herberbury, Radford, and Budbroke, all in this County; with the Church of Stibbeke in Buckinghamshire, confirmed to them by William Pipard.

All which were likewise ratified by Henry de Clinton, son to the last specified Geoffrey, who also gave thereunto the town of Lachebroke, with much more land at Wardfen: in consideration whereof the before specified Canons allow'd him every day, during his life, two manchetts, such as two of the said Canons used to have, and four gallons of their better beer, according to wine measure which he was to have whither he were at Kenilworth or not, from the time he should enter into a religious life, in case he did so do, except on those dayes he had entertainment in the said Monastery. After whose death, Amicia de Bidun, his wife, released unto these Canons all her right of dowrie, which she had in the lands so given by her said husband.

I will now onely enumerate the principall grants made by divers other persons to this Monastery, for as much as of such that were in this County, I speak more largely as I discourse of those particular places. viz. Bueria (now called Bethe near Wotton) given by Odo de Turri. The Church of Stoneley by K. H. 1. Divers lands in Spolington by Julian de S. Remigio; As also the Church of Pffete, with a yard land in Conley (near Driford). The Church of Bethe (in Drifordshire) by Lesceline, daughter to Geoffrey the Founder; and wife to Norman de Verdon; which Bertram de Verdon, her son, confirmed; granting, besides, a meadow at Alho called Augenbale, and another at Bretford.

The Churches of Bratles, and Wellebourne by Roger Earl of Warwick. Of Lockley by Rob. fil. Odonis, with certain lands also there. Of Whitnash by Raph de Mara and Lesceline his wife. Of Hampton in Arden and Smite with the Chappell of Winklow by Roger de Moubray. Of Langford in Derbyshire by Nich. de Grefley and Margaret his wife; which Margaret, in her minority, with her whole patrimony, was long under the care and tutelage of the before specified Geoffrey, the Founder. Of Chesterton by Will. Croc. Of Fenny-Compton and one hide of land there by Gilbert le Bigoth. Of Canendon, with divers lands there by Sewal fil. Fulcheri (ancestor to the ancient family of Shirley, yet lords of that Mannour.) And of Cherlton-Canville in Com. Somerset by Rich. de Canville. All which, with their severall Chappells, were confirm'd to these Canons by severall Kings and Bishops, as I shall have occasion more fully to manifest when I come to each of them.

Of Broke in Rutland, which was a Cell to this Monastery, given by Hugh de Ferrers, and confirmed by Walcheline his brother. Of lands in Pewton by Ernald de Bois. In Herbivole and Walton by Will. Giffard. In Baginton by Hen. de Arden. In Ludewell by Manasses Arsic. In Litho by Ric. de Beresford, Cecily his wife, and Raph de S. Edmundo. Of half a yard land in Ricardscote, in Com. Staff. By Cecily the daughter of Rog. le Wayte. Of lands in Herberbury by Henry Malory and others. Of fire-wood in Berkswell by Nigel de Mundevill. Of lands in Wolston by Rog de Frevill and Sibill his wife. And to these were added the Church of Spilberton by Walter Espigurnell and Celestina his wife, in 16. H. 3. With the greatest part of Lockley, Wescote, and Wotton; and the advouion of the Church of Lockley by Peter de Mara, about the 38. of H. 3.

Afterwards; viz. in 19. E. 2. John Lok, and Roger de Boyvill had license from the King to grant the Mannour of Patlethull in Staffordshire to this Monastery. In 20. E. 3. Thomas de Hampton to give five messs. with cxii. acres of land in Radford thereunto. And in 25. of the same K. reign, John the son of John de Peto, for granting xiv. messs. two Carucat's, and five yard land in Lorley to it.

Many other small parcells, in severall places, were at sundry times given to these Canons by common persons, the mention whereof I do purposely pass by, for brevities sake. Of all which the Prior and Covent of this House, being thus possessor in 12. E. 1. granted away the Churches of Fenny-Compton, and Chesterton to the B. of Coventre and Lichfield, and his successors for ever.

And of these their possessions, as they had ample confirmations by severall Kings of this Realme, so were the privileges very great which they enjoyed by those Charters; viz. power to keep Court-Leet, Assise of bread and beer, authority to try malefactors within divers of their Lordships and freedom from suite to the County and Hundred-Courts, as by the same Charters, unto which I have pointed, may be seen: besides Free-warren in divers of their Mannours, as I shall instance when I come to them in particular. To these was added by King E. 3. that the Sub-prior and Covent should, during the vacancy, have the custody of the said House, and all the Temporalties appertaining thereunto, paying only to the King his heirs and successors, for every whole year, cxvii li. ii s. viii d.

As to the appropriation of the particular Churches before recited, to the use and benefit of this Monastery, I shall take notice of them when I come to those places where they are situate; as also of such Chappells which were belonging to any of them, that I have not yet mentioned.

Thus was their plenty very great, wanting nothing that might be usefull to them in a full and fit manner, even to the meanest conveniencies; K. H. 3. granting^s them liberty to conduct Spring-water, by pipes, from a pure fountain which lay fit for that purpose, to the severall offices in the Monastery.

That the Priory of Stone in Com. Staff. was a Cell to this House, and how it came to be so I have already shewed: And that the nature of those Cells was to be subordinate, as to matter of government, and the like, unto those whereof they were thus members, it is not unknown to any man of judgment. I shall now therefore briefly shew, when, how, and upon what termes the Canons of Stone became exempted from such their subjection to these of Kenilworth; which was by an unanimous reference to the Decree and finall determination of Roger Meuland Bishop of Coventre and Lichfield, in Anno 1260. (44. H. 3.) Who, thereupon, did ordain, that from thenceforth the Prior of Stone might receive Canons to that habit and profession, and freely dispose of every thing both spirituall and temporall appertayning to them, without the allowance of the Prior of Kenilworth. And that the said Prior of Stone, and every of the Canons there serving God, with their successors, should be free and exempt from any future subjection to the Pr. and C. of Kenilworth for ever, except in these particulars; viz. that the Prior of Kenilworth, for the time being, ought once every year to visit the said Priory of Stone with ten Horses, staying onely two days, and performing his office there, as of Custome, not removing any Canon of that House; nor sending any Canon to the House of Stone, there to continue.

And when the Priory of Stone should happen to be void, two of the Canons of Kenilworth, together with those of Stone to be at the election. That such election should be made by license first required of the Prior of Kenilworth, in case he were then within the Kingdom; or of his substitute, if he were absent; and within eight days following, the two Canons of Kenilworth to repair thither, to see that all things were carried uprightly at the said election: but if they came not within that time, the Canons of Stone to proceed without them. And moreover, that during the vacancy, the Prior and Covent of Kenilworth, as Patrons, should have the custody thereof by one of their Canons; who, till the new Prior were elected, were to have fitting dyer there, not meddling with any^{ne} movable or unmovable

It was likewise then decreed, that when the Priory of Kenilworth should happen to be void, the Prior of Stone, in case he had been a Canon of Kenilworth, should be present at the election of the new Prior of Kenilworth; taking his place in the Chapter-Houle, and Quire, as his predecessors had done. And, that all such Charters of Kenilworth, which might be of use to the Canons of Stone, should be transcribed, and those transcripts attested with the Seales of the said B. and Prior of Kenilworth; And upon necessary occasion, the originalls to be delivered to the Prior of Stone, or his certain Atturney for the defence of that Houle, and prosecution of their rights. Which Decree beares date on the day of the translation of S. Thomas the Martyr in the year abovesaid.

But after this; viz. in An. 1291. (21. E. 1.) there growing some difference betwixt the Canons of Kenilworth & Stone, concerning the lands, which they of Stone held, they came to a finall Agreement. Whereupon they of Kenilworth relealed to those of Stone and their successors, their totall interest in the said House of Stone, and the particular lands and Churches thereunto appertaining; all which are mentioned therein: Saving to these of Kenilworth their right of patronage, as aforesaid; and the yearly Rent of xii. marks and a half sterling, that by their publique Instrument the Canons of Stone were bound to pay to Kenilworth. Which Agreement and Releases were confirmed by King E. 3. 16. Aug. in the x. year of his reign.

Of the damages that this Monastery sustained when the Castle was besieged in 50. H. 3. I purpose to take notice when I come to discourse of the same Leaguer, having, in the next page inserted the names of all the Priors of this House which I have met with; together with the times when most of them were admitted: But little is there now memorable of them, considering that their Monuments, and historicall actions, kept in certain Registers, which they had in the nature of Annals, were all destroyed at that fatall dissolution of it, and the rest, by K. H. 8. so that there is nothing now remayning, but a very great Bell yet hanging in the present Parish Church, made, it seemes by Prior Kederminster, who lived temp. H. 4. H. 5. and beginning of H. 6. time; about which there is an Inscription in large Characters, as may be seen where I have exhibited the Armes still remayning in the windows of the said Church.

I now descend to that Survey, taken in 26. H. 8. as preparatory to the said generall dissolution; at which time this Monastery was valuedⁿ at 533 li. 15 s. 04 d. per annum, over and above all reprises; viz. in Quit-rents, Synodals, Procurations, Pen-sions, stipends to Curats, Charges of Anniversaries, and yearly Fees to the Officers belonging thereunto, with the like. In which it appears, that there was weekly given^x in Almes to poor people for the soul of Geffrey de Clinton the Founder, half a quarter of Moncorne, rated then at 5 s. the quarter; and three bushells of Barley made in beer, at the rate of 4 s. the quarter. And on Maunday-Thurs-day yearly distributed^y to poor people in ready money, bread, and beer, at the washing of their feet lxxii s. The principall Officers belonging to this House, being at that time, Henry Marq. Dorset, high Steward, whose Fee was cvi s. viii d. per ann. Laurence Grey Receiver^a generall, whose Fee was vi li. per annum, John Lodbroke Auditor^b, his Fee being liii s. iv d. per annum.

Touching the Mannour of Kenilworth, which belong'd to this religious House, I find, that it continued in the Crown till 6. Eliz. and then was granted to Rob. Earl of Leicester (at that time posselt of the Castle, as I shall shew by and by. But the site of the Monastery, which had been given by K.H. 8. to Sir Andrew Flamok (a Courtier of those dayes) descended to Sir Will. Flamok his son and heir, who dyed & seized thereof 11. Julii, 2. Eliz. leaving Katherin his daughter and heir about three years old, afterwards marryed to John Colburn of Morton-sporell in this County esquire. Which John, having bought certain Horses, stolen out of the said Earles stables here at Kenilworth-Castle, as was pretended, became so terrified by Leicester, that he quitted unto him all his right therein, upon easy tearmes, as I have heard, &

Kenilworth Castle.

That this Castle was built by Geffrey de Clinton Chamberlain and Treasurer to K. H. 1. I have already in my discourse of the Priory, by him then founded, sufficiently manifested; where also I have spoke, both of his parentage, and what else, in relation to him, is notable: but, being a place of such extraordinary strength and largeness (as may be seen by the circuit, breadth, and depth of the outer moats, and that unparallel'd part thereof, called Cesars-Tower, which by the thickness of it's walls and form of building, appears to have been of the first foundation) continued not long to his posterity: for in 11. H. 2. the Shiriff accounted^b for the profit of the Park; and in 19. H. 2. it was posselt and garrison'd by the King, his eldest son (whom he had Crown'd) then rebelling against him; with whom Lewes & K. of France, Rob. Earl of Leicester, Hugh Earl of Chester, and many other great men took part, as our Historians do declare. At which time there was layd in a c. quarters of bread-corn, at viii li. viii s. ii d. charge (being not then much more than 2 d. a bushell;) 20. quarters of Barley at 33 s. 4 d. An hundred Hogs at 7 li. 10 s. Forty Cows, salted, at 4 li. cxx. Cheeses at 40 s. 25. quarters of salt at 30 s. at which time c. sol. were allow'd for making of a Gaol there.

And the next year following, did the same Shiriff, viz. Bertram de Verdon, account a large summs of money, for payment of the Souldiers, Horse and Foot, therein. 'Tis true, that Geffrey de Clinton, son & heir to the said Geffrey the Founder, had it a while in possession again, as some words of his Charter, whereby he granted certain lands in Spilberton do import; viz. Postquam Castellum meum & honorem meum recuperavi; but it remained with him scarce 7. years; and, after that time was never out of the Kings hands, till Henry 3. granted it to Sim. Montfort E. of Leicester, as I shall shew anon: for in 27. H. 2. the Shiriff accounted for the Ferm of the ward thereof: (which I take to be such money as was paid by the Country people, who were, otherwise, to perform their service in person for the guarding of this Castle): as also for certain money that he received, in the nature of Rent, from such as had their abode therein. Which makes me conjecture, that some persons, for security to themselves and their goods, obtained leave, there to reside, whereby they might be preserved from robbery and mischief in those turbulent times.

The next year following, he accounted for the Ferm of such ground as was within the compass of the fortifications. In 30. H. 2. for the charge of repaying the walls. In 31. for workmanship about the Goale there. In 33. for the ground within the Castle, and paunage of the Park. In 1 R. 1. again, for the ferm of the same ground. In 2. x and 3. for the custody and repair thereof. And in the beginning of King John's time, Henry de Clinton (grandson to the founder) released to the King all his right in the same; as also in the woods and pools, and whatever else belonged there-to, excepting what he had possession of at the death of K.H. 2. his father. Which Henry de Clinton had issue Henry; who, being in the rebellion K. John (at the later end of his reign) submitted himself, and returned to obedience in 2. H. 3. assuring the K.

of his future fidelity, whereupon the Shirriff had command^e to give him livery of those lands, in Kenilworth, of his inheritance by right from his father. But after him I find little here, in Kenilworth of this family; and therefore, in regard it was of longer continuance in Colwill, and Marstoke, in Hemlingford-Hundred, I have there inserted the whole descent, and made my historical observations thereupon: and so returning again to this Castle, do observe, that, in 5. Joh. Hugh de Chaucumb (afterwards Shirriff of these Countyes, for divers years) was made Governour^e thereof (his predecessor in that command having^e been Hugh Bardulf); who continued in that place till 9. Joh. and then Rob. de Ropefle (the then Shirriff) was^e put in his roome. In 13. Joh. Will. de Cantilupe Shirriff also at that time) accounted^r for 361. li. 07 s. 00. laid out in more building upon this Castle: as also 102. li. 19 s. 03 d. for making a Chamber and Wardrobe. The next year following, 224 li. for^r more building there: and in 17. Joh. (for he continued many years Shirriff) 402 li. 02 s. 00. more, for repaires thereof.

That later end of King John's reign, being very troublesome in respect that divers of the Barons rebell'd against him, was doubtless the reason wherefore the King bestow'd such cost in building and repaires here about that time; for it was then garrison'd with Souldiers, Raph de Normanwill being sent^e thither by the King as a principall Officer, yet to be under the command of the before-mentioned W. de Cantilupe, the Kings Steward and Governour thereof, the Kings son being there then, for safety, as it should seeme. In 3. H. 3. there was 150 li. 02 s. 03 d. accounted^r for building up of a Tower thereof, which fell down at Christmass before. And in 5. and in 6. H. 3. more money layd out in repaires.

It seems that the said W. de Cantilupe (Shirriff^e of this County and Leicester-shire; from 12. Joh. till 8. H. 3.) resided at this Castle; for, in 7. H. 3. command^e was given to those that sold the windfall-trees in the Park, that they should allow unto him part of that timber, to repair the buildings wherein he dwel't, which were ruin'd by the winde. And the same year, and the next, did the said Will. account^r for his charges therein, and other repaires. But in 8. H. 3. the custody thereof was committed^r to John Russell. In 9. H. 3. Rob. Lupus (or Low) then the Shirriff, accounted for the carriage of five tonns of wine, brought from Southampton and laid in here. And in 11. H. 3. Will. de Stutevill, for mending the Gaole and other things things amiss, he having that year the Custody thereof, together with the Sherrifalty of these Countyes.

In 13. H. 3. Stephan. de Segrave (the then Sherriff) accounted for mending the banks of the pool, and in 15. for repaires of the Castle. It seemes that some Malefactors had wont to be imprisoned here; for in 15. H. 3. Will. Bassett, and others, were constituted Justices for the Gaol-delivery thereof. In 19. H. 3. the then Sherriff accounted 66 li. 16 s. 04 d. for a fair and beautiful boat to lye neer the dore of the Kings great Chamber, here. In 21. H. 3. here was another Gaol-delivery. In 22. H. 3. Hugh le Poer, the then Governour, had command to deliver it to Walter Gray Archbishop of York to the use of Ottobone the Popes Legate, to whom the King had then committed the custody of it. (Which Ottobone was afterwards Pope, by the name of Adrian 5.); the occasion of whose coming into England, and the stirrs thereupon, our Historians do shew. Which Ottobone substituted Ric. de Gray, to keep it in his stead; for by a Precept of the K. to the same Richard, bearing date that year, he is stiled Constable thereof.

In 26. H. 3. much cost in building, and repaires, was bestowed here; viz. in feeling the Chappell with Wainscote, and painting it, making seats for the King and Queen, handfomly adorn'd; repairing the Tower where the bells hung; making all the walls new on the South-side, by the pool, (which I conceive to be the same, without alteration that yet stands); beautifying the Q. Chamber with painting, and enlarging it: the same year Gilb. de Segrave being made Governor thereof; who by his Letters Pat. dated at Windfore, 7. April. doth declare, that he was to keep it only during the Kings pleasure, and not deliver it into the hands of any one but the King himself, so long as he lived: and, that if the King should dy during his custody thereof, to yield it to Queene Elianor for the use of the Kings heirs: but in case the said Q. could not come in person, that then he would not deliver it to any, except to some of her uncles, to the use of the Kings heires, who were not in league with the King of France. And for his observance of these conditions, he took a solemn oath upon the holy Bible in the Kings presence. Howbeit, shortly afterwards, viz. in 28. H. 3. the King made Simon Montfort Earl of Leic. Governour thereof; And in 32. H. 3. granted the custody of it to Alianore, his sister, then wife of the said Simon, to hold during her life: about which time the woods belonging to it, lying neer the road betwixt Cobentre and Warwick, were very thick (which now are all gone): Wherefore, in 34. H. 3. the Constable hereof had commands to cut down six acres, in breadth, of the under-wood there growing, for the security of passengers.

In 38. H. 3. the King granted it to the said Sim. Montfort Earl of Leicester, and Elianore his wife, during their lives: which Earl, being of a most haughty and ambitious spirit, was the principal ringleader in that great rebellion of the Barons, begun in 42. H. 3. at which time they put themselves in armes, held a Parliament at Orfords, by force; and compel'd the Kings assent to their unjust and dishonourable Ordinances. Which fire, so kindled, never ceased flaming, more or less, till it was quenched with the blood of those conspirators in the battail at Cobham 49. H. 3. as our Historians, especially Math. Westm. who hath written most largely thereof manifesteth; to whom I refer my Reader for more full satisfaction; in regard I must confine my self to what relates chiefly to this County: wherein I shall observe, that in 48. H. 3. after the King had got Bozhampton, and that good success seemed to attend him, having there taken divers eminent prisoners; many of the Northern Barons likewise coming into his aid, John Giffard, a Knight of much valour, but one of the most desperat Rebels, was sent by Earle Symon, with divers other, to this Castle to be Governour thereof: which, as the same Historian reports, the said Earl of Leic. had wonderfully fortified, and stored with many kindes of warlike engines, till that time never seen, nor heard of in England. Who, being come thither, and having suspicion, that the fidelity of the then Earl of Warwick (Will. Mauduit) was firm to the King, he surprized Warwick-Castle most deceitfully; and, carrying the said Earl, with his wife and family prisoners hither, demolished a great part of his Castle at Warwick, least it should be of advantage to any of the Royall party (as when I come to Warwick I shall more punctually shew.)

The particulars touching the battail of Leves, which hapned shortly after; where the Barons prevailing, the King and Prince were made prisoners: as also of the divisions which grew amongst the Chief of those Rebels after they had got all in their power. Of the contrivance how to get the Prince out of the Earl of Leic. hands, who had him then with the King a prisoner at Hereford-Castle; and of his escape and suddain raising an Army, I must not stay here to relate: but halting on to what concerns this place, shall observe, that Montfort Earl of Leic. understanding that many came into the Prince, and how his power daily increased, sent his younger son Simon into the North, to hasten away the Barons of that rebellious pack, residing in those parts; who brought up thence almost 20. Banners, with a great multitude of Soldiers to this Castle, where they made their station for a while, and hence went to Winchester; but, having spoiled that City, made a sudden return to this place again: whereof notice being given to the Prince, then at Worcester with his Army, by Raph de Ardern of this County, at that time one of the Rebels party (who imploy'd a woman called Margoth, that cunningly travailed in mans apparel) he made a shew as if he would have march't to Salisbury; and, to colour the business, sent certain Foot, with accoutrements for Horse, before: but when he wrought to the way thwarting the Countrey towards Kenilworth, halted thitherward; and coming privately in the night time to a deep valley, neer this Castle, armed, and ordered his men; which, whilst he was doing, he heard a great noyse that made them fear their enemyes had taken an Allarm, and were then ready to fall upon them; but it hapned to be nothing els than certain carriages going out to fetch victuall for the Rebels, which they took, making use of their fresh horses; and so, entring the town and the Monastery, surprized a great number of their enemyes with very little slaughter.

Of which number were xv. that bore Banners; whereof these were the chief, Gilbert de Gant (Rob. de Vere) Earl of Orfords, Will. de Mont-

Whole motions, being obſerved by the Prince, he divided his Army into three parts, whereof himſelf led one, Clare Earl of Glouc. another, and Rog. Mortimer the third: and, marching towards Cheſham, fromwards the North, made ſhew, as if, coming from hence, it had been the forces of young Montfort, with the Northern Barons before ſpecified: for the better diſguiſing of which buſineſs, he cauſed the Banner of young Simon, with the reſt that he had taken, to be carryed in the front of his Army; and ſo haſted to get the top of the hill, near Cheſham, there to embattle. But this approach of the Prince (ſaith the ſame Author) was diſcovered by one Nicholas, a Barber to Montfort Earl of Leic. who, being ſkillfull in the knowledge of enſignes, told the Earl that his ſons Forces were coming, for he knew their Banners. Howbeit Montfort, ſuſpecting the worſt, and fearing to be circumvented, ſent the Barber to the top of the Abby-ſteeple, to take a clearer view of them: who was no ſooner come thither, but he found it quite otherwiſe: for the Prince had then taken down thoſe colours of theirs, and erected his own Banner, with the Banner of the Earl of Glouc. on the one ſide, and that of Mortimer towards the weſt: which when the Barber ſaw, he cryed out to the Earl, and told him how it was; who, forthwith making all haſt he could to draw out his Army, encouraged them, with confident expreſſions, that it was for the laws of the land, yea, the cauſe of God, and Juſtice that they were to fight.

But God that ſometimes permits rebellious Subjects to prevail in many wicked attempts againſt their Sovereigns; making uſe of them, only, for a while as his chaſtiſing rod, for ſpeciall reſpects; to manifeſt to all the world, that he owned them not in theſe their unchriſtian enterpriſes, brought upon them ſwift confuſion: For the Welch, even before the battail began, betook themſelves to flight; of which, many were drown'd in the river Avon; and the reſt of the Rebels ſtrength, after a ſharp ſkirmiſh was overpowered, ſo that few eſcap'd the preſent ſlaughter, that the ſame day were not taken priſoners. Many other particulars are there touching this Rebellion; and the ſaid battail, not yet made publique; but becauſe they do not directly relate to this County, whereunto I do confine my ſelf, I muſt paſs them by; not intending to have digreſſed ſo much, had not that which I have ſaid upon this ſubject been deduced from ſuch authorities, as have not yet come to the open view of the world, and without the relation whereof, there would not have been ſo perfect a coherence in my Story of this place, as now there is, a great part of the Scene lying in this Shire.

After which victory, many places of ſtrength were rendred to the King: but Sim. Montfort, one of the ſons of Earl Simon, continuing ſtill in this ſtrong Caſtle, received in divers of thoſe that fled from the battail, with other the friends and followers of them that were ſlain, who were much imbittered for the death of their kindred and familiars, whereby he grew to be very powerfull, ſending abroad his Bayliſſs and Officers like a King; his Souldiers ſpoyling, burning, plundering, and deſtroying the Houſes, Towns and Lordſhips of his adverſaries; driving away their cattell, and impriſoning many; forcing them to what fines, he pleaſed, for their liberty. Which courſe of domineering he held on, from the feaſt of S. Martin (which is about xi. Nov.) in 50. H. 3. till Midſummer following, that the ſiege began.

But the King, being thus, by the Victory at Cheſham, redeemed; and reſtored to his Regall power, having call'd a Parliament at Wincheſter (wherein that great City of London, was, for its malevolent adherence to, and aſſiſtance of the Rebels, deprived of its antient priviledges; and all that had been active for them, or their furtherers diſherited, and their eſtates beſtowed on thoſe that had ſtood firm to the King, according to their ſeverall demerits;) conſidering well what further miſchiefs might befall the whole Kingdom, unleſs the inſolencies of thoſe, which were in this Caſtle, ſhould be reſtrained, their numbers daily increaſing, made preparation to march into theſe parts, for the timely reducing thereof. begirt this Castle on every side; where taking care to have all fit supply of Victual for his Army, he commanded the Shiriff of Portf. to cause 36 tunns of wine to be brought hither from Lenne, which were bought for his use by Purveyours there: but, being desirous to avoid the spilling of more blood, he sent a gracious message f to those that held it; whose hopes were such, either upon young Montfort's promises, or diffidence so great, knowing what mischiefs they had done, that they did not onely slight the Kings offers, but maimed g the Messenger, and with much resolution defended themselves against all the assaults that were made, having Engins b that cast forth stones of great bignels; and making bold and frequent sallies i, did very much mischief: neither could the Sentence of Ottobon, the Popes Legate, who was there in the Camp, nor the K. power, any whit daunt them.

The K. therefore, that those, whose estates were thus by the Parliament at Winchester utterly confiscated, and given away (as I have already said) should not, through desperation, betake themselves to such wayes of revenge as might have imbrewed the Kingdome in universal streams of blood for a long time; of his gracious k disposition, advising with his Councel and the said Legat, caused a convention^l of the Clergy and Laity of the Land here at Kenilworth; who elected xii persons of the most potent Nobility and prudent Prelates, to whom power was given to make a certain determination touching the estates of those that were disherited, they being accordingly sworn to what might be most convenient. Whereupon the K. with the Clergy and People (before mentioned) did likewise swear, that they would inviolably observe the said Decree.

The persons thus chosen being Walter Bronefcombe B. of Exeter, Walter Giffard B. of Bath and Wells, Walt. Cantilure B. of Worcester, B. of S. Davids, Gilb. de Clare E. of Glouc. Humfrey de Bohun E. of Hereford, Philip Basset, John Baliol, Rob. Waltraund, Alan la Zouch, Rog. de Somery, and Waryn de Bassingburne; the Articles whereof I shall not need to insert, in regard that they are publickly printed^m: but the substance of them was to this effect.

That every person disherited might redeem his lands by a pecuniary Fine according to the nature of his offence; which Fine should be paid unto those that then posselt them, so that the same were not above 5 years value at the most, nor under 2 at the least; except the wife and children of the E. of Leicester, concerning whom the K. refer'd himself to the K. of France; and excepting Rob. Ferrers E. of Derby, who was to pay 7 years value of his lands; and excepting Henry de Hastings, and those that maimed the K. Messenger, who were to be imprisoned 7 years, or submit to the K. mercy. This was that memorable Decree called Dictum de Kenilworth by all our Historians and Records; for in the K. Camp at the siege of this Castle, was it by Proclamation published Prid. Kal. Nov. an. 1266. 51 H. 3. though the persons elected metⁿ at Cobentre, in respect of conveniency for lodging, and otherwise, that could not be had in the Army. And on the morrow after, being the Feast of All Saints, it was confirmed^o by all the Prelates of England, not onely by their corporal Oaths, but under their Seals; which they (being specially convoked by the Legate before mentioned) affixed unto it. Which Legate made publick Declaration^p thereof in the Pulpit of the Collegiat Church in Warwick, the very next Sunday following, the K. and his Councel, with a great auditory of all states and degrees, being then present.

These things being performed, the K. forthwith sent^q special Messengers to the besieged in this Castle, and to those that had fled and posselt themselves of the Isle of Elp, amongst which, young Simon Montfort was^r one, tending them mercy upon the Articles before specified: but they all returned^s answer, that they would not submit thereto; first, because they had no voyce in choosing any of those that were makers of the Decree; and secondly, for that they held the Decree it self intolerable. At which the K. being much moved, took a firm resolution to storm the Castle; and for that purpose, by his special Writ^t, bearing date 20 Nov. commanded the Shiriff of this Shire to bring in all the Masons and other Labourers within his precinct (which we now call Pioners) with their Hatchets, Pick-axes, and other Tools, to meet at Portsmouth upon the day of S. Lucis the Virgin (viz. 11 Dec.) next following, to receive his further commands therein: but so it fell out, that in short space, not onely their Victual within the Castle grew very scant, but a pestilent disease raged so amongst them, that many dyed; inso much as the K. (by special providence) sending again to them, and offering, that if they did render it, he would receive them to mercy; they proposed^u, that in case he were content they might send beyond Sea to Sim. Montfort, and receive a certain answer whether he could come to relieve them by a fixed day, or not, they were resolved, if he did not come accordingly, to yeild it up: and that, in the mean time, all acts of hostility on either part should cease.

Whereunto the K. advising with his Councel, assented. And the same agreement being proclaimed through his Army, Messengers were accordingly dispatcht to Simon: but the Flux, and other grievous diseases, increased so much amongst those in the Castle, that they, which were not tainted, were loth to hazard the infection, and so, before the Messengers return, delivered^w the Castle upon Articles to the King, viz. that Henry de Hastings, then Governour, with all the rest that were therein, should have 4 dayes time to carry out all their goods, and go freely away, with^x Horse, Arms, and all accoutrements, throughout any part of the Kingdome.

The principal persons that so held it, besides the said H. de Hastings, were Sir John Hastings, (Lord of Levington) Ric. Amundevile & (Lord of Berkswell) Sir John de Clinton^a (Lord of Colmhill) all in this County; Sir John de la Ware, and^b John de Eston; every of whom, with the rest, had the K. Letters^c of safe conduct, dated 13 Dec. to go to their own houses, or stay where they pleased within this Kingdome, till Candlemas following, carrying themselves peaceably. The same Author^d saith, that Sim. Montfort, and his Mother the Countess, got away privately but five dayes before the Castle was delivered, and fled beyond Sea: but when he so got out of the Castle, is somewhat uncertain: for by what I have said already, it appears, that he was in the Isle of Elp, the K. Letter Pat.^e bearing date Jan. xvi. after the render of the Castle, importing as much. Which render f was upon the Feast-day of S. Thomas the Apostle, so that the seige lasted full six months. Whereupon the K. took his journey, the next day, to Stney (near Drsoy) and there celebrated the Feast of the Nativity of our Saviour with great joy.

But this seige was very prejudicial to the Canons of Kenilworth, and did impoverish them much: for h in September after it was begun, though they allowed the K. 300 quarters of Corn, and many other things, that the rest of their goods might be protected, yet were they not free from the Souldiers oppression; so that to releive their wants, by his Letters Pat. i bearing date the 24 of Jan. next ensuing the render of the Castle, he recommended the same to all their Tenants, requiring them to contribute in such manner thereto, as they would expect that God should bleis them, and himself give them thanks. Neither did the Monks of Stoneley avoyd the burthen of this Leaguer; but all the recompence they had, was, that the K. confirmed k their Charters.

k Regist. de Stoneley, f.
19. a.

There is no question but that the charge of this seige was very vast: for in 53 of this K. reign, Will. Bagot, who had been Shiriff for 6 years before, was allowed upon his account l 75 l. 13 s. 9 d. for 255 quarters of Wheat, 52 Oxen, and 173 Muttons which he then took up, and sent in out of this County: and it is not to be doubted but that, besides what the Countyes adjacent suffered by extravagancies of the Souldiers, they sent in proportionable provisions, or money.

All that I have else found memorable relating thereto, is the delivery m of the Sword called Curtina (which is used to be carryed before the K. of England at their Coronation) unto the Keeper of the K. Pavilion here, on Sunday next after the Feast of S. Margaret, the K. being then in the Camp: as also that the Queen n accompanied the D. of Winnestock from Windsor-castle hither, the said D. then marrying the K. Neece in his presence. And lastly, that o Philip Marmion, being Constable of this Castle, immediatly after the seige, carried away divers Arms, Lead, Iron, and other things, to the then value of x l. But, after the Articles for render hereof were so signed, as aforesaid, the K. staid not long ere he disposed of it: for on the 16 day of the same month, his Charter p bears date at Warwick, whereby he gave it unto Edmund his younger son, and to the heirs of his body lawfully begotten; reserving to himself the advowsons of the Priory of Kenilworth and Abby of Stoneley. And in short space conferred certain privileges unto him here, q viz. q on the 28 day of December ensuing, Free-chase and Free-warren in all his demein lands and woods belonging to this Castle. And the next r year following, r weekly Mercate upon the Tueday; and a Faire yearly, to last for 3 dayes, viz. the Even, day, and morrow after the Feast of S. Michael.

Which Edmund was E. of Leicester and Lancaster, viz. of Leicester, created s 25 Oct. 49 H. 3. (after the death of S. Montfort, slain in the battle of Evesham) and of Lancaster, 31 Junii, 51 H. 3. And in 7 E. 1. held this Castle in demein, having two Mills standing upon the water of the Pool belonging thereto; and several Freeholders which held of him by suit of Court and fealty. As also two woods, one called the Frith, and another the Park, then Common, and containing 300 acres according to the large measure.

At that time it was certified x, that his Park here contained 40 acres of wood, and the Pool half a mile in length, and a quarter of a mile in breadth: as also that he had here a Court-leet, Gallows, Affize of Bread and Beer, with a Mercate on the Tueday.

The same year I find x, that there was a great and famous concourse of noble persons here at Kenilworth, called the Round-table, consisting of an hundred Knights, and as many Ladies; whereunto divers repaired from forreign parts for the exercise of Arms, viz. Tilting, and martial Tournaments; and the Ladies, Dancing; who were clad in silken Mantles, Rog. Mortimer E. of March being the chief, and the occasion thereof. Which Exercises began y on the Eve of S. Mathew the Apostle, and continued till the morrow after Michaelmas day; the reason of the Round-table being to avoyd contention touching precedency, a Custome of great antiquity, and used by the ancient Gauls, as Mr Cambden in Hantsb. from Athenens (an approved Author) oblierves.

As for other memorable matters relating to this place, the enlargement of the Park hath next priority, which was begun by Thomas E. of Lanc. (son to the before specified Edmund;) for it appears, that in 30 E. 1. John Peche, then Lord of Honile, near adjoining, released z his right of Common there, so that the said Earl might hold it up inclosed with ditches and pales; saving to him the said John and his heirs Common of pasture for his Hogs and Cattle in two places, viz. Merebrot and Bernet, and in all other places not inclosed at the making of that release.

But after this, viz. in 15 E. 2. Tho. E. of Lanc. (beheaded at Pontfract) being for his rebellion attainted a, and thereupon his lands and possessions confiscate, John de Somery (Baron of Dudley) and Raph Lord Basset of Drayton, were appointed to seize this Castle for the K. use (as by a special Precept b dated at Lutbury 12 Martii appeareth) which, within 4 dayes following, was committed c to the custody of Ranulph Charun, then his servant: howbeit, 24 Maii after, he removed the said Ranulph, and made d Rob. de Stoke Governour in his stead. In 16 E. 2. John de Hastings had the custody e of it; and the next f year, Odo de Stoke: which Odo held that command so long as his unfortunate Master had any power; for in Febr. (which was towards the later end of the 19 year of E. 2.) the K. discerning those clouds, which shortly after raised the flood of rebellion to such a height, as that himself was miserably overwhelmed therein, commanded g the same Odo, then his Constable thereof, to take and retain as many able men as he should in his discretion think fit for the garrisoning thereof. But, alas, all too late, such was the defection of most of the Nobles in their allegiance to him (the cause whereof was principally attributed to his being so much swayed by the Spensers) in^omuch as the giddy multitude were easily stir'd up to appear in Arms for any design which favoured of Reformation: whose strength and assistance, when the great ones had got, they made no other use of it, than the deposal of their rightfull King, upon which in short time ensued his barbarous Murder.

But the circumstances of this tragique business I must not stand here to tell, our Stories being large enough of it: howbeit, that which relateth to this Castle, I will briefly touch; which is, that the

the K. being seized upon in Wales by Henry E. of Lanc. (brother and heir to the before mentioned Thomas, who was beheaded) and others, was, by the said Earl, forthwith brought hither, viz. in Dec. 20 of his reign: where he had not long staid, ere news came to him, that in a Parliament held at Westm. on the morrow after Twelf-day, he was deposed, and his son, young Edward, elected King in his stead, being then but 14 years of age. Which wofull tidings being accompanied with a Message from the same Parl. (for so they called that headless meeting) proposing to him the renouncing of his Regal Dignity and Crown, and permitting his said son to reign, otherwise they would do homage to his son, and proceed in what they had begun; the distressed K. knowing no remedy, told them, that seeing they would reject him, he was glad that his eldest son might be received. Which answer of his being returned by the same Messengers, they proclaimed the new King on the 20 of Jan. and set out Proclamations in his name, declaring to the people, that K. E. 2. had made a voluntary and free resignation of his Regal Dignity to his eldest son, whom, within few dayes after, they formally crowned at Westm.

But they, who had prosecuted their wicked contrivances against their rightfull K. thus far, thought all was not safe except they went further; and therefore gave it out, that the deposed King was too much observed and respected; so that, about Palm-sunday following, he was committed to the custody of Sir Tho. Berkley, and Sir John Matraviers, who hurried him from hence privately to Berkley-castle in Gloucestershire, where their horrid intentions towards him wrought perpetual jealousies in their heads, that he would be rescued; which caused them closely to carry him from thence to Cozt castle in Dorsetshire: And, to the end it should not be certainly known where he was, kept him in perpetual motion to one secret place or other, till about the Feast day of S. Mathias the Apostle, that they most barbarously murdered him, with a spit red hot thrust up into his body at the Fundament, at Berkley aforesaid.

But I return to the succession of this Castle. In 1 E. 3. Henry brother and heir to Thomas E. of Lanc. (beheaded at Pontfract, and attainted, as I have already shew'd) was restored to the Earldomes of Lancaster, Leicester, &c. and all his brothers lands, whereof this was part. Which Earl dyed at Leicester, 19 E. 3. and was there buried, leaving issue Henry his son, created E. of Derby, 16 Martii, 11 E. 3. (his father being then alive) Earl of Lincoln, 20 Aug. 23 E. 3. and lastly, Duke of Lancaster, 6 Martii, 25 E. 3. which D. dyed seized (inter alia) of this Castle, the Tuesday next after the Feast of the Annunciation of our Lady, 35 E. 3. leaving his two daughters, his heirs, viz. Maud then 22 years of age, and Blanch 19. and was buried in the Collegiat-Church at Leicester, of his own foundation. Which Maud became the wife to Will. D. of Bavaria, E. of Benault, Holland, &c. and Blanch, of John of Cant, fourth son to K. E. 3. who, shortly after, was created D. of Lancaster, viz. 13 Nov. 36 E. 3. so that upon partition of the lands of the said Henry Duke of Lancaster, this Castle (inter alia) came to Blanch.

Which John of Cant began the Structure of all the ancient buildings here, now remaining, excepting Cesars-tower, with the outer walls and turrets, towards the later end of R. 2. time, as it seemeth: for, in 15-R. 2. I find, that the King did appoint John Deyncourt, then Constable hereof, and his Lieutenant; as also Robert de Skyllington, Mason, to hire Diggers of stone, Carpenters and Labourers, to the number of 200 persons; and to provide stone, timber, tile, and all other necessaries, for the use of the said Duke in his buildings here. Which Record, above cited, doth also agree with the tradition of the Inhabitants, by whom the same part of the Castle is, to this day, called Lancasters buildings.

But this John D. of Lanc. having issue Henry, surnamed Bullenbroke (by reason of his birth at Bullenbroke in Lincolnshire) afterwards King of Engl. by the name of H. 4. (upon the depolal of King R. 2. as is very well known) this Castle came to the Crown, and is contained in the Act, amongst other the possessions belonging to the Duchy of Lancaster, that were united to the Dukedome of Cornwall in the Parl. of 1 H. 7. Whose son and successor, K. H. 8. bestow'd much cost in repairing thereof; removing that building erected by K. H. 5. near the tail of the Pool in a low marsh ground (thereupon called Lepians en maris) and setting part thereof up, in the base court of the Castle, near the Swan-tower.

In the Crown it continued till Q. Eliz. by her Letters Pat. bearing date 9 Junii, 5 of her reign, granted it to Robert Lord Dudley, and his heirs. Which Robert (being one of the sons to John Dudley D. of Northumberland) was, upon the 28 of Sept. 6 Eliz. created Baron of Denbigh, and the day next following, Earl of Leicester; and, having obtained this noble seat, spared for no cost in enlarging, adorning, and beautifying thereof; witness that magnificent Gate-house towards the North; where, formerly having been the back-side of the Castle, he made the Front; filling up a great proportion of the wide and deep double ditch, wherein the water of the Pool came.

And, besides that stately peice on the Southeast part, still bearing the name of Leicesters buildings, did he raise from the ground two goodly towers at the head of the Pool, viz. the Floud-gate, or Gallerie tower, standing at one end of the Tilt-yard, in which was a spacious and noble room for Ladies to see the exercises of Tilting and Barriers; and at the other Mortimers-tower, whereupon the Arms of Mortimer were cut in stone; which doubtless was so named by the E. of Leicester, in memory of one more antient, that stood there formerly; wherein, as I guess, either the Lord Mortimer, at the time of that great and solemn Tilting, formerly mentioned, did lodge; or else, because Sir John Mortimer Kt. prisoner here in H. 5. time, was detain'd therein.

The Chase he likewise enlarged, impaling part of Blakwell within it; and also a large nook, extending from Rodden-lane towards the Pool: which, being then a wast, wherein the Inhabitants of Benilsworth had Common, in consideration thereof, he gave them all those fields called Byttons-fields, lying North of the Castle. I have heard some, who were his servants, say, that the charge he bestowed on this Castle, with the Parks and Chase thereto belonging, was no less than 60 thousand pounds. Here, in July, an. 1575. (17 Eliz.) having compleated all things for her reception, did he entertain the Queen, for the space of xvii dayes, with excessive cost, and variety of delightfull shews, as may be seen at large in a special discourse thereof then printed, and entituled, The Princely pleasures of Kenilworth Castle; having at her first entrance a floating Island upon the Pool, bright blazing with Torches; upon which were clad in silks the Lady of the Lake, and two Nymphs waiting on her, who made a speech to the Q. in meter of the antiquity and owners of that Castle, which was closed with Cornets, and other loud Musick. Within the base-court, was there a very goodly Bridge set up, of xx foot wide, and lxx foot long, over which the Queen did pass; on each side whereof were posts erected, with Presents upon them unto her, by the Gods, viz. a cage of Wild-fowl, by Silvanus; sundry sorts of rare Fruits, by Pomona; of Corn, by Ceres; of Wine, by Bacchus; of Sea-fish, by Neptune; of all habiliments of War, by Mars; and of Musical Instruments, by Phabus. And, for the several dayes of her stay, various and rare Shews and Sports were there exercised, viz. in the Chase a Savage man, with Satyrs: Bear-baitings, Fire-works, Italian tumblers, a Country Brideale, with running at the Quintin, and Morrice-dancing. And, that there might be nothing wanting that these parts could afford, hither came the Cobentre-men, and acted the antient Play, long since used in that City, called Hocks-tuesday, setting forth the destruction of the Danes in King Ethelred's time; with which the Queen was so pleas'd, that she gave them a brace of Bucks, and five marks in money to bear the charges of a Feast.

Besides all this, he had upon the Pool a Triton riding on a Mermaid 18 foot long; as also Arion on a Dolphin, with rare Musick. And to honour this Entertainment the more, there were then Knighted here Sir Thomas Cecill, son and heir to the Lord Treasurer; Sir Henry Cobham, brother to the Lord Cobham; Sir Francis Stanhope, and Sir Tho. Tresham. The cost and expence whereof may be gueſt at, by the quantity of Beer then drunk, which amounted to 320 hogſheads of the ordinary sort, as I have credibly heard. Shortly after which, viz. the next ensuing year, he obtained, by the grants of the said Q. a weekly Mercate here upon the Wednesday, with a Faire yearly on Midsummer-day.

But this great Earl (who bore no little sway in his time, as, besides our Annals, some yet living can testify) having wedded the Lady Lettice, daughter to Sir Francis Knolls, Knight of the Garter, Treasurer of the Household to Q. Eliz. and widow to Walter E. of Essex, wanting by her any surviving issue, by his last Will and Testament^b, dated at Wolfeburgh in Zeland, 1 Aug. an. 1587. (being then General of the English Auxiliaries for the United Provinces) gave it to Ambrose E. of Warwick, his brother, for life; and the inheritance to Sir Robert Dudley Knight*, whom he then thought not proper to stile his lawfull son, and to his heirs. Which Sir Robert, (being a person of great learning and parts) coming to the possession of it within little more than a year after his fathers death (for his Uncle surviv'd him no more, as in Warwick I have shew'd) made it his seat; and endeavouring to assert his legitimacy, which as to very many stood somewhat dubious, in regard of his said fathers marriage with the before specified Countess of Essex, during the life of the Lady Douglasse his mother, (widow to the Lord Sheffield, and daughter to Will. Lord Howard of Effingham) but, failing thereof, travelled into Italy, where he past away his right therein unto the late Prince Henry; the story whereof, with the circumstances, forasmuch as 'tis memorable in sundry respects, I shall here succintly deliverⁱ.

About the beginning of K. James his reign, this Sir Robert having married Alice, daughter to Sir Tho. Leigh of Stoneley Kt. and considering with himself, that in case he made good his legitimacy, not onely the title to the Earldome of Leicester, as heir to his father; as also that of Warwick, for want of issue by the before specified Ambrose, his uncle; together with the dignity of Lord Lisle, would rightfully accrue to him; but likewise the Castle of Warwick, with divers fair Lordships in this County, by vertue of an entail upon his said uncles first advancement to that honour; did, by reason of the great Plague at that time in London, obtain a Commission from the Archb. of Cant. out of his Court of Audience, directed to Dr Zachary Babington, then Chancellour of Litchfield, and other, for examining witnesses to prove his said fathers marriage. But no sooner was it discerned by the before specified Lady Lettice, and her friends, that the consequence thereof would much reflect upon her, than that they procured Sir Edw. Coke, the K. Attorney general, to exhibit a Bill in the Star-Chamber against the same Sir Rob. and Dame Alice his Lady; as also against the said Lady Douglasse Sheffield (for so she was called) then wife of Sir Edw. Stafford Kt. and against the before mentioned Sir Tho. Leigh, Dr Zach. Babington, and divers other; charging them with no less than combination and conspiracy to defame the said Lady Lettice, and unjustly to entitle himself to those Honours, &c. And, upon the petition of the Lord Sidney, procured a command from the Lords of the Council, not onely to stop^l the said proceedings at Litchfield, but to bring all the depositions there taken, to remain within the said Court of Star-Chamber in the Council-chest.

Nevertheless did they vouchsafe liberty to the said Sir Robert to examine Witnesses in that honourable Court, in order to the making good of his legitimacy. Whereupon, by full testimony upon oath, partly made by the said Lady Sheffield, and partly by divers other persons who were present at her marriage with the before specified Earl, it appeared, that she having been first contracted in Cannon-Row (within the City of Westminster) about two years before, was solemnly wedded to him, in her Chamber at Ather in Surrey, by a lawfull Minister, according to the form of Matrimony by Law established in the Church of England, in the presence of Sir Edward Horsey Knight, that gave her in marriage; as also of Robert Sheffield Esq; and his wife, Dr Julio, Henry Frodsham Gent. with five other persons, whose names are there specified: and that the Ring, wherewith they were so married, was set with five pointed Diamonds, and a table Diamond, which had been given to him the said Earl by the then Earl of Penbroke's grandfather, upon condition that he should not bestow it upon any but whom whom he did make his wife. And moreover, that the D. of Port. was the principal mover of the said marriage; but that the said Earl, pretending a fear of the Q. indignation, in case it should come to her knowledge, made her vow not to reveal it till he gave leave; whereupon all her servants were commanded secrecy therein.

And further was it likewise deposed, that within two dayes after the birth of the said Sir Robert Dudley (who afterwards was born at Shene, and there christned by a Minister sent from Sir Henry Lea, having to his Godfathers the Earl of Warwick (his Uncle) with the same Sir Henry, and Godmother the Lady Dacres of the South (by their Deputies) the said Lady Douglass received a Letter from the Earl (which one Mrs Erisa, but then Lady Parker, read) wherein his Lordship did thank God for the birth of his said son, who might be their comfort and staffe of their old age (as are the words of the said Letter) and subscribed, Your loving Husband, ROB. LEICESTER. As also, that the said Lady was after this served in her Chamber as a Countess, untill he commanded the contrary, for fear the marriage should be disclosed.

Other depositions there were many, by several persons, testifying what the said Earl himself had said in relation to this his son; as of one Owen Jones, who swore, that attending upon the said Sir Rob. Dudley at Drifftington in Sussex, when he was but ten years of age, and at School, the E. of Leic. came thither to see him, and said, OWEN! thou know'st that ROBYN my boy is my lawfull son; and as I do and have charg'd thee to keep it secret, so I charge thee not to forget it, and therefore, see thou be carefull of him. Divers other expressions from the said Earl, testified by sundry credible persons, all tending to the same purpose: as also of what Ambrose E. of Warwick (his brother) had uttered in like kind, could I adde, were it not for brevities sake.

But that it may appear what was the true cause, that the Earl so declining his lawfull wife, durst not publickly own this his son, I shall observe from the same depositions; viz. his marriage with the before specified Lady Lettice in her life-time; with whose beauty he became so captivated, that he endeavoured to perswade the said Lady Douglass to disclaim the marriage above mentioned, offering her no less than 700*l.* per ann. in the close Arbour of the Q. Garden at Greenwich, in the presence of Sir John Hubbard and George Digby, in case she would so do; and, upon her refusal, verifying her with protestations, that he would never come at her, and that she should never have penny of him.

It seems that the said Lady Douglass had then the custody of her son; for I find it deposed, that the Earl tendered her 1000*l.* to deliver him unto Sir Edw. Horsey, Captain of the Isle of Wight, to be conveyed into the said Isle, there to be brought up by him, which she refused. And there wants not strong suspicion, that, being doubtfull lest the life of the same Lady Douglass might minister discourse of this foul play, he designed to dispatch her out of this world: for certain it is, that she had some ill potions given her, so that with the loss of her hair and nails, she hardly escap'd death; which being discerned, to secure her self from the like attempts for the future, she contracted marriage with Sir Edw. Stafford Kt. (a person of great honour and parts, and sometime employ'd as an Embassadour into France) whereof, afterwards, most sadly repenting, she said, that she had thereby done the greatest wrong that could be to her self and son.

Having thus manifested what is observable in reference to Sir Rob. Dudley's legitimacy, let us now see the Catastrophe. For after these fair hopes in obtaining what he aimed at, there was not onely a stop to all further proceedings in the before specified cause, but a special Order by the Lords, that the Depositions should be sealed up, and no Copies taken of them without the Kings special license. Which unexpected dealing so astonish'd him, that he forthwith resolved to quit the Kingdome; and, to that purpose, obtaining license to travel for 3 years, went into Italy; whereof his adversaries taking advantage, procured his Summons to return by a special Privy Seal; unto which not obeying, this Castle and all his lands were seized on to the K. use, by vertue of the Statute of Fugitives; and soon after surveyed, as by what I have here added*, to the end that the greatness and state thereof may the better appear.

m Annal. Eliz. per Will. Cambd. in an. 1578. & 1584.

n Ab exempl. authentico in bibl. Cotton.

The Castle of Kenilworth, situate upon a Rock.

1. The circuit thereof within the walls containeth 7 acres, upon which the walks are so spacious and fair, that two or three persons together may walk upon most places thereof.
2. The Castle, with the 4 Gate-houses, all built of free-stone, hewen and cut; the walls, in many places, of xv and x foot thickness, some more, some less, the least 4 foot in thickness square.
3. The Castle and 4 Gate-houses, all covered with lead, whereby it is subject to no other decay than the glass, through the extremity of weather.
4. The rooms of great state within the same; and such as are able to receive his Majestie, the Queen and Prince at one time, built with as much uniformity and conveniency as any houses of later time; and with such stately Cellars, all carryed upon pillars, and architecture of free-stone, carved and wrought, as the like are not within this Kingdome; and also all other houses for offices answerable.
5. There lyeth about the same in Chases and Parks 1200*l.* per an. 900*l.* whereof are grounds for pleasure; the rest in meadow and pasture there-to adjoining, Tenants, and Free-holders.
6. There joyneth upon this ground a Park-like ground, called the Kings-wood, with xv several Copices lying all together, containing 789 acres within the same: which, in the E. of Leic. time, were stored with red Deer: since which the Deer strayed, but the ground in no sort blemished, having great store of timber, and other trees of much value upon the same.
7. There runneth through the said grounds, by the walls of the Castle, a fair Pool, containing Cxi acres, well stored with Fish and Fowl; which at pleasure is to be let round about the Castle.

8. In timber and woods upon this ground, to the value (as hath been offered) of 20000 l. (having a convenient time to remove them) which to his Majesty in the Survey are but valued at 11722 l. which proportion, in a like measure, is held in all the rest upon the other values to his Majesty.

9. The circuit of the Castle, Mannours, Parks, and Chase, lying round together, contain at least xix or xx miles in a pleasant Countrey; the like, both for strength, state and pleasure, not being within the realm of England.

10. These lands have been survey'd by Commissioners from the K. and the Lord Privy-Seal, with directions from his Lordship to find all things under the true worth, and upon oath of Jurors, as well Free-holders as customary tenants; which course being held by them, are notwithstanding surveyed and returned at 38554 l. 15 s. 0 d. Out of which for Sir ROB. DUDLEY'S contempt, there is to be deducted 10000 l. and for the Lady DUDLEYS joynture, which is without impeachment of waft, whereby she may sell all the woods, which by the Survey amount unto 11722 l.

The total of the Survey ariseth, as followeth.

In Land,	16431 l. 9 s. 0.
In Woods,	11722 l. 2 s. 0.
The Castle,	10401 l. 4 s. 0.

His Majesty hath herein the mean profits of the Castle and premisses, through Sir ROB. DUDLEY'S contempt, during his life, or his Majesties pardon; the reversion in fee being in the Lord Privy-Seal.

But it was not long afterwards, that Prince Henry, affecting it as the most noble and magnificent thing in the midland parts of this Realm, made overture by special Agents to the said Sir Robert of a desire to obtain his title thereto by way of purchase. Whereupon, in consideration of 14500 l. to be paid within the compass of a twelve-month unto the said Sir Robert or his Assigns, certain Deeds were sealed bearing date 21 Nov. 9 Jac. (an. scil. 1611.) and Fines levied, settling the inheritance thereof; as also of the Mannour and lands in Kenilworth, together with those of Rudfen, Balthall, and Long-Itchington, upon the said Prince and his heirs; but with condition, that the same Sir Robert should during his life hold and enjoy the Constableship of the said Castle by Patent from the same Prince.

Howbeit, Prince Henry departing this life, there was not above 3000 l. of the said sum ever paid, (as I have heard) and that likewise to a Merchant which broke, so that it never came to Sir Robert Dudley's hands. Nevertheless did Prince Charles, as heir to his brother, hold the possession thereof; and in 19 Jac. obtain'd a special Act of Parl. to enable the Lady Alice, wife to the said Sir Rob. in regard she had a joynture therein, to alien all her right unto him, as if she had been a feme sole: which accordingly she did by her Deed bearing date 4 Maii, 19 Jac. in consideration of 4000 l. assigned to her out of the Exchequer.

And being thus come to Pr. Charles, as hath been shew'd, the custody thereof was, by Pat. dated 15 Martii, in the first year after he came to the Crown, granted to Rob. E. of Devonmouth, Henry Lord Carey, his eldest son, and Tho. Carey Esq; together with the Park and Chase during their lives, and the longer liver of them, with the fee of xii d. per diem, and an annuity of xl s. per ann. for repairing the walls and buildings, to be paid by the K. Receiver of this County, in whose possession it now rests, an. scil. 1640.

But one thing have I yet further to observe touching the before specified Sir Rob. Dudley, and then I shall proceed: which is, that having thus settled himself in Italy, within the Territories of the great D. of Tuscany, of whom he had extraordinary esteem, he was so much favoured by the Emp. Ferdinand the second, as that, being a person not onely eminent for his great learning and blood, but for sundry rare endowments, as is very well known, he had by Letters Pat. from his Imperial Majesty, bearing date at Vienna, 9 Martii, 1620. the title of a Duke given unto him, to be used by himself and his heirs throughout all the Dominions of the sacred Empire.

That which I have further to say of Kenilworth, concerns the Church (dedicated to S. Nicholas) which is, that in an. 1291. (19 E. 1.) it was valued 7 at viii marks, and the Vicaridge at one mark: But in 26 H. 8. it appears, that the Vicar of Kenilworth had onely an yearly stipend of 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. per ann. paid by the Prior and Covent: which, being so small a portion, continued thus till 20 Jac. that the Lady Aliza Dudley augmented it with xx l. per ann. out of lands in Spanceter, as in my discourse of that place is manifested.

Rudfen.

THE first mention that I find of this place, is, that Geffrey de Clinton (son to Geffrey Founder of Kenilworth-Priory) gave it into the Canons of Kenilworth, it being there written Wride-fen: but I rather think that the true name is according to the usuall pronunciation at this time; viz. Rudfen, in regard it so well agrees with the situation thereof, which is in a dirty soil of a red Colour; for Rud is Red, and Fen, in the Saxon or old English, signifieth Dirt.

Being thus in the hands of those Canons, it appears that in 4. H. 7. the Prior of Kenilworth made the Park here, and inclosed xl. acres of erable-land therein, storing it with Deer. But after the dissolution of that Monastery it was granted out of the Crown, by K. H. 8. (inter alia) to Thomas Marrow of London Esquire, and his heirs, by the name of the Mannour of Wrypsen, alias Rudfen, 20. Junii 37. H. 8. Which Thomas, in 3. & 4. Ph. & M. reconvey'd it to the Crown; and the same year had a grant thereof again, with Berkswell, and other lands in this County. But, it seemes, that Marrow kept it not long; for the next year following, I find that the Queen paid it to John Throkemorton Esq. for 21. years; in which grant it is said to have been in the Qu. hands by exchange for other lands with the said Thomas Marrow. Which Lease, belike, was surrendred; for plain it is that Q. Eliz. in 7. of her reign, convey'd it to Robert E. of Lesc. and his heires. After whose death Lettice, Countess of Lesc. his Widow, during her life held it: but the inheritance being in Sir Robert Dudley Kt. (base son to the said Earl), by vertue of his fathers Will; he, in the same grant whereby he past Kenilworth-Castle to Prince Henry, joynd this; since which it hath accompanied the possession thereof.

There is no more building at this place then one house; which having been a Grange belonging to the Canons of Kenilworth, upon the dissolution of that Monastery, was assigned to the last Prior for his residence whilst he lived, as I have heard.

Stoneley.

I Now come to Stoneley, situat on the Northern bank of Sow, a little below the joyning of of Kenilworth-water therewith: which is a very spacious Parish, and containeth many petty Hamlets and places of Note; viz. Cloud, Starton, Finham, Fletchamsted-Superior and Inferior, Hurst, Cryfield, Canle, and Hill, with the three Granges called Welenhill, Wokindene, and Wylburne, of all which in their order.

Before the Norman invasion, King Edward held it in demesne; so likewise afterwards did William the Conq. by whose generall Survey it was certified to contain six hides, there being then two Priests; (of whom I shall say more when I speak of Cloud, and Fletchamsted) the woods extending to four miles in length, and two in breadth (Kenilw. being a member thereof); in which the King had feeding for 2000. Hogs. There were at that time also two Mills, rated at 35 s. 4 d. As for the name, there needs not much to be said, in regard 'tis obvious enough, considering that the nature of the soil where the Town stands is rocky; Stanley the ancient name, now altered to Stoneley, signifying a stony place.

In the Crown it continued till H. 2. time, answering xvii l. xiv s. v d. yearly, to the King; who had within the precincts thereof two Houses, one in the Town of Stoneley, and the other at Cryfield; his tenants here, being called Sokemanni, by reason (saith Bracton upon that word) quod deputati sunt, ut videtur, tantummodo ad culturam; & quorum custodia & maritagia ad propinquiores parentes, jure sanguinis pertinebat. Which tenants had wont, from antient time, every 3. Weeks, to do their suite at the Kings Court, held for this Mannour upon a bill, then and yet, called the Wetstow-hill, on the South-side the river opposite to the Church, (having that appellation, because of the pleadings there; the word Mote being to this day used in that sense by our Lawyers) each Tenant holding one yard land, and paying yearly xxx d. viz. 1 d. an acre, in regard every yard land contained xxx. acres and no more.

In the distinct Hamlets belonging to this Mannour, there were viii. yard land onely; and if they had any more it was by improvement of the waists; each of which Hamlets gave a certain portion of money for a Common-fine twice a year: howbeit, that payment was not made by the Sokemanni, but by the inferior Tenants, if there were any: the further customes touching which Sokemanni were as followeth; viz.

1. That each of them, at his death, should give an entire Heriot, that is to say, his Horse, Harness, and Armes, if he had any; otherwise his best beast. and that the heire succeeding his father should be admitted to the inheritance at xv. years of age, doubling his Rent for a Relicf; and from thenceforth to be joyn'd with the rest of the Sokemanni in Juryes; as also in collecting the Kings rents, and answering to proces, as if he had been of full age.

2. That they were to have Estovers in the out-woods, by the oversight of the Foresters; scil. Housebote, Heybote, and Firebote, and freedom of paunage for their own Hogs; but for such Hogs as they did buy after the Nativity of S. John Baptist, to give paunage.

3. That at the Bederipe in harvest (id est the generall Reap for the Lords corn, the word Bede signifying to pray or request) they should all come upon request or notice, with every of their tenants; the Sokemanni to ride up and down on Horseback, with wands, to see that they work't well, and to amerce those in the Court, then and there held, that made default or laboured idly.

4. That they should be in the field at Sun-rising, and work till Sun set, not sitting down to breakfast, but each of them eating what he brought with him, as they went up and down the lands to their work; and after breakfast to sit down once before dinner, the Lord finding them drink; but at Noon, both they and the Sokemen to have meat and drink provided by the Lord.

5. That the Reapers should eat by themselves, every one having a little Wheat-loaf, 4. Eggs, and porrage; viz. Grewell, without flesh boyled in it, except the Lord would afford them other, with Cheese and Beer sufficient; and after dinner one sitting down with bread and beer, but the Sokemen themselves to be served with better dyet, according to their degrees.

6. And lastly, when the King should assesse his Boroughs and Mannours with Tallage, he to have from the Sokemen, here, the tenth part of their goods.

I now descend to the foundation of the Abby, and the occasion thereof.

The Order of Cistercian Monks being propagated in England, towards the later end of K. H. 1. reign (as in Combe I have shew'd) found, in short time, many pious Benefactors in severall parts of the Kingdom; who bountifully bestowed upon them very large possessions, in such places as were most proper for them to seat themselves with least disturbance in their strict and holy Rule of serving God: Amongst which were Maud the Empress, and King Stephen; who, though otherwise opposites to each other, yet in this good work concurred, granting a certain desert, called Radmoze, lying in the Forest of Canok, in Staffordshire, (a mile Southwards from Beaufort) unto Clement and Herveie, two devout Hermits, with others of their society: As also a certaine laund, called Welletho, for tillage and pasturing of cattell. Which Concessions Roger de Clinton, then Bishop of Chester, not onely confirmed, but gave them liberty to betake themselves to what regular life soever, they, through Gods direction, should make choice of; and to receive, and instruct any such women, who, having devoted their lives to Gods service, would be content to do the like.

But, after they had found what molestation they had by the Foresters, who, riding frequently that way, much disturb'd their devotions, they humbly besought the said Empress, that she would vouchsafe to change their seat. Whereupon, bearing a great affection to the Cistercian-Order, she told them, if they would undergoe that Rule, she would grant their request. To which proposall of hers they, after some deliberation, assenting, the same place of Radmoze was made an Abby, one William, the principall of those religious persons, being elected the first Abbot there: unto whom Henry D. of Normandy, son to the said Empress, by his Charter granted and confirmed, not only the same Radmoze with the appurtenances; viz. Welletho, and Witley for tillage and pasture; as also Hedenestod for pasture and paunage, with liberty to build a Church, and such houses as might be fit for their habitation; but gave them the Town of Canok with the appurtenances, and the Mill at Witley, with all things belonging thereto.

Which good work so begun wanted not the bounty of divers other pious Men to carry it on; Osbert de Arden (of whom I shall speak in King's-bury) giving them his Lordship of Worsington; Will. Croc (of whom I am to speak in Chefferton) all the right he had in Witley, to the intent that they would receive him into their fraternity, and vouchsafe his body buriall there. Geffrey de Clinton three yard land at Wetlabescote, and one hide in Radway: And Roger de Clinton, B. of Chester before mentioned, two hides more in the said Town of Radway.

Shortly after which, this new Abbot and his Monks, not yet well instructed in the Cistercian discipline, requested Hamon, the second Abbot of Wordestey (in Worcester shire) to send two of his Covent to inform them therein. Which being accordingly done, there grew great friendship betwixt these two Monasteries, the Monks of Wordestey always giving courteous entertainment to those of Radmoze whensoever they had occasion to visit their Grange at Radway. Howbeit, at Radmoze they continued no more then xiii. years: For, finding the Foresters, not only troublesome, but, by their frequent visits, somewhat burthensome also, they became Petitioners to K. H. 2. on the 14. Cal. of Jan. in the very first year of his reign, making use of his mother, the Empress, their Patroness, to mediate, that he would be pleased to translate them to his Mannour of Stoneley in Warwick shire, and accept of what they had at Radmoze in exchange for that place. Whereunto the King graciously yielding, they came from Radmoze, and first seated themselves selves where the Grange of Cryfield now stands, the inhabitants thereof then removing to Hurst: but finding inconvenience there, in regard it was so neere the publique road way, they made choyce of another place, a little below the confluence of Solo and Avon, almost inviron'd with the river; having that thick wood called Echels on the North, and there began the foundation of their Church; whereof the first stone being laid Id. Apr. Anno 1154. scil. 1. H. 2. the Church-yard was consecrated "by Walter Durdent Bishop of Coventre, with the assent of the Prior and Canons of Leicestershire, to whom the Parish Church of Stoneley appertained: upon condition that the said Monks should no way diminish the rights due to the said Church of Stoneley, but make just payment of all Tithes to the same, for such grounds as they should till within that Parish; all which the said King Henry by his Charter confirmed.

And to the end that these Monks should have Stoneley intire, the said King gave command by his precept to the Shiriff of this County, to assigne the Freeholders there, as much land in value, in other places, by way of exchange for that they had here. But there being a Custom & amongst the Cistercian Monks, that no new Monastery of the same Rule, should without license of the next adjacent Abby of that Order, be erected; these, upon their translation hither, were constrained to come to an Agreement with the Monks of Combe; who conditioned with them, upon yielding such their license, that if they had a minde to erect any Granges, or remove the site of their Abby, the Monks of Stoneley should not hinder them. Which Agreement was made in the presence of the Abbots of Waverle, Bozelle, and Sperevale, in Anno 1155. 1. H. 2.

At the time when this Monastery was so founded, there were in the Mannour of Stoneley 68. villains, 4. Bordarii (id est Free-holders,) and two Priests; all which held xxx. Carucats of land (as is exprest in Domesday-book). As also 4. Bondmen, or servants, whereof each held 1. mess. and one quartone of land, by the services of making the Gallows, and hanging of Theeves: every one of which Bondmen was to wear a red clout, betwixt his shoulders, upon his upper garment; to plow twice a year, to reap as oft; that is to say at the two Pederipes; to give aid to the Lord at the Feast of S. Michael; to make the Lords malt, and do other servile work.

As for the particulars that the Monks held in demesne, and otherwise in 7. E. 1. I refer my Reader to the Record, not accounting it necessary to insert it here, having spoken so fully already of their possessions. But it seems that the King did not quit his totall interest in Stoneley to the Monks upon the foundation of this Abby: for I find, that the Shiriff of Warwickshire in 15. H. 2. accounted 29s. 9d. for paunage of the Woods: and in 19. H. 2. received 40 s. from those men which held the assarts: As also in 27. H. 2. 55 s. for perquisites here. Nay, his Officers and Foresters in the beginning of King John's time, did so insult, as that they alledg'd all was his, notwithstanding what King Henry his grandfather had given them by his Charter before specified. And so far were the privileges, which belong'd to the Monks within this their Mannour of Stoneley slighted, that upon any suite betwixt the Tenants, or against the Abbot, all Writts were directed to the Ks. Bayliffs; so that Will. de Tyso the then Abbot, considering their grievances, and the further dangers to them which were imminent enough, repaired to the King, and for 200. Marks and two white Palfreys got a confirmation of his fathers Charter, with a grant of the Woods of Wethale, and the assarts at Hurst, for which there had wont to be payd yearly into the Exchequer 29 s. which Charter beares date 12. Maii 5. Joh. And yet thought they not themselves sure: for in 11. H. 3. they gave the King xv. Marks for to confirm his fathers grant.

But I come now to the chief of their other Benefactors, resolving to speak more fully of them, and of what they gave in the particular places where the lands so given did lye. These were Stephen de Segrave, who gave all his land of Bertcote with the Mannour house. Geffrey de Langley the Mannour of Staberton. Hugh de Arden lands in Rotley. Robert de Broc lands in Radway. Sir Thomas de Edneure Knight, all his lands in Hull next Wotton. Geffrey Savage and Sir Will. Whelton Knight Partford mill (standing upon the little torrent near Gate-bridge) Richard Trussell 1. mess. in Rotley. Thomas de Arden the Church of Rotley. John de Mercote lands in the said Rotley, and Radway. Rob. de Waldene more in Radway.

In all which, the privileges which these Monks had, were very many and great; viz. Free-warren, Infangthef, Outfangthef, Weyfs, Streys, goods of Felons and Fugitives, Tumbrell, Pilory, Sek, Sak, Toll, Theam, amerciements for murders, Assise of bread and beer; with a Mercate and Faire in the town of Stoneley: which Lordship was to answer for xii. before the Kings Justices or Coroner: and the tenants thereof (id est Freeholders) to plead the Writ of Right according to the custome of the Mannour; having Assise of fresh force against such as should disafe them without a Writ. And moreover that the Kings officers might not take distresses, nor make any attachment within the same, without the Bayliff of the Mannour. As also that the Lord and his tenants of the same Mannour, should be free from payment to the County or Hundred-Courts; from Murthers; Aid to the Shiriff, and coming to his Turne: from all common amerciements, of Toll, Pontage, Passage, and Murage throughout England; and from payment of the expences to the Knights for the Shire sent to Parliament.

Which Mercate, Faire and Free-warren were granted to them by K. E. 1. as his Charter, bearing date at Laernarboon 27. Maii, in the 12. year his reign testifieth; viz. the Mercate on Thursday every week: and the Faire yearly to last for eight days, beginning on the Even of the Nativity of S. John Baptist. But the tenants within the libertyes of Stoneley, for as much as it was ancient demesne of the Crown, were to pay Tallage to the Monks as oft as the King had Tallage of the like Mannours: the particular summs then due from the Town of Stoneley, and from the Hamlets antiently belonging thereto, being these.

Which Aidin 36. H. 3. upon the Kings transfretation into Calcoign, the Abbot of Stonle had, as appears by the Kings mandate & to the Shiriff of this County.

As for the other memorable passages touching this Monastery, or the Abbots and Monks thereof they were these; viz. That Will. de Gyldeford, the ninth Abbot, being a man of singular wisdom, and made Penetentiary to Panduph the Popes Legat, was afterwards sent with Legatine authority into Wales; which occasioned many superior Abbots and others, to malign him; so that, because he countenanced a Shepherd belonging to the Monastery, to fight a Duell, and to hang a Thief that had privately stole away some Cattell of theirs, such advantage was taken against him, as that, being prosecuted for it, he was deprived in anno 1235. 15. H. 3.

Within ten years after which his depofall, the Monks of this House sustained much loss by fire, whereby a great part of the Abby was consumed; towards the reparation whereof the King allowed them fourty Oaks out of his Woods at Benilwoeth, which the Shiriff of this County had command^b to deliver. And not long after this; viz. in 43. H. 3. divers of the Monks grew so exorbitant, that they fell to wandring; insomuch as the King sent forth his Precepts to all Shiriffs and other his Officers to apprehend and deliver them to the Abbot for chastisement according to their demerits, and as their Rule required.

The xvi. Abbot, viz. Rob. de Hockele, though a young man, yet being very sage and prudent, freed the House from many debts that were owing at the entrance of his government, and was a great builder: for he caused the stalls of the Quire to be all new made; as also the carved-work under the steeple, with the great East window above the high Altar, and the Church to be new dedicated & covered with lead: all which are now totally demolish^t. But the Gate-house, a fair and strong building, and also one of his works, still standeth; on the front whereof, outwards, there is remainyng yet a large Escoccheon of stone, whereon three Lyons passant gardant are cut; with a Lyon passant gardant upon a Helme, set on the corner of the shield, according to the fashion of that time wherein he lived. Which Badge he fixed here in memory of K. Henry the 2. their Founder.

But all that I have further to say of them, is, that in 38. E. 3. there was a Complaint^f made against Thomas de Pipe the then Abbot; viz. that he granted estates to divers persons for lives, offseverall Fermes and lands, without reserving any Rent to be paid, to the great pejudice of the Monastery: And this was alledged to be for the support of a Concubine that he had, called Isabell Penskele, and his children by her, which were more in number, as the Records says, than the Monks then in the Covent. And it was then also alledged, that were it not for these Leases xx. might very well have been main- rayned therein. How he acquitted himself of this scandalous charge I know not; but certain it is, that the man was a person of notable parts, and deserved very well of the House: for he composed that excellent Leiger-book, being the transcript of their evidences, wherein are all things historical- ly entred, that concern this Monastery; and very many particulars relating to the generall Story of the Kingdom, especially of these parts, which are not elsewhere to be met with, whereof I have made much use in this present work; and for which his memory will be of good esteem with all that are lovers of History.

By the Survey taken in 26. H. 8. the revenue of this Abby was certified^b to be C li. iii s. 1 d. ob. over and above all reprises. Of which the sum of 04 l. 05 s. 04 d. was then reckoned for the charge of 8. quarters of Rye made in bread at 5 s. the quarter. 3. quarters of Malt in beer, at 4 s. the quarter; and 200. Herings at 20 d. the Hundred: All which were yearly given in Almes to poor and impotent people upon Maunday-Thursday at the washing of their feet, by the decree of a generall Chapter of their Order. And moreover C vii s. viii d. per ann. for their charge in relief of poor people; viz. three bushels of Rye, weekly made in bread, being in all 17. quarters and a half; and 6. quarters of Malt made in beer at 4 s. the quarter. The yearly fee then to the principall Officers being to Henry Marq. Dorset, their high Seward. Liii s. iv d. To Robert Caster gent. their generall Receiver. xxvi s. viii d. And to Thomas Gregory, Auditor, xxvi s. viii d.

So that, being in clear yearly value less than CC li. it was suppressed by Act of Parl. in 27. H. 8. whereupon the Monks were, for the most part, disposed of to other Religious Houses that then stood undissolved; Thomas Tutbury the then Abbot having a Pension^d of 23 li. per annum assigned to him during his life.

After which upon division made of divers Mannours and Lands, joyntly acquired by them, the site of this Monastery became allotted to the same Sir Thomas Leigh; who, purchasing in the greatest part of all other lands lying in Stonley, thereabouts and obtain'd in 4. Eliz. a Pat. of confirmation for them all, together with the Mannour of Stonley.

Which Sir Thomas, being son to Roger Leigh of Wellington in Shropshire, descended by a younger branch from that ancient family of the Leigh's of High Leigh in Cheshire (as their descent sheweth;) and bred up under the said Sir Rowland Hill (an opulent merchant of London) became at length, for his skill and diligence, his Factor beyond Sea; and underwent that trust so well, that Sir Rowland, having no child, match't his neece, whom he much affected, to him; viz. Alice, daughter to Barker of Hamon in Shropshire; upon whose issue he bestow'd the greatest part of his estate. Much might be said of this Sir Thomas Leigh, who was Lord Mayor of London in 1 Eliz. but let the Epiraph upon his Monument at Mercers Chappell where he lyeth buried suffice; for he dyed in that City 14. Eliz. leaving issue 3. sons, Rowland, Thomas, and William.

The eldest of which was largely provided for in Gloucestershire at Longborough and thereabouts by the said Sir Rowland Hill, his Godfather. But the second here. And the third at Peunham in this County had ample possessions settled upon them by their father and mother, she being joynd purchaser in all, and lived here at Stonley to a very great age, to see her childrens children to the fourth generation: where departing this life Jan. an. 1603. she was buried at the upper end of the Chancell, on the North side. The memoriall of which worthy Lady, though there be none over the place of her sepulture, will continue in that lasting monument of her piety erected in this Town; I mean the Hospitall for poor people; of which I shall say more anon.

Thomas the second son, Knighted by Q. Eliz. and honoured with the title of Baronet at the first erection of that order; scilicet 29. Junii 9. Jac. wedded Katherine, daughter to Sir John Spenser of Wilmelghston Knight, by whom he had issue Sir John Leigh Knight his son and heir, whom he survived: And having lived to a great age in much reputation, being Custos Rotarum, for this County; and in all publique employments of his time one of the superior rank, deceased in Febr. 1. Car. leaving Sir Thomas Leigh, son to the before specified Sir John, his next heir. Which Sir Thomas (now Lord of this Mannour) having been dignified with Knighthood by King James, wedded Mary, daughter and coheir to Sir Thomas Egerton Knight (eldest son to Thomas Lord Ellesmere Lord Chancellor of England) and firmly adhering to the late King Charles in his greatest distresses, was, in testimony of his stedfast loyalty advanced to the degree and title of a Baron of this Realm.

The Church (dedicated to our Lady) whereunto belonged 8. yard land, being given by K. H. 1. to the Canons of Benilworth shortly after the Foundation of that Monastery, was appropriated to them by Geoffrey Muschamp Bishop of Coventre and Litchfield in King John's time, with a Pension of v. marks out of the Vicaridge; and confirmed by Pope Gregory the ix. anno 1228. 12. H. 3. And in anno 1291. 19. E. 1. valued at 24. marks, the Vicaridge in 26. H. 8. being likewise rated at vi li. xv s. iv d. over and above xxx s. yearly Pension then payd to the Canons of Benilw. and 8 s. per annum allowed for Procurations and Synodals. Which Vicaridge was by the Lady Aliza Dudley augmented with 20 li. per annum out of lands purchased in Mancester, whereof I have there taken notice: who also gave three large and faire pieces of gilt plate to remain for the use of the Communicants here for ever.

The Hospitall before mentioned was founded by the said Lady Alice Leigh, for ten poor people; viz. five men and five women, all of them to be unmarried persons, and nominated by her; but after her decease by Sir Thomas Leigh, her son, during his life, and his heirs for ever. To whose maintenance she charged 29 li. per annum to be payd out of Milburn-grange, situate in this parish, and thus distributed; viz. 52 s. to each of the poor people, at the Feasts of S. John Baptist, S. Michael, the Nativity of our Lord, and the Annuntiation of our Lady, by even portions. vi s. viii d. apiece yearly to the Church-wardens for the time being, whom she constituted Supervisors of the said poor people, as to their orderly coming to Church every Sunday and Holy day, except there were urgent cause to the contrary. x s. per annum to the Mayor of Coventry, for the time being, whom she also appointed to oversee the performance thereof. And x s. yearly towards the repair of the Church here at Stonley: as also xxii s. viii d. to a Preacher for to preach 4. Sermons there yearly. All which Q. Elizabeth by her Letters Pat. bearing date 28. Junii 19. of her reign, confirmed.

Cloud.

THis being now only known by the Bridge over Abon betwixt Babnell and Starton, hath its name from the rock on the Southern side thereof; Clude in the Saxon signifying as much. In the Conq. time there were two Priests in Stoneley, which had each of them a Chappell; viz. one at Flechamsted, and the other here at Cloud. Of theie, he that served here was called Edmund the Hermite, in regard that anciently here had been an Heremitage. Unto which Edmund, for his maintenance, certain parcels of land lying in Starton were given by Will. surnamed Hufeler, brother and heir to one Simon, Cook to K. H. 1. which Edmund was buried in the Chappell here, afterwards burnt by theeves. After whose death neither the King, nor any Lord of Starton presenting thereto, the Prior of Kenilworth, as Rector of the Church of Stoneley, entred upon the lands belonging to it, and appropriated them to the use of that Monastery.

As for the Bridge before specified, it was built by one of the said Heremites out of the Almes bestowed upon him by good people. Which falling in time to decay, the Prior of Kenilw. in 26. E. 3. was presented by the Hundred for not amending it, for as much as his Predecessors time out of mind had used to repair the same, as then was alledged: but the Prior proved, that no certain person was obliged to repair it, in regard it had been built by the Heremite as above said: And moreover, that there being another Bridge neere at hand, there was no necessity to keep up this; whereupon he was acquitted.

Starton.

A Little below Cloud lyeth Starton (taking its name from the Stoure or streame, as I guess.) Which, being a member of Stoneley continued therewith in the Crown, till K. H. 1. granted it unto his Cook, called Simon surnamed Hufeler de Arderne, and his heirs, by the service of a Soar-Sparhawk yearly. From whom it descended to Will. his brother; who gave to Edmund the Heremite then Priest at Cloud those parcells of land before mentioned. To which Will. succeeded Geffrey surnamed Arderne; and to him Rhesse, who past this mannour to Walter Marescall Earl of Wembroke, in exchange for lands in Ireland. Which Walter soon convey'd it to Sir Geffrey de Langley Knight (of whom I have spoke in Binley) and Maud his wife and the heirs of their two bodyes; and for want of such issue to the right heirs of the same Geffrey; reserving the said Rent of a Soar-sparhawk to be yearly payd to the King his heirs and successors at the feast of S. Michael the Archangell; and to him the said Earl and his heirs a pair of Gloves, or a peny for all services; King H. 3. by his Charter dated 12. Martii 29. of his reign confirming the grant.

Soon after which; viz. in 30. H. 3. the said Geffrey obtained a Charter of Free-warren in all his demesne lands here: but the next year following, sc. 31. H. 3. he past away this Mannour to the Monks of Stoneley and their successors, in Fee-ferm, for xx li. per annum undertaking to pay the Soar-Sparhawk to the K. And afterwards releasing the said xx li. Rent to the Monks, obtained the Kings confirmation of his grant, the Soar-Sparhawk being afterwards paid by his heir.

The particulars which the said Monks had here were in 7. E. 1. certified to be two carucats of and, and one Water-mill in demesne, with six villains and seven Cottagers, holding by severall Rents and Services. All which, with liberty of Free-warren, renew'd to them by another Charter in 12. E. 1. they enjoyed till the dissolution of their House in 27. H. 8. But then coming to the Crown, it was in 33. of the same Kings reign granted to Charles Brandon D. of Suff. which D. by his deed bearing date the last day of the same month, passed it unto Matthew Wrottesley and Anthony Foster: who in March 3. E. 6. sold it to Thomas Marrow of Rudfyn Esq. of whose grand-child, Samuel, it was purchased by Sir Thomas Leigh Knight, Citizen and Alderman of London 17. Junii 7. Eliz. and so continueth to his posterity, together with Stoneley unto this day.

There is a fair Bridge of stone, over Abon, lying neer Starton, now commonly called Starebysloge, but formerly Kingsbrige. This in 51. H. 3. being in decay, the King directed his Precept to the Shiriff for enquiry who ought of right to repair it, and to distrein them thereunto. What was done thereupon I find not: but in 26. E. 3. the Abbot of Stoneley being questioned for the not repair of it, did not deny but that he ought of right so to do.

Finborgh.

Within the precincts of Stoneley there was a certain House, with two yard land belonging to it, called Fynborgh, given by King H. 1. unto one William his Falconer by the service of keeping a Falcon. Which land, one of the same William his descendants charged with an annuity of 5 s. per annum to the Canons of Kenilworth; in respect whereof the Priors of Kenilworth did challenge to be Lords of the same tenement, exasting Heriots and suite of Court from the possessors thereof. But this tenement came at length, by succession, to one Alex. de Fynborgh; who dying without issue, Joan the wife of Steph. Stretton, and Alice the wife John Fynborgh, being his sisters, inherited it: Neither of which having children, Joan the survivor gave it in her widowhood to Will. de Hulle a Priest, who past it unto one John Bacon of Wolston. Which John sold it to Sir Will. Bagor, of Baginton in R. 2. time: but since that have I seen little of it.

Fynham.

This village lyeth upon the bank of Soto, and being a member of Stoneley was posselt by the Monks from the Foundation of that Abby, they having Free-warren granted to them here in 12. E. 1. In it anciently were xii houses; of which eight were gone before the beginning of H. 7. time. When it past out of the Crown I have not seen: but in 3. E. 6. Cuthbert Joyner, a Citizen Fletchamsted.

THIS is now in two parts, one commonly called Over-Flechamsted, and the other Nether-Flechamsted; but antiently they were not divided. Here it was, that K. H. 1. observing it to be a place of great solitude, in respect of the thick woods and large waltts thereabouts, gave to one Gerard an Heremite and Priest, a carucat of land, whereupon in proceſs of time he built Houses, and let them for Rent. Which Gerard had a Chappell here, the yard whereof was consecrated by Walter Durdent then B. of Cobentre; upon condition ^k that he the said Gerard and his successors should pay tithes to the Canons of Kenilworth in right of their Church of Stonley.

In this Chappell did he celebrate Divine service daily, & was afterwards buried therein. After whose death K. Henry preferred ^l one Bryan thereunto, who also was a Priest and brother to a Templar, named Peter Lomſy: which Peter sent the said Bryan into Ireland upon some business for the Templars, and in his absence sung Maſs in the Chappell here, for the King. But Bryan dying in Ireland, the Templars held ^m this Chantry and the land thereto belonging; and procured K. H. 2. to bestow it upon one Robert Piron a Priest, during his life, for their use; and after his deceaſe upon them. Whose grant K. John confirmed ⁿ. Which lands were in 31. H. 2. certified ^o to be worth 14 s. per annum, and the Mill, that the said Templars had also here, 3 s. whereof they continued poſſeſt till the destruction of their Order; yet not very peaceably, in regard that the Canons of Kenilw. perplexed them with ſuites in R. 1. & 9 K. John's time, upon the title they pretended to have thereof by the grant of K. H. 1.

In 7. E. 1. that which the Templars had here was certified ^r to be 1. that one Carucat of land, and Mill above ſpecified, held by the ſervice to find a Priest to ſing Maſs daily for the ſouls of the Ks. Progenitors; and for the ſoul of Gerard the Heremite. 2. That the Tenants of this and the reſt of the lands, which they had here, were to do ſuite to the Court at Walsall twice a year; and each of them to find one man in Harveſt for to work four days with their hooks, the Templars providing them dyet: All which had Houſe-bote and Hey-bote in the Abbot of Stonley's woods called Wetſt-wood.

In the time that the Templars thus held it, Guido de Foreſta, Maſter of that Order here in Eng-land temp. E. 1. purchaſed ^s from the Monks of Stonley for an C. marks, and the releaſing all their intereſt of common in the woods and lands belonging to the Abby of Stonley 192. acres of waſt, lying in a great out-wood there adjoining, called Wetſt-wood, with all ſuch Rents and ſer- vices which the Monks of Stonley had of the ſaid Templars tenants in Flechamsted, except the rent of John Fitz-Nicholas. But when the Templars were ſuppreſt (ſcil. An. 1211. 5. E. 2.) Robert de Hockele, then Abbot of Stonley, entred ^t into this Chappell and lands here, and held them for 40. days. Howbeit afterwards, by the adviſe of Tho. de Hockele his brother, then a Dr. in Divinity and a Canon of Kenilworth, fearing that he might under- go ſome Eccleſiaſtical cenſure for what he had done, rendred ^u them up to the Hospitalars, to whom the K. and Pope had granted them, as I ſhall fully ſhew when I come to Walsall. All which lands, except the carucat firſt belonging to this Chantry, did pay ^v tithes to the Church of Stone-ley; and in 21. H. 7. were held ^x of the ſaid Hospitalars by John Beuſitz of Walsall in Leale: who by his Will diſpoſed thereof to Ellene his wife.

Which Order (withall the great Monasteries) be- ing diſſolved in 30. H. 8. the K. by his Letters, Pat. dated 26. Febr. 36. of his reign, granted away whatſoever the ſaid Hospitalars had here, to John Beaumont eſq. and his heirs, by the name of a Man- nour; the particular lands thereunto belonging, being ſaid to be in Over-Flechamsted. Who having licence ^y the ſame year to alien it un- to William Humberſton and his heirs, levied a Fine thereupon T. Hill. 2. E. 6. But afterwards it came by purchaſe ^z to Sir Tho. Leigh Kt. and Dame Alice his wife. Which Sir Thomas had iſſue Sir Thomas, who made the Park here & built a fair Houſe with- in it, now enjoy'd by his grandſon, together with Stonley whereof I have already ſpoke.

Nether-Flechamsted.

Concerning this, I have not ſeen any thing be- fore H. 7. time; but then, ſc. 3. H. 7. was Sir John Catesby Kt. ſeized ^b thereof: from whose ſon & heir, viz. Humfrey Catesby eſq. John Smyth, a wealthy Citizen of Cobentre (living in the Spon-ſtreet) purchaſed ^c this & other lands of good value. Which John in 6. H. 7. was ^d one of the Commiſſioners ap- pointed in this County for arraying of men in de- fence of the Kingdom then in danger of an invaſion by Charles 8. K. of France: as alſo for conſerva- tion of the peace, from ^e 8. till 15. H. 7. and then was conſtituted one of the Juſtices for the Gaol- delivery at Warwick. To whom ſucceeded Henry his ſon and heir; who in 12. H. 7. made ^f a Park of the one half of this Lordſhip, converting ^g the reſt into Paſture; whereby 4. of the 5. Meſſuages, there being, went to decay. In that Park he then alſo made a pool ^h of certain ground that had for- merly been a Medow: and in 20. H. 7. obtain'd in exchange ⁱ from the Abbot of Stonley, for other lands, all that belong'd to the Monks of that Houſe in this Flechamsted. Which Henry left iſſue Sir Walter Smyth Kt. (of whom I have ſpoke at large in Shirford;) he & Richard; & he Sir John Smyth Kt. now of Crabet in Suſſer, the preſent owner hereof.

Hurſt.

THIS place takes it name from the ſituation which is upon a dry bank; for ſo the word hurſt in the Saxon imports. The firſt mention I find hereof is in 1 H. 2. upon tranſlation of the Monks from Radmoze to Cruleſeld, being then removed; hi- ther. Which K. upon the foundation of Stonley-Abby gave ^k the Monks this place in augmentation of their poſſeſſions, whereof they afterwards obtain'd K. John's confirmation ^l; and out of their eſtarts here, in proceſs of time, made a Grange ^m called Bo- kindene, ſituated about half a mile from hence.

This Hurt was antiently a pretty Village consisting of 19 houles, of which in the beginning of H. 7. time, there was "no more than one left; and is now, for the most part, posselt by the Lord Leigh of Stoneley, descended to him from his great-grandfather, who purchas'd it in the beginning of Q. Eliz. time.

Cryfeild.

This was antiently written Crolesfeld, and Crolesfeld, the first syllable standing, doubtless, for his name who posselt it in the Saxons time: for many of their denominations were such as to us are now very uncouth.

Before the Norman Conquest the Kings of England had here a House, the place where it stood retaining the name of the Bury-Stepe for a long time after, Bury signifying the same with Curia, and Stepe locus. In this House, whereunto belong'd six carucats of land, antiently resided a foreign Earl, by the Kings leave: Which E. being a great Robber, and infesting the Country hereabouts very much, was removed by K. H. 2. who, upon exchange with the Monks of Radmore, for Stoneley, brought them hither, displacing the Inhabitants, and settling them at Hurt. But the Monks soon finding how inconvenient the Highways were to them, chose another, where they built their Abby, as I have in Stoneley shewed. Upon the foundation and endowment whereof, the same K. gave them 4 carucats of land in this place, which King John confirmed, where the Monks had a Grange, afterwards burnt by the negligence of those souldiers that quartered therein at the siege of Kensilworth-castle, 51 H. 3.

In 7 E. 1. it was certified, that this Village paid a Stone of Wax yearly for maintenance of the Lights in Stoneley-Abby, burning before the Image of the blessed Virgin: As also that the Free-holders here did suit to the three weeks Court at Stoneley, and came to the Abbots Bederepe, as in Stoneley I have at large declared. But this place hath also suffered depopulation, as well as the neighbouring Villages: for of xii Tenements that were antiently here, in the beginning of H. 7. time, no more than the Grange was then left. Which Grange, after the dissolution of the Abbeys, that the K. past away most of their possessions, was 13 Apr. 36 H. 8. granted to Rob. Bocher, then a servant in Court, and to Eliz. his wife, and to the heirs of the same Robert. Which Rob. dying seized thereof, 31 Maii, 3 & 4 Ph. & M. left Rob. Bocher his cofin and heir, then 12 years of age.

Canle.

Though there be no mention hereof in Record so high as the Conquest, yet the name, being compounded of two British words, viz. Cann, which signifieth albus, and Ule locus, doth shew that it hath been of much greater antiquity. But of this, as involv'd with Stoneley, and so coming to that Abby upon the foundation thereof, were the Monks disposelt, as it seems, in H. 3. time. For at the time of the siege of Kensilworth- castle in 51 of his reign, Ric. de Alcrington, then Abbot of Stoneley, commencing his suit against Robert the son of Peter de Canle, recovered it; and had possession delivered to him by the Sheriff upon the K. command at the Cross in Stoneley on the day of S. Clement the same year; whereupon the tenants did their fealty to the said Abbot. But after the dissolution, the greatest part of it came by purchase to Sir Tho. Leigh, with Hurt, and other lands; and so is descended to his great grandchild, who now enjoys it.

Hill.

This village (taking its name from the situation) was also a member of Stoneley, and involved therewith; but antiently written Hulle, and sometimes Kings Hulle. Here the Monks of Stoneley had a Grange: which, after the dissolution of their House, was in 34 H. 8. granted, inter alia, to Leonard Chamberleyn Esq; and Ric. Andrews Gent. and to the heirs of the said Ric. Andrews; but came soon after to John Wade and Tho. Gregory; for in 38 H. 8. the said John Wade releas'd his title therein to the said T. Gregory, in consideration of the like made to him of lands in Flechamsted. Which Tho. dyed seized thereof 16 Marri, 16 Eliz. leaving Arthur his son then 34 years of age; whose son, as I think, still enjoys it.

Helenhull.

This was one of the Granges sometime belonging to Stoneley-Abby: but the first mention I find of it is a License (inter alia) granted by Edm. E. of Lanc. 6 E. 1. to the Monks of Stoneley, for their quiet enjoyment of what they had improved by inclosure here. And I conceive that it came to Tho. Gregory, with Kinghill; for in 4 Eliz. the said Tho. had License to alien the same unto Will. Phynnis and Arthur Gregory, and to the heirs of the said Arthur. Which Arthur dyed seized of it, with Kinghill above specified, 2 Jac.

Bokindene.

This Grange was built by the Monks of Stoneley upon the effarts, which they made at Hurt before mentioned; and so passing as a member of Hurt, is now scarce taken notice of.

Milburne-Grange.

This, standing upon the water which comes from Kensilworth, not far from a Mill, hath its name thereof; burne in the old English signifying a Brook.

Before the 12 of E. 1. I find nothing of it: howbeit then is there mention of it in the Charter of Free-warren granted to the Monks of Stoneley; and should seem to have been some petty Village;

Village; for in the beginning of H. 7. time, it is reckoned up amongst many other where depopulation had been exercised; and in 29 H. 8. was granted (inter alia) to James Cruce of Kenilworth Genr. and his heirs; who dyed & seized thereof, 20 Sept. 1 E. 6. leaving James his son and heir 14 years of age. Which James by his Dced & dated 1 Martii, 2 & 3 Ph. & M. past it to Anthony Throgmorton, Citizen and Mercer of London, who 1 Mai, 7 Eliz. sold it to Sir Tho. Leigh Kt. Citizen and Alderman of London, whole great grandchild (now of Stoneley) enjoys it.

Ashowe.

HAVING now done with that spacious parish of Stoneley, following the stream of Avon, I come next to Ashow, situate on the Northwest side thereof. In the Conq. time this was posselt by Turchil de Warwick, whose free-hold it had been before the Norman invasion; one Ermenfridus then holding 2 hides thereof of the same Turchil. Here were then also 2 Mills, and woods of half a mile in length, and 3 furlongs in bredth; the whole value of all being certified at xl s. as the Survey then made doth manifest, in which it is written Aleshot. But 'tis very like that there was some mistake in the transcriber; for in all ancient Records after that time it is written Alesho; which makes me conjecture, that the original appellation thereof was either by reason of its situation Eastwards from Wotton; for of that parish it hath been; and that the syllable ho was at first hof, which with the Saxons signified a House or Cave; or else from the old English word aeste, which signifieth an Ash.

And as I have taken liberty to guess here at the occasion of its name, so must I do touching the succession thereof, in regard that the light, which I have from Record, is so dim in many places. Finding therefore that the Verdons were superiour Lords of the Fee here: and that Lecelina, mother to the first Bertram de Verdon, that had any thing to do in this County (as I have in Wotton manifested) was daughter to Geffrey de Clinton, that founded the Castle and Priory of Kenilworth in H. 1. time; and gave a meadow here to the Canons of Kenilworth, called Ruggenhale, which shews that it came by her; I need not much doubt, but that Turchil de Warwick's issue being disposselt of the most of their fathers lands (as I shall elsewhere shew) this was, inter alia, bestowed by K. H. 1. on the said Geffrey, whom he advanced so high, as in Kenilworth is declared; and given by him to Norman de Verdon with his said daughter Lecelina in marriage. And to that opinion I do the more incline, when I consider, that it was anciently a Chapelry to the mother Church of Wotton; which Church the said Geffrey gave to the Canons of Kenilworth, at the very foundation of that Monastery.

But it seems that Verdon did anciently enfeoff one of the Simelyes in this Ashow: for in 26 H. 3. Geffrey de Simely held here, and in Caldercote, half a Kts. fee of Roise de Verdon, and she of the Earl of Warwick. Which Roise, being the heir female of that great family, dyed in 32 H. 3. To the said Geffrey succeeded William; who in 7 E. 1. with the Abbot of Stoneley, was certified to be Lord of this place, then written Aliche, both of them holding the same of Thobald de Verdon; whereof the said Will. then had 8 acres in demesne, 2 Cottagers, owing suit to his three weeks Court here; twice a year making appearance at his Court of Wandon; and xi Free-holders, who held 4 yard land and a half, and 9 acres and a half. Which Will. had also a certain out-wood here, containing 6 acres; and another several wood of 6 acres more. Here likewise had the Abbot of Stoneley 3 Cottiers, and 3 Free-holders, who then held 3 yard land, a quarter, and 4 acres, doing suit twice a year also at the Court of Wandon.

But in 29 E. 1. did Geffrey de Simely alien to Tho. E. of Lancaster (then Lord of Kenilworth castle) and his heirs, all his waits and woods called Widenhage, lying in this Lordship, viz. betwixt the bank of Avon, and the said Earls wood called the Grith, belonging to Kenilworth: which grant Ric. Bassett and Elylia his wife (sometime the wife of Will. de Symelie, and mother to the said Geffrey) confirmed. Howbeit, after this Geffrey I have not seen any more of their male line: but in 20 E. 3. John de Hokkeley is certified to hold part of a Kts. fee here, of the heirs of Verdon. The like appears in 34 E. 3. wherein the same is mentioned to be that which Geffrey de Simely held. But in 2 H. 4. Will. Allesey had it.

Little have I seen that is further memorable relating to this place, other than that in 13 E. 4. John Hugford Esq. and Tho. Waldeyve, had licence to grant, inter alia, 8 mess. 2 carucats, 20 acres of land, 12 acres of wood, xii s. a pound of Pepper, and a red Rose yearly rent, all lying here, with half the fishing in Avon, to the Monks of Stoneley, for ever. All which coming to the Crown by the dissolution of that Monastery, is posselt by the Lord Leigh, together with Stoneley, and most of the lands sometime belonging thereto.

The Church (dedicated to the Assumption of our Lady) having been anciently but a Chapel belonging to Wotton (as I have already intimated) was confirmed to the Canons of Kenilworth in H. 2. time by Ric. Peche B. of Cob. and had a Pension of xx s. per ann. granted out of it to the said Canons by Geffrey Muschamp, one of his successors, in K. John's time. In ann. 1291. 19 E. 1. it was valued at v marks; and in 26 H. 8. at vi l. ii s. over and above the xx s. yearly Pension due to the Canons of Kenilworth, and 8 s. allowed for Procurations and Synodals. But it hath lately been augmented with xxi l. per ann. by the Lady Aliza Dudley, in such sort as the rest were whereunto she gave the like annuity, as in Spencer's I have declared.

Bericote.

ON the South side of Abon, but in the parish of Abon, lyes Bericote, but long since depopulated. Which name may seem to have had its original from the ascent it stood upon, Berg with the Saxons signifying a little hill, and cote the same with domus, as is commonly known. In the Conq. time Turchil de Warwick (whose father Alwine posselt it before the Norman invasion) held it by his under-tenant, named Tonne, it then containing ^b 2 hydes; there being a Mill rated at 4 s. ^b and the whole value of all xl s. But soon after, though I have not seen how, it came to the Crown; and therein continued till H. 2. time. Which King enfeoffed ⁱ one Boscher, his servant, thereof, with the said Mill and other the appurtenances, by the service of keeping a white Brache with red ears, to be delivered unto the K. at the years end, and then to receive another to breed up, together with half a quarter of bran. From which Boscher it descended to Henry his son and heir, who granted ^k it unto Steph. de Segrave. Which Stephen bestowed ^l it on the Monks of Stoneley, reserving C s. yearly rent to be paid to him and his heirs forever: But this Annuity did Gilbert, the son and heir to the said Steph. release ^m to them, in augmentation of one Monk more, to be added unto that Covent.

In 7 E. 1. I find ⁿ, that the said Monks of Stoneley had 13 Cottiers, and 3 Free-holders here, with a wood containing 4 acres inclosed, in the nature of a Park. After which it became depopulated, though when, I know not: for in 33 H. 8. here was nothing left but a Grange; which, being by the K. 9 Feb. the same year, granted ^o to Charls Brandon D. of Suff. the said D. soon after past away to Math. Wrottesley Esq; and his heirs. Which Mathew, together with Anth. Foster Esq; fold ^p it, 4 Martii, 3 E. 6. unto Tho. Marrow the elder, of Rudsyn Esq; who in 2 & 3 Ph. & ^q M. alien'd ^r it to John Harreyoung Gent. of whom it was purchased ^s, 20 Oct. 24 Eliz. by Tho. Leigh Esq; (but afterwards Kt. and Bar.) and Katherine his wife; and so is descended to Tho. Lord Leigh, his grandson, the present possessor thereof.

Chesford-Bridge.

A Little below is Chesford-Bridge; which being in decay, the towns of Kenilworth, Wotton, Hall, Milberton, Abon, Cobington, Willington, Lemington-Priors, and Radford, were presented ^t before the Justices Itinerant, by the Hundred of Unghetlow, in 13 E. 1. for the not repair of it: but in 6 E. 2. the Jury upon their Verdict discharg'd them; judgement ^u being given, that the Abbot of Combe ought to repair it. Howbeit, in 26 E. 3. it was found ^v upon a trial, that the ground on neither side the Bridge did belong to the Abby of Combe, and that the same Abbot ought not to repair the ends thereof, his predecessors never having done it; nor of right ought to amend any more than 2 Arches, with that part of the Bridge standing out of the stream; and that neither those two Arches, nor the other part out of the Water-course, were at that time in decay. But in 43 E. 3. it appears ^x, that the Abbot of Combe being again questioned, could say nothing in his defence for the not repairing it, there being an Arch then broken; wherefore the Sheriff had command to distrain him thereunto.

Wootton, vulgo Leek-Wotton.

ABout a mile below Wootton, there falls into Avon a torrent called Holbrooke, which hath its head from the great Pool in Wedgnock-park. On the top of the Hill, Southwards of this brook, stands Wotton, that antiently included Wilberton, Leminton, Wootton, Lillinton, and Cobinton within its parish, which now are all distinct Mother-Churches: but for the present containeth onely Heathe, Woodcote, Hill (vulgarly called Hill-Wotton) and Wedgnock-Park, whereof I will speak in their order.

Touching Wotton it self, I find, that in the Conq. time Rog. de Montgomeri, (E. of Shrewsbury) posselt it; one Outti holding it under him, whose Free-hold it was before the Norman invasion; and that it contained then 3 hydes, having a Mill rated at 2 s. (which is now called Gupes-Cliff-Mill) the woods thereof being two miles in length, and one in breadth, all valued at C s. But in Doomsday-book it is written Quatone, which I conceive to be in reference to the situation thereof amongst woods, the word coit in the British signifying a wood; with which agreeth the modern English appellation, viz. Wotton, the d being changed into t for the more smooth pronunciation.

That the said Roger and his posterity lost all for their Rebellion, I have manifested in Wotton: so that this, being in the hands of K. H. 1. was, inter alia, given to Geffrey de Clinton; who, upon his foundation of the Priory at Kenilworth, gave thereunto the Church of this town, and 1 hyde of land. Which grant of his had been greater, but that he reserved part of the woods to be afforested, to enlarge his Park of Kenilworth: But the rest Geffrey Salvage had, and very probably by the grant of the same Geffrey, it being a whole Kts. fee (of which G. Salvage and his descendants I have already spoke in Baginton) who had much ado to hold it, as it seems; for in 2 R. 1. Richard de Frevill (then Lord of Wotton) impleaded him for it. And in 7 R. 1. he was constrain'd to come to an Agreement with Tho. de Arderne about it, who then levied a Fine thereof to him. Nay in 2 Joh. Henry de Armentiers had suits with him for it; who claim'd it in right of Isabell his grandmother; alledging, that she was seized thereof in H. 2. time; and that by David de Armentiers, her son, it so descended to him the said Henry. Whereunto Geffrey answer'd, that being in the K. service beyond Sea, he had protection; for which he paid a Fine at his passage, to the end he might not be impleaded in his absence; whereupon he was then discharged. But it seems that did not end the business; for upon a full Agreement betwixt them, where it appears, that the said Geffrey allow'd him a third part of the said Kts. fee, there is mention made, that they had a trial by Battle for it.

After this, scil. in 9 H. 3. there was a great suit betwixt Henry E. of Warwick, and Will. Mauduit and Alice his wife (sister to the said Earl) for 2 carucats, 22 yard land, and xvi s. rent, with th'appurtenances in this Wotton; whereof the E. alledged, that E. Walleran his father dyed seized: But the said Will. and Alice exhibited the Charter of the same E. Walleran, whereby he gave those lands unto her, and received her homage thereof; causing the Free-holders to do homage also to her the said Alice, who was then within age, and in the tuition of Alice de Harecourt, her mother. What further became of this business, I have not seen, and therefore shall proceed with my discourse thereof in relation to Savage.

In 36 H. 3. it was certified, that the heir of the said Geffrey Savage held one Kts. Fee here of Thomas de Clinton (heir male to the first mentioned Geffrey) and he of the E. of Warwick. To which Geffrey Savage succeeded Philippa (as one of the heirs to the last Geffrey) who with Robert de Mortimer, the Abbot of Stoneley, and Prior of Kenilworth, in 7 E. 1. held this Wotton, and Hill, with the Crosse-grange, for one Kts. fee. Which Philippa had here at that time 12 servants holding 1 yard land at will, and giving Aid at the Feast of S. Mich. at the Lords pleasure, with 4 Cottiers and 3 Free-holders, which held half a yard land by certain rent, fealty, and suit of Court twice a year: as also a Court-leet, and Assize of Bread and Beer, by the confirmation of K. H. 1. That which Rob. de Mortimer had, was the third part of a Water-mill, as also 8 servants holding 3 yard land, a half, and fourth part at will, performing Aid at the Feast of S. Michael. The Abbot of Stoneley 3 servants holding 1 yard land and a fourth part at will; as also 5 Free-holders holding 21 acres, and one acre of meadow. The Canons of Kenilworth 2 carucats, with the Mill of Gibbecliffe, which they held in demesne; besides the Church appropriat, endowed with one yard land: And likewise 2 servants holding 33 acres of land at will, giving Aid, viz. mowing, reaping, raking, harrowing, making Hay, &c. eight Cottiers, who perform'd the like services, and 4 Free-holders, paying certain rent, and doing suit of Court twice a year.

But the Mannour belonging to Savage, came by inheritance to Menill, as may be discerned by the Pedegree in Baginton: For in 13 E. 1. Will. de Menill claim'd a Court-leet, with Assize of Bread and Beer in this place, then termed Wotton-Savage, which were allowed. From which Will. descended Sir Hugh Menill Kt. who in 24 E. 3. granted the moytie of this Village to Henry E. of Lancaster, and his heirs (then Lord of Kenilworth-castle, whereunto it lay convenient) which I suppose was all that Savage had here. How it came to the Crown, wherein it still continues, I need not here declare, having made it so plain in Kenilworth, the possession of which Castle it hath since accompanied.

The Church (dedicated to All Saints) appropriated to the Canons of Kenilworth in K. John's time, (having been originally granted to that Monastery upon the very foundation thereof) was in ann. 1291. 19 E. 1. valued at x marks; and the Vicaridge in 26 H. 8. at Cxii s. over and above 8 s. allow'd for Procurations and Synodals. Which being so small, became augmented by the Lady Aliza Dudley with xx l. per ann. as in Pan-ceter, where the lands were purchased, may be seen.

That which the Canons of Kenilworth had here, besides the Church, being after the dissolution of that House granted to John D. of Roth-umb. by K. E. 6. came again to the Crown through his attainer; and was by Q. Mary pass'd to Sir Rouland Hill Kt. and others, in 1. of her reign, by by the name of the Mannour of Leek-Wotton, alias, Crosse-grange; and is now in the possession of the Lord Leigh of Stoneley, by descent from Sir Tho. of Kenilworth, with his body, which he determined to be buried in that Monastery, an annual rent of v s. issuing out of certain lands here, held of Sir Hugh de Beckbirie Kt. which gift of his, Aliva de Beckbirie in her widowhood confirmed. But being a member of Wotton, it belong'd to Savage, as that did; and had, within the precincts thereof, a Mill called Partford Mill, whereof two parts were given by Geffrey Savage, and the third by Sir Will. de Wholton Kt. to the Monks of Stoneley. To which Monks Sir Tho. de Ednesoure Kt. (who married one of the co-heirs of Savage) gave also certain lands here.

Heath.

I Am not very well satisfied where this Hamlet directly stood: but by some circumstances I guess, that the same, which is now called Wotton, contained the greatest proportion of it; being certain (by what I shall presently manifest) that the rest of it was situate on the other side of the little torrent called Holbrooke, as the Map will shew. There is no doubt to be made but that its name was originally occasioned from the nature of the soil, being of a Heathy disposition at first, before tillage did alter it. And as confident I am, that it was then a member of Wotton, forasmuch as it is not mentioned in the Conq. Survey.

Till H. 1. time, I have not seen any thing thereof; but then, viz. in 23 of that Ks. reign, Roger E. of Warwick, upon his foundation of the Collegiat-Church of S. Mary in Warwick, gave thereunto a hyde of land lying here. Shortly after which, did Geffrey de Clinton, son to Geffrey, the Founder of Kenilworth-Priory, inter alia, confirm the grant that Odo de Turri made to that Monastery, of all the rest, as it seems, of this Village: for he sets forth the bounds thereof from Holbrooke to Abon, and so to Amoe; and beyond Holbrooke, from the way leading to Warwick from Cobentre overthwart the long hill, unto the way which goeth from Wotton to Kenilworth by Hineleford.

In 7 E. 1. Tho. de Ednesoure, one of the co-heirs of Savage, was certified to be Lord of this Hamlet, having here 1 mess. and half a yard land in demesne, with 3 Free-holders, who occupied 31 acres of land, and 2 acres of meadow, under a certain rent and suit of Court twice a year at Ba-ginton; besides ten acres of land, and 2 acres of meadow more, then held of him by the Hospital of S. John in Cobentre. But this was not all thereof: for in 19 E. 1. the Canons of Warwick had also 1 carucat of land here; which being given at first, as I guess, by Earl Roger to the Collegiat-Church there, by some exchange afterwards came to the Priory of Kenilworth. But that which the Canons of Kenilworth had, now belongeth unto the Grange called Crosse-grange, and so did (questionless) before the dissolution of that Monastery. As for the residue of this Hamlet which Savage had, it is so confounded with Wotton, that there is no distinction can be made thereof from that Lordship.

Hill-Wotton.

This place, (antiently written Halls) lying Southeast from Wotton about a mile, and reputed a member of it, taketh its name from the high situation thereof. The first mention I find of it, is not till the beginning of H. 3. time, where Godwin the son of Godewin de Wotton, gives to the Canons Woodcote.

THis being at first a single House, and seated amongst woods, whence it had that denomination, is now reduced to what it was at first, there being at present no more than the Mannour-house: but in the Conq. dayes, and long after, it had divers Inhabitants. At that time the E. of Salisbury posselt it; it being by the Survey^e then taken certified to contain two hydes, whereof one was the Free-hold of Leuricm before the Norman invasion, and the other of Cantvin and Turbern, having woods of a mile in length, and half a mile in breadth, all which were valued at 50 s. In that Record^e it is written Wodecote; and descended to Robert Earl of Leicester, the lineal heir to the said Earl of Salisbury, who held it in 20 H. 2. By which Earl it was given (I suppose) to Rob. Boteler (a great man in this County, and a principal Officer unto him, as in Obersley I shall shew) for his son, sc. Raph. Boteler, granted^e it to John Belet and his heirs, in 14 Joh. to hold of him and his heirs by the fourth part of a Kts. fee.

But this it seems was onely Woodcote-inferior; for by that name do I find it distinguish'd; the other, viz. Woodcote-superior, being held^f by Simon de Turvill, and Roger de Craft, of the Earls of Warwick, together with Fulbroke in this County, by half a Knights fee, in 20 H. 3. Which half Kts. fee was^g in the tenure of the same Roger de Craft and John Mace in 36 H. 3. And in^b 52 H. 3. of Henry Hubaud. Of this Woodcote-superior there were afterwards many Sharers: for in 7 E. 1. it appearsⁱ, that Henry Hubaud, Hugh de Herdeberge, Robert Parson of Bedworth, and Dionysia Mace, held it of the Earls of Warwick by the fifth part of a Kts. fee. And that Woodcote-inferior (granted^e to Belet, as abovesaid) was then held by Rob. Masse of Raph Boteler by the fourth part of a Kts. fee. Which Robert had there at that time xi tenants, who held 3 yard land and a half, with 3 acres and a half, at the will of the Lord, performing Aid at the Feast of S. Mich. and paying Scutage.

That which Hugh de Herdebergh had here, was, in 19 E. 2. seiled^k upon John de Peyto and Alice his wife (the heir of Herdebergh). And^l in 13 E. 3. upon Sir Walter Hopson Kt. and Joan his wife, and the heirs of the said Sir Walter, after the death of the same John de Peyto. But in 43 E. 3. I find^m, that John Mauduit held lxiii s. iiii d. yearly rent here, issuing out of several Tenements held by Copy of Court-Roll; which Tenements were then held of the D. of Lancaster, as of the Honour of Leicester. And that the said John Mauduit, and Agnes his wife, dying without issue male of their bodies, the said Tenements came to Will. the son and heir of John de Molins, and of Egidia his wife. Which Will. dyedⁿ seized of them in 4 R. 2. leaving Sir Ric. Molins Kt. his son and heir, then 24 years of age; whose grandchild Alianore, sc. daughter & heir to Will. his son, matching^p to Rob. Hungerford, brought this, with a fair Inheritance besides, unto that noble family.

From whence it came to Hastings, as it seems, Edw. Lord Hastings, taking to wife Mary the daughter and heir of Sir Tho. Hungerford: which Edw. had issue George, created^q E. of Huntingdon, 21 H. 8. who sold^r it, together with Burton-

Hastings in this County, unto Tho. Harvye, a rich Citizen of London; whereby it is descended, together with the same Burton-Hastings, unto Sir Tho. Cotton, now of Connington, in Com. Hunt. Baronet, from Lucie his great grandmother, one of the daughters and co-heirs to the said Tho. Harvye.

The last mention that I find^s of Hubaud in this place, is, that Tho. Hubaud in 6 E. 4. held the sixth part of a Kts. fee here of the E. of Warwick. Nor is there much more, that I have seen, memorable hereof, other than the complaint^t of our Countryman Rous, who reckons both these Woodcotes amongst the depopulated towns on this side the County.

Wedgnock-Park.

THis is one of the most antient Parks in England: for I find^u, that Henry de Neuburgh, the first E. of Warwick after the Conquest, in imitation of K. H. 1. who made the Park at Woodstoke (containing 7 miles in compass, and which was the first in England) did impark it; but at that time it contained no more than what now is called the Old-Park, the rest having been enlarged by the succeeding Earls; who had, as it seems, a Mannour here; for so it is called in that settlement^v made 31 H. 3. by John de Plessers E. of Warwick upon Will. Mauduit and Alice his wife. And concerning this place, I further find, that the tythes of the assarts here, as also of the paunage and venison, were by Margery Mareschall, Countess of Warwick, in H. 3. time; given^x to the Hospital of S. Mich. in Warwick, in pure alms. And, that in 26 E. 1. upon the extent^y of the lands belonging to Will. Beauchamp E. of Warwick, then deceased, it was certified, that he had here at Wegenok, besides the Park, containing xx acres, a little Pool, and eight acres of arable land: As also, that in 9 E. 2. the underwood of this Park did yeld^z 26 s. 8 d. per an. the herbage 10 s. and the paunage, with the Nuts, 6 s. 8 d. Howbeit, in those dayes the Park was but small, till Tho. Beauchamp E. of Warwick enlarged it with certain woods called Wegenok-Doncle, lying within the parish of Hatton and adjoining thereto, which he purchased^a of the Lady Scolastica de Melfa.

After which it continued to the succeeding Earls, even to the last of that family; but coming to the Crown, with the rest of their lands, was by K. E. 6. in 1. of his reign, granted^b with the Castle of Warwick, and divers other Mannours, unto John Dudley E. of Warwick: upon whose attainder, in 1 M. the Q. demised^c the herbage and paunage thereof to Henry Jernegan, for 30 years, at x marks per ann. And Q. Eliz. in 14 of her reign, past^d the inheritance of it, together with the wood called Fernchill, and the Mannour-house, named Goodrest, to Fulk. Grevill Esq; and his heirs. Which Fulke being created Lord Brooke by K. James (as I have elsewhere shewed) settled this, and many other lands, on Rob. Grevill his kinsman, now, (sc. 1640.) Lord Brooke, by virtue of an entail, with that Honour.

Touching the said Mannour-house called Goodrest, first built by Tho. Beauchamp (the second of that name) Earl of Warwick, in part of E. 3. and R. 2. time; I suppose it was so called, in

In respect that some of the Countesses of Warwick, to avoyd much concourse of people, retired hither when they were near the time of Childbirth; for 'tis plain, that many of their children were born here, as I have elsewhere observed. But all the further mention that I find thereof, is, that K. H. 7. (the Earldome of Warwick being in his hands) granted the custody of it, with the Gardens and Waters in the Park, to Edm. Belknap Esq; of the body, for life.

Cuckow-Church.

THAT which beareth this name, is onely certain grounds lying within Wedgwick-park, where antiently stood a Chapel, which was of the Earl of Warwick's patronage. How long it is since that Chapel fell to ruine, is uncertain; but in 16 H. 7. the K. by his Letters Pat. dated 18 March, reciting, that it had been down to the ground of a long time; and that the place where it stood, with the Chapel-yard, had also been, and then was employed to prophane uses: As also, that there were no Inhabitants there which should rebuild it; to the intent that the same place, formerly so consecrated, might thenceforth be converted to pious uses, bestowed it on the Dean and Chapter of the Collegiat-Church in Warwick, and their successors, together with xls. yearly rent thereto belonging, formerly given to the said Chapel in recompence of the glebe pertaining thereto; which the Earls of Warwick had obtained in exchange for the said xls. rent. But the Village whereunto this Chapel did belong (many years since depopulated) was called Rykmersberg. [See more thereof in Beaufall.]

Blacklow-hill.

THere is nothing else memorable in the parish of Wotton, but Blacklow-hill, where the Earls of Lanc. and Warwick, having at Dedington in Oxfordsh. surprized Piers de Gaveston, Earl of Cornwall (a great Favourite to K. E. 2.) beheaded him without judgement of his Peers, or any course of Law, on the day of S. Gervasius and Prochasius, 7 E. 2. (scil. mense Junii) under the side of the hill, in the place where since that time stood a Cross called Gaveston's-Cross.

Guyes-Cliffe.

THIS being a great Cliff on the Western bank of Avon, was made a choyce of by that pious man S. Dubritius (who in the Brittons time had his Episcopal seat at Warwick) for a place of devotion; where he built an Oratory dedicated to S. Mary Magd. unto which, long after, in the Saxons dayes, did a devout Heremite repair; who finding the natural Rock so proper for his Cell, and the pleasant Grove, wherewith it is back'd, yeilding entertainment fit for solitude, seated himself here. Which advantages invited also the famous Guy (sometime E. of Warwick) after his notable achievements, having weaned himself from the deceitfull pleasures of this world, to retire hither; where, receiving ghostly comfort from that Heremite, he abode till his death (as by my discourse of him in Warw. shall more fully be manifested.)

It seems that this place continued in the same condition for a long time afterwards: For I find, that in 8 E. 3. one Thomas de Lewes, being a Heremite here, had the K. Letters of protection for himself and all his goods; in which Record it is written Gibbeclybe. And that in 10 H. 4. one John Burry, at that time likewise Heremite here, had C. s. per ann. salary, for to pray for the good estate of Ric. Beauchamp, then E. of Warw. as also for the souls of the father & mother of the said Earl.

Whether it was out of respect to the memory of the famous Guy, before mentioned, or to view the rareness of its situation, I cannot say; but certain it is, that K. Henry 5. being on a time at Warw. came to see it, and did determine to have founded a Chantry here for 2 Priests, had he not been by death prevented. After which the before specified Ric. Beauchamp E. of Warw. bearing a great devotion to the place, whereupon then stood nothing but a small Chapel, and a Cottage in which the Heremite dwelt, in 1 H. 6. obtained license to do the like, sc. for 2 Priests, which should sing Mass in the Chapel there daily, for the good estate of him the said Earl and his wife, during their lives; and afterwards for the health of their souls, and the souls of all their parents, friends, with all the faithfull deceased. Of which Chantry Will. Berkswell, (afterwards Dean of the Collegiat-Church in Warw.) and one John Bevington, were the first Priests; for whole maintenance, and their successors, the said Earl in 9 H. 6. had license to grant the Mannour of Athorne in this County, with one mess. one carucat of land, and Cxviii s. x d. ob. yearly rent lying in Whitnash and Wellesburne. And because he thought not that enough, by his last Will and Testament he ordained, that in all hast after his decease, the remnant of what he had designed for his Chantry Priests there, should by his Executors be delivered, and made sure to them: And that the Chapel there, with the other buildings, should be new built, as he the said Earl had devised, for the wholsom and convenient dwelling of those Priests.

The costs of all which, with the consecration of the two Altars therein, as appeareth by the accounts of the said Executors, from the 28 to the 37 H. 6. amounted unto Clxxxiii l. v d. ob. Then did Earl Richard, in memory of the warlike Guy, erect that large Statue, there yet to be seen on the South side within that Chapel, the Figure whereof I have here exprest: And having raised a roof over the adjacent Springs, walled them with Stone.

Here was it also that our Warwicksh. Antiquary John Rou (whose portraiture likewise, exactly taken from an antient Roll, wherein it was drawn to the life by himself, I have represented) after he came from the University, lived, being a Chantry-Priest in this Chapel; and compiled his Chron. de Regibus, which I have so often quoted. Of whom, considering his special affection to, and knowledge in Antiquities, being loth to omit any thing which may do honour to his memory, I shall here observe, that for his parentage he was the son to Geffrey Rou of Warwick, but descended of the Rousses of Winklow in this County; and touching his education, course of life, and death, have transcribed what Bale from Leland hath exprest of him.

Johannes Rouse, alias Rossus, Warwici urbe, magna olim celebritatis natus, simul & educatus fuit (ut Lelandus scribit) donec maturiores anni Philosophicos poscerent praeceptores. Tum vero Oxonium petiit, alium aliquid in re literaria inchoaturus: ubi, inter cetera, incredibili diligentia usus est in legendis authoribus, qui de nostris rebus scripserunt; unde tam exactam Britannica antiquitatis cognitionem sibi comparavit, ut multos, ex nostris, longo praeceperit intervallo. Perlustratis enim apud Anglos & Cambros omnibus ferè bibliothecis, copiosam rerum maximè memorabilium suppellectilem collegit; quae ne per incuriam dilaberetur, consulit se ad quietem, rem scripturienti imprimis necessariam. Est locus in colle positus, prope Avona fluminis ripam, distatq; à Warwico vix passibus mille: ubi constat Guidonem Warwicensem Comitem famosissimum illum, vitam olim vixisse solitariam. Hunc locum amenissimum Guidonicum-clivum ab eo appellatum, alto muro cinctum, annuente Rege Edw. quarto, Rossus homo minimè ambiciosus, unà cum vicinis aliquot fundulis, in possessionem accepit. Et parato in hunc modum honesto otio, atq; aurea fortuna mediocritate, expeditus & alacer, scribendi munus aggressus est: quod nunquam postea nisi cum ipsa vita deposuit. Quo longo tempore, multa Chartis commendavit, & in characteribus latinis: praecipue hac.

Sepultusq; est ibidem in dicto Mariae fano, ut ex inscripto Epitaphio apparet.

But of these his writings, most, I suppose, are perished, or in such obscure hands, that it is not known to me where they can be seen. Those only which are extant, being a Roll of the Earls of Warwick (wherein besides a brief Historie relating to each of them, their Pictures and Arms are with much curiosity depicted) and a Chronicle of the Kings of England reaching down to his own time.

But I return. A place this is of so great delight, in respect of the River gliding below the Rock, the dry and wholesome situation, and the fair Grove of lofty Elms overshadowing it, that to one, who desireth a retired life, either for his devotions or study, the like is hardly to be found, as Leland in his MS Itinerary, made temp. H. 8. doth well observe. It is a House (saith he) of pleasure, a place meet for the Muses: There is silence, a pretty wood, Antra in vivo saxo, the River rousing over the stones with a pretty noyse, nemusculum ibidem opacum, fontes liquide & gemmei; prata florida, antra muscosa, rivi levis & per saxa discursus; necnon solitudo & quies Musis amicissima.

Several Caves are there hewn out of the firm Rock; one of which, if we may believe tradition, was made by the renowned Guy, when he was an Heremite here. In 26 H. 8. by the Survey then taken, the lands belonging to this Chantry were certified to be worth xvii l. ii s. liii d. per annum, over and above all reprises, Nich. Lauder and Tho. Moore being then the Priests that served therein. But by another Survey, in 37 H. 8. the value, over and above reprises, was certified to be xix l. x s. vi d. All which, viz. Chapel, Buildings, and Possessions thereunto belonging, were, by Tho. Moore and Rog. Higham, Priests of that Chantry (the Ks. License being thereunto had and obtained) granted unto Sr. Andrew Flammeck Kt. and his heirs, the 4 day of June, 1 E. 6. Whose son Will. Flammeck dying seized of them, 11 July, 2 Eliz. left Kath. his daughter and heir, then ab ut 3 years of age: The particular lands belonging thereto, being 15 mess. 500 acres of land, 50 acres of meadow, and 20 acres of pasture, situate in Guyes-cliff, Awoyne, and Whitnash, as by that Inquisit. appeareth.

The Chapel here was dedicated to S. Mary Magd. as the grant thereof by Q. Eliz. to J. Colburne in 21 of her reign, manifesteth; and is in the parish of S. Nich. in the suburbs of Warwick. This John wedded the said Kath. the daughter and sole heir of Will. Flammeck before mentioned. And of him was it purchased (as I have heard) by Will. Hudson of Warwick; whose daughter and heir, Hersula, brought it in marriage unto Sir The. Beaufort of Embsay Kt. in which family it still continues.

Within the precincts of Guyes-cliff there is nothing more but the Mill; which, as I have formerly shewed, was in being at the Norman Conquest; and afterwards given by Geffr. de Clinton (the second) to Gilebert Nutricium, of whom I shall speak in Lemington: in which grant it is called Molendinum de Chibbesle. How the said Gilbert parted with it, appears not; but I find, that Henry de Clinton, son to the said Geffrey, mortgaged it to Randolph de Cotton for ten pounds of silver. It seems that the same Geffr. bestow'd it on the Canons of Kentworth; for so doth the confirmation of Henry his son, made to them thereof, imply; whereby he grants unto them therewith, both the Miller and his Children, in which it is written Kibblesle. And yet it can hardly be said that he gave it; for by his deed it appears, that the same Canons discharged xx marks of silver which the said Miller was tyed to pay; as also 2 marks of silver yearly to the said G. de Clinton during his life. But in 7 E. 1. I find, that the Prior of Kentworth had two Mills here; which, after the dissolution of the Monasteries, were granted to Ric. and Tho. Lawley, and their heirs.

Milverton.

Somewhat lower, on the Southeast side of Abon, stands Mildeston, wherein the E. of Mellent held 2 hydes, excepting 1 virgat, and a Mill valued at 50 s. as appears by the Conq. Survey: all which was then rated at 5 s. having been the Freehold of one Leuwinus before the Norman invasion; but in that Record it is written Malbertone, which shews that it originally had its name from some ancient possessor thereof. That most of the said E. of Mellent's lands, in this County, came to the Earls of Warwick, is plain enough: but how or when this place was disposed of by those Earls, considering that we have so little light touching those elder times, I am not able directly to shew.

The first & most ancient mention thereof, that I have met with, is, that Roger Earl of Warwick, upon his foundation of the Collegiat-Church in Warwick (which was in An. 1123. 23. H. 1.) gave, inter alia, for the maintenance of the Canons there, half a hide in Spilbertone (so it is there, written) and all the tithes of those lands there, which were of his fee. What proportion of this village Geffrey de Clinton (the Founder of Kenilworth Castle) had I cannot say; but that he enjoyed a part thereof is certain: for upon his death-bed he gave command to Geffrey his son, that he should render two yard land, lying here in Spilbertone to Ermenfride de Ponte his servant; which was done accordingly. After this, and very antiently, doe I find, that there were three Lords of this Town; viz. Astley, Spigurnell, and the third a Prebend of the Collegiat-Church in Warwick, each possessing a distinct share, as I shall shew anon. And that, what Astley had here, was given to their family in H. 1. time, as is evident from what I have already said in Astley.

But the first mention I find of Spigurnell is in 12. Joh. where Rob. de Milverton levied a Fine of two yard land here, to Walter Spigurnell and Celestina his wife. Whether this was all that Spigurnell had here, I cannot determine; but I believe it was the two yard land which the above mentioned G. de Clinton posselt.

This village hath antiently been accounted within the Parish of Wotton; for in King John's time G. Muschamp Bishop of Cobentre, upon the appropriation of the Church of Wotton to the Canons of Kenilworth, granted unto them one-ly one mark yearly out of the Chappell of Spilberton: But Parishes being not perfectly settled till about the later end of that Kings reign (as in Church ober I have shewed,) this Chappell, in the beginning of H. 3. time, grew to the reputation of a Church; for by that name did the above mentioned Walter Spigurnell and Celestina pass the advouson thereof to the Canons of Kenilworth in 16. H. 3. Which family of Spigurnell having their seat at Emscote in this Parish, held that place, together with Spilberton, of the Honour of Leicester by half a Knightsfee in 55. H. 3.

But Astley enfeof't Trussell of the most part that he had here; which might be the occasion that Ric. Trussell took part with Thomas de Astley, one of the rebellious Barons in H. 3. time; for I find, that the same Richard was slain in the battail of Evesham with the said Thomas, in 49. H. 3. Howbeit, the residue of Astley's lands in this place, were by Thomas Lord Astley (inter alia) given in 11. E. 3. for the foundation of a Chantry in the Parish-Church of Astley, as I have there manifested: which afterwards, when the said Chantry, being augmented with greater possessions, was changed into a Collegiat-Church, were by the said Lord Astley assigned for the maintenance of one of the Canons therein, and called the Prebend of Spilberton.

In 7. E. 1. it was certified, that John Spigurnell, Will. Trussell, and Raph de Hengham were Lords of Spilberton; and that the said John held his share therein (Emscote being joyned therewith) of Elene la Zouch by the service of half a Knights fee. [which Elene was one of the coheirs of Roger Quincy. E. of Winchester, who had part of the Honour of Leicester in right of Margaret his mother, one of the coheirs to the last of those ancient Earls.] By that Record it also appears, that the same John had two yard land here in demesne, and five servants, who held one yard land, an half, and a fourth part by servile tenure, as above-said: and 12. Cortiers holding one Carucat at the will of the Lord: And that the Mill was then held by John de Astele of the said Sir Andrew for the yearly rent of v. marks and a half, and two strikes of Eeles to Will. Trussell. And lastly, that Raph de Hengham held his share of the Earl of Warwick, viz. two yard land, which four Freeholders then occupied, being a Prebend of the Collegiat-Church in Warwick: howbeit, in 9. E. 2. there was no other certified to be Lord of Spilberton but Will. Trussell; and yet, in 20. E. 3. Maud Spigurnell answered for the sixt part of a Knights fee here and in Emscote, which she held of the Honour of Winchester.

From which Will. descended Sir Allured Trussell Knight (as in Willesey appeareth.) Who in 6. R. 2. entayled this Mannour (for by that name it is recorded) upon the heires male of his body, with remainder to Sir Fouke Pembruge Knight, and Margaret his wife, and the heires of the said Margaret. Whether the descendants of the said Sir Allured past away their right therein; or if so; when and to whom, I cannot say: for I find, that they continued posselt of a great part of this village till H. 8. time, Thomas Trussell then dying leyzed of ten messuages, xx. yard land, xxx. acres of meadow, xx. acres of pasture, and a water-mill, all situate within the precincts thereof, leaving Allured his grandchild and heir four years of age. But Spigurnell's part came at length to the Hugfords by purchase, as I guess: for in 12. H. 4. Rob. Hugford esq. obtained a Charter of Free-warren in all his demesne lands that he then had in possession or reversion, here, and in Emscote. To which Robert succeeded Thomas; who in 10. H. 6. was certified to be Lord thereof, with Emscote; and that he held it by the sixt part of a Knights fee: but since that time it is divided by a daughter and coheir of Hugford to the Beaufoes, (as in Emscote I shall shew) and continueth unto them untill this day.

That the Church was antiently a Chappell belonging to Wotton, I have already manifested, being afterwards appropriated to the Canons of Kenilworth, and endowed with xv. acres of land; but of the Vicaridge there hath not been any Ordination, considering its vicinity to Kenilworth, whence the Prior usually sent a Priest to serve the Cure, to whom he allowed the small tithes and offerings for his pains; which in 26. H. 8. were certified to be worth vi li. per annum.

Emscote.

Here is now no more left than the Mannour-house, the rest having been long since depopulated. The first mention I find thereof, is, that Walter Spigurnell, in a grant to the Monks of Combe of certain common of pasture within his fee of Spilberton, calls himself of this place, then written Edulscote: which shews, that one Edulfus was antiently owner thereof. But upon collection of the Aid in 20. H. 3. it is written Edel-mescote, and so by contraction in pronouncing, now now made Comescote. Of which family, scil. Spigurnell, there were these that had to do here; viz. Walter, who lived in King John's time, and beginning of H. 3. James, against whom Will. Trussell, in 37. H. 3. brought an Affise for common of pasture in this village, then written Coelbecote; and John Spigurnell in 55. H. 3. Who, in 7. E. 1. was certified to be Lord thereof, holding it of Elen la Souch, (one of the coheirs to whom part of the Honour of Leicester descended, as I have intimated in Wilberton,) by suit of Court twice a year.

Which John, held here a certain meadow then in demesne, paying to Will. Trussell a mark yearly, and as much to the Prioreſs of Grace-Dieu; and had five servants holding two yard land and a fourth part by a certain Rent, and performing severall services; viz. reaping, mowing, carrying Hay and corn, gathering of stubble, harrowing, &c. And two Cottiers holding two Cottages for certain Rent, and Hay-making. To whom succeeded Henry Spigurnell; who in 1. 2. 4. and 11. E. 2. was in Commission for taking Affises of Novel disseisin, and for the Gaol-delivery at Warwick. But after him I have not seen more of any male branch of this family; nor female, except Maud Spigurnell; who, in 20. E. 3. held the sixth part of a Knights fee here and in Wilberton, of the Honour of Winchester.

The next possessor of this manour, that I have met with was Will. Revell (descended from the Revells of Petebold-Rebell, as in the Pedegree there inserted is manifest) that dyed without issue, leaving Joan his filter and heir, wife to Geffrey Reynolds; by whom she had issue Richard; who, affecting his mothers name, called himself Revell. Which Joan in her widowhood married to Will. Atelberge, a Citizen of Cobentre, and party to the Covenants of Marriage betwixt the said Ric. Revell his son in law, and Margery the daughter of Robert Huggeford in 7. H. 4. What this Richard Revell was by his profession or practice appears not; but he kept not this Lordship long: for in 9. H. 4. he levied a Fine thereof to the abovementioned Rob. Hugford (his father in law) and Joyce his wife, and to the heirs of the said Robert: And by his deed of Release, dated 18. Maii the same year, wherein he calls himself Ric. filius Galfridi Reynald de Comescote, alias dictus Ric. filius Johanna filia Willielmi Ryvell, confirmed to the said Robert Hugford, and Joyce, and the heirs of the said Robert all his right therein. Which Robert obtained a Charter of Free-warren in all his demesne lands here, and in Wilberton, dated 12. Dec. 12. H. 4. in whose male line it continued till the beginning of H. 7. time, and then by a daughter and coheir came to Beaufo.

But before this Robert Hugford I have not seen any thing of their name in this County; howbeit, in Shropshire there was an ancient family of them. And, if I may have liberty to guess at the originall of this man's advancement to so good a fortune in Warwickshire, I shall conclude it to have been through his relation to Thomas Beauchamp Earl of Warwick: For it appears that in 20. R. 2. he was Custos Hospitii; id est Comptroller of the household unto the said Earle; who, by his Letters Pat. (for so they are termed) bearing date at Warwick 26. Apr. 1. H. 4. granted unto him, by the title of his beloved Esquire, for his good service done and to be done, as well to him the said Earle, as unto Richard Beauchamp his son, an Annuity of 8 li. to be yearly received during his life, out of the said Earles Mannour of Wike near Perthore in Com. Wigorn. And upon the last day of the said moneth of April, in the same year, I find that this Robert was retained by Indenture to serve the said Earle, and his son Richard, all his life, as well in Peace as Warr, receiving for his wages in time of Peace 7 li. per annum out of the issues and profits of the said Mannour of Wike; but upon these further Covenants; viz. to come to the said Earle, or his said son, whensoever he should be required, in times of peace, with a Groom and two Horses during his day.

That in time of Warr he should receive from the said Earle or his son xx li. for his wages; whereof half to be payd at the beginning of the Warr, and the rest quarterly as long as he did continue therein. That he should be well and sufficiently armed, arrayed, and horsed for the warr, suitable to his degree with one Yeoman, 2. Grooms and 4. Horses, and to have dyet for himself, and livery for his said servants and Horses: but that the said Earle or his son should have the third part of whatsoever he the said Robert or his men did gain by the war which did exceed the value of ten Franks. And if he or they hapned to take any prisoners, he should not permit them to be ransomed without the consent of the said Earle or his son. And lastly, that himself with his Men and Horses should be upon all occasions shipt to and fro at the charge of the said Earle.

In 3. H. 4. he was Receivour general to the same Earle; and the same year joyned in Commission with the Shiriff, for levying and collecting the Aid in this County, for marriage of Blanch the Ks. eldest daughter. In 5. H. 4. he served as one of the Knights for this Shire in the Parliament then holden. And in 9. H. 4. was Surveyour of all the said Earles lands.

To which Robert succeeded Thomas his son and heir; who being 21. years of age at the death of Joyce his mother 3. H. 5. had livery of this Mannor the year following. This Thomas, in 5. H. 5. was one of the Councill to the before specified Earle Richard; and in 7. being one of those in this County certified to bear ancient Armes from his Ance-flours, was then, amongst others, appointed to attend the King in person, in his wars for the defence of the Realm: As also in 12. H. 6. constituted one of the Justices of Peace in this County; in which year he is reckoned & with the chiefest of those that took their Oaths for performance of such Articles as were ordained in the Parliament then held. In 14. H. 6. he was employed for assessing a xv. and tenth in this County; And in 17. joyned in Commission with Richard Duke of York and divers other persons of quality, to take custody of all the Castles, Lordships, Mannours &c. whereof Richard Beauchamp Earl of Warwick dyed seized, in respect of the minority of Henry, son and heir to the said Earl, having been feoffee, Surveyor, and Receiver & general to the said Earl for all his lands, as his father was; as also one of his Executors.

In 19. H. 6. he was one of the Commissioners appointed to treat with the people for a loan to the King. In 20. one of the Knights for this Shire in Parliament. And upon renewing the Commissions for the peace in this County, from 17. till 27. H. 6. still joyned therein. He was also Constable and Governour of Warwick-Castle; and Supervisor of all the fishings, pools, and Swans belonging to Henry Duke of Warwick in this County and Staffordshire. In consideration whereof he had an annuity granted to him by the said Duke's Letters Pat. dated 5. Junii 24. H. 6. And in 28. H. 6. in Commission about levying the Subsidy then granted to the King in Parliament. So likewise, from 30. H. 6. till 9. E. 4. upon all renewings of the Commissions for the Peace, made one. As also Squier of the body to the K. E. 4. and to Richard Nevill Earl of Warwick Surveyor of his lands.

And as his publick employments were very great, so were John Hugford his son's; whom I find in 34. H. 6. Steward to Richard Nevill Earl of Warwick: As also a Justice of peace in this County from 1 E. 4. during the whole reign of that K. and of his brother K. Richard 3. as appears by the Records of their times. This John, having been Sheriff of the Countyes of Warwick and Leic. in 12. and 18. E. 4. in consideration of the acceptable services which the said King acknowledged he had done, was constituted Constable of Warwick-Castle: as also Steward of Warwick, and all the Lordships in this Shire, then in the King hands, in respect of the minority of Edward son to George Duke of Clarence (by reason of the Earldome of Warwick.) Which office, together with the place of Surveyour of all the Parks and Chases in this County, King Richard 3. by his Letters Pat. dated 15. Nov. granted also to the said John and Humphrey Beaufort esq. in regard of the minority of the aforesaid Edward. He was also a great Benefactor to the Abby of Stoneley, as appears by the large quantity of land given & thereunto by him, lying in Athor, and other places.

And, having much augmented his fortune by the marriage of Margaret, daughter and heir to Nicholas Metley (as in Wolston and Perston I have shewed) departed this life on the feast day of S. Nicholas the B. 1 H. 7. leaving issue by the said Margaret three daughters, which were his heirs; viz. & Jean married to Humphrey Beaufort of Bereford-S. John in Driford shire esq. Alice to Richard Cotes esq. and Anne to Gerard Danet esq. upon the partition of whose lands, this, with Spilberton, came to John Beaufort, son and heir to Humphrey Beaufort.

so above mentioned, and Joan the eldest daughter of the said John Hugford. Which John in 20. H. 7. had livery of his inheritance without proof of his age; (that is to say of all the lands descended to him from Humphrey Beaufort his father, Joan his mother, and Gerard Danet; which Gerard was tenant by the curtesy to such lands as belong'd to Anne his wife another of the daughters and heires to the said John Hugford;) and departing this life on Michaelmas day Anno 1516. (8 H. 8.) lyeth buried, together with the severall Hugfords before specified, in the South part of the Collegiate Church at Warwick, as their Monuments, which I have here exactly represented, do manifest. From whom is lineally descended Henry Beaufort esq. Lord of this Mannour Anno scil. 1640.

Willoughby.

Here, at Embsay, it is, that Avon is enlarged by the confluence of Leame; which having its head in Northamptonshire (about Wyannston and Dabentre) entrench Warwickshire betwixt Wolshamcote and Willoughby. Touching its name, I mean the etymologie, it may seem to be derived from the Greek word Avon which signifyeth a pool or lake; for our antient Saxon language is affirmed by very learned men in both, to have its originall from the Greek. Neither is this conjecture improbable; for as much as this River is of a muddy disposition, having some standing holes, in the nature of lakes or ponds in sundry places thereof. And we find at this day, that divers of those artificial Rivers in Cambrygshire antiently cut to drayn the Fens, do bear the name of Leame, as Waterley-leame, Pew leame, Porton's-leame, &c. being all muddy channells through which the water hath a dull and slow passage. But leaving the better interpretation thereof, to those that have more skill, I come to Willoughby.

The occasion of this Towns name is evident enough, the last syllable, scil. Bye in the old English signifying a Village, as we use it in some sence to this day, calling those orders which are made in a Court-Baron Bye-Laws, i. e. the Town-Laws; and the first, willough, importing that divers of such trees did antiently grow there. In the Conq. time most of it was in the possession of Turchill de Warwick; and the rest, of Hugh Grentemaisnill: howbeit the proportion which each had, doth not directly appear, for as much as it is in the Record confounded with other places: But it is there written willebere, willebes, and willebec; which last, if it were the originall name, must be interpreted the willough-book; for Bec in the Saxon signifieth a little stream.

How it came into the Kings hands I have not seen; but it seemes that King H. 1. posselt it, and enfeoffed one Wigan his servant of 12. yard land here, in Sergeanty, then valued at xii li. which Sergeanty as well included lands in Dunburgh, Thurlaston, and Hulle, as this; viz. to find at his proper costs a man in harness for the Kings service, with two Horses in every Army of his within England and wales. Which Wigan held this willoughby all his life; From whom it descended to Raph his son and heir; and from Raph to Will. and from Will. to Ivo. Which Ivo dying without issue it reformed to Thurstan his uncle, who granted the whole Mannour, with the advouſon of the Church to the Hoſpittall of S. John, without the Eaſt-gate in Drfozd, founded by King Henry 3. in 17. of his reign, ut ibidem infirmi & peregrini, ſua remedium recipere neceſſitas u.

In this town there was alſo one Henry Waltham, who held one carucat of land and xvii s. yearly rent, here, by Sergeanty; viz. to be the Kings Marshall in the Court of Common-Pleas: which Henry in 5. H. 3. payd ten marks for his Relief due for the land above mentioned, and formerly belonging to Will. Wigan his Uncle.

But beſides the Mannour ſo granted by the ſaid Thurſtane to that Hoſpittall, was there given thereunto, by Peter the ſon of the ſame Thurſtan, all that he had here, which did belong to the before ſpecified Tvo (there called Tvo de Shraule; for he was alſo owner of Shrewſley in this County:) As alſo the advouſon of the Church by Gilbert de Segrave: ſo that, in 32. H. 3. the Guardian and Brethren of the ſaid Hoſpittall, being poſſeſt of ſuch a fair proportion of lands in this place, obtained a Charter for a weekly ſerocate here, on the Tueſday; and a faſt once every year to laſt for 2. days; viz. the Munday and Tueſday in Whitſomweek. Neither was this all: for it appears, that in 53. H. 3. John the ſon of Peter, ſon to the before mentioned Thurſtane, gave thereunto one meſſuage, and one carucat of land more, lying within the precincts of this Village; as alſo all his right to the patronage of the Church. And that in E. 1. time, a family bearing the name of Hamund, and here reſiding, were good Benefactors thereto; Of which was one Richard Hamund, alſo Clerk, ſtiled eſquier in 23 H. 6. who then held the whole Mannour by Leaſe of the ſaid Guardian and Brethren.

But I further find, that Will. Wainſlete Biſhop of Lincheſter having in 26. H. 6. began the foundation of Wagdale College in Drfozd, in the very place where the ſame Hoſpittall ſtood, did in 35. of the ſame Kings reign, obtain from the ſaid Maſter and Brethren the grant of this Lordſhip, whereunto it hath ever ſince continued, being poſſeſt by the Preſident and Fellows thereof at this day; yet conſtantly leaſed out to the deſcendants of the ſaid Richard Clerke, men of a fair eſtate here. Of which family were Edward and Hierome (viz. ſons of Henry Clarke;) the former, father to William Clerke of this place deceased; Henry Clerke of Rochester in Kent, now Sergeant at the Law; as alſo of Samuel Clerke of Kingthorpe in Porthamptonſhire Doſtor of Divinity, and one of the Chaplains in ordinary to King James and King Charles, (who wedded Margaret one of the daughters to William Peyto late of Cheſterton in this County eſquire:) And the later of John Clerke of Gilsborough in Porthamptonſhire Counſellour at Law, and Bencher of Lincolns-Inne (an. ſcil. 1640. From which Richard, Sir George Clerke of Watford in Com. Porthampton Kt. As alſo John now merchant of London (nephew to the ſame Sir George;) and tenant to this Mannour from that Colledge are likewiſe deſcended.

Nor may I omit to take notice, that of this family was alſo the famous Sir John Clerke in H. 8. time (as conſtant tradition ſtill affirmeth;) who having taken the Duke of Longvile priſoner, at the battail of Spurs, was for that ſignall ſervice rewarded by the King with an honourary addition to his Armes; viz. in the ſiniſter part of the ſhield a Canton azure with a demi Ram ſaliant Argent, two flower de Luces Or in chief, and over all a baſton trunked, as appeareth on his Monument at Lame in Drfozdſhire. Which Armes; viz. Argent on a bend gules, between three pellets as many Swans proper, is ſtill born by theſe Clerk's before mentioned, as well as by the immediat deſcendants to the ſaid Sir John, now reſiding at weſton by Lame beforementioned, and at Crowton in Porthamptonſhire.

The Church (dedicated to S. Nicholas) being very antiently appropriated to the ſaid Hoſpittall of S. John, without the Eaſt gate in Drfozd, as by the Inſtitutions to the Vicaridge may ſeem, was in an. 1291. 19. E. 1. valued at viii. marks; And in 26. H. 8. the Vicaridge at ix li. iv s. iv d. To this Church did one John Haward in 15 H. 6. give one meſſ. lying withing the precincts of Wiltoughby; as alſo 20. Acres of land, ſituated in Latteherdewick and Bradwell, for the finding of a Lamp to burn therein for ever.

Dunchurch.

Next come to Dunchurch, containing theſe Hamlets; viz. Cauſton, Toſte, and Thurlaſton, the laſt of which extends it ſelf to the very bank of Leame. In the Conquerours time Oſhermus fil. Ricardi (of whom I ſhall ſpeak in Alton-Cantlow) poſſeſt it: but in Domeſday-Book it is written Doncerce, and certified to contain five hides valued at C s. of which before the Conqueſt one Ulmarius was owner. As for the originall of the name, 'tis evident enough; Done or Dune, ſignifying in our old Engliſh, a Hill, and Cerce a Church, which agrees with the ſituation thereof.

In King Stephen's time I find that Hengelramus Clement, being Lord of it, gave to the Monks of Stowell his demeſn lands lying in the fields here;

here; which grant Will. Clement his son ratified; who likewise bestowed the advowson of the Church upon them, Richard Peche, then Bishop of Coventre confirming the same. But whether it was the said Hengelram or his father, who became first enfeoffed of this Lordship by the descendants from the before specified Osbernus, I cannot directly affirm: yet, that it was one of them is not to be doubted; for as much as by many Records it is evident, that the posterity of the said Hengelram held it of the Honour of Ricard's Castle in Herefordshire (which belong'd to the said Osbern and his family, who assumed the name of Say) by half a K^es. fee.

But from the before specified Will. Clement, it came to John Dunheved, in right of Christian his wife, heir to the said William. Which John, upon the death of the then Incumbent, had a purpose to have entered upon the rights of the Church; howbeit, the Abbot of Pipwell being advertised thereof, got a great number of men, Horse, and foot, and kept possession of it by force: whereupon the said John forbore to prosecute his intention; yet afterwards the Monks and he came to an Agreement; so that, with Christian his wife, he did by a Fine in 31 H. 3. quit his right in the advowson thereof to the said Monks.

Within the precincts of this Lordship, was the same Wigan, of whom I have spoke in Willoughby, enfeoff'd by K. H. 2. with 8. yard land; whose son Kaph bestowed upon these Monks of Pipwell 7. yard land and a half thereof; giving the residue to the Church of this place: In consideration whereof, the said Monks made him partaker of all the Prayers and benefits of their Order; and covenanted to receive him to be a Monke in their Covent, or else his brother, in case either of them should be willing to live a regular life: And besides all this, gave unto him 27. marks of silver; to his mother 2. Cows with Calves; to Thurstan his brother, a Horse; and to Wigan, his other brother, xii d. Which Monks, having so large a portion, did in 11 E. 1. (inter alia) obtain a Charter of Free-warren in all their demesne lands here.

In 28 E. 1. two parts of this Mannour were settled by the before specified John Dunheved upon himself and Enstachia his wife for their lives; the remainder to Stephen their son. Which John in 29. E. 1. (with divers other persons of note) had summons to attend the K. with Horse and Armes, at Warwick upon Twede, on the feast day of the Nativity of S. Jo. Bapt. to march against the Scots. To this John succeeded John his younger son (Stephen being dead as it seems;) who in 11 E. 2. entered into Covenants with Sir John Peche Kt. (Lord of Hampton in Arden) to prosecute suit at the costs & charges of the said Sir John, touching this and other Mannours, as his right by inheritance, against whomsoever should lay claim thereto: and, having cleared his title, to enfeoff the said Sir John Peche of them, to the use of him the said Sir John and his heirs. In consideration whereof, the same Sir Jo. covenanted to find & provide for the said Jo. Dunheved, during his life, a Robe of the same suite, that he gave his Esquiers; and in time of peace to furnish him with a Horse & a Groom, in such sort as he allowed to the rest of his servants of that rank; but in War with two Horses and Grooms, and one Horse armed in like fashion as he did to others; paying to him the said John x li. per annum quarterly, at Hampton in Arden before specified. Which Agreement bears date the Sunday after S. Luke the Evangelist, the year before mentioned.

After this, viz. in 19 E. 2. I find that Edm. de Verdon, and Agnes his wife, did by their deed, dated 16. Sept. grant to the said Sir John Peche and Alianore his wife, and the heirs of their bodies lawfully begotten, this Mannour of Dunchurch; but how Verdon came to any title therein appears not: And that in 4 E. 3. John Dunheved levied a Fine thereof to the uses of the said Sir John Peche and Alianore, and the heirs of their two bodies; and for default of such issue to Nich. Peche, son to the said Sir John, for life; but after his decease to the right heirs of the same Sir John. In whose family it continued so long as the male line lasted; and then, by Margaret, one of the daughters and heirs to the last Sir John, came to Sir William Montfort of Colshill Knight, to whose posterity it remained till the attainder of Sir Simon Montfort in 10 H. 7. [Of which families; viz. Peche, and Montfort, I shall speak historically when I come to Hampton in Arden and Colshill in Hemlingford Hundred.]

But then cicheating to the Crown, was by King H. 7. given to Girald Earl of Wiltshire, and Eliz. S. John his wife, and to the heirs male of their bodies 25. Aug. 12 H. 7. And by another Patent dated 30. Julii 18 H. 7. confirmed; whereby also Free-warren was granted to them therein; which King H. 8. likewise ratified. By virtue of which entail it devolved to Sir James Fitz Gerald Knight, one of his sons by the said Eliz. S. John: But by attainder of the said Sir James in 28 H. 8. again reverted to the Crown; and in 32 H. 8. was granted to Sir Sir John Fitz Williams Knight and his heirs. From which Sir John, it came very suddenly to one Anthony Stringer of London: to whom I find, that King H. 8. in 35. of his reign, granted in lieu thereof, and other lands which he then had of him in exchange, the site of the Priory of S. Margaret near Parlborough in Wiltshire. After which, it staid in the Crown till Queen Mary's time; and then was passed, in 1. & 2. of her reign to Smyth and others; who, the same year, aliened it to Sir Rouland Hill, and Sir Tho. Leigh Aldermen of London. And so, being by partition betwixt the said Sir Rouland and Sir Thomas, allotted, inter alia, to the said Sir Thomas, was settled upon Sir William Leigh his younger son: which Sir William had issue Sir Francis; who in 18. Jac. obtained a speciall Patent for a Court-leet to be yearly held within this Lordship. From whom it is descended to Francis Lord Dunsmore, his son and heir, now living, An. scil. 1640.

That which the Monks of Pipwell had here, came in time also to have the reputation of a Mannour: and in 3. & 4. Ph. & Mar. was granted out of the Crown to the said Sir Rouland Hill, and Sir Thomas Leigh, and their heirs; and so upon the same partition being assigned to Sir Tho. Leigh is enjoyed by the Lord Dunsmore as above said.

The Church (dedicated to S. Peter) being given to the Monks of Pipwell, as I have already shewed, was appropriated to that Monastery by Ric. Peche B. of Covent in H. 2. time; and the Vicaridge endowed by Alex. Savensby, his successor, an. 1229. 12 H. 3. at which time there was x li. per ann. reserved to be payd out of the fruits of the Rectory to the Cathedral of Wich for ever. In an. 1291. 19 E. 1. it was valued at xv. marks per an. over & above the xv. marks yearly Pension payable to the Dean, and Chapter of Wichfeld & the Vicaridge at lx s. But in 26 H. 8. at xiv li. xxii d. over & above viii s. yearly allowed for Procurations and Synodals.

Causton.

Northwest of Dunchurch lieth Causton; which in the Conq. days, one Ulf held of Turchil de Warmie, being then certified to contain 1. hide, valued at xii s. but before the Norman invasion Edvinus posselt it. After this, till K. Steph. time I do find no more mention thereof; but then doth it appear, that Ingebramus Clement (spoke of in Dunchurch) was owner of it; himself or his father having been enfeoffed thereof (doublets) by Siward de Arden, son to the said Turchil: for by his grant of it to the Monks of Pipwell, he mentions Henry de Arden, son to the said Siward, to be his immediat Lord, of whom he held it. Which Henry, with Oliva his wife, of whose dowrie it was, confirm'd the donation; in consideration whereof, the Monks gave unto her a Palfrey and a Cow: and being posselt of so large a proportion in this village, soon after obtained it from one Turchil de Causton, whom Ingebram Clement had formerly enfeoffed all his interest therein; Will. Clement, son to the same Ingebram, confirming the grant in the presence of Ric. de Luci, and other the Justices Itinerant at Portsmouth, the same year that K. H. 2. came into England after his son's Coronation, and summons given concerning his expedition into Ireland; (viz. 17. H. 2.)

Of which Turchil de Causton, and Wimare his wife, I find, that they gave the lands, before mentioned, to the said Monastery, cum corporibus suis: whereupon the Monks were to find them all necessaryes during their lives, and afford them buriall in their Church-yard at Pipwell, when they should dye; with performance of the like solemnity as for a Monk of their Covent. Many, and frequent have been of ancient time such grants of lands by particular persons, cum corporibus, as the expression is: some whereof having this added, in Ecclesia, sive in Cimiterio ejusdem Monasterii sepeliri; others not: And therefore it may seem, that divers, who gave their bodies in this sort, did devote themselves during their lives to the service of God in attendance upon the Monks, as we see the Lay-brothers in forrein Monasteries now do. Which puts me in mind of a singular instance of this kind; whereby it appears, that the person so disposed, did with certain Ceremonies give livery and seisin, after a sort, of himself; for the rarity of which example, I have here transcribed a grant wherein the formality thereof is contained.

De Ingebaldo servo:

*S*imus omnes, & fideliter credimus, quod quisquis aliquid de rebus suis exterioribus devota Deo mente donaverit, mercedis apud ipsum retributione, pro certo, gaudebit. Quanto magis sperare debemus imo firmiter tenere, illum potius recompensatione mercedis Dei bonitate donandum, qui non solum res transitorias, sed etiam seipsum eidem Domino Deo perseveranter mancipaverit servitutum. Quod ego Ingebaldo diligenter considerans, cum quidem naturalem secundum seculum a progenitoribus habeo libertatem, voluntate propria me in servum trado Domino Deo, & loco in nomine & honore S. Trinitatis; id est ejusdem unius & summi Dei apud Vindocinum constructo. Qua vero istud occasione conceperim cunctis fidelibus volo manifestari ad gloriam Dei, & habendam erga eundem locum reverentiam omnibus Christianis venerabiliorum. Contigit mihi egritudinem corporis incurrere adeo grave, ut desperatus spem recuperanda salutis prorsus perdiderim. Vixi igitur, si me Deus convalescere de infirmitate ipsa donaret, quod me illi in servum traderem traderem apud prefati Vendocini monasterium, sancto ipsius nomini consecratum. Quod ego molestia corporis urgente distulisti promiseram, hoc factus sospes & incolumis libenter exsolvo. Neque enim bonitati illius esse ingratus debui, qui me de mortis confusio benignitate misericordissima liberavit. Dono etiam mecum eidem venerabili loco universa qua possessionis mea sunt hodie, vel esse in tota vita mea jussu poterunt, qua dare legaliter & possum & debeo. In cuius facti memoriam etiam quatuor denarios de caputagio meo, sicut mos secularis est talibus facere, super Altare dominicum predicti loci gravanter imponens, funem quoque signi collo meo devotè circumplicans. The next thing that in order of time I find observable in relation to this place, is, that in the year 1266. 51 H. 3. all the chief men in Thurlaston joyned together, and would have had Common of pasture by force on Caulton-heath. At which time Gerard de Lega was Abbot of Pipwell, and advising with good Council (as the Register of that House saith) stood against the whole Town of Thurlaston like a wall; and by a chargeable suit in an Affize of Novel-disseisin before the Judges at Warwick, obtained the upper hand, on the Feast-day of S. Malachie the B. the year abovesaid. In those dayes there was at Caulton 2 large Ovens, wherein were baked weekly xvi quarters of Corn, for coarser bread; and vi quarters of the better sort, for the Monks and Converts, with their servants, in their several Granges of Dunchurch, Thurlaston, Rokeby, Lalleford, Peubold, and Whitminster, in this County; as also of Asby, Wintwisk, and Eltingdon in Northampton.

In 11 E. 1. the Monks of Pipwell had Free-warren granted to them in their demesne-lands here. in which Ks. time it hapning that the Prior of Birby impleading them for the Grange of Caulton (for so it was called) the Attorney for the Monks of Birby so subtilly managed the suit, that they of Pipwell were foyled therein; which occasioned much sadness amongst them: But at that time Reg. de Seytone being chief Justice of the Common Pleas, after Judgement given, discerning the fraud of the adverse part, went to the K. taking with him the Abbot of Pipwell and Prior of Birby. and manifested the whole business unto him: whereupon the K. made a final determination therein; ordering, that the Monks of Pipwell should enjoy the said Grange, paying to them of Birby CC marks. For which good service they concluded to keep his Anniversary for ever in their Monastery on the xi Cal. of May. But after this, viz. in 3 E. 2. the Grange here at Caulton (by an unhappy accident of a Candle carelessly stuck upon a wall) was almost totally consumed with fire.

This Village hath been long decayed, as it seems: for our Countryman Rous, making mention thereof, sayes, that there being nothing but a Grange remaining, the place was become a den of thieves and manslaughterers, by whom the road from Cobentre towards Dunchurch growing much infested, exposed all Travellers over Dunsmore-heath to much peril; for which he doth not a little blame the Monks, as minding more their own particular benefit, by depopulation, than the publick. But by the dissolution of the Monasteries, it came to the Crown; and being granted, 15 Julii, 37 H. 8. to Tho. Boughton Gent. and his heirs (a younger son to Will. Boughton of Lawford) descended to Edw. his son and heir; who, through the countenance of Robert Earl of Lece. (a potent man in Q. Eliz. time) bore a great sway in this County; and having gotten materials, by pulling down the White-Friers Church in Cobentre, raised here the most beautifull Fabrick that then was in all these parts, William his great grandchild being the present owner thereof.

Thurlaston.

IN the Conq. time, the E. of Wellest held two hydes and a half in this Village, valued at xxxv s. and posselt by one Wlgar in Edw. the Conf. dayes. Other two hydes and a half Hubertus held of Hugh de Grentmaise II, then rated at lx s. having been the Free-hold of one Balwin before the Conquest. In the general Survey it is written Wolabeston; whence I conclude, that the name originally proceeded from some antient owner thereof in the Saxons time. But these two hydes and a half, last mentioned, continued not to the posterity of the said Hugh: for thereof did K. H. 1. enfeof one Wigan, surnamed Marecall (of whom in Willoughby I have spoke) who held it together with the rest in Willoughby, Dunchurch and Hulle, by Sergeanty, as I have elsewhere shewed. All which descended to Raph his son and heir; and from Raph to Will. his son and heir: which Will. granted it to Will. de Cantilupe; who, about the 13 of H. 3. past it away to Stephen de Segrave and his heirs, the extent whereof, being x yard land, and reputed for half the town, was held by one Kts. fee; the said Stephen, then Justiciarius Anglia, having changed the Tenure from Sergeanty to Kts. service.

Here was in this Village a great quantity of land besides, given by many particular persons to the Monks of Pipwell; amongst which one mess. with 3 yard land, Will. the son of Rob. de Thurlaveston, gave cum corpore suo & anima Deo & S. Maria de Pipwell, & in manu Roberti Abbatis obivit, as are the words of his grant; Ric. son to the same Will. with Tho. de Verdun, and John de Verdun (Lords of W Brandon) confirming the same. Which Richard was reputed Lord of the Mannour here, because he dwelt in the capital messuage that sometime belonged to Wigan le Marechal above mentioned.

Upon that land, so given to the Monks of Pipwell, was there a Grange, called the Bigging, (id est, edificium domorum) and situated on that part of the field named Stokewell-furlong. It seems that the family of Verdun (Lords of W Brandon in this County) had antiently a Kts. fee here, held of the Earls of Warwick; which I suppose might be part of what Lescelina, daughter to Geffrey de Clinton, brought in marriage to Norman de Verdun, as by my discourse in W Brandon may be gathered: but in 20 H. 3. Will. le Francis held it; and in 36 H. 3. John de Thurlairston of Roes de Verdon. And afterwards Sim. fil. Margerie, and John Darset. From which John descended Will. Dorset, alias Dasset, as 'tis like; who in 25 H. 8. pass'd it to Edm. Cave Esq; by which means it devolved to Edm. Boughton, late of Canston Esq; son of Thomas, by Margaret daughter and heir to the said Edward.

Touching this interest of the Verdons here, the Register of Pipwell sayes, that they had it by means of some that dwelt in the Capital Messuage, or Mannour-House, that belonged to Wigan Marrescall above mentioned; but by no good right, as is thereby insinuated. Which expression of the Monks I conceive to have been partial; for I find them complain of their being summoned to do service at the Court of Brandon for their lands in this place; to be freed whereof, they obtained several Charters from the successive Lords of that Mannour. In 11 E. 1. the Monks of Pipwell had a Charter of Free-warren in all their demesne lands here. Which lands, after the dissolution of that Monastery, being by Q. M. granted to Sir Rouland Hill and Sir Tho. Leigh, were in like sort as the Mannour of Dunchurch (whereof I have already spoke) by partition allotted to the said Sir Thomas, and settled upon Sir Will. his youngest son; whose grandchild, Fr. Lord Dunsmore, now, scil. ann. 1640. enjoys them.

Touching the Mannour which Segrave had here, it continued in that family as long as the male line lasted; and at last by Eliz. the daughter and heir to John Lord Segrave, came to Tho. Moubray D. of Norfolk as by the descent in Caludon may be discerned. Whole son, John Moubray D. of Norfolk in 10 H. 6. was certified to hold 9 mess. and 9 yard land in this Village, by the service of half a Kes. fee; but without mention that he was Lord of the Mannour. Yet by the Inquisition taken the year following after his death, it is so called; and likewise in all Inq. afterwards; and so devolved to the family of Berkley, through Isibell, one of the daughters and co-heirs to John D. of Norfolk in such sort as Caludon did; Thom. Lord Berkley dying seized thereof in 26 H. 8. leaving Henry his son and heir then within age.

Here hath anciently been a Chapel dedicated to S. Edmund, in which Rob. de Stretton B. of Cob. and Wich. at the request of Will. de Petton gave licence to the Inhabitants, bearing date Kal. Dec. ann. 1360. 34 E. 3. that they should have divine service for the space of two years therein: But about the beginning of Q. Eliz. time it was pulled down by the Lord Berkley's Officers.

Tofte.

This is a member of Dunchurch, and had its name originally from some decayed dwelling house: for the word Toft signifieth a place where a Messuage hath stood, as our Lawyers well know: and came to Montfort by descent from Peche, as did Dunchurch; but after Montfort's attainder was afo granted to the E. of Gloucester therewith. Since which time, for ought I have seen to the contrary, it hath attended the possession of that Mannour.

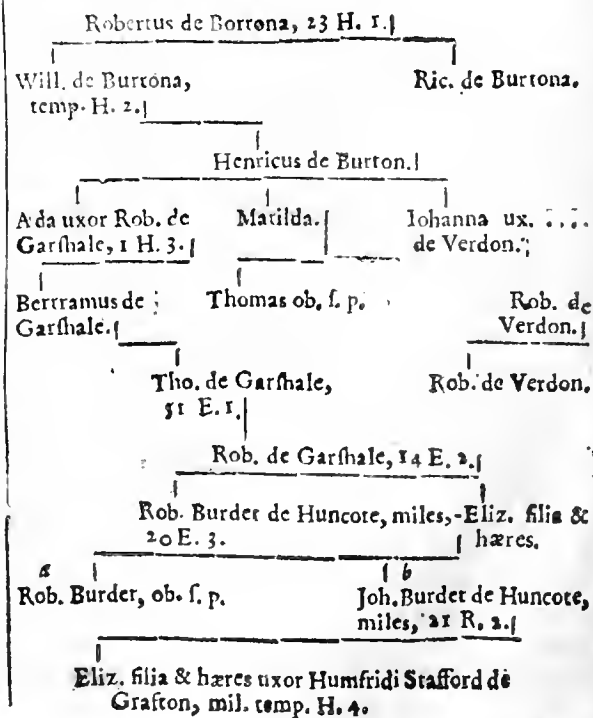

But there is also another Mannour (at least in reputation) within the compass of this small Village, whereof John Burghon of Burghon in

Com. Staff. Gent. was posselt in E. 4. time; by whom, 14 Oct. 4 E. 4. it became convey'd to Humfrey Swinnarton Gent. and John Horeway Priest: which Humfrey and John, 8 Apr. 12 E. 4. settled it upon Humfrey Hill of Blaze, in the same County of Staff. and Joan his wife, daughter of the said H. Swinnarton, and the heirs of their two bodies: From whom descended (as it seems) Humfrey Hill of Buntingdale in Com. Salop. who by his Deed dated 8 Febr. 18 H. 8. granted it to John Lettely of Dunchurch, Yeoman. To which John succeeded John Lytle of Thurlaston, Gent. who, 28 Junii, 5 Eliz. sold it to John Fawkes of this place, whose grandchild, John, still enjoys it.

Bourton super Dunsmore.

Following the Northern bank of Leame, I next come to Bourton super Dunsmore, which one Ingenulfus held of the E. of Wessex in the Conq. time, it being then certified to contain 5 hydes, valued at 1xx s. But before the Norman invasion Leuninus posselt it.

Within this parish is also Dracote, anciently a member of Bourton, and in Record so intermix'd therewith, that for a long time the particular owners of each are not easily to be distinguish'd. But till H. 3. time I have not seen any thing more directly relating to this place: howbeit, by what I discern of the then possessors thereof, viz. Garshale and Verdon, who descended from the daughters and heirs of Henry de Burton, I shall conclude, that the Ancestors of the same Henry, being Lords of this Mannour, and having their chief residence here, assumed their surname from hence: And the rather do I incline to this opinion, in regard I find by very good authority, that the same family of Burton were also Lords of Abbestoke in Leicestersh. which, with this, descended to Garshale and Verdon by the said co-heirs; and therefore I have here inserted so much of the line of Burton, whereunto those of Garshale and Verdon are knit; as also that of Burder, who married Garshale's heir; all which Families were undoubtedly owners of this and Dracote.

This Mannour, being held of the Verdons, Lords of Bandon (as I shall shew anon) was part of that which Lescelina, daughter to Geffrey de Clinton, brought to her husband Norman de Verdon, as I guess; and granted by them to Rob. de Bortone and his heirs by the service of one Kts. fee: for from the posterity of the said Norman and Lescelina did the descendants of Burton hold it. Of which family all that I find memorable, is, first, that Rob. de Bortone was witness to the Charter of foundation of the Collegiat-Church in Warwick, made by Rog. E. of Warwick, 23 H. 1. As also, that he gave 5 xx acres of land lying in this town to the Nuns of Worshale. Next, that Ric. de Burton (who I conceive was son to that Robert) gave the Village of Hodenhall to the Monastery of Sun-Caton. And lastly, that Will. de Borthun bestowed Blakedown-mill upon the Monks of Combe, by the allowance of Bertram de Verdon, of whom he held it.

But having done with the line of Burton, I come now to that of Garshale; whereof Rob. husband to Ada, one of the co-heirs to Henry de Burton, was the first that had to do here; who taking part with the rebellious Barons against K. John, had his lands seized; but returning to obedience in 1 H. 3. enjoyed them again. Of which Rob. de Garshale it was certified in 20 H. 3. that he, with Philip de Esseby, held Burton super Duns-moys of the E. of Warwick by a Kts. fee. Howbeit in 36 H. 3. it appears, that they held it immediately of Roes de Verdon (of whom I have made mention in Bandon) and that she held it over of the E. of Warwick by the said Kts. fee: But how Philip de Esseby his title grew, I am not yet satisfied, and therefore will leave it to be further enquired after; for he was a man of much note in this County, as appears by his being so often in Commission for taking "Affizes of Novel-disseisin, and" Goal-delivery at Warwick.

To which Rob. de Garshale succeeded Bertram de Garshale, of whom I meet with nothing memorable: but Thomas the son of Bertram had divers eminent employments. In 15 E. 1. I find, that he was one of the Kts. which were assigned in this Shire for taking care that the Articles, contained in the Statute of Winchester for conservation of the peace, should be observed. And in 22 E. 1. one of the Commissioners appointed for levying and gathering a Tenth in this County, granted to the K. in Parl. for support of his Wars. In 34 E. 1. for levying and collecting a xxxth and xxth part. In 1 E. 2. for a xxth and xvth. and in 3 E. 2. for a xxvth. granted also to the K. in those several Parliaments. And bore for his Arms quarterly Argent and Azure, upon a bend gules, 3 flower de lices Or, as by his Seal and other authorities appeareth.

To him succeeded Rob. de Garshale, who entailed this Mannour, with the advowion of the Church, upon the heirs of his body by Amicia his wife; and dyed, leaving Eliz. his daughter and heir, married to Sir Rob. Burdet of Huncote in Leicestersh. (a younger son to Rob. Burdet of Seckinton and Arrolo in this County) whose posterity, descended from her, continued Lords thereof in the male line, till H. 4. time, that the heir general, Eliz. marrying to Sir Humfry Stafford of Staff-ton Kt. brought it to that family; in which it rested till the attainder of Humfry Stafford Esq; 1 H. 7. whereof, with what else I have found memorable, I purpose to speak in Leamington-Ha-stang. And being thus come to the Crown, it was given by the K. inter alia, to Sir Edw. Poynings Kt. and to the heirs male of his body. But whether the same Sir Edw. dyed without issue, or was compounded with, I cannot directly affirm: for I find, that after the restoration of Humfry Stafford, son and heir to the said Humfry, in 6 H. 8. that family of Stafford were again posselt thereof; and so continued till John Shukburgh of Birdingbury (one of the six Clerks in Chancery) purchased it from Sir Humfry Stafford of Blatherwik, about the latter end of Q. Eliz. reign, whose great grandchild, Thomas Shukburgh, still enjoys it.

In an. 1291. 19 E. 1. the Rectory was valued a, xii marks; but in 26 H. 8. at xix l. xvii s. ii d. over and above ix s. vi d. allowed for Procurations and Synodals.

Draycote.

OF this place I have not seen any mention at all in Record, till 5 Joh. that John de Draicote levied a Fine of a yard land lying therein, unto Ric. Corbicum; and touching the denomination thereof, shall onely deliver my conjecture; which is, that it had its original from one

Drogo, heretofore a name in use, but commonly called Dru; and that thence, by corrupt pronunciation, it came to be written Dznicote.

It should seem, that upon partition of that inheritance betwixt Garshale and Verdon (whereof in Bourton I have spoke) Verdon had this Lordship, and resided here: I shall therefore proceed with what I have found historical, relating to that family, beginning with Robert, grandchild to Joan, one of the daughters and co-heirs to Henry de Burton. This Rob. de Verdon was in Commission for the Goal-delivery at Warwick in 1, 2, 3, and 6 E. 1. In 7. Sheriff of Warwicksh. and Leicestersh. and in 8, 9, 11, 12, and 14 E. 1. again in Commission for the like Goal-delivery. So also in 25 E. 1. for assailing the Nones of all moveable goods then given to the K. in Parl. upon his confirmation of the great Charter, and Charter of the Forrest.

In 29. summoned, & with divers other persons of great quality, to attend the K. at Warwick upon Twede on the Feast-day of the Nativ. of S. John Bapt. furnish'd with Horse and Arms, to march against the Scots. In 1 E. 2. he was one of the two, that were joyn'd in Commission with the Sheriff of this County, for conservation of the peace; and bore for his Arms Azure a plain cross Or, frettè gules. To him succeeded John de Verdon his son, who, with Rob. Burdet, in 20 E. 3. answered for half a Kts. fee in Bourton and this place, held of the heirs of Theob. de Verdon. Which John was one of the Kts. for this Shire in Parl. in 29. and 37^m E. 3. And in 45 E. 3. in Commission with others, for assailing the Subsidy of 1061 l. 7 s. within this County. In 43 E. 3. upon the purchase of Bandon by Sir John Dines, he made attournment to him for this and Dznicote, as held thereof; and left issue Nicholas, who had his residence here, and sold this Lordship (as I believe) to Sir Will. Bagot of Baginton: For amongst other the lands of the said Sir W. Bagot, which were in the hands of the Bishop of S. Davids, and the rest of his Feoffees; and wherof they the said Feoffees released their interest to the said Sir W. in 5 H. 4. this is mentioned.

After the death of which Sir Will. Isbell his daughter and heir, with her husband Tho. Stafford Esq; aliened it to John of Gant, D. of Lanc. whereby it descended to Henry of Bullenbroke his son and heir, afterwards K. of England by the name of Henry 4. who by his Letters P. bearing date 23. Julii, 13 of his reign, gave it to the Dean and Chapter of the Collegiat Church in Leic. called Newwoke, and their successors for ever, reserving the rent of x marks to be yearly paid by them out of the same to the Chantry-Priests in that Church, to celebrate divine service for the good estate of him the said K. and for the health of the souls of his father John D. of Lanc. before mentioned, and Constance his mother, whose body lay interred there. Unto which Col. Church it continued till its dissolution; but then d'd K. E. 6. by his Letters P. dated 24. Apr. 3 of his reign, pass it (inter alia) unto Tho. Hunskins, alias Fisher, of Warw. and his heirs; who by his Deed of bargain and sale, dated 27 Julii, 3 E. 6. granted it to one John Smyth, then Fermour thereof. Which John dyed seized of it, 20. Martii, 7 E. 6. leaving Alice, Agnes, and Margerie his daughters and heirs. Of these, Agnes was married to Ric. Mathew, but dyed without issue; Margerie to Tho. Worcester, and Alice to Tho. Flamell; which T. Worcester and Margerie had issue Will. who purchased the other half from Flamell; so that T. Worcester, son and heir to the said Will. is now posselt of the whole.

Frankton.

THE next parish is Frankton; wherein I find, that Rog. E. of Shrewsbury (of whom I have spoke in Wolston) held in the Conq. time four hydes, excepting one virgat, valued at 1x s. which was the Free-hold of one Uluinus in Edw. the Conf. time; and the E. of Spellent one hyde, rated at xx s. which Chentwin posselt before the Norman invasion: But in Domesday-book it is written Franchetone, the k being not then used by the Norman Clerks. How to reconcile this with what I find by other Records, viz. that it was, inter alia, given by E. Loefrike to the Priory of Cobentre at his foundation thereof (1 Edw. Conf.) and that it continued to that Monastery even till its dissolution, being reputed de Baronis Prioris de Cob. as the Record in 9 E. 2. manifesteth, I do not well know.

That the advouson of the Church, and some lands in Frankton, were in other hands, is apparent: but these were of so small a proportion, that I cannot conceive they extended to more than what the E. of Spellent had; and therefore taking the liberty to conjecture, I shall by the help of strong circumstances conclude, that what Rog. E. of Shrewsbury had here at that time, he enjoyed by intrusion upon the right of the Monks (which was no strange act amongst those bold persons, who had such large shares in this Kingdom upon the Conquest thereof) and that the Church was founded and endowed out of the E. of Spellent's part: of the probability wherof, I shall make some further observation anon.

Touching the Priors Mannour, I find, that K. H. 3. granted to the Monks of Cob. Free-warren in all their demesn lands here, 30 Julii, 41 H. 3. and that Rog. Meyland, B. of Cob. and Lich. in an. 1260. (44 H. 3.) gave them immunity from payment of any tythes out of all their demesn lands lying therein. Other priviledges the said Monastery had here, as appeareth by the Quo Varr. Roll of 13 E. 1. whereunto I refer my Reader for satisfaction; as I also do to the Leiger-book of that House, f. 217. a. and 220 a. for the extent, with the metes and bounds thereof. After the dissolution of the Monasteries, it continued in the Crown till 32 Eliz. and then was granted to Tho. Thornton and Tho. Woodcock, and their heirs, who sold it to John Temple: which John gave it unto John Temple, one of his younger sons, whose son and heir Thomas, now enjoys it.

I now come to the other part, which the E. of Spellent held, with the advouson of the Church. This, as most of that Earls lands did, came to Hen. de Neuburgh, the first E. of Warw. after the Conquest, or to Rog. his son. For in 12 H. 2. Will. E. of Warw. certifies, that Rob. de Frankton held one Kts. fee of him de veteri feoffamento: whereby 'tis clear, that the ancestor of the said Rob. was enfeofft thereof, temp. H. 1. which Kts. fee was held of the succeeding Earls by Will. de Frankton in 20 H. 3. From whom descended Raph de Frankton, who past this Mannour to Rog. de Elinhale, and he to Raph de Okeover, and Alice his wife, sister to the said Rog. Which Raph, in 4 E. 2. alien'd to John le Palmers of Frankton and his heirs the said advouson of the Church, with one mess. 2 yard land, 3 acres of meadow, and 3 s. 1 d. rent. To whom succeeded succeeded Will. le Palmer; which Will. in 20 E. 3. with Henry de Hinton, was certified to hold half a Kts. fee here of the heirs of Rob. Champayn, and he of Raph Bassett, and he of Will. le Boteler of Oberstep, and he of the said E. of Warw. So that it appears, that Boteler was originally enfeoffed thereof by the E. of Spellent, or the E. of Warw. (who posselt so much of Spellent's lands) and granted it to Bassett, and he to Champayne, of whom Palmer had it. In whose male line it continued till the beginning of H. 6. time and then came to John Hereward by Kath. the daughter and heir of Tho. Palmer, as the Institutions to the Rectory manifest.

But the next possessor thereof, that I find, was Ric. Duke of Beulenton-Purcell, in Com. Gent. who lived in the beginning of H. 8. time; whose grandchild, John Duke, dyed seized of it in 7 Eliz. leaving Ric. his son and heir 2 years old. Since which, one Tho. Leeson, and after him Edw. Yorke, and George his son, have been owners of it; and so also John Shugborough Esq.; by the marriage of Mr Yorke's daughter, as I have heard.

In an. 1291. 19 E. 1. the Church was valued at 4 marks and a half: but in 26 H. 8. at Cxii s. over and above viii s. allowed for Procurations and Synodals, and iii l. yearly paid to the Priory of Cobentre for the use of the Sacrist.

Wapenbury.

Next below, on the same side of Leame, stands Wapenbury, one of the Lordships in this Shire, given by K. Will. the Conq. unto Geffrey Wires (of whom I have spoke in Donkshthby.) Which Geffrey, being a good Benefactor to the Monks of S. Nicholas at Angiers in France, bestowed on them, inter alia, the greatest part of the tythes in this Village. By the Conq. Survey 'tis certified, that this place contained 5 hydes; and that there was then a Mill rated at vi s. viii d. with woods of half a mile in length, and 2 furlongs broad, all being then valued at Cx s. and in the possession of the said Geffrey: but there it is written Wapeberie, the n omitted; and doubtless originally so called from the situation thereof, berie coming from beoþg the Saxon word, which signifieth a little Hill, or rising ground.

That Wires his lands came to Nigel d'Albanie, (progenitor to the family of Mubray) I have elsewhere shewed; and that the same Nigellus did enfeoff him that first assumed this place for his surname, is not to be doubted: For it appears, that Tho. de Wapenbury, in 12 H. 2. held 5 Kts. fees of Rog. de Moubray, son to the said Nigell, de veteri feoffamento. To which Tho. succeeded Ric. de Wapenbury, who married Julian, one of the 3 sisters and co-heirs to Raph Strange of Knockin in Shropsh. In 10 Job. there was a Fine levied betwixt Geffr. Fitz-piers E. of Essex, and this Richard, whereby the said Ric. did covenant, that he would make no alienation of his lands or woods to any Jew or other person whatsoever, to the disheriting or prejudice of Thomas his son and heir; provided, that he might have liberty to take reasonable estovers for himself, or to give his friends out of his woods in this place. And in 11 Job. the Shiriff accounted xxx l. due from the said Ric. to discharge part of the Fine which W. de Molbray, his superiour Lord, made to the K. concerning his inheritance, whereof Will. de Scusevill had impleaded him.

This last mentioned Thomas was certified to hold 2 Kts. fees and a half, of Nigel de Moubray, whereof one here at Wapenbury: But taking part with the Barons against K. John, had his lands seized, which, upon his return to obedience in 1. H. 3. were again restored to him. And afterwards, viz. in 9 H. 3. was with the Shiriff, the Lord Basset of Drayton, and some other eminent persons appointed to conduct the xv. gathered for the Ks. use in this County and Leicestersh. As also all that the Bishops of Linc. Worcester, and Cob. had collected of that kind within their several Dioceses; and to pay in the same moneys at Donkshampton in the quinzime of the holy Trinity. He had issue John, and 3 daughters: which John dying childless, left his sisters his heirs. But the line of this family and their descendants I have plac'd in Peulbold-Rovell, antiently a member of this Lordship, to the end my Reader may the better understand the succession of those, who were Lords of that, as well as this Mannour.

heirs, this Mannour came to Wassinglegh: For by h xv. Hill. a Fine leyed ^b 7 E. 2. between Tho. de Wassinglegh, and Guy the son of Will. le Bretoun, the said Thomas entailed it upon Reg. de Wassinglegh and his heirs by Maud then his wife, and for want of such issue, to his own right heirs. Which Thomas bore for his Arms ⁱ a Cheveron betwixt 3 pellets. But of Wassinglegh's line I have not seen any more after this Thomas; so that 'tis very like he dyed without issue, and that his interest here came to Beynvill; For by the Inquis. ^k taken after the death of Lora the widow of Ric. Beynvill, 24 E. 3. it was certified, that she held joyntly with the said Ric. her husband, inter alia, the capital messuage of Wapenbury, with divers lands and houses there, some whereof lay common, by reason that the tenants were dead of the plague: And that Richard, (who by most other ^l Records is called Robert) son and heir of Ric. and Lora) was her coſin and next heir, and then 5 years old.

To which last mentioned Ric. succeeded Rob. his son, who in 49 E. 3. entailed ^m the third part of this Mannour upon one Rob. Fitz-Robert, and Alice his wife, and the heirs of their two bodies; and for default of such issue, to revert to the said Rob. Beynvill and his heirs. But after that time I have seen nothing further of the Beynvill's interest here, nor of any others, till 7 H. 5. that Tho. Stafford wrote ⁿ himself of this place: which Tho. married Isabell the onely daughter and heir to Sir Will. Bagot (as in Baginton I have shewed) and perhaps had it in her right: But in ^o 10 H. 6. I find, that Raph Bellers of . . . in Com. Heic. with Ric. Stafford, son and heir to the said Thomas, were joynt Lords thereof: howbeit, after this I cannot discern that the descendants of the said Ric. had more to do here; and therefore do conceive that the said Raph Bellers obtain'd his whole interest. Which Raph, in 16 H. 6. past ^p his title therein unto Nich. Metley Esq; and others, but to the use of the same Nich. and his heirs, as may seem by his the said Nich. his Testament.

To whom succeeded in the possession thereof, John Hagford of Emscote Esq; in right of Margaret his wife (daughter to the said Nich. as I guess.) Which John leaving 3 daughters and heirs, as in Wolston and Emscote is shewed, this Mannour came by partition, as 'tis like, unto Joh. Cotes of Honingham Esq; in right of Alice his mother, one of the said 3 daughters; and so with Wolston (by exchange for other lands to Edw. Belknap Esq; afterwards Kt.) For plain fit is, that Sir Anth. Cooke of Stodghall in Essex Kt. Tho. Wotton, and Leonard Dannes Esq; in 6 Eliz. enjoy'd it, as his coſins and heirs: And that the said Sir Anthony, obtaining ^q from those coparceners their total right therein, dyed seized thereof: As also, that Anth. Cooke Esq; son of Richard, son to the said Sir Anth. by his Deed dated 26 Martii, 26 Eliz. alien'd ^r it to Ric. Fyns of Broughton in Com. Dron. Esq; which Ric. about 2 years after, sold ^s it to Tho. Morgan Esq; from whom it is devolved to Thom. Morgan Esq; now (scil. ann. 1640.) of Wolston subr. Wethele, in such part as that Lp. of Wolston is.

That the greatest part of the tythes here were given to the Monks of S. Nich. at Anglers by G. Wirce in the Conq. time, I have already shewed: as also in Wonskirtby, that the Monks of that place had all that belonged to the said Monastery of Anglers, anciently transmitted to them, theirs being a Cell to that forreign House. This Church therefore (dedicated to S. Iohn Bapt.) being thus in the power of those Monks, they obtained a confirmation ^x thereof from G. Muschamp B. of Cob. in K. Iohn's time; who thenceforth allowed ^y them xx s. yearly Pension out of it, and a Stone of Wax.

In an. 1291. 19 E. 1. being valued at xv marks, it was, upon the foundation of that Monastery of Carthusians in the Isle of Arholme (concerning which I have spoke in Wonskirtby) inter alia, granted ^a thereto: but the Prior and Covent of that House, intending to part with it, within two years after obtained license ^b to pass it to the Canons of Sulby in Northamptonsh. Yet I perceive that they did not absolutely grant it away till ^c 32 H. 6. and then (sc. 13 Oct.) they assured to the Pr. and Covent of Sulby aforesaid, the Pension of xx s. issuing out of it, with 8 pound of Wax yearly due to the said Carthusians, and the perpetual patronage of the Rectory, which was appropriated ^d to those Canons by Regin. Bowlers, B. of Cob. and Lich. 30 Aug. an. 1454. 32 H. 6. there being thereupon reserved ^e vi s. viii d. Pension to the B. and his successors, and ii s. to the Arch-Deacon of Cob. to be yearly paid at the Feast of All Saints; as also iii s. iii d. per an. to the poor of this parish for ever. In 26 H. 8. the Vicaridge was valued at viii l. per ann. being a stipend as it seems in money onely, paid to the Incumbent by the Canons of Sulby.

Eathorpe.

This is a little Village lying within the parish of Wapenbury, and hath had its name from the situation thereof near the River; Ea in our old English signifying water, and thorpe a village or hamlet. As it is in that parish, so hath it been ever a member thereof, and posselt by the Lords of that Mannour; howbeit till H. 6. time I have not seen any mention of it in Record: but then (as in Wapenbury I have shewed) Ric. Stafford Esq; and Raph Bellers were certified to be owners thereof. Since which, it hath attended the possession of that Lordship.

Weston subtus Wethele.

Further yet on the North side of Leame stands Weston, which having the name from its situation, is distinguished from the other towns in this County by the addition of subt. Wethele, the woods lying Northwards of it bearing the name of Wethele-woods. In 8 the Conq. time the E. of Wellest was posselt of 3 hydes here, excepting the third part of one virgate, the woods belonging thereto containing 3 furlongs in length, and one in bredth; all which one Robert did at that time hold of the said Earl, being valued at 50 s. But before the Norman invasion it was the Free-hold of Wlf. Which Robert held here also one yard land and a half of Turchil de Warwick, whereof in Edw. the Conf. time Uluni (whom I suppose to be the same Wlf above mentioned) was posselt.

Here likewise had Will. fl. Corbucion 2 yard land and a half, then valued at 2 s. and held by one Johais. But besides what he had, did this Rob. also hold Wapton of the said Earl; and having his residence there, assumed it for his surname, his posterity for a long time after continuing owners thereof. In 10 H. 2. this Mannour, with Wapton, then posselt by Adam de Napton, answered 22 l. to the K. imposed upon him, as it seems, for adhering to the Rebels. Which two Mannours being originally in the Earl of Wellest, as aforesaid, were in 10 H. 3. certified to be held by the service of 2 Kts. fees of the Earl of Winchester (in respect that that part of the Honour of Leicester came by marriage of one of the heirs female unto Quincy.)

Of these Naptons divers bore the name of Adam; whereof, in H. 3. time, was Sir Adam de Napton Kt. who entailed this Mannour upon his grand-child Adam, and the heirs of his body. Which Adam, in 7 E. 1. was certified to hold it of the Earl of Wogham (one of the heirs to the said E. of Winchester) by the service of one Kts. fee; having at the same time a Water-mill, and 3 yard land and a half in demesne, with as much in the hands of tenants, who held by servile tenure: As also 2 Free-holders holding 2 Cottages; and eight more, occupying 3 yard land and 3 quarters: All which did suit twice a year to the Court for the Honour of Winchester. At that time it was also certified, that one Sylvester de Honygham held another Mannour here in Weston of Henry de Beresford; and that the said Henry held the same of John de Hastings, that being it which Corbucion had in the Conq. time. Which Sylvester had here 3 servants holding one yard land and a quarter, and 2 Free-holders occupying the like proportion.

Touching that part which Turchil de Warwick had in the Conq. time, it was likewise in 7 E. 1. held by John de Wileweby of Rob. de Cumpston, and by him of Sim. Bassett, and by him of the E. of Warwick (unto whose ancestors the greatest part of Turchil's lands were given) but this was no more than 1 yard land and a half, then in the possession of two Free-holders.

Of Napton's Mannour here, was that family posselt till the beginning of H. 4. time, though how long after, I am not sure: for in 1 H. 4. did John de Napton and Eliz. his wife, settle it, with Wapton, on certain Feoffees: But long it was not after, ere that Edward Metley enjoy'd it, or a great part of it: for it appears, that in 4 H. 4. the said Edward and Margaret his wife, in right of her the said Margaret, recovered seisin of 7 messuages, 3 tofts, ten yard land, and 74 s. 9 d. rent, lying here and in Wapton: yet whether it divolved from the said Edw. to Nich. Metley (of whom I have spoke in Wapenbury) and so to Sir Edw. Belknap, as that Lordship did, I make a question: For I find, that in 10 H. 6. John de Weston, Sergeant at Law, had it: And that in 33 H. 6. Richard Knightley recovered it against John Wode: As also, that in 5 H. 7. Sir Edw. Cornwall Kt. dyed seized thereof, leaving Thomas his son and heir 16 years of age. Howbeit, about the beginning of H. 8. time, if not before, did the said

Sir

Sir Edw. Belknap posses it. Which Sir Edw. (of whom in Dasset I have historically spoke) being a man of great note, had his residence here, and new built the Mannour-house, one of the fairest structures of Timber that I have seen, on several parts whereof his Arms are cut in wood, quartering the Coats of Sudley, Mountfort, and Botel. And by his last Will, and Testament, dated 12 H. 8. bequeathed it to Dame Alice his wife for term of her life: After which it came to John Shelley Esq; cousin and heir to the said Sir Edw. by Alice his sister. Which John dyed seized thereof, 4 E. 6.

But the next owner thereof, that I meet withall, was Sir Thomas Newnham Kt. from whom it came to the Crown, though how, I yet know not; And in 4 & 5 Ph. & M. was by the Q. granted to Sir Edw. Sanders Kt. (chief Baron of the Exchequer) and to Thomas Morgan and their heirs; which Tho. married Mary, sole daughter and heir to the said Sir Edw. but having no issue that survived, and being desirous to preserve the memory of his name, entailed it upon Bridget Morgan, the onely child of his brother Anthony, and the heirs male of her body, begotten by any bearing the surname of Morgan. Whereupon the said Bridget took to husband Anthony Morgan of Spytchell-town in Spennorthshire, by whom she had issue Thomas Morgan Esq; the present owner thereof, Ann. 1640.

The Church (dedicated to S. Michael) hath anciently belonged to the Canons of Erdbury, and been many ages since appropriated thereto, as by the presentations to the Vicaridge appears: And in 19 E. 1. was valued at viii marks and a half; and the Vicaridge at two marks: But in 26 H. 8. the said Vicaridge was rated at Cix s. (53 s. 4 d. yearly Pension being paid thereto by the Prior and Convent of Erdbury) over and above viii s. per ann. allowed for Procurations and Synodals.

On the East wall of the North Ile, is there a Monument for Sir Edward Sanders, sometimes chief Baron of the Exchequer: His portraiture, kneeling in a Scarlet Robe, is placed on the one side thereof, and the like of his Lady on the other side; but no writing thereon, other than sentences of Scripture relating to the Resurrection and Ascension of our Saviour Christ, which are represented in the carved work.

The Coats of Arms thereon are these, Sanders alone (viz. party per cheveron sable and argent, 3 Elephants heads erased and counterchang'd of the field.)

2 Sanders empaling Makeins. 3 Cave empaling Marvin. 4 Sanders empaling Cave. 5 Sanders empaling Englefield. 6 Sanders empaling Hussey.

On the same wall is a fair Tablet of Brass fixed on Marble, with this Inscription.

*Margeritæ Saunders artus sunt morte soluti, Perpetua felix mens requiete jacet.
Donec enim vixit celestia semper amabat,
Assidua venerans religione Deum.
Conjugis Edwardi casto flagravat amore, Præfuit & magna cum ratione domi.
Morbus & exhaustum corpus cum frangere cepit,
Ad dominum junctas sustulit illa manus.
Inde crucis Christi simulachrum lata poposcit,
Hoc oculis, animo, sensibus, agra notat.*

Egregiam vitam mors est praeclara secuta,
Margerix salix vita, quae morsq; fuit.*

Here Margerie Saunders lyeth whose mortal lymms are dide,

But to enjoy immortalrest her soul to Heaven is fled.

Whyles lyf did last she was a paterne of good lyfe, Devout to God, good to the poore, a chaste and per-fit wyfe.

A housewysse of great skill, setting her whole delight

In her just love and weddid make Sir Edward

And so gave up her gost to God which lyf did lend,

Who for her good, and worthily, gave her a happy end.

The corps of dame Margerie Saunders daughter of Sir Thomas Englefeld Knight; and of dame
Elizabeth his wife, on of the daughters of Sir Robert Throgmorton Knight, lyeth in this Torne; whos soule God pardon. She dyed the xi. of October, Anno Domini, 1563.

In a large Tablet of Alabaster fixed on the North wall, is this Inscription.

Here lyeth Margaret and Mary the onely daughters and heirs apparent of Thomas Morgan of Hey-ford in the County of Northampton Esquier, sonne and heire of Francis Morgan of Heyford

Cubington.

I Come next to Cubington, wherein by the Conq. Survey the Prior of Cobentre was certified to have 2 hydes, valued at xxx s. the E. of Mellent 3. rated at as much, which one Boscher then held of him; and Roger de Iuri 5. esteemed at xl s. In one place it is written Cubitone, and in the other two Cobintone; but afterwards, Cumbington; which shews, that it had its name originally from the situation of it in a low or deep hollow; for the word Cambe doth signifie as much.

That which the Prior of Cobentre had here was 2 half a Kts. fee, which in 20 H. 3. Simon de Cubinton, and in 36 H. 3. Henry de Cubinton held of that Monastery. But the substance of what the said E. of Mellent had, and which the same Boscher held of him, came to the Monks of Stoneley, either given by the heirs of the before specified Boscher, or by those whom he or they enfeoffed thereof, though the particular grants do not appear: For Henry Boscher (grandchild to the first Boscher) made a general confirmation of them in H. 3. time; the quantity being 5 carucates of land, and xxiii s. iii d. yearly Rent of Assize, as was certified in 19 E. 1.

But of that which Rog. de Iveri had, Hastings of Allesley was, as it seems, antiently enfeoffed. By one of which line, it was given to Semely, (Lord of Radford-Semely) and to S. Maure, though when, I find not: for in 7 E. 1. Will. de Semely held what he had here, by the service of half a Kts. fee, of John de Hastings, viz. 2 yard land in demesne, and 3 held by 6 servants, at the will of the Lord, paying certain yearly rent, and doing suit twice a year at the Court of the said John de Hastings at Allesley. Which W. de Semely had also six Cottagers, holding as many Cottages; and 4 Free-holders occupying 2 yard land and 3 quarters, and doing suit to his 3 weeks Court here at Cobington; as also making two appearances every year at the Court of Allesley above-said. But from Semely I cannot deduce the succession of his part in this place. That which John Hugford and Thom. Waldryve granted to the Monks of Stoneley in 13 E. 4. was certainly it; for the quantity, viz. 5 mess. 80 acres of land, 3 acres of meadow, and 4 acres of pasture, doth not only argue the same; but the tenure thereof from Sir Edw. Nevill in right of his Mannour of Allesley, antiently belonging to Hastings, doth put it out of doubt.

Of Henry de S. Maure, who had the rest of Cobington, I find, that he committed a Murder, and fled for it, whereupon K. E. 1. seized his Mannour here, but allowed to Ermengard his wife liberty to hold it for her maintenance during his royal pleasure. It should seem that the K. taking advantage of this forfeiture, gave it soon after to the Templars; for in 7 E. 1. it was certified, that they had here 3 yard land in demesne, and a certain Grove inclosed like a Park: but being willing to strengthen their title from S. Maure, in 9 E. 1. grew to an Agreement with him, viz. to pay to them the said Henry and Ermengard 4 marks per ann. during the life of her the said Ermengard; in consideration whereof, they levied a Fine of it to the use of the said Templars and their successors for ever. Which lands so possessed by them, were in 1 E. 2. seized by the K. and then yielded 25 s. rent of Assize: but were soon after transmitted to the Knights Hospitallars, and continued to them till the general dissolution, as did also that which the Monks of Cobentre and Stoneley had.

Being thus lodg'd in the Crown, the K. in 38. of his reign, granted to Edw. Watson and Henry Herdson, and their heirs, all that belong'd to the Abby of Stoneley, called then by the name of Cobington-grange. Which Edw. and Henry had licence the same year to alien it unto Ric. Fawkenor and his heirs, who sold it to one Thomas Fawkenor. Which Thomas, reserving an estate to himself for life, entailed it upon Eliz. his daughter, then the wife of George Bodyngton, and the heirs of her body, with remainder to Agnes Fermour widow, his other daughter, and the heirs of her body; but for lack of such issue, to the right heirs of the said Ric. Fawkenor; and departed this life, 10 Febr. 1 Eliz. his said daughters being then of full age.

Touching that which belong'd to the Priory of Cobentre, I find, that it was by K. E. 6. in 4 of his reign (inter alia) granted to Sir Raph Sadler Kt. then Master of the great Wardrobe, and to Lawrence Wennington Gent. and to the heirs of the said Sir Raph. As also, that the Hospitallars Mannour here was past out of the Crown by Q. Eliz. the same year to John Fisher and others.

The Church (dedicated to the Nativity of our Lady) being antiently but a Chapel, and belonging to Wotton, was therewith granted to the Canons of Kenilworth (as in Wotton I have already shewed) and in ann. 1291. 19 E. 1. valued at xii marks. Which Canons, in 5 E. 3. had Licence to appropriate the Fruits thereof to the use of that Monastery: Whereupon, scil. in 19 E. 3. ensued the endowment of the Vicaridge, which in 26 H. 8. was rated at vi l. vi s. viii d. over and above 2 s. allowed for Synodals.

Lillington.

Lower yet on the same side of Leame stands Lillinton (perhaps so called from the old English word Lytlan, which signifies small or little) wherein the E. of Spellent held 24 hydes in the Conq. time, with a Mill valued at vi s. viii d. and woods of a mile in length, and half a mile in bredth: all which were valued at xl s. having been the Free-hold of one Edric in Edm. the Conf. dayes. Here was also half a hyde more, which Rog. de Olgi then held of Turchil de Warwick, valued at xx s.

There is no question but that the E. of Spellent's part was by K. H. 1. or by the E. of Warwick, upon such terms as the K. directed, given to Geffr. de Clinton, Founder of the Castle and Priory of Kenilworth: For by the foundation Charter of that Monastery, he granted thereunto 2 hydes of land in this place. And as for the half hyde which belong'd to Turchil de Warwick, I presume, that Hugo fil. Ricardi (of whom I am to speak in Warrohall and Watton) was enfeofft thereof (in ter alia) by the said Earl, who had the most of Turchil's lands: For I find, that immediatly upon the foundation of the before specified Monastery, the Canons of Kenilworth had the same by his grant; in consideration whereof, they rendred to him the said Hugh, the Churches of Sintenseld and Claverdon, which they held of him; and gave him over and above a Cloak, valued at vi marks of silver, and to Margaret his wife 2 saddle Nag. After which, K. H. 1. added his Charter of confirmation, and so also did Roger E. of Warwick.

But the other two hydes, belonging to the E. of Spellent above mentioned, were, as I am induc'd to believe, given by the said Geffr. de Clinton with his daughter Lescelina in marriage to Norman de Verdon: for I find, that they were held of the heirs of the said Norman and her, by Rob. de Verdon; and of him by Peter de Wolwardington, by the service of half a Kts. fee. The extent whereof in 7 E. 1. was certified to be one carucat, which the said Peter had in demesn, and eleven yard land occupied by ten servants, who did manage that carucat for the benefit of the same Pet. This P. de Wolwardington granted to the Monks of Cumbe, that his tenants here in Lillington should grind their Corn at their Mill called Blakedon-mill. Of the successors to the said Peter in this Mannour I cannot give a perfect account; but of what I have found from Record relating thereto, I will here adde; which is, that in 20 E. 3. Margaret de Wolvarton, and John de Waldgrave answered for half a Kts. fee in this place, held of the heirs of Theob. de Verdon; and that in 10 H. 6. John Waldgrave of the County of Buckingham. Cent. and Ric. Beauchamp E. of Warwick held the same, by the name of a Mannour, by the service of half a Kts. fee. As also, that in 10 H. 7. Will. Grey Esq; dyed & seized thereof, leaving Thomas his son and heir 15 years of age; from whom it came to Edm. Grey, who in 28 H. 8. was owner of it.

I now return to that which the Canons of Kenilworth had in this place, which, in 7 E. 1. was certified to be one carucat of land then held by them in demesne, and 16. yard land managed by xx. servants, who performed divers servile works for the said Canons, and payd also certain yearly Rent for the same. Here the said Canons had a Court-Leet and other privileges, as appears by their claim in 13 E. 1. But this coming to the Crown at the dissolution of that House, was by Q. Eliz. in 2. of her reign granted unto Gerard and others; and in 6. to Ambrose Earl of Warwick and the heirs male of his body; but in 38 Eliz. being again in the Crown by reason of the death of the said Earl without issue, was, in consideration of the good & faithfull service which Sir John Puckering Knight, then Lord Keeper of the great Seal of England had performed, (as the words of the Patent do import) passed by the said Queen, together with the advowson of the Church unto William Borne, and James Orenge esquires, and their heirs. Which William and James, for a certain sum of money to them payd by Thomas Puckering, son and heir of the said Sir John then deceased; and in performance of a Decree in the Court of Wards made 23. Oct. 38. Eliz. sold and confirmed the said Mannour to the same Thomas (afterwards Knight and Baronet:) and his heirs, by their deed bearing date 27. Junii 39. Eliz.

The Church (dedicated to S. Mary Magd.) was originally belonging to the Canons of Kenilworth, from the very foundation of that Monastery, as a member and Chappell of Wotton; out of which upon the appropriation of Wotton to those Canons half a marke per annum was reserved for their use: but afterwards, it seems, they had it wholly; for so doth the Record of 7 E. 1. express; whereby it also appears, that it was endowed with a yard land and half, having been appropriated to them the very preceding year by R. de Meulend Bishop of Coventre and Lichfield, and confirmed by the King. In anno 1291. 19 E. 1. it was valued at viii. marks, and the Vicaridge at two marks: but the Vicaridge in 26 H. 8. was rated at lxiii s. ivd. per annum over and above 8 s. 4 d. yearly allowed for Procurations and Synodals.

That which now beareth the name of Blakdon is onely a hilly ground in Willington-field, having originally had its denomination from the dark colour thereof, done or dunc signifying a Hill. The Mill which yet also retains the name thereof lyeth upon Avon, at the skirt of the same field, and was given to the Monks of Combe by William de Burton as in Bourton super Dunsmore I have shewed. Whether there were ever any village at this Blakdon I know not: but do find, that it was part of that which the Canons of Kenilworth had in Willington, though not of the Mannour, it and Wriden being held of Verdon's heirs by 2 Knights fee and half.

Wolphamcote.

HAVING thus followed the Northern side of Leame till it meets with Avon, it now remains, that I ascend to the South-east part thereof, where it enters this Hundred, which is within the precincts of Wolphamcote.

This is now vulgarly called Obencote, (containing within its parish the villages of Flekenbo, Pethercote, and Satebydige, in all which there are decayed Chappells,) and in the Conq. time was possessed by Turchill de Warwick, the content thereof being certified at 4. hides and a half, valued at lx s. having also a Church situate therein: but in that Survey it is written Witelmescote, and was before the Norman invasion the freehold of one Aschil. As for the originall of the name 'tis evident enough that it sprung from some ancient planter or Inhabitant there in the Saxons time, Witelmus being a usuall appellation amongst them, and the Word Cote (as I have elsewhere observed) being the same with domus or habitatio.

To the before specified Turchill succeeded Siward de Arden his son and heir; who, being permitted to enjoy this as part of his rightfull inheritance, granted it to Lecelina daughter to Geffrey de Clinton, and her heirs, Ailwin, the then Bayliff of Flekenbo, and his sons being some of the witnesses thereto; qui reddiderunt pecuniam, as the Deed expresses; id est, making attournment by paying some money in token thereof. Which Lecelina married to Norman de Verdon (as in Wandon I have

have shewed,) and had issue by him, Bertram de Verdon, in whose line it continued till towards the end of H. 3. time, that John de Verdon past it away, by the name of a Mannour to Walter de Langley and Alice his wife, and their heirs for the service of half a Knights fee: provided, that they the said Walter and Alice, and their heirs should appear in their proper persons twice a year, with their tenants, at the Court-leet of him the said John and his heirs, at Flekenbo, in case they did reside here, at Wolshamcote, and if not, then their Bayliff to supply their room.

Which grant, though not dated, was made (as I guess) about 40 H. 3. For in 41. the said Walter and Alice had a Charter of Free-warren granted to them in all their demesne lands here. But the said Alice, surviving her husband did, in 23 E. 1. settle it upon Robert de Langley, her younger son, and his heirs. To whom succeeded Margaret his daughter and heir, wedded to William de Peto, whereby it devolved to that family, about the beginning of E. 3. reign. From which time, I shall not need to instance by particular proof from Records, that their descendants were successively Lords thereof: for they continued so, till within these few years, that Sir Edward Peto of Chester-ton Kt. in consideration of 2520 li. by his Deed, dated 2. Apr. 11. Jac. sold it to Rob. Clerke Yeoman, then his tenant thereof.

This Lordship being antiently held of Verdon (as I have shewed, upon partition of Verdon's inheritance, was held of Will. de Ferrers, son and heir of Isabell, one of the coheirs to the last Theob. de Verdon; William de Peto, grandchild to the before specified Will. doing his homage, accordingly, for the half Knights fee here, unto William Lord Ferrers of Groby in 2 H. 4. But further than what I have said, I do not find any thing memorable of this place, other than the complaint which our Countrey-man Rous long since did make of the Depopulation here, as well as in many other towns of this County.

In An. 1291. 19 E. 1. the Church (dedicated to S. Peter) was valued at xxv. marks; the advowson whereof, was, in 38 E. 3. granted by Sir John de Peto Kt. (Jan. 9.) unto Thomas de Beauchamp Earl of Warwick, and to Thom. B. his son. Which Thomas, the younger, afterwards being E. of Warwick having obtained the Kings licence for the same, by his deed dated on Tuesday the feast of S. George 15 R. 2. inter alia, pass'd it unto the Dean and Canons of the Collegiat-Church in Warwick, and their successors, for the good estate of the said King Ric. and Q. Anne; as also of him the said Earl, and Margaret his wife, Will. Beauchamp his brother, and Joan his wife, with their Children, during this life; and for the health of their souls after their departure hence; and likewise of the souls of their Progenitors, Ancestors, and all the faithfull deceased. Whereupon it was appropriated to the use of the said Colledge, by the consent of Richard Scroope then Bishop of Cob. and Elch. ann. scil. 1395. 19 R. 2. xiii s. iv d. yearly Pension being reserved out of the fruits thereof to the said Bishop and his successors for the indemnity of their Churches of Cobentre and Elchfield, and ii s. to the Archdeacon of Cobentre.

In 26 H. 8. the Vicaridge was valued at xii li. xviii s. ii d. over and above 8 s. - 6 d. allowed for Procurations and Synodals.

Flekenbo.

THIS is the largest and chief of the Villages within the parish of Wolshamcote, and wherein one Leuninus, in the Conq. time held x i. hide and a half, of the K. then valued at xxx s. which he purchased of Alunine his brother: As also 2. hides and half a yard land of Miltane (commonly called S. Wolstan) Bishop of Worcester, then likewise rated at xx s. more. But the Bishop sayling to make good his title, Leuninus was at the Kings mercy for it. At the same time, one Oslach held here 2. hides and a half, of Turchill de Warwick, which were the freehold of Eduinnus before the Conquest: And Aitricus one hide and half a yard land, all which were valued at lx s. being part of that which Turchill's posterity enjoyed; for Siward de Arden, his son, gave some of it to the Monks of Thorney in Cambridgeshire. But how long the family of Arden kept it, I cannot directly say, in regard I find that the Verdons (who had also Wolshamcote) were possess hereof very antiently, Roes de Verdon, in 20 H. 3. answering for three parts of a Knights fee lying here and in Wolshamcote.

Of the rest, which Leunius held in the Conq^uest, it seems that Musard was shortly after enfeoffed; and that the family of Hastang had it from them, as well as the other lands that they held in this County: And likewise that Verdon, having the most of this village, to make it all intirely his own, obtained that which Hastang had here. This is my conjecture, but grounded upon great probabilities: for I find, that in 6 H. 3. Rob. Hastang, clayming the service for half a Knights fee here, from Nich. de Verdon, they came to an Agreement, whereupon there was a Fine ⁶ levied; which expressing as much, further sheweth, that the said Nicholas and his heirs shoul'd perform those services to the above specified Robert and his heirs for ever. Which half Knights fee in ⁶ 20. H. 3. was answered for, amongst the rest that Hastang held in this Shire, under the title of Feod. Roberti Musard.

But to Nicholas de Verdon succeeded Roes his daughter and heir (as in Wandon is shewed) which Roes gave ⁶ unto John Fitz-Alan with Maud her daughter in Frank-mariage 23. mess. and 20. yard land in this place; all which, the said Maud & John Fitz-Alan her son, did entail upon Rich. de Munde vill and Isabell his wife, sister to the said John, and the heirs of their two bodyes, but for lack of such issue to return the said John and his heirs, which Richard had no issue by her, as it seems, so that the land reverted to the family of Fitz-Alan: For I find, that Edmund Fitz-Alan Earl of Arundell, grandchild to the before mentioned John, enfeoffed John de Segrave the elder, and Christian his wife (inter alia) of these lands, to hold for life; and after their decease Stephen de Segrave and Alice his wife, and the heires of their two bodies lawfully begotten. By which means they descended with Calndon (already spoke of) to Moubray, and so to Berkley; and were by Henry

Lord Berkley, temp. Eliz. Reg. sold to Edw. Pough-ton of Causton esq. as I have been informed; Of whom the particular tenants purchased their severall Fermes; so that now the reputation that it had of a Mannour is utterly lost: And whether ever really it was so I make a question; for the owners thereof never held any Court-Baron there, but had a kind of yearly meeting for the Tenants, which they called a Court, whereat they usually demised their land, and entered the Agreement in a Roll, instead of making any formall Lease thereof, as was usual in ancient time. Out of which lands a yearly Rent of 3 s. 4 d. being due to the Mannour of Flekenho, that was Verdon's, is now paid by the Purchasers according to the proportion of the land they bought.

I now return to the rest that Verdon had here in Flekenho, which was, indeed, the Mannour it self, with lands of good value thereto belonging: wherein I find that John de Verdon, son and heir of Roes before mentioned, had Free-warren granted to him in 42 H. 3. And that the said John held the same, being half a Knights fee, of Thomas de Arden (lineall heir to the before specified Sirard) by the service of a Hawke. As also, that in 13 E. 1. Theobald de Verdon, son and heir of the said John, claymed a Court-leet, Assise of bread and beer, Free-warren, and weys, with other priviledges here in Flekenho, and the members thereof (viz. Pethercote, Wolhamcote, & Salisbury); for these do appear to be by the ancient stile of the Court there kept; all which were allowed. Which Theobald had issue Theobald, and he severall daughters and heirs, as in Wandon is shewed; whereupon it came by partition to be assigned unto Isabell the wife of Henry de Ferrers of Joby. To whose posterity in the direct line it continued, untill it was put into the hands of John Stafford Bishop of Bath and Wells, John Visc. Beaumont, and other feoffees to Thomas Ferrers, son and heir of him the said Thomas by Eliz. one of the sisters and heirs to Sir stle of Camworth in this County.) From which Thomas and Eliz. did lineally descend Sir John

 Sept. 12. Jac. gave it, with Anne his daughter in Marriage unto Sir Symon Archer Knight, and his heirs; of whom and his family, which hath been of great continuance in this Shire I have spoke in Camworth, where their seat is.

Nethercote.

THIS having been antiently called Parva- Fleckenho, and originally a member of the other, was, in 10 E. 2. held * by John de Coigne of Theobald de Verdon, for half a Knights fee: And after him, viz. in 2 E. 2. by Will. Coyne, who * wrote himself Dominus de Nethercote. To whose posterity it continued till 31 H. 8. that Robert Cury esquire, past it away to Roger Wigston esquire and his heirs; whose son and heir, William Wigston esq.
 but afterwards Knight, levied a Fine * thereof to Eliz. Onely widow in 3 E. 6. But I have heard, that Roger Wigston, son and heir to the said Sir William sold it to one Thomas Lee: which Thomas in 14. Eliz. by the name of Tho. Lee of Clatercote in Com. Oxon. esquire was certified * to dye seized thereof, leaving William Watson son of Anne Watson (one of his sisters) his next heir. Which William sold * it to Tho. Wilcox, who passed it to Robert Clerke late owner thereof.

Sawbridge.

THIS, being written Salebrugge in antient Records, makes me imagine, that the name was at first occasioned from the Bridge, here, over Heame; and that the syllable Sal, which by corrupt pronuntiation is now called Saw, proceed from the old Brittain word Sal or Salto, id est vilis, five parva estimationis. But it was originally a member of Wolhamcote, and continued in the family of Ardern till King John's time, that Thomas de Arderne granted * it to the Monks of Thorney in Cambridge-shire, who in 19 E. 1. were certified * to hold in this place one carucate of land rated at xxx s. and iv li. xii s. rent of Assise; at which time the value of those customary works due to the Monks from hence were rated at 26 s. 8 d. and the pleas and perquisites 6 s. 8 d. They had then also a Mill of 4 li. per annum and a stock upon the ground, worth xx s. by the year. The totall viii
 li. xix s. iv d.

This continued in the Crown, after the dissolution of the Monasteries, til 2 Eliz. that the Q past it * away to Gerard and others, by the name of the Mannour of Salwysage. How it came again to her hands I know not; but in 4. of her reign, by her Letters Pat. dated 28. Oct. she granted * it to Ranulph Crew esq. and Richard Cart- wright gent. and their heirs, together with a water-mill in Ryeton, to be held in Feeferme, paying xx li. yearly into the Exchequer. Which Ranulph and Richard by their * deed dated the 10. of Nov.

 following past it to Edward Brook of Fleckenbo
 gent. Roger Tibbotts of Southam gent. Robert Clerk of Wolhamcote Yeoman, Thomas Chiles of Salu-

Shuckborough-superior.

Southwest from Wolhamcote stands Shuck- borough superior, part whereof lyes within Winton-hundred. In the Conq. time, the Earl of Wellest held four hides here, as appears by the generall Survey * then made; and Turchill de Warwick, half a yard land: All which being valued at 14 s.
 were posselt by the same Leuvinus before the Norman-invasion, of whom I have made mention in Spenskirby and Fleckenbo: But in that * Record
 it is written Socheberge; whence I conjecture, that the originall name was at first composed of a Brittain as well as a Saxon word, Swich in that language signifying a Plow, and berge in the other, a Hill, which is not unfutable to the nature of the ground (viz. arable) and the situation thereof.

That the greatest part of the Earl of Wellest's lands, and likewise of the before specified Turchill's came soon after to the antient Earls of Warwick, I have often observed; yet it when it was, or whom, that those Earles first enfeof of this place doth not directly appear: but plain it is, that Earl Roger (who dyed in King Stephen's time) * gave the Church to the Nunns of Worshals; and confirmed * the grant which Robert then Lord of this Mannour, had made of 4. yard land, and xx. acres of Inclosure to the same Religious house. But after this Robert the next that I find to have been Lord of it, was Osbert de Lemington, who granted * an Oxe-gang of land, lying within the precincts thereof to the Abby of Leicester. Which Oxe-gang, being * half a yard land, and confirmed * by King H.
 2. was within a short space given * by the Canons of that House to Thomas the son of Oliver de Shuck- borow and his heirs, for ix s. yearly rent to be paid to the said Monastery.

From this Thomas did descend, as 'tis like, that family, which, long continuing here, bore the fir-name of Oliver, whereof was Thomas Oliver, who in 7 E. 1. held * 7. yard land in this place; viz.
 3. yard land and a half of Henry de Berchesdone, by the 4. part of a Knights fee, which the said Hen- ry held over, of the Prior of Cobentre; and the rest of Jordan de Say by the like service. This Thomas Oliver had at that time 2. yard land in demesne, and
 2. servants holding the residue under particular Rents, and performance of servile labour. It was then also certified, that William Chater held 8. yard land here, of the Prior of Cobentre, whereof three parts of a yard land he had in demesne. Which interest so belonging to the Monks of Cobentre, here, was in right of their Mannour of Priors- perston that extended into it, for no less doth the Record * of 9 E. 2. import.

MORS moriem vivit et per mortem post mortem vivimus.

Aston-Cantilupe of the rest, as appears by that claim in 13. E. 1. made by John de Hastings, for a Court-Leet and weyfs in this village by prescription. Which title, as I gueſs, accrued to them from the poſterity of Oſbernus filius Ricardi (of whom I have ſpoke in Aſton-Cantilupe;) and is the more probable, forasmuch as we ſee, that Jordan de Stry (a branch of that family, as in Farnborough is manifested) held the 4. part of a Knights fee here: and that, upon the extent of Aſton-Cantilupe in 39 H. 3. there is a Rent of viii s. ix d. per annum certified to have been due from the Freeholders here.

The substance of which lands so held by Hastings came in tract of time to one Simon de Shuckborow, and Raph Chateres: for in 6 E. 2. It was found, that they two held no less than a Knights fee here, of the same John de Hastings. From which Simon descended John de Shuckborow, who in 20 E. 3. held of Hastings's heir the third part of a Kts fee in this place; And from him John Shuckborough esq. who in 10 H. 6. was certified to hold a Mannour here, by the 4. part of a Knights fee.

But another Mannour there was also, and that very ancient, which belonged to the family of Dive, the inheritance whereof in 27 E. 3. Margaret the widow of Richard Hastings, daughter and heir to Raph Dive, and coſin and heir to John Dive of Ducklington in Com. Dron, granted to Will. Catesby and John his son; wherein Emme the Widow of the said John in 13 H. 4. obtained a Charter of Free-warren, in the behalf of herself and John her son. Which Mannour, afterwards coming to the hands of Richard Collyng of Wavers-perſton gent. was in 32 H. 8. paſt from him unto Thomas Shuckborough esq. and his heirs (Lord of the other Mannour by descent from Thomas his ancestor before specified) whole great-grandchild Sir Richard Shuckborough Knight now enjoys it.

That these Shuckboroughs were very antiently poſſeſſors of lands here, there is no doubt: for I find one William de Suckeberge in 3. Joh. which might be the first assumer of this denomination (there being many good and great families whose ancestors fixt not their surnames till afterwards.) But little have I ſeen memorable of them in those elder times, other than the bare mention of their names: neither am I able of a long time after by the advantage of Records to deduce their descent in a lineall ſucceſſion; I ſhall therefore briefly mention what I have met with, as remarkable, touching any of them, and so paſs on to the next.

In 1 E. 3. I find, that John de Shuckburgh, having been one of the Coroners in this County (an office in those days of great account) had his Quintus eſt, the Shiriff being commanded to cause another to be chosen in his room: But it seems the Kings command was not thereupon pursued, because the next year after, he directed another Precept, dated from Pontfract 19 Aug. to the same purpose. In 6 H. 4. John Shuckburgh and Thomas Shuckburgh were, with the Shiriff and other Commissioners, assigned to collect a Subsidy in this County then granted to the King in Parliament: And in 7 H. 5. William Shuckburgh of Shuckburgh, being rank'd amongst those Knights and other Esquiers of this County, who bore ancient Armes from their Ancestors, had warning by the Shiriff to appear before the Councell, there to receive order for serving the King in his proper person for the defence of the Realm, In 6 H. 6. he was one of the Commissioners appointed for the Collecting a subsidy of vi s. viii d. from certain Inhabitants residing within the Cities and Boroughs of this County. And departed this life in 11 H. 6. being at that time one of the Coroners for this Shire.

From whom descended Thomas, who was in Commission for conservation of the peace from 18 H. 7. to the end of that Kings reign; and for many years in H. 8. time.

This family do bear for their Armes Sable a Chevron betwixt three Mulletts argent; relating, as tis observable, to those little stones called Aſtroues, which are very like a Mullet, and frequently found in the plowed fields hereabouts.

The Church (dedicated to S. John Baptist) being given to the Nuns of Worral, as I have already shewed, was antiently appropriated to their use, and in 26 H. 8. valued at viii li. vi s. viii d. the Procurations and Synodalls yearly payable to the Archdeacon of Cobentre for the same, being x s. vi d. But here was never any Vicar endowed, the Cure having been served by a stipendary. Which Rectory, after the dissolution of the Monasteries, was granted to Sir John Williams Knight in 32 H. 8. who had license the year following to alien it unto Thomas Shuckborough esq. from whom it descended to Sir Richard Shuckborough before mentioned.

Granborough.

I Now return somewhat neerer to the bank of Leame, where I behold Granborough, within which parish is Wolſcote, Walcote, and Calcote. This is one of those 24. townes that Leofrik Earl of Merſia gave to the Priory of Cobentre at his foundation thereof in 1 Edw. Conf. And wherein, by the Conq. Survey, that Monastery was certified to hold 8. hides and 1. virgate of land, there being then a Mill, rated at xvi d. and the value of all recorded at viii li. At the same time it was also found that Richard Foreſtarius held of the King 2. hides in this place, then valued at fifty shillings, which, before the Conquest, were the freehold of one Ramdi: But in Domesday-book it is written in one place Graneberge, and in the other Graneberge, whereby it appears, that the name did originally proceed from its situation on a rising ground.

A great part hereof was in K. H. 1. time given by Laurence then Prior of Cobentre & the Monks of that House unto Robert the son of Noel; which grant K. H. 2. confirmed to Thomas Noel (his son) who wedded Margaret one of the sisters and coheirs to Raph Strange of Knockin in Shropſhire; which Margaret held the same land in dower: After whose death Alice and Joan the daughters and heirs of the said Thomas had livery thereof, Alice being then the wife of William de Harecurt, and Joan of Thomas Fitz-Eustace. It should seem by what hereafter appears, that the issue of Alice by William de Harecurt carried away the whole inheritance here; but whether by any grant from Joan the other sister, or that she had no issue, I am ignorant: For in 36 H. 3. Ric. de Harecurt was certified to hold the same of the Prior of Cobentre; which Richard dyed in 42 H. 3. leaving William his son and heir, who doing his homage had livery of all his fathers lands.

 In 47 H. 3. this William had summons, amongst divers other great men, to be at Worcester sufficiently furnished with Horse and Arms on the Feast-day of S. Peter ad vincula (commonly called Lammas) to resist the power of Lewelin Prince of Wales, then in Rebellion: And the next year following received command to attend the King at Oxford, in Mid-lent, with Horse and Armes, there to give him Counsell, and to march along with him against the said Lewelin. Which Will. or Wil- liam his son past away this Lordship unto Hugh de Brandeston; for in 21 E. 1. the said Hugh had Free-warren granted to him in all his demesne lands here. Unto whom succeeded Henry de Brande- ston, who in 6 E. 2. aliened it to Will. de Bere- ford, and Edmund de Bereford his son, and to the heirs of the said Edmund; entayling it, for want of issue by Edmund on John de Bereford his brother, and the heirs of his body: for better confirmation of whose title William de Harecourt, son and heir of Sir John de Harecourt of Bosworth in Leicester- shire, in 3 E. 3. released unto the said Edmund all his right therein.

Which Edmund in 3 E. 3. granted it to the Monastery of Chaucumbe in Northamptonshire but without licence; for it appears, that in 39 E. 3.
 it was charged with xx s. annuity to the Monks of Cobentre and their successors, as being held of that Monastery, and so purchased: yet it seems that the Canons of Chaucumbe did not long possess it, but that the heirs of Brandeston had it again: for by a Fine levied 46 E. 3. between Philip de Ay- lesbury and Agnes his wife, and Richard Mon- fort and Rose his wife, it was concluded, that the said Richard and Rose should hold the moytie thereof during their naturall lives, but that afterwards it should revert to the same Philip and Ag- nes, and the heirs of Agnes. Which Rose and Agnes were daughters and heirs of Hugh de Brandeston, grandson to the before mentioned Hugh, (as in Lapworth I shall shew) and held that part of this town, called Harecourts-fee of the Monks of Cobentre, by the service of half a Knights fee, and ii s. per annum, as also two appearances at the Court held at Southam every year by themselves and their tenants; with Ward, Marriage, Relief, and Scutage when it happeneth.

After which, scil. in 14 R. 2. Roger Aylesbury of Lapworth (son to the abovesaid Philip and Agnes) granted to Will. Montfort of Thoneworth and Agnes his wife, and their heirs, the reversion of all his part therein, after the decease of Agnes his mother. Which William upon the marriage of Mar- garet, one of his daughters to John Catesby of Ab- by-Leggers in Northamptonshire (as in Lapworth appeareth) by his deed dated the Munday after the Feast of S. Faith the Virgin 6 H. 5. granted his reversion expectant, after the death of Royse his mother, unto the said John Catesby and his heirs;
 to which grant the said Royse returned.

In the line of Catesby it continued till 23 H. 3.
 but then was it conveyed to Sir Valentine Knight- ley Knight, who by his last Will and Testament bearing date 26 Dec. 7. Eliz. gave it to Edm. his second son, and the heirs male of his body, and for want of such issue to the heirs male of the body of the said Sir Valentine, the remainder to his right heirs. Which Edmund leaving Richard his son and heir, who dyed without issue male, it reverted to Sir Richard Knightley of Roxtan in Com. North- hampton Knight, as son and heir male to the said Sir Valentine. Which Sir Richard by his deed dated

 7. Oct. 9. Jac. sold the same to Lawrence Bol- ton; from whom Hugh Audley esquire, one of the Clerks in the Court of Wards, purchased it in 6 Car. anno scil. 1629.

As for that part of Granbozough which Richard Forestarius held in the Conq. time, it descended to Walter Crok as Chesterton did. Which Walter enfeoffed Gilbert Crok therewith, by the service of xs.
 and the Sergeanty belonging thereto, whose sister and heir, Alice, held it in 20 H. 3. But from this Alice it came, ere long, unto Henry de Bray, who in 17 E. 1. settled it upon Thomas de Faren- done and Emme his wife, and the issue of the said Thomas and Emme; and in case of their departure without issue, that then the said Henry, (who was a Priest it seems) should hold it during his life; but after his decease to remain unto Thomas de Bray and Sarrah his wife, and the heirs of their two bodyes, by the service of a Clove Gillofer, to be yearly paid at Easter for ever.

From which family of Bray, it came to Hastang, though how I have not seen; For it appears that in 20 E. 3. John de Hastang held it of the heirs of Loges, by half a Knights fee. Which John left two daughters his heirs, whereof the younger was married to Sir John Salisbury, who in her right dyed seized of the moytie of this Mannour in 12 R. 2.
 being attainted in the Parliament then held: and Maud the other married to Raph Stafford, against whom Thomas Bray commenced suit, for this Man-nour, called Bray's, and in 1 H. 4. recovered it:
 But it should seem, that by some composition Bray quitted his title therein to the said Raph Stafford; for I find that the said Raph dyed seized thereof in 11 H. 4. leaving Humfrey his son and heir 26.
 years of age. From whom descended Sir Humfrey Stafford of Blatherwick, who dying seized thereof 17 Eliz. as the Record expresseth, left issue John his son and heir, then of full age. But I have heard, that the same Sir Humfrey sold it to one Richard Rowley, and he to Mr. Thomas Bradgate, who had issue William, and he a daughter called Alice, married to Mr. John Hill, the present owner thereof.

I now returne to that Mannour which belong'd to the Priory of Cobentre. This continued with the Monks till the dissolution of that House in 30
 H. 8. and issued not out of the Crown till that Ed- ward Aglionby of Balthall and Henry Hugford of Solthull Gent. had a grant thereof by Patent, dated 26. Maii 7 E. 6. Who forthwith past it, (viz.
 12. Junii the same year) to Valentine Knightley esquire, and his heirs. Which Val. (afterwards Kt.) settled it, as it seems, on Edmund his younger son:
 for in 38 Eliz. the said Edmund was found to dye seized of it, leaving Richard his son and heir 28.
 years of age: who dying without issue, (as in Ca- resbye's Mannour I have observed,) it came to Sir Richard Knightley of Roxtan, and so to Hugh Audley the now Lord thereof, as that did.

The Church (dedicated to S. Paul) hath been very antiently appropriated to the Priory of Ron- ton in Staffordshire. Which makes me believe, that Robert Noel, the founder of that Monastery, first builded and endowed it: but whether it were given thereto before the Harecourts became Lords of this Mannour by Marriage of Noels heir before specified, I am yet to learn. Besides the Church, there are lands of good value here in Granbozough

Granbozow heretofore belonging to that Religious house; which long since, if not as antiently, were given thereto: For in Anno 1291. 19 E. 1. it was certified, that the Prior of Ronton had here three yard land and a half, then valued at 24 s. xxv s. ivd. yearly Rent of Assise, and of the profit of their store, yearly, x s. At which time the Church, appropriated to that Monastery, was valued at xxx. marks, and the Vicaridge at vi. But the Vicaridge was again endowed by Walter Langton Bishop of Cobentre and Wichfield, xvi. Kal. Maii An. 1321. 14 E. 2. Which it seemes was more enlarged than the Canons of Ronton well lik't; for in 2 H. 4. they obtained Licenſe to appropriat the same, wholly, to the use of their Monastery: by which Appropriation it was provided, that the Bishop should appoint a competent sum out of the fruits thereof to be distributed yearly to the poor of this Parish, according to the Statute of xv. R. 2. Cap. 6. But what was done therein I know not. Which Vicaridge in 26 H. 8. was valued at C s.

Woscote.

THIS is a small Village, and hath had its name from one Wulf, an antient Inhabitant or possessor thereof in the Saxons time; for in old Records it is written Wulbescote, but accounted a member of Granbozough, for as much as the Prior of Cobentre's, and Catesby's Lordship there; as also certain lands belonging heretofore to the Canons of Raunton in Staffordshire, extended into it: The greatest part of which lands, having come by purchase, as it seemes, to the Fardons, were by Margaret daughter and heir to the last of that name (who took for husband one John Bishop of Exeter in this County) in her widowhood settled upon Thomas her son and heir 27. Oct. 3. & 4. Ph. & M. by the name of Fardons-place, &c. which Thomas had issue John, who together with James his son and heir, by their Deed bearing date x. Febr. 39 Eliz. aliened it to Thomas Burman, whose son and heir, scil. John Burman, now enjoys it.

Walcote.

OF this place (now consisting of no more than 3. Houses, and called Walcote-end) I find mention in the Conq. time, one Ordric being certified to hold certain lands here, of Turchill de Warwick. From which Turchill it came to the Earls of Warwick as it seemes; for in 20 H. 3. it was held of them by the 5. part of a Knights fee. Which in 36 H. 3. one Warine de Walcote held of Thomas de Arden, and he of the Earl of Warwick: and afterwards; viz. in 29 E. 2. Will. Reymund. But in 20 E. 3. this 5. part was shrunk to a sixth, at which time Thomas de Flamvill held it of the then Earl.

Out of this village there was a yard land and quarter, antiently given to the Hospitall of S. John situate without the East-gate at Driford by one Gricia de Wellescote. And further, I have not met with any thing memorable of this place, other than the mention of particular lands, which are reputed part of those other Lordships in Granbozow before specified.

Caldecote.

THIS is now a depopulated place, and hath been so a long time. In the Conquerors days Turchill de Warwick posselt it, and had severall tenants that held it of him, the extent thereof being somewhat more than one hide. But with the rest of Turchill's lands it came to the E. of Warwick; for Earl Roger in 23 H. 1. gave to his Collegiat-Church at Warwick, then newly founded, half a hide in this village. Of the rest I find not who was enfeoffed; but it seemes that the heir female, to whom it descended, became the wife of Will. Pludio; which Will. gave half a yard land of this her inheritance to the Monks of Cumbe.

Part of that which Richard Forestarius, in the Conq. time, held in Oreneberge extended into this village: For Gilb. de Crok (of whom I have there made mention) enfeoffed Adam de Crok therein. But it seems that the family of Verdon had also some interest here: for in 36 H. 3. Geffrey de Simely was certified to hold half a Knights fee lying in Alfos and this place, of Roes de Verdon, which which she held over of the Earl of Warwick, whereof there is frequent mention in Records, the heirs of the same Geffrey answering for it.

Other matters memorable I have not found thereof till 6 E. 6. that Sir Thomas Newnham Kt. sold it to Will. Marquis of Winchester, then Lord Treasurer of England, who settled it upon the Lord Giles Poulet one of his younger sons. Which Lord Giles by severall conveyances, dated about the 15. and 20. of Queen Eliz. raign, past it to Thomas Stapleton Gent. and his heirs; from whom or his son, the Lord Stanhop of Harington hath since purchased it.

Lemington-Hastang.

THIS, containing the villages of Hill, Herbertwick, and Wadwell was in the Conquerors time posselt by Hasculf Musard; the extent thereof being then certified at xii. hides and a half, with half a virgat, whereunto belonged a Mill rated at ii s. and a Church. All which were valued at xii li. having been the freehold of Azor in Edward the Confessors time. In that Survey it is written Lanintone, not without some mistake by the transcriber (as I think) for there is no question but that it had its name originaly from the River Leame on whose Southern bank it stands.

This Hasculf Musard was a great man in those days, and besides this Lordship had Whitnash, Pembold-Cumin, and Haseley, in this Connty, with vast possessions in Gloucester-shire, Berk-shire, Oxford-sh. and Derby-shire: but his principall seat being at Musardere, in Gloucester-shire, they were, in that respect, all comprehended under the title of Baronia de Musardere as appears by severall Records of after times. Neither was he less eminent for his vertue and piety than so opulent an estate; for the Register of Ely calls him bonus decurio, & apud Dominum suum Regem valde honoratus, alleading his devotion to be such unto S. Ethelred, as he became at length a Monk in that Monastery, giving thereto the Mannor of Ctune in Gloucestershire, whereunto King William added his confirmation: But this Lordship and his other lands in Warwick-shire being by him enfeofft upon one Unfridus, progenitor to the Hastangs, I shall onely observe, that his heirs female were in E. 1. time linkt by Marriage to the families of Frescheville, Ireland, and Chelardeston. And that of Richard in H. 2. time, descended William, a younger son, surnamed de Rubra Spata, and Rougespe; from whom, through contraction of the name, the Ropers of Wiltneley, Turnitch, and other places of Pottingh, and Derby-shires; which continued till H. 6. time did deduce their originall. As also, that Richard Fitzheaux, then of Welgh-ton in Com. Derby, esq. marrying his eldest son Richard to the onely daughter of John Roper of Turnitch (by Indent. dated 7 H. 6.) covenanted, that his said son and all his issue by the same Isold, should thenceforth forsake their paternall name, and assume that of Roper, which they have for the most part ever since done, as by those of Deanonre in Derby-shire appeareth; from whence the Vicounts Baskinglasse, Barons of Wautre in Ireland, and the Ropers of Hill in Yorkshire are lately descended; And, about E. 1. time, as by some antient evidence may seem, they of Kent.

But I return to the before specified Unfridus, who besides this Lordship held of the said Hasculf those Mannors of Whitnash, Pembold and Haseley with other lands elsiwhere, of his grant by the service of 5. Knights fees, as was certified by Hascuil Musard, grandchild to the said Hasculf in 12 H. 2. The posterity of which Unfridus, surnamed Hastang, continued Lords of this place till 39 E. 3. that by an heir female it devolved to the Staffords of Grafton and Blatherwick, as the descent here inserted doth manifest. Touching both which families in respect of an eminent seat they had here, and many employments of note in this County I shall say something historically.

Stock, was a benefactor to the Monastery of S. Oswald at Postell, founded^d by Robert de Lacy (son to Hildebert, who came into England with the Conqueror, and built the Castle of Pontfract in Yorkshire) whereunto he gave^d his Mill of Saldeford: But his son and heir, sc. Atrop Hastang, exceeded his father in bounty to the Canons of that House, bestowing^s on them the Churches of this Lemington and Petebold before specified; as also of Cheblese in Staffordshire. Which Atrop, his son, confirmed, giving^s likewise to the Canons of Kenilworth the Church of Whitnash in this County, and to^b the Canons of Olney (near Orford) half a hide of land lying also in the same Whitnash; which half hide contained two virgates: And to^b the Nuns of Wrookhall certain lands in Haseley (in this shire) for the health of the soul of Cecilie his wife.

To: Atrop succeeded Humfrey his son and heir, who was in^t that rebellion against King John, towards the end of his reign, for which his lands were seized; but in 1 H. 3. returning to obedience had them again restored^d. This Humfrey had issue Robert, who in confirmation of his Ancestours grants to the Canons of Postell above mentioned, levied^m a Fine thereupon in 6 H. 3. in consideration whereof, they released^m to him all their interest in the patronage of the Church at Cheblese before specified; and wedded^o Joan the daughter and coheir to William de Curly, by which means a fair addition of lands came to this family. In 41 H. 3. he gave^p the King half a mark in gold to respect his Knighthood; but being of a turbulent Spirit, like his father, took^q part with the Barons against King H. 3. and was one of those that held out Kenilworth Castle so long against the King, though the name of that Hastang (as in my story concerning that seige appeareth) be called John; which might very well be mistaken by the Monk of Stoneley, who made that observation: for this Robert's lands, being then seized^r for his activeness in that war, were given^s away to Sir James de Audithelge, and Sir Hugh de Turbervill: But taking advantage of the Decree called Dictum de Kenilworth (whereof I have formerly spoke) he came to Agreement^t with them, laying this Lordship to pawn for the payment of 300. marks sterling unto the said Sir Hugh de Turbervill upon the feast day of the Nativity of S. John Baptist 52. H. 3.

The last mention I have met with of him, is^u in 53 H. 3. at which time, it seemes, he was a Knight and left issue Robert, who in 2 E. 1. was constituted^x one of the Justices for Gaol-delivery at Warwick: but of this Robert do I find little more that is memorable, other than a confirmation^y of the Fine so levied by his father to the Canons of Postell, touching the advowson of this Church, he being then a Knight. The next of this line, was John, to whom King E. 1. by his Charter^z dated 7. Martii 33. of his reign, granted Free-warren in all his demesin lands here. Which John, having in² E. 2. entayled^z this Mannour then called Cheblese, upon his descendants by Eva his wife, left^a issue Thomas, who had the custody^b of Whitnash Castle in Shropshire committed to his charge in 15 E. 2. and in 18 E. 2. was constituted^c one of the Commissioners appointed for choosing out Cccc. footmen in this County, excepting Warwick and Cobentre; as also to arme them for defence of the Kingdom.

In^d 6 E. 3. he was a Knight, and in 12. in^e Co-miss. both for conservation of the Peace in this Shire, and arraying of men according to the Stat. of Winchester. In the time of this Sir Thomas I meet with a Richard Hastang, whom being often and eminently employed in this County (and his brother, as by some circumstances may be deemed) I may not pass by. In^f 15 E. 2. he was one of the Knights for this Shire in the Parliament then held; and in 17 E. 3. in^g Comiss. with other persons of quality, to find out and arrest such Proctors as were employed by the two Cardinals, then sent into England for disposing of Ecclesiasticall benefices, that were or might become void, and to bring them before the King and his Councell. Concerning which business the King then wrote an excellent Epistle^h to Pope Clement the vi. Wherein he complaineth of the great injury done to the Church and Kingdom by those Cardinals, and such as they employed by authority from his Holiness; which, with the Popes answer thereunto is well worth the reading. Inⁱ 19. 4 and 20 E. 3. he was in Comiss. for arraying of Archers in this County; and in 21. for^j levying the Subsidy imposed upon Wools, and granted to the King in Parliament, for the maintenance of his Warrs in France.

But I return to Sir Thomas, who had issue Sir John Hastang, a Knight^m in his fathers life time: which Sir John, whilst his father lived, bore for his Armes A Lion rampant with a Labell of five points, as appeareth by his Sealⁿ; but afterwards^o a Chief with a Lion rampant over all. And having 2. wives, viz. Blanch daughter of and Maud of^q Sir Waryn Trussell Knight, dyed^r in 39 E. 3. leaving Maud and Joan his daughters and heirs, both within age; the Custody of whose lands were by Pat. bearing date 7. Maii 44 E. 3. granted^s by the King to John de Beauchamp and John Rous; who, by their Deed^t dated 20. Oct. 45 E. 3. past the same over to Raph Earl Stafford, which perhaps might be the reason that Maud the elder of them was afterwards wedded to Raph de Stafford, descended^u by the Staffords of Sandon and Wem-hall in Staffordshire from the ancient Barons of Stafford.

Which Maud in 49 E. 3. had livery^v of her lands, at that time proving her age, her said husband then doing fealty for them; and had for^x her part, inter alia, this Mannour of Lempnton, with the Mannour of Grafton in Worcestershire. Her sister Joan, wife^y to Sir John Salisbury, having^z the Mannours of Upton-warren in Com. Wigorn and Cheblese in Com. Staff. for her part.

To this Raph and Maud succeeded^a Sir Humfrey Stafford of Grafton Knight, their son and heir, who being^b one of the Knights for this Shire in the Parl. begun at Westminster, the munday before the Feast of All-Saints 7 R. 2. was in Dec. following constituted^c Shiriff of Staffordshire, which office he also bore in^d 12 R. 2. This Sir Humfrey married^e Eliz. the daughter to Sir John Burdet of Huncote in Com. Which John dyed^g 10 H. 5. without issue, whereupon his brother Sir Humfrey became his heir, who underwent^h the Shiriffalty of Staffordshire in 5 H. 4. as alsoⁱ for this County and Leicestershire in^j 2. 9. and 17 H. 6.

In 18 H. 6. he was^k one of the Knights for this County in the Parliament then held. In^l 21, 22. and 23. in Comiss. for conservation of the peace

H. 6. m. 1. of the sisters and heirs to John the son of Sir Thomas Aylesbury Knight (by whom the Mannour of Blatheriotke in Northamptonshire came to this family) was slain^m by the Commons of Kent in that insurrection of Jack Cade 28 H. 6. (with his brother William) the Lady Alianore his wife surviving him, who at length became one of the coheirs alsoⁿ to John Cressy; and in 16 E. 4. founded^o a Chantry for one Priest to sing Mass daily at the Altar of our blessed Lady in the Church of Bromesgrove in Com. Wigorn. for the good estate of King E. 4. Eliz. his Queen, her self, Thomas her son; and for the health of the soul of Sir Humphrey Stafford of Grafton her late husband, and all the faithful departed.

To the last mentioned Sir Humphrey succeeded Sir Humphrey his son and heir; who together with Thomas his brother joyned with the Lord Lovell and others in that Insurrection of 1 H. 7. begun in Worcestershire, as our Historians doe observe. But the Lord Lovell hearing that the King had let out a Proclamation of Pardon mistrusted his men, and fled^p privately into Lancashire; which so disheartned these two brothers, that despairing of success they took Sanctuary at^q Colnham near Abbingdon; out of which place, their priviledge being viewed in the Kings Bench, and judged not sufficient, they were taken, whereupon Humphrey suffered death at Wiltun, and was buried^r in the Chapell of our Lady within the Gray-fryers Church near Newgate; but Thomas, as being seduced by him had pardon: Shortly after which, ensued the attainders in Parliament of the said Humphrey, whose lands being so forfeited were given away by Rot. Parl. the K. Grafton in Com. Wigorn. one of their chief seats, with the Mannour of Upton-Waryn in that County to^s Sir Gilbert Talbot Knight and the heirs male of his body; (from whom the present Earl of Shrewsbury, who now enjoys them is descended) And this of Leminton to^t Sir *Edward Poyning*s Knight, and to the heirs male of his body.

But, Sir Humphrey Stafford Kt. son and heir of this Humphrey, being afterwards restored^u repofsest this Lordship; and departing^v this life 37 H. 8. lyeth buried at Blatheriotke before specified. From whom descended, (as the Pedegree before inserted sheweth,) *Will. The Church (dedicated to All-Saints) having been given to the Canons of Postell by Atrop Hastang in H. 1. time (as I have already shewed) was appropriated to that Monastery by Alexander de Savensby Bishop of Cobentre and Wichfield, temp. H. 3. the Vicaridge being then endowed^x with all the fruits, and charged with a Pension of xv. marks per annum to those Canons, and as much to the Dean and Chapter of Wichfield and their successors. In Anno 1291. 19 E. 1. it was valued^y at x. marks, over and above the said Pensions, and in^z 26 H. 8. at xx li. besides 9 s. 6 d. yearly allowed for Procurations and Synodalls.

THIS place, antiently written Hulle, hath its name from the high situation thereof, and belonged to the Monks of Abbingdon in the Conq. time, being given^a to them by Turchil de Ardene (who is commonly called in Domesday-book Turchil de Warwic) and confirmed by King William. The extent thereof in the said confirmation is said to be two hides; and so much doth the general Survey then made record it to be, valuing it at xl s. Nevertheless by another Authority^d I find, that the Conquerour granted four yard land lying in this place to the Abby of Abbingdon for service of Castleward to be done at his Castle of Windsor; which^e expresseth, that one of the Abbots did enfeof Henry his servant of all the said four virgats, to perform the above mentioned service of Castleward; and that from the said Henry it descended to Hugh his son and heir, who sold it to Robert de Hastang. But in 2. Joh. the Abbot of Abbingdon recovered^f the hide of land against Raph the son of Wigan (of whom I have spoke in Wiltoughby.) Which Raph alledged, that King H. 1. gave it to Wigan his Marshall, with other lands eschaeted to the Crown, by reason that Roger de Causton, the owner of it had committed Felony.

After which, viz. in 6. Joh. the said Abbot levied a Fine thereof to the before mentioned Henry, who is therein stiled Henricus filius Pagani. To this this Henry succeeded Hugh, surnamed de Abendon, who in 36 H. 3. was certified to hold the sixt part of a Knights fee here, of the said Abbot (which was, doubtless, the same hide before specified;) and Will. de Curly another 6. part; which argueth that the rest of those lands in this place belonging to the said Abby were granted to the Ancestor of the said William de Curly by the like service of Cattleward at Windsore; for in 18 H. 3. Robert then Abbot of Abendon came to an Agreement with the said William for those services, it being then concluded, that the same William should pay xl d. ob. to the Abbot in lieu thereof.

This Hugh de Abendon sold all that he had here, to Robert de Hasting, Lord of Leminton-Hasting, as I have there shewed. Which Robert wedded one of the daughters and coheirs of the before recited William de Curly, whereby he and his posterity enjoyed a great part of Curly's lands, and so consequently this, (I presume:) for upon the partition made betwixt Maud and Jan, the daughters and coheirs of Sir John de Hasting in 49 E. 3. this Mannour of Dall, (for so it is there called) was with Leminton assigned to Maud, who married to Ralph de Stafford (as in Leminton I have declared,) and hath since continued in the family of those Staffords, (Sir Humfrey Stafford Knight dying seized thereof 17 Eliz., leaving John his son and heir then of full age) till with Leminton it came by purchase to Baron Trevor.

Herdwick.

THIS was originally a member of Leminton, and involved therewith in the Conquerors time, as will appear by what I shall say anon: But I cannot ascend so high as to shew which of the Hastings it was that enfeoffed him thereof who first assumed his surname from hence; yet I believe it was very antient: for in 20 H. 3. I find that Robert de Hasting had suits with William de Herdewic for certain Customes and services which he claymed from him for the lands he held here. And in 21 E. 3. John de Herdewic of Lynlepe in Com. Leic. was sued by the Vicar of Leminton for certain lands in this place; Howbeit, in 12 R. 2. Sir John Salisbury was found to dye seized (inter alia) in right of Joan his wife one of the daughters and coheirs of John de Hasting, of certain Rents due from the Freeholders and tenants at will in this place, which was then, as the Record expresseth, a Hamlet of Leminton before mentioned.

But the family of Herdwick, who had their principall seat at Lynlepe aforesaid, continued Lords of this village as long as their male-line lasted, as by sundry instances I could manifest; and some of them resided here, as I guess: For John de Herdwick before specified was in 23. 26. and 31 E. 3. in Commission with certain other persons of worth, for the assessing & collecting a xth. & xv. in this shire; and in 33 E. 3. had the custody of the Mannour of Warmington in this County committed to his charge, which belonging to the Priory of Wottes was seized into the Kings hands by reason of the wars with France. The same year he was one of the Commissioners for arraying of all men in this County suitable to their estates and degrees, according to the Stat. of Winchester, in the Kings absence. And in 1 R. 2. one of the Justices of Peace for the town of Cobentre. But of his descendants, because they resided in Leicester-shire I have no more to say, than that John de Herdwick dying without issue male in H. 8. time, and partition being made of his lands 20 H. 8. it appears thereby, that this Mannour (there called by the name of Herdwick-Grimbald) was before the said partition assigned to William Dingley esquire, and Alice his wife, one of the daughters and heirs to the said John, and to the heirs of the said Alice: from which William and Alice descended Francis Dingley of Hykelesden in Com. Wigorn. who in Dec. 32 Eliz. past it to Richard Clever, whose grandson William now enjoys it.

THIS village stands at a larger distance from Leminton than the other Hamlets within the Parish, and taketh its name from the breadth of the Spring which riseth there: But of it I have not seen any mention in Record till 49 E. 3. that upon the assignation of what Maud the daughter and coheir of John Hasting had of her fathers inheritance, it was reserved in the Kings hands, in respect of the minority of Joan the other sister and coheir; which Joan became the wife of Sir John Salisbury Knight, attainted in the Parliament of 12 R. 2. But afterwards of Sir Rustine Villenoef Knight, and dyed seized thereof 7 H. 5. leaving Joan the wife of Henry Delves esquire her daughter and heir.

Birdingbury.

Lower yet on the same side of Leame lyes Birdingbury, being one of those towns that E. Leofrik gave to the Monks of Cobentre upon his foundation of that Monastery; and, probably, was so called at first, from its situation so neer the brink of the River, Bord in the French signifying a shore. Which Monks had here in the Conquerors time two hides valued at xxv s. as appeareth by the generall Survey then made: But through mistake of the transcriber, the B. is put in the place of the first B. and a G. for the later; so that in stead of Birdingberie as it should have been recorded, it is written Derbingerie. At the same time it was certified, that Turchill de Warwick held one hide and half a yard land in this place, by Goslinus his under-tenant, then valued at xl s.

How long those Monks of Cobentre held their interest here, I have not seen; but by what I shall say by and by, it will appear, that it was granted by them to one of the Hastings of Allestey in this County, and to hold by the service of one Knights fee. And for that which Turchill de Warwick had, it seems it came to Henry de Armentiers (of whom I have spoke in Wotton;) For in 7. Joh. Henry Travers being impleaded by the said Henry de Armentiers for the service of a Knights fee, which he held of him in this place, confessed the action, and gave him a Fine in consideration of the arrearages then due. Which part so belonging to Armentiers, amounting to half a Knights fee was in 36 H. 3. certified to be held by Thom. de Clinton Nevill.

of the Earl of Warwick. But the Mannour belonging to Hastings was about that time committed to the custody of Stephen de Waurham, after the death of Henry de Hastings, in respect of the minority of Henry his heir. Which last mentioned Henry being an active man in that great rebellion against King H. 3. (as in Allestey, and Benilwozth I have shewed) forfeited all his lands: yet such was the favour that the King shew'd unto Joan his wife, as that he assigned divers Lordships of her said husbands, amongst which this was one for her maintenance, even at that time when he most obstinately held the Castle of Benilwozth against him; which also by vertue of the Dictum de Benilwozth came to his posterity: For John de Hastings, son to the said Henry, possessed it, and in 13 E. 1. claymed a Court-leet and other priviledges therein, which were allowed.

And afterwards granted it to Sir John Paynel Knight, who in 28 E. 1. stiling himself Dominus de Bardingbury presented to the Church; and in 6 E. 2. obtained a Charter of Free-warren in all his demesne lands here, and at Althelepe in Posff. But it seems the estate he had therein was only for terme of life; for so was it certified upon the Inquisition taken 6 E. 2. after the death of John de Hastings.

This John Paynel, was no lesse than a Baron, having been summoned to the severall Parliaments from 27 E. 1. to 12 E. 2. But John de Bardingbury being his principall seat, I shall say no more of him than that he bore for his Armes two bars with an Isle of Martlets, and dyed before the 19. of E. 2. Whereupon this Mannour was assigned to Julian then the wife of Thomas le Blount as part of her dowrie from John de Hastings her former husband: but the inheritance thereof belonging to Laurence de Hastings E. of Pembroke, son and heir of the before specified John, came at length by force of an entayle, together with Fillongley, (as I have there at large discovered) unto William Beorchamp, second son to T. Beorchamp Earl of Warwick; who in 16 R. 2. granted it unto John Olney Receiver generall of all his lands, in consideration of his good and faithful service, to hold during life, paying to the said William x s. per annum. Which John (then Lord of Weston-Underwood in Com. Buck.) was, in 2 H. 4. created to hold half a Knights fee in this place of the E. of Warwick.

It seems that the inheritance of it was afterwards granted to the same John: For Margaret the daughter and heir of Robert Olney, son to the said John being wedded to Thomas Throgmorton (of Coughton in this County) brought it to that family: whose grandson, Sir George Throgmorton Knight, together with Robert his son and heir, by their deed dated 27. Martii 32 H. 8. past it to John Hytmer Citizen of London and his heirs. But the next possessor thereof, that I find, was Jasper Leek of Grays-Inne in Com. Midd. Gent. which Jasper, 16. Dec. 10 Eliz. granted it to Henry Goodeere of Baginton esquire, who in June next following sold it to John Shukburgh, then of Payton Gent. (one of the 6. Clerks in Chancery) whose great grandchild, Thomas, now enjoys it.

There was certain land lying in this place, very anciently given to the Nuns of Polestwozth by Edelina the sister to Robert Boteler of Cnglebs, for the health of the soul of Walter de Sumervile, and of Roger de Sumervile; as also of her own soul, and the souls of all her Ancestors and Successors, to perform the Anniversary for the said Walter on the feast day of S. Mary Magdalen. In consideration of which grant the said Nuns promised, that whensoever she should happen to depart this life they would cause her body to be carried to Polestwozth, and bury it honourably in their Cloyster with due Exequies.

The Church (dedicated to S. Leonard) was in Anno 1291. 19 E. 1. valued at vi. marks, and in 26 H. 8. at vii li. x s. over and above viii s. allowed for Procurations and Synodals.

Marton.

About a mile below Birdingbury stands Marton, which I conceive had its name originally from the Moore, or Marsh-ground adjoining, (the M by antient use in pronuntiation being changed into A, as in the North parts of this Kingdom, where the Vestigia of our old English are yet most plain to be found, is yet v. y. usual;) and whereof there is frequent mention in the Conquerours Survey, one of the Hundreds then in being (as I have already shewed) bearing the title thereof: yet do not I find any particular mention of it, unless it be that which is there certified to be held by Richard Forestarius, and written Mortone, whereof the value is certified at xx s. having been the freehold of one Wiching before the Norman invasion.

It should seem that Robert de Craft was owner of it in H. 2. time, and that he held it, partly of Hugo filius Ricardi (of whom I have spoke in Worshale), and partly of William Earl of Warwick: For upon the Kings confirmation of the Church to the Nuns of Caton in this County, it is expressed to be of the gift of the said Robert de Craft, and of the fee of the same Hugo fil. Ricardi, and William Earl of Warwick. Whereby I may conclude, that the said Robert de Craft was Lord of the Mannour. But for want of further light from Record I shall not be able to discover, who were owners of it in a perfect Series; and therefore, by that little glimpse I have, will adventure to guess.

In 12 Joh. Walter Walerand held a half a Knights fee here: but it should seem that the Canons of Chauncie in Northamptonshire had all or the greatest part of the Mannour before the Rebellion in King John's time: for in 1 H. 3. the Shiriff had command to give them the like possession thereof as they had before that war, and of which they alleaged, that they were unjustly disfeised by William Bassett. In 20. H. 3. it was certified, that Raph de Marchaineleg held a Knights fee here of the Earl of Warwick; and in 1 36 H. 3. that Thomas de Clinton held the same of those Earls.

Shortly after which, viz. in 50 H. 3. I find, that Raph Bassett of Sapcote (one of the vanquishd Rebels in the battail of Evesham) had xl s. Rent here: But what that was to the Mannour, or part thereof I am not able to say; yet this subsequent particular which I have noted may perhaps, by the help of other authorities, when they shall be found, give some light therein; viz. that in 18 E. 1. William de Hamelton had one mess: and one carucat of land in this village, which mess: was held of John Engayne and Joan his wife, who held it over of Nicholas Charnells, and he of Simon Bassett, and he of the Earl of Warwick. Now that Charnells had some relation to Craft by descent, I have in Bilton shewed some probability; but to draw any absolute conclusion from these premisses I shall not adventure.

One thing I meet withall, which inclines me to think, that whereas it is recorded in the Conquerours Survey, that the Earl of Wentworth held half a hide in Mortone, unto which one Wallef, whose freehold it was before the Conquest, was then his tenant, it is meant this Marton: for upon the extent of the lands of Edmund Earl of Lanc. in 25 E. 1. it appears, that John de Bishopdon held in Merton (which I take to be no other than this place) the fourth part of a Knights fee; as also that his tenants came to the Court-leet held for the Honour of Leicester. And that which makes it more probable, that this place or the greater part of it was antiently of the old Earls of Leicesters fee, is not onely the grant of the Church to the Monastery of Sun-Caton, as I have already observed (which was of their foundation) but that those Nuns (at length) were reputed to have the Seignory here, as appears by the certificat in 9 E. 2. At which time I also find, that Raph Bassett of Sapcote held half a Knights fee therein, of the Earl of Warwick. Which half Knights fee was in 20 E. 3. certified to be held of the same Earls by Guy Bretton, Will. de Zouch, and John de Tewe: which Will. gave a part of what he so had to the Canons of Studley.

But further than what I have said, can I find little relating to this place, till John Gold of Wetton in Com. Northampton. gent. by his deed dated 2 Nov. 38 H. 8. past a certain Mannour here unto Thomas Oldfield and his heirs: from whom descended (as tis like) Roul. Oldfield of Wylford in Com. Sufft. gent. which Roul. 1. Maii 4. Jac. sold it to John Davies of Watford in Com. Northampton. Clerke, who 30. Sept. 14 Jac. aliened it to Ric. Walter, father of John Walter the present owner thereof. As for that Mannour and lands, which the Nuns of Caton had, they were 26. Julii in 4. & 5. Ph. & M. past out of the Crown to Peter Temple and Mich. Camefwell: which Peter and Mich. 15. Sept. the same year, conveyd the greatest part of the lands (but excepted the site of the Mannour) unto John Whood and others; whose son Tho. Whood, together with one T. Wilcox, 3. Nov. 44 Eliz. granted them to Ric. Walter, and he to Thomas Walter, his second son, that now enjoys them.

There was very antiently (as yet is) a Bridge here at Marton, over Leame; at which, it seems, passengers used to pay Toll: for in 7 H. 3. the K. committed the charge of receiving it, to the Abbot of Sulby, who gave security for payment of a certain Rent to him for the same. After which the Prioreis of Catesby had the custody thereof: For in 4 E. 1. she was presented for withholding 2. of the 5 s. due from her for the same. But in K. H. 5. time John Middilton, a wealthy Mercer of London, born in this town, conceiving it to be a good and charitable worke to disburthen the people from further payment of that Toll for the repair and support thereof, built a fair Bridge here of lime and stone, and obtained thereupon the Kings Precept to the Shiriff, requiring him to forbear any more to demand those customary payments from such passengers as should have occasion to go that way.

The Church (dedicated to S. Esperit) hath been very antiently appropriated to the Monastery of Sun-Caton; but the certain time when, appeareth not. In Anno 1291. 19 E. 1. it was valued at 7. marks; and in 26 H. 8. the Vicaridge at vii li. xiv s. viii d. over and above xviii d. yearly allowed for Procurations and Synodals.

Hodnell.

I Came being here augmented with Ichene, which riseth at the skirt of those Hills neer Hodnell, I shall ascend to the head of that Brook, and must take notice of all those places that lye on the North-East part of it. But before I begin so to do, it will not be amiss to observe the cause of its name; which, without all doubt, was occasioned by the subterranean passage thereof. For at Oversington, upon a Common, within little more than two miles of the head thereof, is there a pool upon the Heath, from which passeth a petty stream that enters the ground, and running through certain intricate passages, or Clefts in the earth, for the space of about half a mile, at last findeth an issue, and taketh its course into the brook before specified; for which reason the name thereof, scil. Ichene, being derived from the Greek word ichthys (which language was doubtless the mother of our old English-Saxon) that signifyeth to try or search out diligently, was not unfitly applied thereto.

Neer to the head of this little stream stood Hodnell; which, as it is of a large extent, so was it anciently well inhabited, and had a Church, whereof, now, the ruines are scarce to be seen. In the Conquerors time the Earle of Bellent held 4 hides in this place by Gislebertus his tenant, then valued at 1x s. and possessed by one Ordric before the Norman invasion. At the same time also Turchill de Warwick held 5. hides here, then rated at 1x s. and which were the freehold of the same Ordric, and one Ulnod before the Conquest. And Will. fil. Corbucion 1. hide, then likewise rated at xx s. In the generall Survey it is written, in 2. places Hodenelle, and in the third Hodenhelle, the originall, of the name being; as is most probable, from some ancient possessor thereof in the Saxons time, perhaps Odo, which then was an usuall appellation; for the H is indifferently received or omitted, as we experimentally find in many cases; the later part, viz. Hulle, Hille, or Helle all signifying the same, which is the high situation thereof.

But though it was thus in severall hands at that time, as hath been said, yet came it soon after to be united, and possessed by the first Earle of Warwick of the Norman line, who enfeoffed Hugo fil. Ricardi, as it seems, thereof; and he Ric. de Burton (of whom in Buxton super Dunsmoze I have spoke;) for it appears^d that the said Hugo fil. Ricardi, and VWill. Earle of Warwick confirmed to the Nuns of Caton all that which was then called Great-Hodenhull; being given to them by the said Ric. de Burton soon after the foundation of that Monastery.

Howbeit, of some other part of this place, was one VWill. Angevin anciently enfeoffed by Robert de Tayden: which VWill. in H. 2. time gave^e the totall of what he had here, to the Monks of Combe, excepting two yard land reserved for his own use, afterward bestowed on them by Nigell Angevin, son of the same VWill. All which was confirmed by the said Rob. de Tayden, and Henry his son. Divers other grants of land in this place, to those Monks were made by severall persons of mean rank; but because they were small quantities I have past them by.

After the Nuns of Caton and Monks of Combe were thus possessed of the greatest part of Hodenhull, there grew some question betwixt them touching the payment of Tithes: for the Nuns, having the Church to which they were due, required them accordingly: But the Monks insisted upon their privilege, being of the Cistercian Order; howbeit this difference lasted not long; for the Monks were contented to wayve their privilege, and by an Agreement concluded, that those Tithes should be assigned unto them for the enlargement of their Dyet yearly, upon Tuesday in the third week of Advent. For which favour it was then determined, that VWill. the then second Abbot of Combe, should have the day of his death recorded in their Martyrologe at Caton, yearly to be recited in their Chapter; and that after such his decease, the said enlargement of Dyet for the Nuns should be changed from the before mentioned Tuesday, to the day of his Obit.

But these Hodenhulls came in process of time to be distinguished otherwis^e than they were at first; the one being called Hodenhull-Gurmund, by reason that one Gurmundus held^b the 5. part of a Knights fee here of the Earle of Warwick; and the other Hodenhull-Osbert, from one Osbert who held^c the fourth part of a Knights fee of those Earles: which family of Gurmund continued here for some descents; for it appears^k, that in 36 H. 3. Thomas Gurmund held the said 5. part of a Knights fee of the Earle of Warwick, at which time one Simon de Hodenhull answered^l for half a Knights fee in the other, then called Schiten-Hodenhull.

Touching that which the Monks of Combe possessed here, I find, that it had anciently the reputation of a Mannour; for by that name in 13 E. 1. they claymed^m a Court-Leet, and

and other privileges therein, and had allowance of them, as I have seen by the testimony of an ancient Roll, being vi mess. with vi yard land and a half, 48 acres going to a yard land: which part was also called "Schiten-Hodenhull. But the Monks of Combe continued not owners thereof till the general dissolution of the Religious Houses: For in 16 E. 4. Will. Catesby Esq; son of Sir Will. Catesby Kt. obtained "the same, together with the Mannour of Robbarne, and what they had in Ascote, to himself and the heirs male of his body, from the Abbot and Covent of that House.

Other persons there were also that held lands in this place, viz. in 20 E. 3. John Burnell the 8 part of a Kts. fee; Simon Gurmund the 4 part. And about the 44 E. 3. Rob. Burnell, by marriage of the heir, the 4 part of a Kts. fee in Hodenhull-Bruiz, and Ric. Gurmund a 5 part in Hodenhull-Gurmund; which 5 part John Harryes was found to hold in 2 H. 4.

But the Mannour which belong'd to Pan-Caton, continued to that Monastery till 30 H. 8. that all the great Houses went to wrack. After which it was purchased from the Crown, as I have heard, by John Spenser (whose ancestors had their residence "here, in H. 7. time) and one Tho. Brauncefeild. Which John and Thomas sold "it to Thomas Wilkes, a Merchant of the Staple, who dying without issue, it devolved to Will. Wilkes, his brother; and so, by reason that Robert his onely son dyed "without issue, to his daughters and heirs; whereof Anne, the eldest, was married to Sir Will. Kingmill Kt. Frances, the second, to Erasmus Dreyden Bar. and Margaret, the third, first to Francis Dimock, and afterwards to Thomas Gibbs: whereupon partition "being made, Old-Hodenell (being that part thereof where the Mannour-house sometime stood) fell to the said Erasmus Dreyden, whose son and heir, Sir John Dreyden, now of Canons-Ashby in Com. Northampt. enjoys it: Ascote, another part of it, to Sir Will. Kingmill, who had issue Sir Henry Kingmill of Sydmoncton in Com. Suolt. Kt. and he Sir Will. the present owner thereof: And Watergall (likewise parcel thereof) to Thomas Gibbs, whose son Edward still hath it.

Touching the depopulation here, I find 2, that in 18 H. 6. there were but 4 Householders, yet the Church was standing in 23 H. 8. for Tho. Spenser before specified, by his last Will "and Testament made at that time, bequeathed his body to be interred before the Image of our blessed Lady in the Chancel thereof, near to the place where his father was buried: and over and above 1 marks that he gave by his said Testam. to this Church (dedicated to S. Helene) appointed, that his Executors should cause the Church-yard to be paled round, and to be so kept. Which Thomas gave also C marks to a C poor mens daughters, such as dwelt nearest to Hodenhull, to buy them Kyne at their marriages, and entailed his lands upon Thomas, son and heir to Will. Spenser of Wadby.

The Church (in old time but "a Chapel) had a mark per ann. and a Stone of Wax granted "out of it to the Canons of Kenilworth by G. Muschamp B. of Cob. in K. John's time; and being appropriated "to the Monastery of Pan-Caton very antiently, was in ann. 1291. 19 E. 1. valued "at v marks, but never any Vicar endowed. Neither in 26 H. 8. upon the valuation "of the Church-livings doth it appear, that here was so much as a Curat, the Tythes being then let by the Nuns of Caton to John Audley Esq; for xi l. xiii s. 10 d. per ann.

Ascote.

This was originally a member of Hodenhull, but antiently written Astanscote, and Estanscote; which shews, that the name at first sprung from some possessor thereof in the Saxons time; perhaps Estantas, for that was an appellation then in use.

I find that the Monks of Combe had divers petty parcels of land granted "to them by sundry persons of mean rank; all which Will. de Ludinton confirmed. But there is little further memorable of this place in particular, considering that the several Mannours in Hodenhull extended into it, other than that it hath been long since a "Village of many Inhabitants, though since depopulated, with Hodenhull; and that there was a large quantity of land lying within it, granted "by K. H. 7. to Sir John Risley Kt. with the Mannours of Lodbroke and Robburne, 3 H. 7.

Rodburne.

This also, from a Village of divers Inhabitants, and having a Church, is now by depopulation shrunk into one dwelling; and had its original name from the little Brook near which the town was seated, and the road from Southam towards Dabentre, over it; burne in our old English signifying a petty rivulet, and Rode a passage where people ride and travel, as is commonly known.

All the mention that I find of it in the Conq. time, is "that Turchill de Warwick held something here; but it being in the Survey (then made) joyned with Lodbroc, I cannot distinguish the exact proportion thereof. Whatever it was, more or less, his posterity possess it; yet, with the rest of his lands that the Conq. was pleased that they should enjoy, to be held "of the Earls of Warw. by the x part of a Kts. fee. Of which line Will. de Arden, great grandchild to Turchill (viz. son of Henry, son of Siward, as in Curdworth I have manifested) was the first that made it their seat. This Will. being a good Benefactor to the Nuns of Hentwood, besides the grant "of one yard land lying here, which Wal. Durdent B. of Cob. in H. 2. time confirmed, gave "them the Church of this Rodburne, which G. Muschamp, his successor, in K. John's time, ratified, with allowance that they should receive the fruits thereof to their proper use. Neither was he less liberal to the Monks of Combe, as appears "by what they had of his gift in this place.

To him succeeded Will. his son and heir, who exceeded his father in bounty to those Monks; for he bestowed "on them above CC acres, and half a yard land, with pasture for 600 Sheep, five Sows with their Pigs, one Boar, 2 teams of Oxen, 5 Kyne with their Calves, and one Bull, 2 young Heifers with their Calves, and his Sheep-cotes on the Hills for their Sheep, all in this his Lordship of Rodburne. Neither was Michael "his son b.

streight-handed to them, nor almost any other that had Free-hold in this place, as may appear by their particular grants of several parcels of land; some of them therewith bequeathing their bodies to sepulture in that Monastery. Which Monks obtained divers privileges here, viz. Court-leet, Assize of Bread and Beer, Gallows, &c. as appeareth by their claim in 13 E. 1. whereunto K. E. 1. added his Charter of Free-warren, dated at Westm. 18 Febr. 18 of his reign. But the posterity of Arden who were Lords of this Mannour, having their seat here, sometimes called themselves de Rodburne, as by divers Records, besides these which I have in the margin pointed at, might be instanced; yet the last of them, scil. William, assumed the name of Arden again, and in 43 E. 3. sold all the interest he had here, to John the son of Will. Catesby: at which time Hugh de Prestwode, and Agnes his wife, past their whole right therein to the said John, by a Fine then levied, with warranty against the heirs of the said Agnes: So that it seems she was an heir, and probably of the same Will. de Arden.

Which Catesbys were of Abby Legers in Cam. Northampt. and afterwards had the Mannour of Lapworth in this Shire, where I purpose to speak historically of them.

In 13 H. 4. after the death of John de Catesby the purchaser, I find, that Emme his widow, and John his son, had a Charter of Free-warren granted to them (inter alia) in all their demesne lands here. And that in 21 E. 4. the Monks of Combe quitted all their interest here, by the name of the Mannour of Rodburne grange, to Will. Catesby Esq; son and heir of Sir Will. Catesby Kt. for which alienation K. H. 7. granted his pardon to the said Monks in 13 of his reign. But this Will. Catesby having been a great Favourite to K. Ric. 3. was attainted in the Parl. of 1 H. 7. whereupon his lands escheating to the Crown, this was by the K. given away to Sir John Risley Kt. and the heirs male of his body. Whether it came again to the Crown for want of issue male by the said Sir John Risley, I cannot say: but in 2 & 3 Ph. & M. the Q. granted it to Thom. Wilkes, Merchant of the Staple, and his heirs; whose brother and heir, viz. Will. Wilkes, dyed seized thereof, 27 Sept. 15 Eliz. leaving Robert his son and heir, then aged 12 years. Which Rob. dyed 26 Julii, 19 Eliz. without issue; whereupon his 3 sisters became his heirs, as in Woodnell I have shewed.

But that part of this place, which is called Little-Rodburne, did heretofore belong to the Priory of Coventre, and coming to the Crown at the general dissolution of the Religious Houses, was in 6 Eliz. granted by the Q. to Henry Goodere of Wolethworth Esq; and Clem. Throgmorton Esq; and their heirs. Which Henry by his Deed bearing date 26 Nov. 8 Eliz. released all his right therein to the said Clement, and his heirs: who in 15 Eliz. sold the same to Will. Catesby of Abby-Legers in Cam. Northampt. Esq; and his heirs. After which, viz. in 43 Eliz. Rob. Catesby, Thomas Leigh, and others (all Feoffees in trust of Catesby's lands, as it seems) by their Deed of bargain and sale past it to Ranulph Crew Esq; (afterwards Kt. and chief Justice of the K. Bench) whose grandchild John Crew (son and heir to Sir Clipsby Crew his eldest son) in Easter Term, ann. 1650. sold the same to Sir John Dreyden of Canons-Abby before mentioned.

That the Church was very anciently appropriated to the Nuns of Hentwood, I have already shewed; but how long they took benefit thereof, I know not: for it appears, that the Catesbys presented thereto as a Rectory; and that in 26 H. 8. the Parson received onely iiii l. xvi s. ii d. yearly, besides ix s. vi d. for Procurations and Synodals, from Ric. Catesby Esq; then his Patron; whereby it seems, that there was no Church then standing; but how long it had been down, I am not yet certain; for our Countryman Ross complains of the depopulation here amongst the rest of the Villages in this County, which in his time were ruined by inclosure.

Ladbroke.

About 2 miles lower, on the Northern bank of the same Torrent, stands Ladbroke, which (I suppose) had its name originally from the dirty soyl and clay where the stream runneth, Laid in the old British signifying the same with lutum and limus: but it is frequently written in all ancient authorities Lodebroc, the a being changed into o.

In the Conq. time the E. of Wentworth had two hydes here, then valued at 50 s. Turchill de Warwick 3 hydes, with 4 yard land and better, whereof one the Priest held, and the other two one William, whom I suppose to be progenitor of the family which afterwards assumed this place for their surname: And Hugh de Grentmairwill three yard land, with a Mill of iii s. That Turchill's lands, for the most part, came to Henry E. of Warwick before the end of the Conq. reign, I have in Warwick sufficiently manifested: but of what family he was, whom the succeeding Earls enfeoffed of this place, I cannot certainly discover: but Will. de Ladbroke, the first that I find to have assumed his surname from hence, in 11 H. 2. was certified to hold a Kts. fee of Will. then Earl of Warwick, de veteri feoffamento; that is to say, whereof himself or his ancestor was enfeoffed in H. 1. time; so that I am induced to believe, that the brother of this Will. became so enfeoffed: For in the Confirmation, which the said Will. made to the Canons

Canons of Kenilworth of the Church of Herbert, given originally unto them by G. de Cumberton, Founder of that Monastery, he there makes mention that his brother (whose name is not expressed) was his predecessor.

That which the E. of Spellent had here, was also granted by some of the old Earls of Leicester to one of those Lodbrokes, to hold by the fourth part of a Kts. fee; for the same was held by their posterity of the Lord Ferrers of Goby, who by Quincy deduceth his descent from a co-heir of those Earls.

In 5 Joh. John de Lodbroc (grandchild of Will.) being distrained by the E. of Leic. for the service of a Kts. fee held of the said Earl, impleaded Tho. de Arden for not discharging him thereof. Which Kts. fee lay in Leicester, as I guess; for this Mannour was held of the E. of Warwick by the service of a Kts. fee. This John de Lodbroc in H. 3. time, was often in Commis. for taking Assizes of Novel disseisin and Goal-delivery, and for other affairs of great importance in this County, as I shall here instance, viz. in 16 H. 3. he, with Will. de Bessopdon had the custody of the Kings Eschaers and Wards committed to them; and the same year was appointed one of the Commissioners for assessing and collecting a xl. part of each mans movable goods for the Ks. use. In 19 H. 3. he was constituted one of the Commissioners for gathering of Tallage upon the K. demesne lands; and in 21 H. 3. for the collecting of a xxx. part of all mens personal estates then granted to the K. In 25. he was one of those, who with the Sheriff had appointment to view all the Castles in this County, and to certify under their Seals what defects they found in the strength of them.

To him succeeded Henry, his son and heir, who in 26 H. 3. was certified to hold 3 Kts. fees of the E. of Warwick; and the next year following was one of the Justices for Goal-delivery at Warwick. That this Henry and John his father were Benefactors to the Monks of Combe, the particular parcels of land in this Village, given to that Monastery by them, do sufficiently declare; which were received with such grateful respect, as that Will. de Chelre the then Abbot, with the Convent of that House, by their publick Instrument, dated on the Octaves of the holy Trinity, an. 1250. (34 H. 3.) granted to the said Henry, and his heirs, the choyce of a fit Clerk to be presented in that Monastery, and there shorn a Monk successively for ever, for the health of the souls of John de Lodbroc his father, Sarra his mother, and of his the said Henry and Isbell his wife.

In 39 H. 3. he underwent the Office of Eschaetor in this County, and had issue John, who wedded Joan, the daughter and heir of Ric. de Paresworth, widow of Ric. de Bray. This John, in 56 H. 3. received pardon from the King for payment of xl. s. at which he was amerced by the Justices Itinerant for not being then a K. and in 28 E. 1. being constituted one of the Justices of peace in this County, had the next year following Summons, with divers other great men, to attend the K. at Warwick upon Twede on the Feast-day of the Nativity of S. John Bapt. well and sufficiently provided with Horses and Arms to march against the Scots. I am of opinion, that he was Knighted in that expedition; for in 32 E. 1. I find him so styled. In 1 E. 2. he was again in Commission for the Goal delivery at Warwick; and left issue Henry de Lodbroke, who in 19 E. 2. was a Kt. and in 17. in the List of those Kts. and men at Arms, whose names were then returned into the Chancery.

Which Henry had issue John, who in 10 E. 3. had his Knighthood respited for 2 years. Against this John, and his brother Hugh, did the Earl of Warwick commence suit in 17 E. 3. alledging, that they went about fraudulently to avoid him of the services due for the Mannor of Cuntasthorpe in Com. Leic. held of his fee. Which John took to wife Hawisa, the daughter and heir of Sir Rob. de Davintre Kt. and of Hawise his wife, daughter of Will. de Keynes; and by his Deed bearing date the Tuesday next before the Feast of S. Barnabe the Apostle, 21 E. 3. past this Mannour unto certain Feoffees, for the use of himself during life, & after to Thomas his eldest son and his heirs; (who had wedded the daughter of Will. de Catesby) the remainder to Hugh, brother to the said Thomas, and his heirs; and so to John, brother of the said Hugh, and to his heirs; and for default of issue by John, to the said Will. de Catesby and his heirs.

Which first mentioned John, being a Kt. in 23 E. 3. by his Deed dated at Doneworth the same year, released to the said Will. de Catesby, and Nich. Woodward of Itchington, and their heirs, all the right he had in this Mannour, granting to them and their heirs the advowson of the Church, and bore for his Arms Azure a Cheveron ermine, as by his Seal appeareth. After which, viz. in 46 E. 3. Tho. de Lodbroke, son to the said Sir John, quitted all his interest in this Mannour to the before specified Will. de Catesby: which Will. had issue John, who in 7 R. 2. (his father being then dead) did his homages to Henry Lord Ferrers of Goby

for those lands that he held in Lodbroke of him, viz. the fifth part of a Kts. fee (which were of the Fee of Leicester.) In K. Ric. 2. time, there were great suits betwixt Alice, the wife of Lewes Cardian, and him the said John, for this Mannour, as appeareth by several Bills of complaint exhibited in the K. Court by her against him: she pretending an Entail made by Sir Henry Lodbroke Kt. her grandfather, by force whereof she claimed: But Catesby alledged, that his father purchased it from Sir John Lodbroke Kt. (father to Alice) and that the said Deed of Entail was counterfeited by one Thomas Bromle of Cobentre, whom he indicted for so doing. In short, after much time and money spent therein, I find, that the said John de Catesby, and Lewes Cardian (together with Will. Hathewyk, husband to Catherine, daughter and heir to the same Lewes and Alice, as the Descent sheweth) entered into C. l. bonds apiece to each other, to stand to the Award of the Dukes of Surry and Exeter, for a final end of the business; which Dukes referred the examination of the evidence on both sides to Will. Gascoyn, Rob. Tirwhit, John Rede, and Will. Skyrne (great Lawyers of that age) who taking to their assistance Sir Walt. Clopton, Sir Will. Thirnyng, Sir John Cassy, Sir John Hulle, Sir Will. Rikfull, Will. Hankford, and Will. Brenchesle, at that time Justices of both Benches, and fully weighing the same, made Report on the behalf of the before specified John de Catesby, as by their Instrument * under their Seal, bearing date 20 Junii, 22 R. 2. appeareth. So that there is no doubt, but that those Dukes determined thereof accordingly: for certain it is, that the said John de Catesby continued the possession. From whom it descended to his son Will. who in 6 H. 4. did his homage to Ric. Beauchamp E. of Warwick for the Kts. fee which he held here.

But this Will. departing the world without issue, his brother John became his heir, who dyed before the 13 of H. 4. for in that year did the K. grant Free-warren to Emma his widow, and John his son, in all their demesne lands here, and divers other places. To which last mentioned John succeeded Sir Will. Catesby Kt. and to him another Will. who being attainted in 1 H. 7. (as in Lapworth I have shewed) this Mannour escheated to the Crown, and in 3 H. 7. was granted by the K. to Sir John Rysley Kt. and the heirs male of his body: but by a special Act of Parl. in 11 H. 7. being restored unto George Catesby, son and heir of the said Will. together with the rest of his fathers forfeited lands, continued in this family till 38 Eliz. that John Throgmorton and others, by an Indenture tripartite betwixt Sir Will. Catesby and Sir Thom. Leigh Kts. of the first part, Robert Catesby son and heir of the said Sir Will. on the second, and John Throgmorton and Thom. Thornton on the third part, were enfeoffed thereof.

Which John and the rest did by their Deed of bargain and sale, dated 8 Febr. 40 Eliz. pass the same to Sir Rob. Dudley Kt. and Dame Alice his wife (daughter of the above mentioned Sir Thom. Leigh) and to the heirs of the said Sir Robert. Which Sir Robert having issue onely 4 daughters, viz. Katherine wife of Sir Ric. Leveson Kt. of the Bath, Douglasse, Anne, and Frances, they, together with Will. Wife, conveyed the same to Will. Palmer Esq; and his heirs, by their Deed bearing date 16 Maii, 9 Car. Which Will. settled it upon Will. Palmer his second son, 1 Junii, 12 Car. who afterwards, scil. 1 Apr. 18 Car. passed the same to Sir Will. Palmer, now of Clerkenwell in Com. Midd. Kt. a branch of those Palmers of Portsh. (by a younger son that settled at Sperston in Staffordshire) who bear for their Arms Argent upon 2 bars gules, 3 crescents of the first, with a Greyhound in chief sable.

There was antiently a Bridge over the river betwixt this town and Herberburg, which in 21 R. 2. being out of repair, was presented to be in the default of those two Villages; but upon proof made, that the same had been first built by one of the Lords of this Mannour, upon his own soyl, and for the benefit of himself and his own servants, the said towns were discharged.

The Church (dedicated to All Saints) was in an. 1291. (19 E. 1.) valued at xv marks, and in 26 H. 8. at xiii l. x s. over and above ix s. allowed for Procurations and Synodals.

Napton.

Beneath Lodbroke more than a mile, there falls another current into Achene, which hath its head within the precincts of Napton, whereof I am next, in pursuance of my method, to speak. This town stands upon a very eminent ascent, of which originally its name was taken, enap in the British language signifying the same with g. bhus or ruber, for such we know all Hills are in reference to the plains and flats whereon they stand: Neither is the word in that sense yet worn out of use amongst us; for we commonly call the top or highest part of a notable ascent, the knap of a hill; the c and k being omitted in the name of this place for facility of pronunciation.

In the Conquerors time the E. of Mellent held 3 hydes and 3 virgats here, valued at iii l. one Robert being his Tenant thereto; and whereof Levenot and Bundi were possessors before the Norman invasion; but in the Survey then made, it is written both Neptone and Cyptone. At the same time one Ulcherel (whose inheritance it had been in Edw. the Conf. time) held of the said Turchil half a hyde, valued at xxx s. And the same Robert 3 virgats, valued also at xxx s. which before the Conquest belonged to the said Edvinnus, of whom I have made mention in Flekenbo. Which Robert being enfeoffed of certain lands here by the said E. of Mellent (as he was also of Wetton subt. Wetthele) made this the place of his residence, his posterity continuing it for their habitation, and hence assuming their surname.

There are some of opinion, that he was a branch of the Vernons, Barons of Shipbroke in Cheshire; which may very well be, for the Arms of this family do differ no otherwise in the ordinary from that, than by the Escalops upon the fesse, taken, as 'tis like, in respect that in some parts of this Lordship there are stones of that kind (I mean like unto Escalops) found, as in the next (viz. Shukbozough) be those called Astroites. Which usage in assuming such particulars for their bearing in Arms, as the place where the person hath resided was famous for, hath been very antient; witness the Ermines by the Dukes of Britanny, being a furr wherewith that Country much aboun-deth, by reason of those little Beasts so called, which are in those parts: As also the Masles by the Dukes of Rohan, in regard the Carps in that Duchy have such marks upon their scales, as that learned Gentleman, my singular friend, and furtherer of this present work, Edw. Bisse Esq; in his judicious observations upon Upton hath manifested.

But I return to the before specified Robert. That which he had here, with Wetton, was held of the same Earls posterity, by the service of two Kts. fees, they having the Leet and divers other privileges in both these places, as appertaining to the Honour of Leicester. But besides what the family of Napton had in this place, there was much that other persons held, though a perfect succession of their several interests I cannot set forth. I shall therefore next take notice of what I have met with relating to the line of Napton which is historical.

Of his son Adam I find, that in 36 H. 3. he was a Commissioner for the Goal-delivery at Warwick, being then one of the Coroners in this Shire; from which Office he had leave to be free, the same year, by reason of his imployment in the service of Raph Fitz Nicholas (a great man in those dayes, and Steward to the K. as in Streton-Baskerville I have intimated) yet the next ensuing year was he again made Coroner; but, in regard of his disability to undergo it, had shortly after a discharge from that Office. This Adam was a Kt. in 13 E. 1. and left issue Robert: who amongst many other great men, in 29 E. 1. had Summons to be at Warwick upon Twede on the Feast-day of the Nativity of S. I. ha Bapt. sufficiently accoutred with Horse and Arms to march against the Scots; and the same year was constituted one of the Commissioners for assessing and collecting a xv. in this County. In 4 E. 2. he was a Kt. In 13. he was, with John de Langley, assigned to levy and collect the Scutage in this County, for the expedition into Scotland; and in 15. he had a Charter for a Mercate to be kept here at Napton weekly upon the Thursday, and a yearly Fair to last for 3 dayes, viz. the Even, day and morrow after the Assumption of the blessed Virgin.

This Sir Robert married Lucia the daughter to Guy de Beauchamp E. of Warwick, and had issue Adam his son and heir: which Adam being dead before the 44 E. 3. left issue John his son and heir, and two daughters, viz. Thomasine, married to Will. White, and Jane to John de Shukburgh, as the descent sheweth: But that this Mannour of Napton devolved to the Shukburghs by reason of that marriage, though the said Jane or her descendants at length became heirs, or co-heirs to the family of Napton, I make a question: For in 1 H. 4. John Napton and Eliz. his wife past it to Ric. Cosford and Ric. Geydon Priests; and in 12 H. 4. Will. the son of Alice Betons of Napton, and Agnes his wife, levied a Fine thereof to Will. Shukburgh and others, and to the heirs of the said W. Shukburgh, with warranty against himself and his heirs. Which Will. Shukburgh, of Shukburgh (for so he is termed) was certified to be Lord thereof in 10 H. 6. from whom it is by inheritance come to Sir Ric. Shukburgh, now of Shukburgh Kt. the present owner thereof.

And from an heir female to a younger branch of these Naptons, are the Feildings of Peltenham likewise descended, as not onely by certain old quarterings in their Arms, but by the Pedegree on the last page, appeareth; through whose right they heretofore posselt the Mannour of Spisterton in Com. Wilt. out of which a Rent is still paid to them.

It should seem that those lands which Turchill de Warwick held here in the Conq. reign, continued for some time to his posterity; for in 52 H. 3. Thom. de Arden, lineal heir to Turchill, was certified to hold the x. part of a Kts. fee in this place of the E. of Warwick. In 20 H. 3. I find, that Rob. de Albemarle held half a Kts. fee here of the Prior of Cobentre; and in 9 E. 2. Raph Bile of Sapcote the v. part, lying on that side of Napton anciently called Napton-Boscher; for which in 44 E. 3. Ric. de Compton and his tenants did answer: but in whom these are now, or to shew any thing more of them, is past my skill. Besides this Mannour, whereof I have already spoke, there are two other within the precincts of Napton; the one commonly called Vaux his Mannour, and the other Browns; of which I have here added what I have found in Record, or otherwise. The first of these was by a Fine, levied 9 E. 2. between Rob. de Harwedon Pl. and John de Wileby Deforciant, settled upon the said Rob. for life, the remainder to Rob. the son of the said John de Wileby, and Emme his wife, and the heirs of their two bodies; and for default of such issue, to the right heirs of John de Wileby. Of this in 5 H. 6. did Thom. Chaumbre and Elianore his wife levy a Fine, together with other Mannours in Com. Wilt. and Berk. to Ric. Buckland and his heirs, with warranty against the heirs of the said Elianore, which argues that she was an Inheritrix: but it seems the uses were to the said Tho. Chaumbre; for in 10 H. 6. the said Thomas, by the name of Thom. Chaumbre of Spetton in Com. North-hamp. Esq; was certified to hold the same by the 4 part of a Kts. fee.

How it came from Chaumbre to Vaux, I have not yet seen; but in 1 E. 4. it eschaeted to the Crown by the attainder of Sir Will. Vaux Kt. and the same year was given away by the K. to Raph Hastings Esq; and his heirs; which grant K. Ric. 3. by his Letters Pat. dated 10 Aug. 1 of his reign, confirmed. Neither can I say any more thereof, than that 3 parts in 4 of it were sold to Thom. Deacons of Napton Gent. 15 Nov. 36 Eliz. by Laurence Eyton of in Com. North-hamp. Gent. and Edw. Eyton his son: which Thomas, upon the marriage of Will. his son with Grace, one of the daughters of Hugh Beresford, late of Slateley in this County, by his Deed dated 20 Junii, 12 Jac. entailed it on the said Will. with divers remainders.

And of Browns I find, that the family of Brown being posselt of several parcels of land here, that came in time to have the reputation of a Mannour, at length by Joane the daughter of Henry Browne, wife to John Cranow, they descended to Christopher Cranow their son and heir: which Christopher, by his Deed dated 10 Martii, 24 H. 7. past all his right therein unto Ric. Willys and his heirs; from whom descended George Willys late of Fenni-Compton Gent. who in 16 Car. aliened the greatest part, if not all of them, to Ric. Shukburgh Esq; (but now Kt.) the present owner thereof.

The Church (dedicated to S. Laurence) was in an. 1291. 19 E. 1. valued at xxv marks, the perpetual patronage whereof Sir John de Pulteny Kt. obtained; procuring Ric. de Napton, Rector of the Church of Whelton in Com. North-hamp. 23 E. 3. to release unto him all his title therein: and thereupon the same year had license of the K. to bestow it on the Church of S. Laurence in Candletoph-street London, by him the said Sir John then newly founded. But before it was appropriated thereto as he intended, John Stratford Archb. of Cant. got it, with intent to annex it to the Chapel of S. Thomas the Martyr, then also newly by him founded at Stratford super Avon in this County: Howbeit this purpose of the Archb. was not effected; for it appears, that Rob. de Streetford, Bishop of Chichester (brother and heir to the Archbishop of Canterbury) granted it to Will. de Sharethull and others, in 35 E. 3. who by the K. Letters Pat. dated 4 Dec. the same year, had license to bestow it on the Monks of Combe; which they did not accordingly do: but in 37 E. 3. passed passed it to Ric. Earl of Arundell, and his heirs, whereby at length it came to the said Coll. Church of S. Laurence-Pultney, and was incorporate thereto by Pope Urban the vi. the Vicaridge being endowed in 11 R. 2. by Ric. Scroope Bishop of Cob. and Wich. which Vicaridge in 26 H. 8. was valued "at ix l. xliii s. per ann. over and above viii s. allowed for Procurations and Synodals.

Within the precincts of this parish was there a Chapel of S. Laurence, as appears by a License "in 16 R. 2. granted by the B. unto one John Odams of Wapton, that he might have divine service celebrated therein.

Southam.

Following this little stream, I come next to Southam, situate on the North side thereof. This, with a great part of Loddyoke and Rodburne, was given by K. Ethelred (about 80 years before the Norman Conquest) unto Earl Leofwyne, as by his Deed, where the metes and bounds in the Saxon language are set forth, may appear; and by Earl Leofrik, son to the said Leofwyne, bestowed on the Monks of Cobentre upon his foundation of that Monastery in an. 1047.

(1 Edw. Conf.) By the Conq. Survey I find, that it contained 4 hydes, having 2 Mills rated at liii s. and woods of one mile in length, and half a mile in breadth, which were in the K. hands at that time; but where those woods stood, is hard to find out, for now there is scarce a tree left. In that Record it is written Sucham, the t being mistaken, as is usual, for c. which name (doubtless) it had, by reason of its Southern site from some former plantation, the word ham, with our ancestors signifying the same with habitatio.

To the Monks of Cobentre it continued even till the dissolution of that Monastery, and had a weekly Perccate on the Wednesday, first granted thereto in 11 H. 3. with a Faire yearly to last for 8 dayes, beginning on the day of S. Leodegarius the Martyr, (which falls out 2 Oct.) But these dayes for the Perccate and Faire being not found to fit for this place, in 23 H. 3. they were by a new Charter altered, viz. the Perccate to the Monday, and the Faire to S. George his day, and 7 dayes after.

Divers privileges had the said Monks here, as well as in other their lands, which I shall forbear now to mention, in regard that I have in Cob. taken notice of them at large. But upon the dissolution of that Religious House, this Mannour was in 34 H. 8. granted to Sir Edm. Knightley Kt. and his heirs, 25 Apr. 34 H. 8. whereof he dyed seized 12 Sep. following, leaving Joan, the wife of John Knottford Sergeant at Armes, Susanna Knightly, Anne the wife of George Throgmorton Esq; Mary the wife of Bartholomew Hussy, and Frances Knightly, his Cosins and next heirs, viz. daughters and heires to Richard Knightly late of Upton in Com. Northamp. Esq; brother and heir to the said Sir Edmund: By which means it came to be divided into 5 parts, whereof one was sold by James Duffield and Frances his wife (one of the said coheirs) in 3 E. 6. to Will. Est and others.

To trace down the succession of the rest, would be a work both intricate and troublesome; therefore all that I will here further observe touching these parcels, is, that Anne the wife to George Throgmorton before mentioned, afterwards of Tho. Porter of Ctyndon in this County, and lastly of Will. Cecill Esq; dyed 12 Junii, 7 Eliz. seized of the 4 part of this Mannour, leaving Fulke Porter, her son and heir, 15 years of age. And that Clem. Throgmorton of Haleley Esq; was found to dye seized of a 5 part in 16 Eliz. Job his son and heir being then 28 years of age.

In 21 R. 2. the Prior of Cobentre was presented for not repairing a Bridge upon the River Ichene, lying in this parish, and on the road-way betwixt Southam and Warwick; but it being proved that the said Bridge was originally made out of the devotion of some well minded people for the benefit of passengers; and that one John Bayliff of Southam, and divers other charitable persons, had repaired the same, of their voluntary dispositions, the Prior was discharged.

The Monks of Cobentre being Lords of this Mannour, were also Patrons of the Church, out of which by an Agreement betwixt the B. of this Diocess, and the said Monks, in 32 H. 3. there was assigned xxx marks yearly to be paid to the Cathedral of Wichfeld for ever, at the Feasts of S. Mich. and Easter by even portions, in lieu of the like sum of xxx marks, which the said Monks had had used to pay out of the Church of S. Mich. in Cobentre yearly, as in my discourse touching the same I have more fully shewed.

MS in Scac.
In an. 1291. 19 E. 1. this Church (dedicated to S. James,) was valued at x marks, over and above the said Pension of xxx marks, then paid yearly out of it to the Dean and Chapter of Lich. which annuity of xxx marks in 11 R. 2. was seized into the K. hands, in regard it appeared, that the said Dean and Chapter had purchased the same from the Monks of Cobentre without license from the Crown. But in 30 H. 6. the Prior and Covent of Cobentre had license from the K. to appropriate it to the use of their Monastery; whereupon it was accordingly effected by Will. Bothe, then B. of Cob. and Lich. his Instrument for that purpose bearing date 15 Julii the same year, reserving an yearly Pension of ii s. to himself and his successors, and xx d. to the Arch-deacon of Cobentre, to be paid on the Feast-day of S. Mich. the Arch-Angel for ever: at which time there was a Vicar endowed with xii marks per ann. and a convenient habitation. Howbeit this Appropriation did not long hold good, as it seems; for in 26 H. 8. there was no Vicaridge here, but the then Rector certified, that the Parsonage was worth xx i l. xvii s. iii d. per ann. over and above the annual Pension of x l. paid to the Cathedral of Lichfeld, and viii s. for Procurations and Synodals.

Stockton.

Northeast from Southam lyes Stockton, taking its name from the word Stoke, which significth a place of habitation: but thereof do I find no mention in the Conq. Survey. That it was therefore a member of Long-Ichinton, and then involved therewith, if we consider these circumstances, there can be no doubt; first, that Long-Ichinton, whereunto it adjoyneth, is certified in Domesday-book to contain to large a number of hydes, as there I shall shew; and next, that it was held of the Lords of Ichinton; by which consequently may be inferred, that some one of them past it away, reserving such services to himself and his heirs as were usual in those elder times to be performed. And though I have not seen any exprets Record plainly to discover the like grant thereof; yet when I consider, that the family of Limesy were owners of Ichinton soon after the Conquest and that Walter de Sumerville, who lived in H. 2. time, took to wife Cecelia de Limesy, it will be no great rashness to conclude, that the same Walter had it with her in Frank-marriage, she being a daughter of that House. To whose posterity it continued till E. 3. time; and then, by a daughter and co-heir, came to Griffith, as the descent here drawn will shew.

The principal feat of these Somerviles, was at Whithnoure in Com. Staff. which, with Barton (adjoyning thereto) K. Will. the Conq. gave unto Sir Gualtier de Somerville, a Norman: from whom descended the before specified Walter, that wedded Cecelie de Limesy; and from him (the fifth in descent) John (as the Pedegree sheweth) who questioned the Prior of Bertford for the advouion of the Church here at Stockton in 27 H. 3. deducing his right thereto from Roger his great grandfather: Unto whom the Prior pleaded, that he was at the disposal of the Abbot of S. Albans, and could not without him give answer thereto: But

f Ex Rot. p. Ioh. rers Tamr. castro t Place Westm. Hill. 3.

But John replied, that the said Prior, upon a former suit for this advowson, impleaded him by a Writ of Quare impedit, as Prior of Hertford, without naming the Abbot of S. Albans therein, and recovered it: And further alledged, that the Priors of Binham, Tunmouth, and other Cels belonging, as this of Hertford did, to S. Albans, alwaies used to plead in their own names, yet so as the said Abbot should have Summons to joyn with them if he pleased. What the success of this suit was, I have not seen; but it seems the Prior thought fit to strengthen his title; for I find, that in 56. H. 3. he procured the said John to levy a Fine thereof to the use of him and his successors; for which, besides a C. l. in money given him for so doing, he was made partaker of all their prayers, and other devout exercises.

wife in 11 E. 3.) enjoyed the estate; and in 12 Edw. 3. entailed this Mannour upon the heirs male of his body by Margaret then his wife; but for lack of such issue, on Rese ap Griffith, and Ioan his wife, for the life of the said Ioan; and after her decease, on Thomas the son of the said Rese, with divers remainders.

Which Sir Philip dyed 23 Jan. 28 E. 3. leaving issue Ioan his eldest daughter, wife of Sir Rese ap Griffith Kt. above mentioned, and Eliz. of John Stafford. Betwixt whom partition being made, the inheritance of this Lordship went with Ioan, and so came by descent to Sir George Griffith Kt. who in 35 H. 8. aliened it to Sir Walt. Smyth Kt. which Sir Walter sold it to Nich. Puresey in 1 E. 6. From whom descended George Puresey of Drapton in Com. Leic. Esq; who in our memory past it to John Clapham, one of the six Clerks in Chancery: which John, dying without issue, left John Clapham late of Winnall juxta Coventre his heir.

The Church (dedicated to S. Michael) belonged to the Priory of Hertford (as I have already shew'd) and in ann. 1291. 19 E. 1. was valued at ix marks; but in 26 H. 8. at x l. vii s. over and above xxx s. allowed for Procurations and Synodals. But what the said Priory of Hertford had here in Stokton, was after the dissolution of that Religious House, together with the site thereof, granted in 29 H. 8. to Anthony Denny and his heirs.

Whether this Church was originally granted to the Monks at Hertford before mentioned, by Rob. de Limefi, Founder of that Cell in H. 1. time; or whether by Cecelia de Limefi, and Walter de Somerville her husband (he having a more than ordinary respect to those Monks for her ancestors sake) I cannot positively affirm; but that it was so given by one of them, is not to be doubted. To this John succeeded Sir Rob. de Somerville Kt. who in 18 E. 1. had a Charter of Free-warren (inter alia) in this his Mannour of Stokton. Which Sir Rob. left issue divers sons, whereof Adam was one of the Knights for this Shire in the Parl. of 1 E. 3. But all dying issueless, Philip, the youngest (a Kt. & like-

Long-Ichington.

THis, containing the Hamlets of Waskote and Stonthorpe, had its name originally from the River Ichene on the banks whereof 'tis situat. In the Conquerors time, being posselt by one Cristina, who had it of the same Kings gift, it was by the Survey, then made, certified to contain 24. hides, and is there written Icentone. At that time it had a Church; for there were then two Priests; as also two Mills rated at vi s. viii d. with woods of two furlongs in length and one in breadth, all being valued at xx li. But when the King gave it to the said Cristina, it yielded xxxvi li.

This, with the other lands belonging to the said Cristina came to the family of Limesie, antiently men of great note, having their principall seat at Mulverle, whereof they were called Barons, as when I come to Solihull shall be manifested: but whether this Cristina married to Raph de Limesie, an eminent man in the Conquerours time, having fair possessions in the Counties of Posse. Suff. Hertford, Northampt. Pott. Somerset, Devon: and Warwick, I cannot affirm: howbeit, that his posterity enjoyed her lands, is sure enough, flourishing in great honour till King John's time, that the male line extinguished, and the Barony of Lymse (for so it is called) was divided betwixt Hugh de Odingfells a Fleming, and David de Lindsey a Scot, husbands to the coheirs of John de Limesy, as the descent here inserted will shew.

But before I begin to speak of the family of Odingfells, who had their seat here, I have a word or two to say of the Limesies, their ancestors; which is, that from the before specified Raph descended Raph, founder of the Priory at Hertford in H. 1. time; which Raph gave thereunto certain lands lying in this Lordship. To whom succeeded Alan his son and heir, who gave to that Monastery the Church of this Ichington; which grant Gerard his son, and John the son and heir of the same Gerard confirmed.

But descending to Odingfells, I observe, that from the said Hugh, by Basilia, sprung two very eminent and worthy families; of which the chief resided here at Ichington, even till our fathers memory; and that the other, which had Solihull and Marstoke, continuing not many descents, was by heirs female transplanted into other stocks. In 15. John. partition being made betwixt those coheirs, the said Hugh and Basilia paid a Fine of 500. marks to the King for livery of the moytie of those lands, by inheritance pertaining to her upon the death of her brother John de Limesie without issue, lying in the Countreys of Hertford, Orford, Worcester, Suff. and Warwick: For securing the payment whereof, Hugh and Will. two of his sons became bound. Which John de Limesi dyed 9 R. 4. 1. Whereupon Alice his widow (daughter of Rob. de Harecourt) married to Walleran E. of Warwick.

This Hugh de Odingfells was a Knight, and a man of great note in his time: for I find, that in 5 H. 3. he attended the King in person to the siege of Wittham-Castle in Com. Linc. with considerable forces, for which he had warrant to levy Ecuage upon all his tenants that held of him by military service; and dyed in 23 H. 3. whereupon Gerard his son had livery of all the lands in Ichington, and elsewhere, that were of the inheritance of Raffia his mother, and held of the King in Capite, then doing his homage, and giving security to the Sheriff of this County for the payment of his Relief; viz. 50 li. whereby it appears that his estate was great, the Relief for a Knights fee being anciently 2 but C. s. which Gerard being a Knight in 26 H. 3. gave a Fine of 50. marks to be freed from attendance upon the King into Gascoign, towards the payment whereof he had power to levy Ecuage upon all the Knights fees held of him: And in 48 H. 3. had summons with many other great men, to be at Wrotham in Midlent, sufficiently furnished with Horse and Armes, there to give the King advice, and assist him against Lewelin P. of Wales and his adherents, then in Rebellion; but departed this life in 50 H. 3. whereupon the custody of his heir, (then not of full age) with his lands held of the King in Capite, were granted to Edmund (surnamed Cronchback) the K. son.

It seemes that the year next following, his said son and heir, viz. Hugh de Odingfells accomplish'd his full age; for he then did his homage and had livery of his lands. which Hugh in 16 E. 1. was a Knight, and in 21. purchased the other moiety of this Mannour from John de Pinkney, to whom it descended by inheritance from his great grandmother, as the Pedegree sheweth. This John de Pinkney, being a Knight was the next year following hang'd for felony, whereupon there grew suits betwixt the same Hugh de Odingfells and Rob. de Pinkney, son and heir of the said John, concerning the title to that Mannour here in Ichington, which belonged to him the said John; but the King minding to afford his grace and favour in an especiall manner to the above mentioned Hugh, who at that time was to be employed into Gascoign, commanded the Sheriff to permit the said Hugh to have the present possession thereof (for it was seized into the Kings hands, by reason of that forfeiture) till the business was determined, giving security to prosecute his suit touching the same. By the Inq. taken after the death of this Hugh, who dyed 33 E. 1. it was certified, that he held this Mannour of the King in Capite, with the rest of his lands in other places by the service of half a Barony, to find one souldier in the Kings Army for xl. days at his own proper costs.

To him succeeded John his son and heir, then 28. years of age. Which John, being one of those that assisted the Earls of Lancaster and Warwick in the murder of Piers de Gaveston, had the Kings pardon for that fact in 7 E. 2. In 9 E. 2. he was a Knight, and dyed 10 E. 3. leaving issue John his son and heir then 24. years of age; who in 25 E. 3. being also a Knight, was for divers felonies and seditions then outlawed, whereupon this Mannour became seized into the Kings hands, and extended. This John wedded Amicia the daughter of Roger Corbet, with whom he had in marriage the Mannour of Warlaston in Com. Staff. and dyed in 27 E. 3. leaving John his son and heir 16. years of age; who in 31 E. 3. gave a Fine to the King of CC. marks for licence to marry whom he pleased, so that he continued in his due allegiance; at which time he did his homage, and had livery of his lands. This last mentioned John was a Knight in 32 E. 3. at which time he had the Kings pardon for breaking the house of William de Sherehall at Barton-Cote, and robbing him of plate and Jewells to the value of C. li. with certain gold in Florens, and other ready money. But after this he became of good credit; for in 51 E. 3. as also in 1. and 3 R. 2. was he joynd in Commis. with Thom. de Beauchamp then Earl of Warwick, and other persons of the best rank, for arraying of men in this County; and in 4 R. 2. dyed leaving John his son and heir xv. years of age, who in 9 R. 2. did his homage and had livery of his lands.

Which John was likewise a Kt. and dyed in 5 H. 4. Edw. his son and heir being then in minority; who in 3 H. 5. accomplish'd his full age, and being a Knight in 6 H. 5. was much honoured by that renowned King with severall employments of note; as also by King H. 6. in the beginning of his reign. For in the same sixth year of King H. 5. I find him a Commissioner in this Shire for arraying of men; and the next year following, one of those select men in this County, that bearing antient Armes was summoned to attend the King in person for defence of the Realm. In 9 H. 5. 2. and 5 H. 6. he was in Commission for the Peace in this County; and departing this life in 6 E. 4. left issue by Margaret daughter to John Cokyn of Burgh-lep in Com. Bedf. Gerard his son and heir 35. years of age; Of whom I find no other thing memorable than that by his Testament bearing date Anno 1493. (8 H. 7.) he bequeathed his body to be buried before the high Altar in the Chancell of the holy Trinity here at Ichington, and willed, that Margaret his wife should for the health of his soul give iv li. to a Frier, or Priest to sing a Trentall of S. George, there, for the space of one year next ensuing his decease.

Whose son and heir, Edward, accomplishing his full age in 9 H. 7. had then livery of his lands; and being a Justice of Peace in this County from 17 H. 7. till his death; as also in 8 H. 8. Escheator for the Countyes of Warwick and Leicester, married Anne the daughter of Richard Verney of Compton esquire, by whom he had issue Edmund his son and heir; which Edmund dyed seized of this Mannour 2 Sept. 5. & 6. Ph. & M. leaving John his son and heir 30 years of age: who, about the beginning of Q. Eliz. time, betaking himself to extravagant courses, put a period to this antient and long flourishing family, and dyed in a miserable condition: For, having first mortgaged this Lordship to Sir John Throgmorton, (as I have credibly heard,) who past his title therein to Robert Earl of Leicester, he became so poor, that had not one Harewood, formerly his Tenant, taken him into his house out of pity, he had dyed in the street. Which Earl, by his last Will and Testament gave the inheritance thereof, after the decease of his Lady, unto Sir Robert Dudley Knight his base son (as he there calls him) of whom in Kenilworth I have further spoke.

Having thus traced down the succession of the Mannour, I must not pass by some other things, which which are observable concerning this town; whereof the first and most antient is, that it was the birthplace of S. Wolstan, the reverend Bishop of Worcester; whose father Eustannus and his mother Ulgeva, being much devoted to the service of God, towards the later end of their days took upon them the habit of Religion, voluntarily severing each from other; which example incited the said Wolstan to the like course of life: whereupon, having his education in the Abby of Peterburgh, he was thorn a Monk, at length, in the Monastery at Worcester (in which his father had spent his later days in Gods service) by Brithagus the venerable Bishop of that place, and afterwards became Bishop * upon the translation of Aldredus to the see of York, viz.

This Eustannus (or rather Ælfstanus) had the grant of his habitation, here, from Oswald Archbishop of York (who was also Bishop of Worcester, and afterward canonized for a Saint;) the substance of whose Charter, I shall here recite, whereby it will appear, that at length it was to return again to the Church of Worcester.

My next observation is, that it was anciently one of the chief towns in this Shire; first, in regard of the large number of hides it contained, as appears

Of your charite pray for the soule of Edward Odington late of Long-Ichington in the County of Warwick Esquire, Gentleman-Usher to King Henry the seventh who died in the year of our Lord 1500. D. xxii.

Bascote.

THIS Hamlet was originally a member of Long-Ichington; yet I have not met with any mention of it till 7 R. 1. and then do I find, that Robert Briton had lands here: but afterwards, in King John's time, that David the son of David de Lindelei, (whose right here came by Elianore his mother one of the coheirs to John de Limefi as in Ichington I have shewed) did confirm to Nicholas Briton and his heirs eight yard land lying here and in Ichington, to hold by the 4. part of a Knights fee; when lands Roger Briton father of the said Nicholas formerly held. After this, viz. in 21 E. 1. Sir John Pinkney Knight, having granted unto Sir Hugh de Odingtons all his interest in Long Ichington, give notice to William le Breton, that for the future he should perform those services to the said Sir Hugh and his heirs, as were due by the same William to the above named Sir John Pinkney. Which William was son to the before recited Nicholas, as I guess, but what I have seen worth note in relation to him or his descendants, I have already mentioned in Wolston: for in 7 E. 2. Guy le Breton, son to the said Will. sold all his lands here, to Peter de Lyme and Alice his wife, and the heirs of the said Peter:

which lands in 18 E. 2. eschaeted to the Crown by reason that he was in the rebellion of Thomas Earl of Lancaster (as in Arley I have fully manifested.)

The next possessor thereof (of whom I have found any mention) was Sir John Rochford Kt. who by his deed dated 8 Oct. 4 H. 4. past it unto Thomas Seyvill, which Thomas enjoy'd it in 2 H. 5. But in 9 H. 5. John Morton a Priest conveyed it to John Lee of Warwick, Thomas Wyrth, and Richard Smyth, who were but Trustees, it should seem: For 6. Sept. 8 H. 6. the same John Lee did pass it to Thomas Molesey and his heirs his whole right therein; unto whom also T. Wyrth released his interest; so that in 10 H. 6. the said T. Molesey, who then wrote himself of Bokkeshull in this County, was certified to be Lord thereof. Which Thomas by his deed of feoffment, bearing date on the day of S. Nicholas 30 H. 6. granted it to William Lyle and Thomas Migos, in trust for the use of the town of Walshall: but it so fell out, that the Inhabitants, being kept from the profits thereof, in the beginning of H. 8. time, by John Lyle son of Will. Lyle the surviving feoffee, who denyed any such trust, pretending it to be his own inheritance, came to Bokkeshull and drove away Mr. Lyle's Cattell; of which unjustifiable act he halted not to take advantage, by reason he was lyable to their action; and so upon cool debate betwixt them, they grew to this conclusion; viz. that Mr. Lyle should suffer a Recovery thereof, which was accordingly done in 6 H. 8. Richard Hurst and John Forde of Walshall being the persons to whom it was adjudged. Which Richard and John soon after made a New feoffment thereof to some other of the Inhabitants to the use of the town; and by the like renewing renewing of Feoffments it hath continued to the said uses untill this day.

Stonythorpe.

THIS, of a small Hamlet, is now reduc'd to one House, and hath its name from the rocky condition of the ground where it stands, the word Thorpe in our old English signifying a petty village: But it was originally a member of Long-Ichington, and held thereof; though when first granted away by the Lords of that Mannour I have not seen: For before 2 E. 2. I find no mention of it, and then one Robert Sampson posselt it. Which Robert in 4 E. 2. sold it to Sir William de Bereford Knight (chief Justice of the Common pleas) reserving an estate for life to himself and Margery his wife. From whom it descended to Edmund de Bereford, his son, who was seized of it in 3 E. 3. and in 20 E. 3. by Fine^t entailed it upon the heirs of his body. By vertue of which entail it came to John de Bereford, son of the said Edmund who dyed seized thereof in 30 E. 3. leaving Baldwin his brother and heir 24. years of age, Eva his widow, having it assigned to her in part of her dower.

After which it devolved to Joan, grandchild and heir to Joan the wife of Gilbert de Ellesfield one of the sisters and heirs to the before-specified Edmund de Bereford, then wife to John Hore of Chilberley in Com. Cantab. as the descent in Langley sheweth, which John and Joan past it away to William Hore of Elmedon in this County in 8 H. 4. whose posterity in the male line enjoy'd it till about the beginning of H. 8. time, that Nicholas Hanflap of Aynho in Com. Northampt. had it by marriage with Joan the daughter and heir to Robert Hore. From which Nicholas is lineally descended Hanflap, now owner thereof, Anno scil. 1640.

Bishops-Ichington.

HAVING now done with the Parish of Long-Ichington, below which Ichene falls into Leame, I must ascend to the Southwest side of that torrent, where the first town I find, taking also its appellation from the same brook, is divided into two parts, Ichington-superior, and Ichington-inferior, in the later whereof the mother Church an-tiently stood; but was pulled down at its depopulation (as I shall further shew anon), so that the Chapell of ease in Ichington-superior is since become the Parish-Church; that village being not depopulated, though the fields were converted to pasture.

The reason why this is called Bishops-Ichington is, in regard it was for a long time the possession of the Bishops of Cobentre and Lichfield as I shall shew by and by: but the direct time when they first had it I have not seen, though that the Monks of Cobentre granted it to them be clear enough, being one of those xxiv. towns which Earl Leofric upon his foundation of that Monastery in 1. Edward: Conf. gave thereunto.

In the Conq. Survey it was certified to be in the hands of those Monks, and to contain 5. hides which were then valued at xii li. and so was it in King Stephen's and H. 3. time; for I find it particularly mentioned in their Charters of Confirmation made to that Monastery, wherein is intimated, that the Monks had newly recovered it by the Precept of Pope Eugenius, though who it was that disleiled them thereof be not exprest. But the first Bishop of Cobentre and Lichfield that had it, for ought appeareth to me, was Roger Molend, Nephew to King H. 3. and elected to that See, by the Monks of Cobentre, at the earnest desire of Richard E. of Cornwall, the Kings brother, in 42 H. 3. which makes me guesse, that to him the said Monks first past it; because I find, that the next year following, the same King granted him Free-warren here, and a Mercate every week upon the wednesday, with a Fair yearly to endure 3 days, beginning on the Even of S. Peter and Paul (commonly called Lammast.)

The extent of what these Bishops had here, was in 7 E. 1. certified at 5. carucats of land, and a Windmill which they held in demesne, having xvi. servants who occupied 25. yard land and a half, performing certain servile work in Harvest, and x. servants more, holding 8. yard land and a half, for which they were to Plow, Mow, and do other service there for the said Bishop. They had also xvi. Cottagers here, holding 17. Cottages, each of them paying a certain Rent, mowing at sometimes, and doing suit of Court twice a year: And likewise 8. Freeholders holding 8. yard land and a 4. part, who did suit to their 3. weeks Court, payd a certain Rent, plowed at some times, and mowed likewise for the Lord. And besides this, had Ichingthef with divers other privileges, which in 13 E. 3. were, upon their claym, allowed: and afterwards enjoyed till 1 E. 6. that Richard Sampson, the then Bishop, past it, with the Mannours of Tachebroke, Cepdon, and Chadshunt to one Thomas Fisher esquier for an C li. in ready money, and an Annuity of 50 li. per annum reserved to himself and his successors. Which grant was confirmed by the Dean and Chapter, under their publique Seal 15. Apr. following.

But this Annuity of 50 li. per annum continued not long: For the same Bishop by his Deed of Release bearing date 14 Dec. 2 E. 6. acquitted the said Tho. Fisher and his heirs thereof. Which grant of these Mannours and Release so made by the Bishop, K. E. 6. by his Letters Pat. dated 20. Apr. 3. of his reign confirmed. And moreover granted to the said T. Fisher and his heirs within the precinct of the said Mannours Return of Writs, so as the Kings Officers were not to meddle there; and that for for the future this privilege should be called The Liberty of Thomas Fisher in the County of Warwick. What the reason was that the said Bishop past away this and those other Mannours to the great prejudice of his successors, I cannot certainly tell; but finding by the story of him, that he had a good affection to the Romish Religion, notwithstanding he had formerly asserted the K. Supremacy in H. 8. time, 'tis not unlike but there were those that had a mind in the beginning of Edw. 6. reign, when Popery was abolisht, to heave him out of his Bishoprick; and that he, to gain a friend in Court, parted with these Lordships to that end: For this Tho. Fisher (as I have heard) was no less than Secretary to the D. of Somerset (at that time Lord Protector to the K.) and being as greedy of Churchlands as other Courtiers in those days were, swallowed divers large morsells, whereof this was one, and indeed so fair a bit, as that he was loath any should share with him therein; and therefore making an absolute depopulation of that part called Nether-Itchington where the Church stood (which he also pulled down for the building of a large Mannour-house in its room,) to perpetuat his memory changed the name of it, from Bishops-Itchington, to Fisher's-Itchington.

And after all this, the better to strengthen his title procured Raph Bane, the succeeding Bishop to levy a Fine thereof in 4. & 5. Ph. & M. But how such sacrilegious acquisitions do thrive, though fenc't about with all worldly security imaginable, we have manifold examples, whereof this is one and not the least observable: for after the death of the said Thomas, which hapned in 20 Eliz. Edward his son and heir making a shift to consume all those great possessions, which his father left him, excepting only this Lordship, and dying in prison (as in Warwick I shall more particularly observe) left it to John his son and heir, who by his deed bearing date 8 Jac. sold it unto Thom. Cox of Honyngbam in this County, and after that went into Ireland. Which Thomas Cox had issue Thomas, who convey'd it to Sir James Eryan of Flore in Com. Northampt. Baronet, about the xii. year of our late sovereign King Charles. Which Sir James by Jane daughter to Sir Adam Newton of Charlton, in Com. Cantii Baronet, having issue onely daughters, (whereof Dorothe, the eldest, married to Thomas Stanley, son and heir of Sir Thomas Stanley of Camberlow in Com. Hertf. Knight, one of the chief ornaments of our time for his exquisite learning, and other vertues) within five years after his said purchase past it away to Sir David Conyngham Knight, so that the third generation never enjoyd it since it was thus aliened from the Bishoprick.

The Church (dedicated to All-Saints) very antiently belonging to the Chief Chanter of Lichfield-Cathedrall, and given (I presume) by Roger Molend the first Bishop that had the whole Lordship, was in 7 E. 1. held appropriat by the said Chanter, who then had there a carucat of land in demesn, with 8. Freeholders occupying 4. yard land. In 19 E. 1. it, with the Chapells belonging thereto; viz Ober-Itchington, Chadshunt, and Geydon were valued at lx. marks, and the vicaridge at 5. marks: but in 26 H. 8. the said Vicaridge with the Chapells were rated at xiii li. vi s. viii. d.

OF this place, originally a member of Chadshunt, and involved therewith in the Conq. Survey, I have not seen any mention in Record till 7 R. 1. where there is no more said than that Will. le Butler gave ^b 1. mark to have seisin of his freehold therein. After which; viz. in 7 E. 1. it was certified, that the B. of Cob. and Lich. (antiently called B. of Chester) had xxiii. tenants here, who performed divers servile labours, as Plowing, Sowing, Mowing, Reaping, &c. And ten Freeholders, whereof one, sc. Will. le Boteler had 4. yard land. To whose successors it continued with the like privileges as they had in Chadshunt till 1 E. 6. but was then granted to Thom. Fisher together with Itchington, and confirmed by the K. in 3 E. 6. As also in 4. & 5. Ph. & M. by Raph Bane the succeeding Bishop; and descended to Edward Fisher son and heir of the said Thomas; (for proof of all which I have cited authorities in Ichington:) which Edward by his deed¹ bearing date 6. Nov. 27 Eliz. sold the greatest part of what he had here, being nineteen yard land to one John Askell and his heirs, whose posterity enjoy it till this day; and the rest, being 5. yard land to others. Which xxiv. yard land was all that the Bishop had here, for the other xviii. partly belonged to the antient Freeholders and partly to the Vicars of Bishops-Ichington, being of the Glebe to that Church.

The Chappell here, was dedicated to S. Giles, but hath no Armes in it.

THIS is one of those 24. towns given^m by E. Leofrike to the Monastery of Cobentre at the foundation thereof, above xx. years before the Norman Conquest, and is in that Charter called Chaddeleshunt, but in Domesday-book written Cedeleshunte, and there valued at vii li. As for the name there is no question but that it proceeded originally from one Cedde or Ceadde (which we now call Chadde,) for in the Saxons time that appellation was usuall.

Upon the confirmation^m made by K. Stephen to the Priory of Cobentre of the lands which were the antient possession of those Monks, it is mentioned to be one of those places that they had then newly recovered, and recorded by the name of Chaddelesfont: but with Bishops-Ichington it past from the Monks of Cobentre to the Bishop of Cobentre and Lichfield and in 7 E. 1. was certified^m to be in the possession of the Bishop of Chesster (for so was the Bishop of Cobentre and Lichfield then called) who at that time held 6. carucats of land here in demesne, and had xvii. servants occupying severall proportions: as also two Cottiers and three Freeholders: which Freeholders held other tenements by a certain Rent and performance of some services.

In 13 E. 1. Roger Molend, then Bishop of Cobentre and Lichfield, claymed^m the like priviledges here as he did in Ichington-Episc. which were allowed. Whose successors enjoyed it till 1 E. 6. that Richard Sampson, the then Bishop, aliened it, with Ichington to Thomas Hawkins, at As Fisher, as I have there shewed. From which Fisher it past^m in exchange 6 E. 6. to Thomas Newsum gentleman for xiii. yard land lying in Over and Nether-Ichington and the sum of Cxl. li. in money; whose great-grandchild, scil. Thomas Newsum now enjoys it.

Within this Mannour so belonging to the Bishop, the chief Chanter of Lichfield, it seems, had antiently also certain possessions: for I find that in 16 H. 3. Richard de Hanton (then chief Chanter) recovered against one Thomas Mathew 41. acres of land, and three messuages, whereupon a Fine^m was then levied, and the said mess. and land acknowledged to be the right of the same chief Chanter as belonging to the Cathedrall of Lich. And besides these mess. and lands had he also a title to eight yard land in Radway, as an Agreement^m made in An. 1275. (3. payable on the morrow after Easter, and the feast day of S. Matthew the Apostle by even portions, in lieu thereof.

The Chapell here, was dedicated to All-Saints, in the windows whereof are no Armes; neither are there any Monuments in it but of a late erection, as the Epitaphs I have here added doe manifest.

On the South Wall.

Here lyeth buried the Predecessors of Walter Newsum, Lord of Chadshunt in the County of Warwick. He wedded the daughter of Anthony Aylworth of Aylworth Com. Glouc. Esquier, who lived the severall ages of 76. years, and had issue Thomas, John, George, Edward and Anne. 1621.

Upon the said Monument are these Armes; viz. Arg. upon a fesse sable 3. Crosses Croflets of the first, and a Mullet in chief of the second.

On a plate of brasse in the said South-wall is the picture of a man with this Inscription.

Here lyeth the body of William Askell gent. who deceased the 6. of Febr. Anno Dom. 1613. ætat. sue 48.

On a flat stone, in a plate of brasse, towards the East end of the Chappell.

Here lyeth buried the body of Theophilus Wilkyns late of Chadshunt. who dyed on the first of August. 1613.

And in the Chapell yard there hath been an antient Oratory, as the Inhabitants report, in which was the Image of S. Chadde, whereunto Pilgrimages had wont to be made; for by an Inquisition taken in 4 Eliz. it appears, that the Offerings brought thither upon that occasion did amount to xvi. li. per annum one year with another.

Herberbury.

FOLLOWING the course of Ichene I come next to Herberbury, wherein I find that divers persons had shares in the Conq^t time; viz. the Monks of Cobentre 1. hide and 1. virgat, which being wasted by the Kings Army were then^m certified to be worth but ii s. The Earl of Spellent 4. hides and a half, valued at C s. and held by Lenninus and Atricus in Edward the Confessors time. Turchill de Warwick 4. hides, valued at lx s. whereof Wilhelmus (Progenitor to the family of Lodbroke, as I conceive) was then his tenant, one Ordric having been owner of them before the Conquest; in which part of the town the Church stood. Henry de Ferrers 2. hides valued at iv li. and then held by Wazelinus, but were the Freehold of Seward Barn (of whom I have spoke in Burton-Hastings) before the Norman invasion. And William Buenvaseth 3. virgats, rated at v. sol. But this place is in Domesday-book variously written; viz. Edburberie, Erburberie, and Erburgeberie: which

which considered makes me suppose, that one Erneburga, or Erburga (the name of a woman anciently) was possessor thereof in the Saxons time.

Touching that which the Monks of Cobentre had here, I find, that it came afterwards to the Canons of Kenilworth, though how or when I cannot declare, the quantity thereof being five yard land, as in 7 E. 1. was certified, whereof four the said Canons then held in demesne, and the fifth was occupied by three servants, who performed certain servile labours for the same. But the Earl of Wellest's share descended to his son, viz. Robert Earl of Leicester, which Robert enfeoffed the same G. de Clinton thereof, who was founder of the Castle and Priory of Kenilworth temp. H. 1. Whose grandchild, Henry, part a great part of it to Reginald Basset (of whom in Woltey I have made mention) and Henry Mallore (son to Ankitell Mallore) Robert Fitz-Parnell, Earl of Leic. in King John's time, confirming the grants. Which Henry kept his part not long, but aliened some of it away to the said Reginald, who disposed thereof, with all he had here besides, to the Monks of Combe, levying a Fine thereupon in 3. Joh. and gave the residue to the Canons of Kenilworth.

But the greater proportion thereof the Monks of Combe had, viz. two carucats, excepting one virgat, in demesne, and two Windmills, with 12. servants holding yard land and half at the will of the Lord, performing divers servile labours; two Cottagers holding two Cottages; and two Freeholders, who occupied half a yard land and two acres; all which were held by them of the heirs to the said Reginald Basset by the eight part of a Knights fee: That which the Canons of Kenilworth held being 2. Windmills and 2. yard land in demesne, three servants occupying one yard land and a half, and seven Freeholders holding one mess. two yard land a 4. part and two acres. Another part of what the same Earl of Wellest had here was granted by some of his descendants to the Monastery of Pun-Caton whereof they were Patrons. But that which Turchill de Warwick had was given, it seems, to Henry de Neuburgh, the first Earl of Warwick of the Norman line; and by the said Henry unto Geffrey de Clinton before specified: which Geffrey bestowed the Church on the Canons of Kenilworth immediately after his foundation of that Monastery, Henry his grandchild confirming the gift.

It should seem, that one of the ancestors to the family of Lodbroke had some grant from the Earl of Warwick of all that the said Earl had here, so that the above specified G. de Clinton and he, were at odds about the same: which of them had the better title I will not here stand to argue; but that Geffrey was a mighty man in H. 1. time, in Kenilworth I have shewed; so that the said de Lodbroke, though he recovered it (as the Charter expresth) yet, was he contented to hold it of the same Geffrey; and by the advice of Walter Durdent then Bishop of Cobentre did confirm the grant of this Church to the said Monastery in the presence of that Bishop, and a great part of his Clergy; which also was ratified by William de Lodbroke his brother and heir, who likewise acquitted those Canons of v. s. yearly Rent that had been paid to his predecessors out of a yard land that belonged to the said Church.

Of those possessions here, in Herberbury, that were of Clinton's fee, in 31 H. 2. it was certified, that the Templars held 5. yard land; part of which were given by Geffrey de Clinton, and part by Henry his son, against whom in 2. Joh. the said Templars required warranty. Which land in 7 E. 1. was certified to be 1. carucat, 2. yard land and 8. Acres; all then held by 6. Freeholders, who paid certain Rents for the same; besides 2. cottages. It was then also certified, that the said Templars held 5. yard land here in demesne of Rob. fil. Odonis; which implies, that they had it of his grant. But that part of Herberbury so possessed by Lodbroke, was given, it seems, to Raph the son of Rob. de Lodbroke surnamed Macer or Megre, an appellation that he had by reason of his leanness.

For from the said Raph Macer had the Canons of Kenilworth also a confirmation of this Church, with 2. yard land thereto belonging, in the presence of Will. de Lodbroke his uncle, in whose Fee it was situate. To whom succeeded Robert le Megre his son, who ratified his fathers grant, and bestowed on the said Canons 2. yard land lying also in this place. Which Rob. in 3. Joh. gave 2. yard land, lying here likewise, to the Nuns of Caton, whereon the said Nuns in 7 E. 1. had x. tenants who held 1. yard land and half thereof at will, performing divers servile employments, and 2. Freeholders that possessed the other half yard land.

To this Robert succeeded another Robert, who in 20 H. 3. answered for half a Kts fee in this place, then held of the E. of Warwick, and in 28 H. 3. was one of the Justices for the Gaol-delivery at Warwick. This last mentioned Robert was a man of very great eminency in this Shire for his knowledge, as appears by the trust then reposed in him: For whereas in 30 H. 3. the K. had constituted Henry de Wyngham, with one Kt. in every County from Trent Southwards, to have custody of his Escheats in the said severall Shires; as also to enquire of all Sergeanties, so as to certify in whose tenure they then were, and in case any of them were alienated without the Ks. consent, to discover by whom and to whom such alienations were made, and of their values: By virtue of which Commission they had also power to call before them xxiv. or xii. of the most antient, lawfull and discreet Kts. in each particular County, who being sworn were to enquire upon such Articles as should be exhibited to them touching the said Escheats & Sergeanties, the certificates whereof are recorded in the Exchequer in that known volume called Testa de Nevill, under the title

y Pat. 30. H. 3. m. 3. De sergeantiis arenatis, this Rob. le Megre being the onely man made choyce of and appointed by the K. in this County, performed that service; and left issue Will. le Megre, who on the Eve of S. Martin, an. 1254. 38 H. 3. by his Testam. bequeathed his body to sepulture in the Monastery of Combe, at which time he was received by those Monks to be partaker of all the benefits of their Order. Which Will. departed this life before 13 E. 1. for then do I find^a, that Amicia and Margerie were his daughters and heirs, one whereof became the wife^b of John Low, and the other of Philip Lover.

a Plac. de B. term. b Pasch. c 13 E. 1. Rot. 19. Whether these daughters had no issue, and that thereby this Mannour eschaeted to John de Lodbroke, of whom it was immediatly holden; or whether the said John de Lodbroke obtained it by purchase, or any other Agreement with them, I know not; but certain it is, that his posterity enjoy'd it: For in 9 E. 2. Henry de Lodbroke, his son, was certified^d to be owner thereof, and that he held^e it by a Kts. fee of the E. of Warwick. Which Sir H. de Lodbroke (for he was a Kt.) in 17 E. 2. settled^f it upon John his son, and Hawise then the wife of the said John, and the heirs of their two bodies lawfully begotten, rendring to him the said Sir Henry x marks sterling during his life. After which, viz. in 24 E. 3. by a Fine^g then levied betwixt the said Hawise Pl. and Will. the son of Nich. le Woodward of Wchinton Deforc. it was settled upon the said Hawise for life; and from her decease, upon Will. de Catesby for life; the remainder to Thomas the son of the said Sir John de Lodbroke, and Alice the daughter of the same Will. de Catesby, and the heirs of their two bodies; but for default of such issue, to the right heirs of the said Thomas.

Which Thomas and all his brothers dyed without issue; so that Alice the wife of Lewes Cardian became heir at law to them (as by the descent in Lodbroke may be seen) From whom descended John Hathewyk, son of Will. Hathewyk and Catherine daughter and heir of her the said Alice, who in 10 H. 6. was certified^h to hold this Mannour by the 8 part of a Kts. fee; at which time he resided here, and had the addition of generosus.

But after this do I find no more mention in Record of this Mannour till 21 H. 8. that there was a Fineⁱ levied thereof betwixt Rob. Dormer Esq; and others Pl. and Rob. Corbet Deforc. though to what uses, I know not: Howbeit, the next year following, it was passed by Joan the widow of the said Rob. Corbet, unto Thomas Englefeld, one of the Justices of the Court of Common Pleas, Sir George Throgmorton Kt. and Edward Underhill Gent. as by her Deed^k bearing date 17 Junii appeareth. Which Joan then levied a Fine thereof to them, by the name of Joan Hall widow (lately called Joan Corbet) in Hill. Term, 23 H. 8. But it seems that the said Conveyance and Fine was to the use of the said Edw. and his heirs: for by the Inquis. taken after his death he is certified to dye seized thereof 7 Martii, 1 E. 6. leaving Thomas his son and heir 26 years of age. To whom succeeded John Underhill, which John in 1 Mar. past^m it to Thomas Freeman and others.

I come now to that which Henry de Ferrers had here in Herberbury by the Conq. gift, though when his posterity granted it away, I cannot positively averr: but finding that Rob. fil. Odonis was posselt of a great part thereof in the beginning of

K. John's time; and that in 12 H. 2. Odo fil. Johannis, father of the said Robert, was certifiedⁿ to hold one Kts. fee of Will. de Boskervill (which Will. held 3 Kts. fees of the Earl Ferrers, de veteri feoffamento) I doubt not but that I may safely enough conclude, that Rob. first Earl Ferrers, son of the said Henry, granted it to the father or grandfather of the said Will. de Boskervill: for which Kts. fee, lying^o here and in Chesferton, Isabell the widow of Raph de Boskervill impleaded^p the said Rob. fil. Odonis in 4 Joh. alledging that she was endowed by her said husband: Whereunto Robert, answered, that Odo his father dyed seized thereof; and that it thereupon descended to Will. his son and heir, who likewise dying seized of it, left a certain daughter his heir, and within age; by reason whereof, the E. Ferrers, as superior Lord of the Fee, had the custody of it with the said daughter; and that she dying in her minority, he went to the Earl, and gave him such satisfaction, that he had livery thereof as right heir. But the next year following they came to an Agreement^q, whereupon there was a Fine levied thereof betwixt the said Isabell, by the name of Isabell de Say, and him the said Robert; by which Fine it appears, that Burga, then the wife of Hugh de Pichford was daughter and heir to the before mentioned Raph de Boskervill, and that the said Rob. acknowledged the same to be her right; the meaning whereof I conceive to be, that he held it immediatly of her, and not of the Earle Ferrers (the said Earle being the cheif from whom her ancestors held it:) for in 36. H. 3. it appears^r, that Odo de Herberbury (who was doubtless the son of the said Robert) held the same Kts. fee, expresse to lye here in Herberbury of Raph de Pichford, and that the said Raph held it over of the E. Ferrers.

This Rob. fil. Odonis was a benefactor to the Canons of Kenilworth by giving^s them part of his possessions lying in this place, whereof two Acres were for the celebration of a Masse every Saturday; the whole in 7. E. 1. being certified^t at 2. yard land and ix acres, of which all but the ix acres was then held by 4. servants, who performed several kinds of servile labour for them, and the ix acres by 3 Freeholders that paid particular Rents for the same. But the last of the before-specified family, of whom I finde any mention, was another Rob. fil. Odonis, whom I take to be the son of that Odo de Herberbury above mentioned, and grandchild to the before recited Robert; for he is called^u Robertus fil. Odonis de Herberbury. Which Rob. by his deed^v recorded in the Rolls of the Chancery 20. Apr. 7. E. 1. bestowed upon the monks of Combe his Mannour house and all else that he had here; as also in Chesferton, extending to 95. Acres and a half, for the health of his soule, and of the souls of Eliz. his wife, and of all his Ancestors and Successors, wherein the said Monks had^x Court-leet with other Priviledges.

her reign. From whom it became aliened to Thom. Wagstaff, and from him to Wm. Cooke of Smiffeld, whose posterity do now enjoy it.

But that which the Canons of Kenilworth had here, except the advowson of the Church, was granted out of the Crown by Q. Eliz. in 4. of her reign to John Fisher and Thomas Dabridgecourt by the name of a Mannour; in which Pat. also past whatsoever belong'd to the Monastery of Bun-Caton lying in this town; And from them the same year unto Thomas Fisher then of Bishops-Achington and his heirs. which Thomas dyed seized thereof 12. Jan. 20. Eliz. leaving Edward his son and heir then 30. years of age; and he John, who past it away to Thomas Cox of Bps.-Achington. From whom, 16. Junii, 19. Jac. it was purchased by Ric. Wagstaff, whose heirs to this day enjoy it.

Besides these severall Mannours already mentioned, I find^d that in 10. H. 6. John Mallory of the County of Leic. Gent. held another by the 4. part of a Kcs. Fee, though what became thereof I know not.

Having thus done with all the distinct Mannours I may not omit to mention, that in 7. E. 1. Eustace de Hatch (of whom I shall speak in Porton-Sporrell) held^c 3. carucats of land here, excepting x. acres, of John de Lodbrok, having tenants that occupied the same, who performed divers servile labours for it, as the usuall custome of those times was, paying but a small Rent. Somthing more he held^f here of the Honour of Leicester, but it was not of much moment.

That the Church (dedicated to All Saints) was given to the Monastery of Kenilworth by G. de Clinton, the founder thereof. temp. H. 1. I have already shewed: which grant of his I find confirmed^e by Ric. Peche Bp. of Coventre in H. 2. days. To whom, ere long, succeeded G. Muschamp, who in K. John's time appropriated^h it to those Canons, assigning half a mark yearly to them out of the Vicaridge. In An. 1291. 19. E. 1. it was valuedⁱ at xviii marks iii s. viii d. over and above a Pension of x s. per ann. payd out of it to the Prior of Warminster, and another of xii s. per ann. to the Prior of Wutbury; at which time the Vicaridge was rated^k at two marks: but in 1. 26. H. 8. at C. sol. over and above ii s. yearly for Synodalls.

THIS is one of those towns that E. Leofrike gave^m to the Monastery of Coventre at his foundation thereof. Edw. Conf. in whose Charter it is written Ulchetune, and in the Cong. time certified to contain 4. hides then valued at C s. but in that Survey recorded by the name of Ulchetune. However it be thus written, as also afterwards, I am of opinion that its denomination was originally occasioned from on Ulse, whose seat and possession in the Saxons time it had been. But it seems the Monks were disturbed of their enjoyment thereof shortly after, though by whom or upon what pretence appears not: for I find that in K. Steph. confirmation^o made to them of this and other Mannours, whereof they were posselt in the time of K. Edw. the Conf. and K. William his (grandfather) he mentions this for one, and that they had then newly recovered it.

After which, viz. in 41. H. 3. they had Free-warren granted^p to them in all their demesne lands here, which in 7. E. 1. extended^q to two carucats of land, then held in demesne; at which time they had xxx servants holding xv. yard land, who performed divers kindes of servile employments for those Religious persons. And likewise 4 Cottiers that did the like: as also six Free-holders who held 4. yard land and a fourth part; and moreover a certain wood containing x acres, with Court-leet: Affize of bread and beer, and other priviledges, But in that Record it is written Ulneweton, Dulf-ton, Dluston, and Dlughton.

The next observable passage relating thereto is, that in 13. E. 1. Rob. de Pinkney commenced suit^r against the Prior of Coventre for it, and layd his claim from Gerard de Limesy his ancestor, al-leading that the said Gerard was seized thereof in K. John's time, whose descent I have made plain in Long-Ashington. But hereunto the Prior answered, that E. Leofrik (before mentioned) by the license of K. Edw: the Conf: gave it to the Monastery of Cobentre, and that the said K. Edw:

confirmed the donation; as also K. Will: the Conq:
K. H. 2. and K. H. 3. And yet notwithstanding all this the said Prior was content to make an agreement with him the said Robert, who thereupon acknowledge the right of the Monks by a Fine levied Oftab. Joh. Bapt. 14. E. 1. and for so doing was made partaker of all their prayers and devout exercises. From which time the Monks peaceably enjoy'd it till the dissolution of their House in 30 H. 8. that it came to the Crown, wherein it continued till 37 of that Ks. Reign, but then was granted (inter alia) to Thomas lord Wrio- thesley, at that time L. Chancelour of England, and his Heires, who the very same year past it to Will. Stanford Esq; and his Heires; which Will.
the next year following, conveyed the Inheritance thereof to Sr. Andrew Flammock Kt. and Eliz. his Wife, whose son and heir Francis Flammock Esq; in 1 Eliz. sold it to Sr. John Spenser of Althorpe in Com. Northamp. Kt: by which means it came to Tho. Spenser late of Clar- don in this County Esq; a younger son to the said Sr. John.

The Church (dedicated to St. Michael) was appropriated to the Priory of Cobentre by Rog.
de Molend Bpp. of Cot. and Lich. 5. Non. Nov.
An. 1260. (44 H. 3.) having anciently been endowed with 1 yard land; and in An. 1291. 19.
E. 1. was valued at xiii Marks: but by the certificate made in 26 H. 8. I find that it belonged to two Prebendaries in the Cath. Church of Lichfield, who provided a stipendiary to serve the Cure, unto whom they then allowed certain small Tithes to the value of iiii li. xiii s. iiii d. per an.

Honingham.

Below Wiston there is no other Village situate on the western bank of Leam; so that now I come to observe the next that comes in my way, after the conjunction of it with Leam; viz. Hon- ingham. In the Conq. time Will. fil. Corbucio- nis (of whom in Studley I have spoke further) held it, Osmond and Chetel being his tenants thereto. It then contained 3. hides and a half, which were valued at iii l. and in Edw. the Conf.
time was the freehold of Ennuis and Saulf. In Domesday-book it is written Huningham, which name I conceive was first occasioned from some possessor thereof in the Saxons time, ham signifying in our old English an habitation or dwelling.

In the family of Corbucun it did continue till about the beginning of H. 3. reign, as I guess; for Sir Geffrey Corbucun Kt: in K. John's time, gave unto Edm. Rector of the Church of Wapenbury, and his successors (with the allowance and consent of Sir Ric. de Wapenbury the Patron thereof) one mess. with half a yard land, and a floud-gate lying in this Honingham (but adjoining to the Miln-holme of Wapenbury) with all the Tithes of his Fee there, for the maintenance of a Priest to celebrate divine service 3. days in the week in his Chappel here; viz. Sunday, Wednesday, and Fryday; and upon all the double Feltivalls, with Mattens, Maß, and Vespers. Which grant so made by the said Sir Geffrey, was, in respect of the dangerous passage to the mother Church of Wapen- bury at such times as the River Leame exceeded its bounds. And besides all this, he conferred upon the said Sir Richard and his heirs all his right in that Chappell.

But the next mention that I find thereof, is in 20. H. 3. where Walter de Darvill (owner also of Walton-Darville) answered for the 4. part of a Kts. fee in this place; which said 4. part in 36. H.
3. was certified to be held by Rob: de Dayvill of Will: de Cantilupe, and that the said Will: held it over of the heirs of Geffrey Corbicon; whereby it may seem that Peter Corbicon, son to that Peter which founded the Priory of Studley, at such time as he passed the advouson of that Religious house with other lands and Fees unto Will. de Cantilupe
(as I shall shew when I come to Studley) granted likewise this 4. part of a Kts Fee here to the said Will: for I suppose that the same Geffrey, here mentioned was a son to the said Peter. After this; viz.
in the same 36. year of H. 3. had Walt: D'eyvill (whom I account son of the before mentioned Ro- bert) a Charter of Free-warren in all his demesn lands here, and other lordships of this County. Howbeit in 13. E. 1. John de Hastings, as superior Lord of the Fee, claymed a Court-leet, Weyfs, and other priviledges therein (Joan his mother being one of the sisters and heirs to George de Cantilupe.)

But when or how D'eyvill parted with his interest, I have not yet seen, nor any more thereof till E. 1. time, that Rog: de Clifford senior, past what he had here, which then extended to xx l. lands per ann. unto Sir Urian S. Pere Kt. in exchange for certain lands in Dreyton in Com.
Suff. which Sir Urian (for I take it to be he) was in 23. E. 1. found to dye seized of a certain Mannour-house, with divers lands and tenements situat in this place, which he held ioyntly with Margaret his wife, of the before recited John de Hastings by the third part of a Kts. Fee, leaving Urian his son and heir then xvj. years of age; but the Record expresseth, that the said Mannour-house and lands were purchased by him and the said Margaret of one Ralph de Bure. Which last mentioned Sir Urian (for he was a Kt.) had issue John, who in 8. E. 3. levied a Fine of this Mannour, unto Will. the Son of Sir VWilliam Trussell of Cublesdon Kt. but to what uses appears not. VWhich Will. in 20 E. 3. was certified to hold the 4. part of a Kts Fee here, of the heirs of Hastings: notwithstanding all which, it should seem, that it came by Isabell the daughter of Sir Urian (who perhaps was heir to her brother John) vnto Sir Walt: Cokesey Kt. son and heir of Hugh Cokesey, who in 30. E. 3 dyed seized of another Mannour lying in this place; both which being thus vnited continued to the heirs of Cokesey for divers generations, as I shall shew anon.

But in the mean time, taking a view of such other persons as had to do here, I find, that in 4. E.
4. Will: Cotes dyed seized of a capitall mess: and certain lands, leaving John his son and heir xv.
years of age. (which Will: was son and heir vnto Roger, who stiles himself Rog: fil: Silvestri de Honingham, by his deed bearing date in 30. E.
1. and in 9. E. 2. Steward unto John de Warren
E. of Sussex and Surrey for all his Courts in these Countyes.)

Counties.) And that in 20 E. 3. John Cotes, Will. Blundell, and Rog. de Tiringham held here likewise the 4. part of a Knights fee of the Earl of Lancaster, and the heirs of Hastings. Which 4. part in 44 E. 3. was certified to be held of the E. of Warwick by John de Cotes and Will. Corbizon de Benilworth.

In 2 H. 4. it also appears, that Edw. Metley held the 4. part of a Knights fee, here, of the Earl of Warwick. And in 10 H. 6. all the principall persons that then had interest in Honynggham are expressed; viz. Sir Hugh Cokesey of Worcestershire Knight, John Cotes of Honynggham esq. Margaret Metley, and Will. Warmyngton of Honynggham husbandman; where it is recorded, that they held the Mannour of Honynggham, with certain lands and tenements there, by the 4. part of a Knights fee. Of which family of Cotes I find, that some wrote themselves of this place, whereby it is manifest that they had their residence here. Wherefore, having reduced hither all that I have found of them in order of time, and with as much certainty in the descent as I have any authority to warrant it withall, I shall take notice of what is memorable of them.

In 3 R. 2. Will. Cotes was a Commissioner for levying and assessing a xv. then granted to the K. in Parliament. And John his son one of those men of note in this County, who, bearing ancient Armes from his Ancestors, had command in 7 H. 5. to attend the King in person for defence of the Realm. Which John in 12 H. 6. was one of the Knights for this Shire in the Parliament then held, and that, by Indenture, certified to the then Lord Chancellor, the names of all such persons in the County as were thought fit to make oath, that they would perform certain Articles established in the same Parliament. And lastly in 20 H. 6. Echeator for Warwick and Leicester Wires. But how long this family continued posselt of what they had here I am not sure; therefore upon their incertainties I shall leave them, resolving next to take notice of the *Cokesey*s, who had likewise an interest in this place, as I have already intimated, though their principall residence was in Worcestershire. The first of which family was Hugh de Cokesey, a younger son (as I guess) to Sir Walter Cokesey of Worcestershire Kt. for so it may seem by the Testament of the said Sir Walter bearing date 24 E. 1.

The same year that the said Hugh de Cokesey departed this life (which was 30 E. 3. as I have already shewed) Dionysia his widow (one of the daughters and heirs of Will. le Botiller vowed chastity in the presence of Reginald Bryan Bishop of Worcester; touching the manner and form of which vows I shall speak in Warwick when I come to history the family of those Earls and their posterity. In 39 E. 3. Walter Cokesey son and heir of the said Hugh, making proof of his age had livery of his inheritance; and being a Knight in 49 E. 3. married Isabell the daughter and heir of Herian S. Pere. Which Walter dyed 6 H. 4. seized of the Mannour of Honynggham as tenant by the curtesy of England, after the death of Isabell his wife, leaving Walter his son and heir of full age, whose descent I have placed in Wylle; whereby may be discerned, that Joyce one of the sisters and coheirs to Sir Hugh Cokesey Knight, son to the last Walter, married to John Grevill, and had issue a Sir John Grevill Kt. that dyed seized of this Mannour 20 E. 4. leaving Thomas his son and heir 26. years of age. Which Thomas, assuming the name of Cokesey, resided at Spilcote in this County, where I purpose to speak historically of him, and dyed in 14 H. 7. Whereupon Rob. Russell and Rob. Winter had livery of all his lands as his cosyns and heirs (whose alliance to him that descent in Wylle doth plainly shew.)

Which Rob. Winter, upon partition of that inheritance, had (it seemes) this Mannour in Honynggham; but conveyed the same to John Underhill of Bether-Ctyndon within a short space: for I find, that the said John, by his scoffment, bearing date x. Junii 5 H. 8. Wherein he recited the said grant from Rob. Winter, past it into the hands of John Acard gent. and others to the use of himself and Susan his wife during their lives; the remainder to Thomas Underhill his son, and Anne his wife (daughter of the said Robert) and the heirs of the said Thomas. Which Thomas had issue Edward his son and heir, who sold it to Ric. Newport gent. in 36 H. 8. From whom it descended to John Newport that dyed seized thereof 28. Apr. 8 Eliz. leaving Will. his son and heir then 6. years of age.

That which is now the Church, being antiently but a Chapell (dedicated to S. Margaret) and belonging to Wapenbury, was therewith appropriated to the Priory of Monks-Lirby (in this County) by G. Muschamp Bishop of Exeter in King John's time; and afterwards, with Wapenbury, came to the Monastery of Sulby in Portsmouth Wre, as I have already manifested. In 26 H. 8. the Glebe and Tithes thereof were valued at Cs. over and above xl s. yearly allowed by way of stipend to a Priest that served the Cure, who had neither Institution, nor Induction.

Offchurch.

This hath been a town of no small note in the Saxons time, if we may believe Tradition; for in one part of the Lordship is a place called the Berpe, which signifies no less than burgum, or curia; and accordingly 'tis said, that Offa K. of Merca, in the Saxon Heptarchy, had here a Palace: as also, that by reason of his (sometime) residence here, the Church first, and so consequently the Village, had this name. Whether it were so, or not, I will not stand to argue: but that it was part of the possessions belonging to Earl Leofrike, and by him given to the Priory of Cobentre at the foundation thereof in 1 Edw. Conf. I am fully satisfied, though it be not particularly named in that Charter of his, nor in the Conquerours

Survey amongst the lands belonging to that Monastery: For K. H. 3. by his confirmation made to the Monks of Cobentre in 51 of his reign, of all the lands they then possessed, and that were de dono pradieto (as the words are) which do relate to Earl Leofrike the Founder, mentioneth Ofschirch amongst the rest.

Having therefore thus manifested that these Monks were so antiently owners of it, I will now descend to what I find afterwards observable thereof; which is, that in 20 H. 3. Geffrey de Wilnhale held the x part of a Kts. fee in this place of the Prior of Cobentre; and that in 41. H. 3. the said Prior with his Covent had Free-warren granted to them in all their demesns lands here. Which Prior in 7 E. 1. was certified to hold this Lordship of the K. in Capite, as a member of his Barony, wherein he then had 3 carucats of lands in demesns, 3 watermills, 28 servants holding 14 yard land and a half at the will of

of the Lord, performing divers servile labours, as Plowing Harrowing, Mowing, Reaping, &c. for the Monks. As also that he had a Court-Leet, Gallows, Assize of bread, and beer with some other privileges.

After the dissolution of which Monastery, the Capitall messuage here, with a'l the demefn-lands belonging thereto, were (inter alia) by the Ks. Letters * Pat. dated 25. Apr. 34 H. 8. granted to Sir Edm. Knightley Kt. and dame Ursula his wife, and to the heirs male of his body, and for default of such issue to Valentine Knightley his brother & the heirs male of his body; but for lack of such issue to remain to the right heirs of Sir Ric. Knightley Kt. father of the said Sir Edmund, &c. Which Sir Edm. dying without issue male 12. Sept. the same year, the said Capitall mess. and lands, by virtue of the entail before mentioned, came to Valentine Knightley his brother, who in 4 Eliz. obtained another grant & from the Crown of the said Mannour with the Mills, &c. being at that time a Kt. Of all which he dyed seized 8 Eliz. leaving Ric. his son and heir then of full age: but did settle this Lordship, as it seemes, upon Edw. his younger son; for the said Edw. had it, and lived here; and since his death Robert his son and heir, who now enjoys it.

The Church (dedicated to S. Gregory) appropriated to the before specified Monastery of Coventre by R. Molend. B. of Cob. and Rich. 5. Non. Martii An. 1260. 44 H. 3. having a yard land and a half belonging thereto, was in An. 1291. 19 E. 1. valued at x marks and a half, and the Vicaridge at 12s. which Vicaridge being antiently endowed with 2. yard land and a half; as also a competent house andcroft, had a piece of medow- ing called the Halemedo, in recompence of the Tithes due from the Water-mill, and the 3. holmes of medow-ground belonging to the said Mill; and in 26 H. 8. was rated at vii li. vii s. vi d. over and above viii s. yearly allowed for Procurations and Synodalls.

Radford-Simely.

A Little below lyes Radford, which had its name originally from the road or passage towards Warwick over the ford here; and for distinction from another Radford, now included within the libertyes of Coventre, is called Radford-Simely, by reason that the Simelyes were antiently owners of it. In the Conquerors time it was part of the possessions which belonged to Turchill de Warwick, and of him one Ermenfridus then held it, the number of hides which it then contained being five, besides a Mill rated at vi s. viii d. all which made up the value of vi li. as in the generall Survey at that time taken appeareth, wherein it is written Redeford; but in Edw. the Conf. dayes it was the freehold of Edvinus, whom I take to be Earl Edwine the son of Algarus, for he had much land in these parts.

It should seem that this was given to Henry de Novo Burgo, the first E. of Warwick of the Norman race, as the greatest part of Turchill's lands were; and that by some Agreement with him G. de Clinton, founder of the Castle and Priory of Henstworth, had it, who enfeoffed Henry de Simely thereof: for I find, that the said H. de Simely was owner of it in K. H. 1. time, and at the request of Emme his wife gave his consent, that Rog. de Clinton, then Bishop of Chester, should confer the Church of this village on the Canons of Henstworth, being situated within the fee of the said Henry, which accordingly was performed, the said Geffrey ratifying the grant tanquam testis & dominus, as the words of his Charter are.

To this Henry de Simely succeeded William, who joyned with Will. de Pludien and Emme his wife in the grant ^b of certain lands lying here, to Walter Briton and his heirs, to be held of the Knights Templars in pure almes, which in ³¹ H. 2. were so held by Will. de Warrimmon and rated at 1. yard land and a half. From which Henry descended ^k Geffrey de Simely, who was certified ^l to hold half a Knights fee in this place of the Earl of Warwick in 36 H. 3. This Geffrey gave an yearly Rent of ⁱⁱ s. to the Hospitall of S. John in Warwick, which annuity was due from Reg. de Cherlecate for the leave that he had to raise his Mill-dam of Whitnath upon the lands of the said Geffrey here at Radford. He was also a benefactor to the Monks of Stoneley by granting ⁿ unto them 72. Acres of land in Cobbiton. To Geffrey succeeded William, who in 42 H. 3. for a mark of gold, that he gave to the King, was freed from his Knighthood, in regard he had the palsy. Which William in 52 H. 3. answered ^p for half a Knights fee, here, held of the Earl of Warwick and had issue Geffrey, who in 7 E. 1. was certified ^q to hold one Water-mill and 2. carucats of land here in demesne, having at that time 2. servants holding 2. yard land at will, and performing divers kindes of servile employments, with 8. Freeholders, who held 3. yard land and a half, doing suit to his three-weeks Court. This Geffrey was living in 9 E. 2. and then ^r also found to be Lord hereof; but after that I have seen no more mention of him, nor of his posterity, except once, which is in 41 E. 3. where, by an Inquit. ^s then taken it appears, that the Canons of Kenilworth had obtained this Mannour with 4. carucats of land and certain Rent from John de Simely without the Kings license.

Certain it is, that those Canons had a good share in this village, which they had got before by purchase from severall freeholders: For in ^t 7 E. 1. they had 2. yard land in demesne, one tenant holding half a yard land, and 8. servants xxvii. acres, who performed divers servile works for them. And in 11 E. 2. had they a grant ^u of 1. meish. with 62. acres of land and meadow from Will. de Beresford; and 1. meish. 1. carucat and 2. yard land. 6. acres of meadow and x s. vi d. rent from Raph de Salford at the same time. In ^w 15 E. 2. from John Lok, Rob. Leges, and Nich. Balle 2. meish. 2. yard land, and 21. acres. In ^x 18 E. 2. from the said John Lok and Reg. de Boytill one meish. 1. Mill, 15. acres of land, meadow and pasture, and xvi s. yearly Rent. And in ^y 3 E. 3. 6. meish. 4. yard land, 6. acres of meadow and x s. Rent lying also here and in Leamington. In ^z 10 E. 3. 2. meish. and one yard land by T. Beauchamp E. of Warwick; and in ^{aa} 19 E. 3. 5. meish. with 120. acres of land by one Thomas de Hampton. So that in 20 E. 3. there was none that answered for any thing here but the Canons of Kenilworth, who at that time were certified ^b to hold the fourth part of a Knights fee of the Earl of Warwick in this place.

That which the Templars had here was in 7 E. 1. certified ^c to be three yard land and a half six freeholders then occupying it. Something the Nuns of Worral then had, but it was no more than a yard land and half given ^d to them by Roger Earl of Warwick, who lived in K. Stephen's time.

In 11 R. 2. the said Canons of Kenilworth had

Free-warren granted ^e to them in all their demesne lands here, which they enjoyed till the generall dissolution of the Religious houses by K. H. 8. But after that fatall blow, whereby the Monastery lands became disperied, Sir Thomas Darcy Kt. obtained this Mannour of Radford to himself and his heirs by Pat. ^f bearing date 27. Aug. 37 H. 8. And being afterwards created ^g Lord Darcy of Chich in Essex, past ^h away this Lordship to Ric. Knevit and Elene his wife, entayling ⁱ it on the heirs male of the said Richard by her the said Elene, and for default of such issue on Luce the wife of Sir Henry Gate Kt. Anne the wife of Nich. Robertson, and Alice the wife of Edm. Verney esq. which Ric. Knevit departed this life 1 Nov. 1 Eliz. leaving by her the said Elene, Henry his son and heir, aged 7. months and 15. days; who, about the 36. year of Q. Eliz. sold it to John Brown of Barnam in Com. Suff. (lineal heir to John Brown esq. who being Standardbearer to John D. Bedford at such time as he was Regent of France, bore for his Armes sable 2. bends verry Or and gules, and lost his life in those wars, as the Pedegree of this family doth manifest.) Which John had issue Sir Will. Brown late of this place deceased; who for the better fortifying his title obtained a new Pat. ^k from the Crown, dated 12. Martii 15. Jac. to himself and John Warde, and the heirs of him the said Sir Will. in Fee-ferm; viz. paying to the said K. his heirs and successors the yearly Rent of iii li. xviii s. v d. ob. Which said Sir Will. dying seized thereof, not long since, left George Brown esquier his son and heir, the present owner thereof.

In 10 H. 4. the Hundred presented ^l, that this village ought to repair the Bridge called Quenesbrygge lying, within the precincts thereof, over the river Leame; but what was determined thereon, I find not.

The Church (dedicated to S. Nicholas) being given to the Monastery of Kenilworth by Henry de Simely in H. 1. time, as I have already shewed, was appropriated ^m thereto by G. Muschamp B. of Coventre in K. John's time, and in An. 1291. 19 E. 1. valued ⁿ at vi. marks, but the Vicaridge at ii. marks. Which Vicaridge, in 26 H. 8. was rated ^o at over and above ii s. allowed for Procurations and Synodals.

Whitnash.

Following the course of Leame I come next to Whitnash, wherein the same Hunfridus of whom I made mention in Leminton. Hastang was certified to hold 2. hides of Hasculf Musard in the Conquerors time, then valued at C s. and which were the Freehold of one Alured before the Norman invasion. In that Survey it is written Waltenas, but afterwards in most Records Waltenes. As to the originall occasion of the name I cannot speak positively, but do suppose that it was Brittiſh, and by time much corrupted, as most others are: For I have observed that Coff, which with them signifieth a wood, is sometimes found to be written quff, and Whiff by our English and Norman Ancestors so that then the syllable nes, with the Brittons importing the same as propè doth in Latine, sheweth that this place (in probability) had it's first denomination by being situat nigh some wood then growing there.

From the before specified Hunfridus descended the family of Hastang (whereof in Leminton I have spoke) who enjoyed this Lordship for some descents; during which time, one of them, viz. Atrop Hastang confirmed the grant made to the Canons of Dseney by Ric. Kentensis of half a hide of land lying in this Village. But to Hastang, in the possession of this Lordship succeeded Roger de Cherlecoate, who lived in K. John's time; From whom descended Sir Thomas de Haseley Kt. who assumed his surname from that place, in regard it was his principall seat (as when I come to Haseley shall be manifested.) Of which Sir Thomas in 7 E. 1. it was certified s, that he held this Mannour of Rob. de Hastang by the service of half a Knights fee, excepting iv s. and that he then had here a Watermill and 3. carucats of land in demesne: as also a great pool; with xix. servants holding 7. yard land, six acres and a fourth part at the Will of the Lord, performing divers servile imployments; and six Freeholders occupying 3. yard land and a hallf. It was then also certified that the Kts Hospitalars had 4. messuages lying in this Village, held by 4. Freeholders, and given unto them by Atrop Hastang.

Which Sir Thomas de Haseley had issue Robert, who granted this Mannour unto John his son; from whom descended Thomas Haseley of Whitnash, who by his Deed dated on the day of S. Lucie the virgin 20 E. 3. past it awy to Tho. Savage of Lachebyoke. Malory in this County; which T. Savage had a fair estate in lands here before, purchased by John his father from John Malory of Walton in Leicesterſhire, descended to him the said John from Will. Malory his grandfather. All which lands together with the said Mannour did the same T. Savage by his deed bearing date on the featt-day of the translation of S. Edward the K. 1 R. 3. grant unto Benedict Medley of Whitnash and his heirs.

Besides this there was another Mannour here in Whitnash, but of its antiquity I can say little; for the first mention I meet with of it is, that Sir Baldwin Frevill Kt. was seized thereof; and that by partition betwixt his sisters and coheirs in 31 H. 6. it fell to Margaret; then the wife of Sir Ric. Bingham one of the Justices of the Common Pleas, but formerly of Sir Hugh Willoughby Kt. whose grandchild, viz. Sir Henry Willoughby Kt. sold it to the abovenamed Benedict Medley 12. Maii 14 H. 7. which Benedict was Cleke of the Signet to K. H. 7. at the same time, and bore for his Armes sable 2. bars gemells Arg. upon a chief of the second three Mulletts of the first; and dyed 13. Oct. 19 H. 7. leaving Will. his son and heir 23. years of age, who married Margaret the daughter of Sir Robert Wotton Kt. and had issue George Medley esq. that wedded Mary the daughter of Gerard Danet: which George left issue Henry Medley esquire, who by Frances the daughter of Clem. Throgmorton of Haseley esq. had issue Henry 14. years of age in 21 Eliz. To whom succeeded Clem. Medley, who in 2 Jac. past away this Mannour to Robert Wale gent.

The Church (dedicated to S. Margaret) was given to the Canons of Kenilworth in H. 1. time (or thereabouts) by Atrop Hastang; concerning which I am to observe one thing further, which is, that the said Atrop then confirmed 18. Acres of land, that his Tenants (viz. Freeholders) here in Whitnash gave thereunto at its Dedication. Whereby may be discerned, that so fervent was the zeal of those elder times to Gods service and honour, that they freely endowed the Church with some part of their possessions, and that in those good works, even the meaner sort of men, as well as the pious founders, were not backwards. Amongst divers other concessions made by G. Muschamp Bishop of Cobentre to the Canons of Kenilworth in K. John's time, I find that one was of two shillings yearly Pension granted to them out of this Church, which had been endowed of one yard land and a half, as the Record expresses.

In An. 1291. 19 E. 1. it was valued at vi. marks, and in 26 H. 8. at Cix s. viii d. over and above the yearly Pension of ii s. payable to the Monastery of Kenilworth, and viii s. for Procurations and Synodalls.

Leminton-Priors.

THIS, for distinction from the former, called Leminton-Priors, hath its name (as the other had) from its situation upon the same river. Inⁿ the Conquerors time Earl Roger, (scil. de Montgomeri, of whom I have spoke in Wolston) held it, the extent thereof being then certified at 2. hides, which were valued at 4 li. having two Mills rated at xxiv s. But before the Norman invasion Olwinus was owner thereof, whom I suppose to be the same man, which is elsewhere written Alwinus, father unto Turchill de Warwick.

It seemes, that one of the Bishops of Cobentre and Lichfield (in those days called Bishop of Chesster by reason of his residence in that City) posselt this place in H. 1. time; but which of them it was, is not exprest: for in the grant^e made thereof by Geffrey de Clinton, Founder of the Castle and Priory of Kenilworth, to Gilbert Nutricius of Warwick and his heirs, to hold by the service of half a Knights fee, (in consideration whereof, the said Gilbert gave to the above mentioned Geffrey ten marks, with a silver cup, and to Agnes his wife a Befantine of gold,) is said to be de feodo Episcopi Cestrie. And if I may have liberty to guess how the said Bishop had it, I shall not doubt but that it was given to him by the King upon the forfeiture of Rob. de Felismo E. of Shrewsbury son to the before recited Earl Roger.

Whether the before named G. Nutricius dyed without issue, and that thereupon this Mannour returned to Geffrey de Clinton, son to the donour; or whether he made any agreement by Exchange, or otherwise, appears not; but certain it is that the same Geffrey gave it to the Canons of Kenilworth, together with the Church and Mill of this village. It seems, that the service of half a Knights fee, by which the said Canons held it (though in the grant there be no mention thereof) was by the Bishop past over to the Monks of Cobentre, for in 20 H. 3. the Prior of Cobentre, certifying⁹ what Kts. fees were held of that Monastery, makes instance of half a Knights fee in Leminton juxta Warwick held by the before specified Canons. The like was signified in 36 H. 3. Which Canons in 7 E. 1. had 2 a watermill, 3. yard land and a 4. part, and the half of another Mill here in demein: as also ix servants holding 3. yard land and 3. quarters, performing divers servile labours; 8. Cottiers, holding 8. Cottages, and 8. acres of land; and xi. Freeholders which held 13. yard land and a 4. part, with the other half of the Water-mill. And besides all this a Court-Leet, Gallows, Assise of bread and beer, by the grant of K. H. 3. together with the Church appropriat, endowed with two yard land. All which was enjoyed by them till the dissolution of the Monasteries by K. H. 8. but then came to the Crown, wherein it continued till 6 Eliz. that the Q. granted it to Ambrose E. of Warwick and the heirs male of his body.

All that is further observable touching this place is, that nigh to the East end of the Church, there is a Spring of Salt-water, (not above a stones-throw from the river Leame,) whereof the Inhabitants make much use for seasoning of meat.

The Church (dedicated to All Saints) was originally but a Chapell, and belonging to Wotton (on the other side the River,) being therewith confirmed to the Canons of Kenilworth by Ric. Peche Bishop of Cobentre in H. 2. days, and x approprated to them by G. Muschamp, his successor, in K. John's time. In Anno 1291. 19 E. 1. it was valued at vi. marks over and above a Pension of xx s, then issuing out of it to the Abby of Malmsbury; and the Vicaridge at xxx s. But in 26 H. 8. the same Vicaridge was valued at vi li. x s. the Pension of xxxiii. s. iv d. added by the Canons of Kenilworth, computed.

Newbold-Comin.

THIS place (the originall occasion of whose name is discovered by the later syllable bold, which in the Saxon language signifieth a House) is one of those depopulated Villages whereof J. Rouss in H. 6. time complained, and lyeth on the North side of Leame, but in the Parish of Lemington-Priors. In Edw. the Conf. time, it was the inheritance of one Vinsine, who gave it to the Abby of Malmesbury, at such time as he was shorn a Monk in that Monastery; and by the Conq. Survey is certified to contain 3. hides, at which time there was a Mill yielding viii s. per ann. the value of the whole being L s. But it was not long after the Norman Conquest, that the Monks of Malmesbury enfeoffed one Radulphus Vicecomes in this their land at Newbold; which Raph had issue Wibert, and he a son called Anselme, who left one only daughter, sc. Joan within age at her fathers decease, and in Ward to the Abbot; by whom she was given in marriage to Elias Comyn: From which Elias and Joan descended these Comyns who had their seat here, and for distinction from other Newbolds gave the addition of their own name to this place.

In 31 H. 3. upon difference that grew betwixt

John Comyn, and Geffrey de Simely (Lord of Radford) touching liberty of fishing in the River of Leame, they came to an Agreement, that the said John should fish as far as his own land extended. This John holding Newbold of the Abbot of Malmesbury by the service of xl s. per annum in 7 E. 1. had at that time 1. carucat of land and a Water-mill in demesne, and xvi. Villains holding of him xii. yard land by base services: as also a Court-Leet, with Assize of bread and beer; and left issue John, whose name in 17 E. 2. was certified amongst the rest of those Esquiers and men at Armes of this County, which were then returned into the Chancery. After which; viz. in 1 E. 3. he served as one of the Knights for this Shire in the Parliament held at Lincoln the morrow after the exaltation of the holy Crosse, and in 12 E. 3. was in Commission for the gathering of a xv. and Tenth in this County granted to the King in Parliament 11. of his reign; So also in 22 E. 3. Which John being Lord of Kinsale in Ireland, and of Porton-Underhill in Com. Wigorn. departed this life, leaving no issue male. But it should seem that he had four daughters and heirs, betwixt whom this Mannour of Newbold was divided. Of Milicent and Elene I find direct mention; Milicent taking first to husband Will. de Aghton, but afterwards Richard Massy of Hogh; and Elene being the wife to James Dingley of Coventryshire.

The third, I suppose, was Joan the wife of John de Farington: for I find, that in 3 H. 4. there was a Fine levied of the 4. part of this Mannour, with the 4. part of the Mannour of Porton-Underhill, whereby they were entayled upon Christopher Farington, son of the said John and Joan, and the heirs male of his body, with remainder to Raph brother of Christopher, and for default of issue by Raph, to John the son of Henry Banastre of Walton in the Dale (Com. Lanc.) and the heirs male of his body, and for default of such issue to Raph the son of Hugh Holcroft, and the heirs male of his body; and for default of such issue to Joan the daughter of the above specified John Farington, and the heirs of her body, with remainder to the right heirs of the said Joan. Which James Dingley and Elene in 9 H. 4. settled the 4. part thereof, as also of Porton-Underhill (which it seems was the share allotted to the said Elene) upon Rouland Dingley and his heirs. And Milicent, after the death of Richard Massy her husband, gave possession of her part in this Mannour to Hugh Aghton her eldest son, by her deed dated at Coventre the Tuesday next after the feast of the Conception of the blessed Virgin 11 H. 4. Which part was soon after obtained by Dingley, as it seems; for it appears, that in 8 H. 5. the moytie of this Mannour, with the moytie also of Porton-Underhill were past away by Robert Dingley, cousin to the said Elene, and Joan his wife, to Thomas Gower of Wood-hall and his heirs. From whom descended John Gower of Wood-hall, who with William his son and heir, by their Deed dated 22. Junii 9. Jac. sold it to Sir Clem. Fisher of Backington Knight, whose grandson, Francis, now enjoys it.

But Christopher Faryngdon, before mentioned, and Alice his wife, in 14 H. 6. levied a Fine of their 4. part to Thomas Hugford (of Embscote esq.) and his heirs; which, by the Inquis. taken after the death of John Hugford 1 H. 7. was certified to contain C. acres of arable land, xl. acres of pasture, and xxiv. acres of meadow : And coming, upon partition of Hugford's lands, to John Beauford (who married Alice the eldest daughter to the said J. Hugford,) is yet enjoyed by Henry Beauford of Emcote esq. his lineall heir. But the residue of this Petbold-Comyn having been anciently belonging to the Monks of Stoneley, was after the dissolution of the Monasteries granted, inter alia, to James Cruce of Kenilworth gentleman, scil. 12. Apr. 29 H.8. and by the said James sold away to Ex aut. William Morcote of Lemington-Pr. and Richard penes Peter Willys of Alton gentleman, in consideration of 80 Willys g. li. 28. Mar. 30 H.8. which Ric. Willys dyed h scil. 6 Eliz. zed thereof in 6 Eliz. it being then accounted for C. acres of pasture, with three acres and a half of wood : All which Peter Willys, his great-grand-child, now enjoys.

KINETON HUNDRED.

Came having thus past Le-minton parish, meets with Avon, which by its conjuntion is made a very fair stream, and entering Kine-ton-Hundred glides on gently South westwards. But before I proceed to take notice of the observable places situat on the banks of this River, I must, in pursuance of my order, speak of the Hundred it self, which takes its appellation from a town of that name lying about the midst thereof.

The first mention of this Hundred, that I meet with, is in 16 H. 2. but then had it the name of Sipesocha de Chinton and answered xl s. pro placitis concelnis: (concerning the interpretation of which word, (i. e. Sipesocha) I have in my discourse of Knightlow and Hemlingford Hundreds delivered my conjecture.) Yet before the end of that Ks.
reign it was called Hundred de Kinton: for I find, that K. H. 2. granted it by that name, to Walter the son of Thurstane de Cherlecore and his heirs, in Fee-ferm, for xl s. yearly Rent; viz. xx s. at the feast of S. Mich. the Arch-Angell, and xx s. at the Annunciation of our Lady, but in what year this was appears not, their Charters of that time being seldom dated.

How it comes to pass, that this Walter de Cherle-core, or his son continued not long fermours thereof, I know not: but in K. John's time it appears, that there was accounted xxi. marks for the ferm of it; xi
s. v. d. for the profit of the Leet belonging thereto; x
li. for the Shiriffs Aid, and viii s. viii d. for Warth-money: yet in 6 H. 3. upon an Inspeex: of K. H. 2.
Charter, the then Shiriff of this County, sc. Will. de Cantilupe, had command to render the said ferm to Will. de Lucy (who was heir unto the before specified Walter de Cherlecore.) But it was not long after this, that the K. had it again in his own hands:
for in 21 H. 3. Will. de Lucy being Shiriff of this County & Leicester-shire accounted for the ferm thereof xvi li. xviii s. v. d. For the Shiriffs Aid within the same ix l. x s. For the profit of the Leet belonging thereto xlvii s. and for Warth-money viii
s. iii d. And in 24 H. 3. the ferm thereof was demised to Ric. de Herci during the K. pleasure, (it being valued at xxiv. marks per ann.) paying for the same as much as others who had formerly the benefit thereof, had wont to do, with Cs. more by way of increase. Which Richard being in 2 E. 1. ejected from his custody thereof by Will. Morteyn, then Shiriff made his complaint to the K. that the said Shiriff, had committed the same to one Henry Mile, who accounted less for it than he the said Ric. did. Whereupon the Shiriff had command to render it again to him unless he could shew good cause to the contrary.

After this; viz. in 4 E. 1. it was certified to be in the Kings hands. And in 10 E. 2. Thomas de Blaunckfront had a grant of the ferm of it, to hold during the Kings pleasure, rendering to the said King into his Exchequer as much as formerly had used to be payd; So likewise had John de Waltham in 4 E. 3. the whole profits thereof in 41 E. 3. amounting to xv li. xviii s. ix d. per ann.

viz. for the ferm viii li. for the profits of the Leet (scil. the Common Fine) vii li. xix s. viii d. and for Warth-money vi s. v. d. as appeareth by the particulars from each village: but the severall towns, within the compass thereof, which do now owe suit to the Hundred Court, are no more than these, Shotswell, Warmingtoun, Stretton Super Fosse, part of Wellesbirne, Drhill, Aven-Dasset, Mollington, Balsford, Barton on the Heath, Ratley, Farnborough and Apleston.

This is all that is worthy regard touching this Hundred in generall, the custody whereof hath been in the Shiriff, for the time being, ever since. I now return to the River Avon.

Warwick.

THE first place of note that presents it self to my view, on the banks of this fair stream is Warwick, standing on the North side thereof; which, as it is and hath been the chiefest town of these parts, and whereof the whole County, upon the first division of this Realm into Shires took its name, so may it justly glory in its situation beyond any other, standing upon a rocky ascent from every side, and in a dry and fertile soil, having the benefit of rich and pleasant Meadows on the South part, with the lofty Groves, and spacious thickets of the Wood-Land on the North:
wherefore, were there nothing else to argue its great antiquity, these commodities, which so surround it, might sufficiently satisfy us, that the Britains made an early plantation here to participate of them.
But passing by these probabilities, let us see what certainty we have from light of History, both as to the time when, and of the person by whom it was first built: as also of such enlargement, or advantage as accrued thereto by any other Benefactors that it had before the Norman Conquest.

And herein, that my Reader may not expect very exact satisfaction, I shall first desire, that what I have said in my Introduction, as to the reason why we have so little left us of the passages in those elder times may be considered: For from the days of venerable Bede till the Normans entrance, which was full CCCxxx. years, there was not any Historian in this Kingdom, as William Malmesb. * testifieth; and next, that the credit of my Countrey-man John Rous (of whom in Epus-Cliff I have already made mention) may carry a fair regard, in relation to what I doe vouch him concerning this place;
considering,

considering, that having been so diligent a searcher after Antiquities, and especially of this County, he hath left behinde him divers notable things, industriously gathered from many choise manuscripts, whereof he had perusal in sundry Monasteries of England & Wales, which now, through the fatal subversion of those houses, are, for the most part, perisht.

The first building, or foundation hereof, he attributeth^w to Gutheline (by some called Kimbeline) one of the British Kings, (whose reign was contemporary^x with the birth of our blessed Saviour) affirming^y that it then had the name of Caerleon, from the British word Caer, which is the same with Civitas, and his own name; and so, by shortness of pronounciation, for Caer-Guthleion was called Caerleon: As also, that Guiderius, Son and Successor to Kimbeline, much enlarged^z it with buildings, and granted^a thereto many priviledges: And that, being afterwards almost destroyed through wars, especially by the barbarous Picts & Scots, it lay ruinous till that Caradocus, the famous British Prince rebuilt^b it, making a Mannour house therein for himself, and founding^c a Church to the honour of S. John Bapt. in the Market place (where, as my Author saith, in his time a Grammar School was kept.) In the dayes of this Caradocus it was, that the Romans prevailed much here in Wiltshire, under the conduct of P. Ostorius, Lieutenant to Claudius the Emp. who to keep what he had won, raised^d divers Forts and Garrisons upon the Rivers of Avon and Severn — cinctosque castris Antonam & Sabrinam fluvios cingere parat, saith Tacitus, whereof we cannot doubt but this was one; and hereunto doth Mr. Camden's opinion^e incline, conceiving, that the Town in Wiltshire called Prasidium by the Romans, is this very place.

But afterwards, being again destroyed^f by wars, it lay so wasted, till Constantine the Father of Uter-Pendragon a British King, repaired it, and called it Caer-umbr; whose death (for he was slain by a new incursion of the Picts) exposed^g it to another devastation; in which ruinous sort it lay, till a British Prince, named Gwair, rebuilt it, and commanded that it should be called Caer-Gwair: which Gwair was Cousin in the third degree to the renowned K. Arthur. About this time it was that the famous Arthgal lived, whom my Authorⁱ representeth to be one of the Knights of K. Arthur's round Table, and the first Earle of Warwick: but he saith^k that the Britons did not pronounce the g in that name, and that Arth, or Narth signifieth the same in that language as Ursus doth in Latine; from whence he conjectureth^l that the same Arthgal took the Bear for his ensign, which so long continued a badge to the succeeding Earles.

The next in order of these British Earles doth he reckon^m Morvidus, who being a man of great valour, slew a mighty Gyant in a single Duell; which Gyant encountred him with a young Tree pull'd up by the root, the boughs being snag'd from it; In token whereof he and his Successors Earles of Warwick in the time of the Britons, bore a Ragged-staff of silver in a sable sheild for their cognisance. To him succeededⁿ Merthurdus, of whom there is nothing memorable, that I have seen recorded, other than that in his dayes S. Dubritius, a holy man, made his Episcopal seat here at Warwick; not in the Church of S. John

Bapt. before mentioned, but in that of All-Saints, where afterwards the Castle was built, which Bishop also erected^o divers private Oratories in these parts, the chief wherof was that of S. Mary Magd. where the sometime famous Guy, bidding farewell to these worldly pleasures, lived a Heremites life a while before his death; and which from him took the name of Guyes-Cliff: howbeit, such were the troubles that arose in this Land by the Saxons entrance, at the invitation of K. Vortigern, that not onely the said Bishop left^p this place, and retired into Wales, where he became the first Bishop of Landaff, and afterwards Arch-Bish. of S. Davids, but that by wars it became wasted^q again, and so continued till that K. Warremund, from whom the Kings of Mercia did descend, rebuilt^r it, and from his own name caused it to be called Warrewyk.

After which it stood for some time in a flourishing condition, but at length was destroyed^s by the Danes, and so rested untill the renowned Lady Ethelfled, daughter^t to K. Alfred, who had the whole Earldom of Mercia given^u her, by her Father, to the Noble Ethelred, in marriage, repaired^v its ruins, and in the year of Christ Dcccxcv. made^x a strong fortification here, called the Downgeon, for resistance of the Enemy, upon an hill of earth artificially raised near the River side, as is yet to be seen on the West part of the Castle, which being placed about the midst of his Mercian Territories, and a Fort so considerable in respect of its natural situation, was (no doubt) of great importance for securing the peace of all these parts, by the personal residence thereat, of those eminent men, whom we repute to have been Earls thereof in those dayes, though in truth they were but substitutes; or Lieutenants to the Earls of Mercia (whose limits extended unto many other shires in this midland part of the Realm;) or else had the custody of the County to the King's immediate use.

Having thus far taken notice of what chiefly concerns this place, and finding little else that hath relation thereto till the time of K. Edw. the Conf. I will now go on with the story of those noble persons, which were reputed Earls thereof before the Norman Conquest, and since that time have really been so, making onely a short digression to point at the occasion of that name and dignity; as also what power and authority it was that they anciently had. And first for the name, viz. Consul, or Comes in Latine, and Earle in our ancient English expression, I shall deliver Mr. Camden's words; — Earls, called in Latine Comites, may seem to have come unto us from our ancestors the Germans, saith he; for they in times past, as C. Tacitus writeth, had their Comites, who should alwayes give attendance upon their Princes, and be at hand in matters of counsell and authority: but others think that they came from the Romans to us, as also to the French: for the Emperours, when as the Empire was grown to the full strength, began to have about them a certain privy Council, which was called Cæsaris comitatus, and then those whose counsell they used in war and peace were termed Comites, &c. In processe of time, when the Empire of the Romans became rent into many pieces, this title yet was retained, and our English Saxons called them in English Ealdormen, as Ethelward writeth, by which name somewhat mollified they are called of us at this day Earles.

And

And further to confirm that they had the name of Comites for such their attendance upon the K. John Sarisburiensis, who wrote in H. 2. dayes, testifieth, Comites, & (saith he) à societatis participatione dici, quisquis ignorat ignarus est literarum, quæ literalis institutio primis tradere consuevit. And much to the same purpose is that expression of Bracton, Comites quia à comitatu, sive à societate nomen sumpserunt, qui etiam dici possunt Consules à consulendo: Reges enim tales sibi associant ad regendum populum Dei, ordinantes eos in magno honore, & prestate, & nomine quando accingunt eos gladiis, id est ringis gladiatorum, &c.

Now for the Jurisdiction that they had, I shall be bold to declare something thereof out of Mr. Selden's expressions — Ealdormen, or Earles had, it seems, (saith he) Jurisdiction in their Earldoms, or the Territories that denominated them; but so, that if the whole Territory were the Ealdorman's own (as in the case of Ethelred Ealdorman of Merc-land under K. Alfred, and K. Edw. the elder) then the Courts held, and the profits of the Jurisdiction were to his own use and benefit; but if he had not the Territory that denominated him, but only some particular revenue in it belonging to his dignity, then it seems his Jurisdiction and Courts (saving perhaps in those possessions which were his own) were held by him to the K. use and benefit; that is he commonly supplied the immediate office which the Sheriffs have regularly used to do in the Counties that are not Palatine, &c.

And in K. Ethelred's Laws (published by Mr. Lambert) there is direct proof, that the Ealdorman, or Earle, was usually a temporal Judge immediate to the K. But for particular instances of their judicial power in probat of Wills, Judgements in cases of title to Land, and causes Criminal, I shall refer my Reader to the relation of that learned person; adding onely this notable testimony out of the Laws of King H. 1. — sicut antiqua fuerat institutione formatum, salutari Regis imperio, vera nuper est recordatione firmatum, generalia Comitum placita certis locis & vicibus, & diffinito tempore per singulas provincias Anglia conveniri debere, nec ullis ultra sagitationibus fatigari, nisi propria Regis necessitate, vel commune regni commodum sape adjiciat: Interfint autem Episcopi, Comites, Vice Comites, Vicarii, Centenarii, Aldermanni, Præfecti, Præpositi, Barones, Vaviores, Tungrevii, & ceteri terrarum domini diligenter intendentes, ne malorum impunitas, aut graviorum pravitas, vel Judicium subversio, solita miseros laceratione conficiant. Agantur itaque primo debita vera Christianitatis iura; secundo Regis placita; postremo causa singulorum dignis satisfactionibus expleantur.

But I will forbear to enlarge my self further on this subject, and descend to our reputed Earles of the Saxon race; whereof the first that my Author mentions is Rohand. This man, being a famous Warriour, and intricht with great possessions, lived in the dayes of K. Alfred, and K. Edw. the elder, and left issue one onely daughter named Felicia, that married unto Guy son of Siward Baron of Wallingford, who in her right became Earle of Warwick; the memory of which Guy, for his great valour, hath ever since been, and yet is so famous, that the vulgar are of opinion he was a man of more then ordinary stature; and the Welch, taking notice of his brave exploits will needs have him to be descended from Brittainish parentage: but of his particular adventures, least what I say should be suspected for fabulous, I will onely instance that Combate betwixt him and the Danish Champion Colebrand, whom some (to magnifie our noble Guy the more) report to have been a Giant. The storie whereof, however it may be thought fictitious by some, forasmuch as there be those that make a question whether there was ever really such a man; or if so, whether all be not a dream which is reported of him, in regard that the Monks have sounded out his praises so hyperbolically: yet those that are more considerate will neither doubt the one, nor the other, inasmuch as it hath been so usual with our ancient Historians, for the encouragement of after-ages unto bold attempts, to set forth the exploits of worthy men with the highest encomiums imaginable: And therefore, should we for that cause be so conceited as to explode it, all History of those times might as well be vilified. And having said thus much to encounter with the prejudicate fancies of some, and the wayward opinions of others, I come to the story, which, from certain Authors of good credit, is in substance as followeth.

In the third year of K. Athelstan (which happened in An. 926) the Danes having invaded England, cruelly wasted the Countreys where they marched, so that there was scarce a Town, or Castle, that they had not burnt, or destroyed, almost as far as Wiltcheffer: and hearing that the K. with his nobles, then was in that Citie consulting about some timely means to prevent the utter losse of all, they sent messengers to him, proposing that either he would forthwith resign his Crown to the Danish Generals, viz. Aulase, and Govelaph, or submit to hold this Realm of them, doing homage and fealty, and paying tribute according to their appointment: or lastly, that the whole dispute for the Kingdom should be determined in a single Combat by two Champions for both sides; this being added by Aulase, that if in that Duel K. Athelstan's Champion had the victory, he would presently depart the land with his Army, but otherwise, without any more ado, it should wholly belong to the Danes.

Of which proposals K. Athelstan accepted the last, and, calling together his Nobles, offered that Province (viz. Hantsire) for a reward to him that should conquer the Danish Champion, called Colebrand: and to the end that God would direct him in the choice of one to undertake this Combate, he enjoyned a Fast for 3. dayes, in which with earnest prayers and abundant tears he besought his favour. But in this choice the English were exceedingly astonished, forasmuch as one Herauld, a most valiant & hardy Knt. of this Nation, was then beyond Sea, seeking after Reynburn the son of his Lord and master Earle Guy, that had been stolen away by Merchants of a forreign Countrey in his infancy; As also that Earle Rohand, the most valiant of a thousand, was dead; and that the same Guy, a man of extraordinary courage and skill in martial feats, shortly after his marriage with the Lady Felicia before mentioned, being gone into the Holy-land on Pilgrimage, was not yet returned: But it so fell out, that God, being moved with the sorrowfull tears and intercessions of the English, sent a good Angel to comfort the King as he lay upon his bed the very night of the Nativity of S. John Bapt. directing that he should arise early on the morrow, taking two Bishops with him, and get up to the top of the North-gate of that Citie, staying there till the hour hour of Prime, and then should he see divers poor people and Pilgrims enter thereat, amongst which there would be a personable man in a Pilgrims habit, bare footed with his head uncovered, and upon it a Chaplet of White-Roses; and that he should intreat him for the love of Jesus Christ, the devotion of his Pilgrimage, and the preservation of all England to undertake the Combat, for he should Conquer the mighty Colbrond, and deliver his Realm from the Danish servitude. Whereupon K. Athelstan with fervent zeal hastened betimes in the morning to Masse, and sent for the Archb. of Canterbury, with the Bishop of Chichester to whom he related his Vision, taking them along to the Gate assigned.

About this time it hapned that the famous Guy before specified, returning from his Pilgrimage in foreign parts, landed at Portsmouth, and being there advertised of Sr. Heraud's absence, with the occasion thereof; as also of Earle Roland's death, together with the great distresse that the K. and his Nobles were then in, hastened towards Winchester immediatly; and coming at night unto an Hospital, but little distant from the North-gate of that Citie (in which place afterwards the Hospital in honour of the Holy-Crosse was founded) where he rested himself, on the next morning he went with other poor people to the City-gate. To which place the K. being come for the purpose before specified, and espying one neatly clad in a white short-sleeved Gown reaching to the mid-leg, with a Garland of Roses upon his head, and a large staff in his hand, but looking wan, and much macerated by reason of his travelling bare-foot, and his beard grown to a very great length, he concluded that the same was the man described to him by the Angel, and being full of joy told those that were with him as much.

Vide Les Antiquités de la ville de Paris per Claude Malingre, Imp. Paris 1640.) p. 240. where he hath this expression concerning Palmers — Lesquels ont appelé croisez lors qu'ils entreprennoient le voyage d'autant que per leur Foesques ou curé ils se faisoient eoudre une Croix de Hierusalem de drap rouge sur leurs manteaux, & prenoient le burdon: Au retour ils estoient appellez Palmiers, d'autant que retournans d'outremer ils apportoi-ent des Palmes en signe d'avoir combattu les Infidelles come ils Pavoient vové, &c.

The Palmer (for so was he at that time called) taking notice of the K. and Bishops, put off his Chaplet, and reverently saluting them, entered the Gate: whereupon the K. hastened down, and laying hold of his Coat, tendred him entertainment, with desire to hear some news: but the Palmer, returning humble thanks, answered, that the hour to take up his lodging was not yet come, for that he intended first to visit the Churches of that Citie, and there offer up his prayers unto God, but afterwards seek some food for to refresh himself withall; which being done he purposed to depart thence, and perform such penance as he was to do for his sins. Whereunto the K. replied, The reason why we have here stayed hath been onely to wait upon your coming; for it is the will of God, that you must encounter with that wicked Colbrond the Sarscen, for the safeguard of us and all the English Nation, and freedom thereof from the yoke of slavery: for Olaus K. of Denmark, and Golvius of Norway have besieged us here almost a twelve moneth; and now have we concluded a truce, upon condition that we must finde a man to undergo the Combate with Colebrond their Champion, and in case our Champion shall overcome him, they are forthwith to quit the Land without doing injury to any, and not disturb this Realm any more; therefore we do desire you, for the love of Christ our Saviour, and for the pardon of your own sins, that you will heartily undertake this Duel against that cursed Pagan, for the cause of Gods Church and Christian Religion. To whom the Palmer answered, Oh my Lord the King, you may easily see that I am not in any condition to take upon me this fight, being feeble and weakened with dayly travail: Alas, where are your stout and hardy Souldiers, who had wont to be in great esteem with you?

Ah, quoth the K. some of them are dead, and some of them are gone to the Holy-land, but not yet returned: I had one valiant Knight, which was Earle of Warwick, called Guy, and he had a courageous servant named Sr. Heraud de Ardenne, would to God I had him here, for then should this Duel be soon undertaken, and the War finisht; and as he spake these words, tears fell from his eyes. Whereat the Palmer, being very sorrowfull, besought him to forbear further grieving, assuring him, that for the love of Christ Jesus, and the blessed Virgin, as also for the honour of Gods holy Church, and for the Soul of Guy and Heraud his companion, he would in the fear of God undergo that Combat. Then did they bring him into the Citie, and to the Church with ringing of Bells, and Te Deum was begun with cheerfull voices; and entertained him with meat and drink, as also with bathing; putting apparel upon him, and for the space of 3. weeks cheered him up with the best refreshments.

After which, when the day appointed for that Duel was come, the Palmer rose early and heard 3. Masses; the first of the Holy-Ghost, the second of the blessed Trinity, and the third of the Holy-Crosse. Which being ended, he forthwith armed himself with the Kings best harness, and girt the sword of Constantine the great about him; and taking S. Maurice his Lance in his hand, got up on the K. best Courser, being accounted of all that then beheld him the most proper and well appointed Knight that ever they saw. From thence rode he through the midst of the Citie towards the place assigned for the Combate, which was in a valley, called Chiltecumbe, where he waited for Colbrond; who, shortly after, came so weightily harnessed that his Horse could scarce carry him, and before him a Cart loaded with Danish-axes, great Clubs with knobs of Iron, squared bars of Steel, Lances, and Iron hooks to pull his Adversary to him: And so soon as he saw the Palmer make towards him, calling loudly, he bad him get off his Horse and cast himself down with submission: But the Palmer, arming himself with the sign of the Crosse, and commending himself to God, put Spurs to his Horse to meet the Gyant, and in the first encounter pierced his shield so far that his own Lance broke into shivers; which so enraged the Gyant, that he bore up fiercely towards the Palmer, & smote his horse with such strength, that he cut off his head. The Palmer therefore being dismounted, nimbly and with great courage directed his blow at the Gyants Helmet; but by reason of his height could reach no further then his shoulder. Then Colbrond smote at the Palmer with a square bar of steel; but he, seeing his danger, interposed his shield, which bore of the blow, and on a suddain did so vigorously lay at the corner of the Gyants target, that his Club bossed with Iron fell to the ground; which whilst he stretched out his arm to take up, the Palmer with his sword cut off his hand: whereupon the Danes grew much dismayed;

mayed; and on the other side was there as great rejoycing by K. Athelstan and the English; and yet notwithstanding did Colbrand hold out the Combace till the evening of that day, that by loosing so much bloud he fainted, so that Guy, with all his strength fetching a blow, cut off his head.

The victory therefore thus happily obtained, occasioned the Danes with great confusion to hasten away, and the valiant Guy to give thanks unto God, repairing forthwith to the Cathedral, where he was honourably received with solemne Procession by the Clergy and others, and offered his weapon to God and the Patron of that Church before the high Altar, which my Author saith, even to his time, was kept in the Vestry there, and called by the name of Colbrand's Ax: but, this being done, reassumed his Pilgrims habit. Whereupon the K. became most importunate with him to discover his name; but he utterly refused so to do, except to himself, and that upon his oath not to reveal it: unto which condition the K. assenting, they walkt out alone in a by-path to a certain Crosse at some distance from the Citie; and as soon as they came thither, humbly bowing himself to the K. and saying that he was Guy Earle of Warwick, the K. embraced him in his arms, kissed him, and promised him large rewards if he would live in his Court: but he, with much thankfulness, refusing to receive any, besought the K. that he would not disclose what he had said, in regard his resolution was to continue in that Pilgrims state; and so they there parted with tears.

From whence the Earle bent his course towards Warwick, and coming thither not known of any, for three dayes together took Almes at the hands of his own Lady, as one of those xiii poor people unto which she dayly gave relief her self, for the safety of him and her, and the health of both their Souls. And having rendred thanks to her, he repaired to an Heremite that resided amongst the shady woods hard by, desiring by conference with him to receive some spiritual comfort, where he abode with that holy man till his death, and upon his departure out of this World, which hapned within a short time, succeeded him in that Cell, and continued the same course of life for the space of two years after; but then discerning death to approach, he sent to his Lady their Wedding Ring by a trusty servant, wishing her to take care of his burial: adding also, that when she came, she should find him lying dead in the Chapel, before the Altar; and moreover, that within xv dayes after she her self should depart this life. Whereupon she came accordingly, and brought with her the Bishop of the Dioces, as also many of the Clergy & other people, and finding his body there did honourably interre it in that Heremitage, and was her self afterwards buried by him, leaving her paternal inheritance to Reynburn her onely son. Which departure of our famous Guy hapned in the year of our Lord Dccccxxix, and of his own age the seventieth.

To whom succeeded the Noble Reynburn, Earle of Warwick through his Mothers right; who having been stolen away in his Child-hood, and carried into Russia, where he gave great testimony of his singular valour in sundry Warlike feats, whilst he continued in those forreign parts, upon his return into Engl. wedded the beautifull Lady Leonetta daughter to K. Athelstan; but afterwards dying beyond the Seas, was buried in a certain Island near unto Venice, and left for his successor Wegat, alias Weyth the humed, a person of great courage, and much honoured for his skill in martial affairs. This Wegat was a benefactor to the Monastery of Evesham, by giving thereunto six messuages lying in Whitlarford and Grafton in this County; and had issue Ufi, commonly called Huwe the humed, a most devout man, and a special friend to the Monks of Evesham: for in the year Dcccclxxiii, by the consent of K. Edgar he gave them the whole Village of Whitlarford (now called Wairford), and Little-Grafton; and bequeathing his body to sepulture in that Monastery, departed this life about the beginning of the reign of S. Edward the K. and Martyr.

To whom succeeded Wolgeat, who obtained a grant from those secular Canons, which were possessor of the Abby of Evesham upon expulsion of the Monks, for 5. hides of Land in the same Whitlarford upon an easer rent than had wont to be given; conditionally, that upon his death the Monastery might repossesse the same Land with all the stock that then should happen to be upon it: Notwithstanding which, the Monks could not get it again of a long time after, till that Abbot Egelwyne purchased it a new of Earle Wigod, a potent man in the dayes of K. Edw. the Conf. This Wolgeat was in special favour with K. Ethelred; but for his wicked courses and oppressions had all his Lands and honour taken from him in the year M. vi. Whether he had ever restitution of them, or in whose hands the Earldom was thereupon put, is uncertain; but true it is, that Warwick, with a great part of the Countrey, became shortly after (viz. An. M. xvi.) much waited by Cnutus the Dane; at which time the Nunnery, near to the Church of S. Nicholas, as also the Abby were burnt to the ground. When, or by whom those Religious houses were founded, I never yet could finde, nor any mention of them before this. It seems the Abby stood on the Northwest part of the Town; for the Lane there, called Abby-lane, argueth as much: And the said house of Nuns took up all that which is now S. Nichols-Church-yard, with a great part of the ground whereupon the Hospital of S. John Bapt. was afterwards built, the Chancel of S. Nicholas Church being the Quire thereof.

I now come to Wigod, the hereditary successor of Wolgeat; who being a potent man and a great Warriour, as also a special benefactor to the Monks of Evesham, lived in the times of K. Ethelred, K. Edmund, and of the Danish Kings; and had to wife the sister of Earle Leofrik (founder of the Monastery at Cobentry).

To him succeeded Alwyne, contemporary with K. Edward the Conf. and Will. the Conq. This is he that in the Conq. Survey is called Alwinus Vicecomes; the reason whereof I conceive to be, either because that he did exercise the power and Authority of the Earle of Mercia (scil. Earle Leofrike, his Uncle) here in Warwick-shire, as his ancestors had done, for which respect my Author reputes him and them Earls, as I have already shewed, and hath ranked them in that degree; or else that he had the custody of the County to the Kings immediate use. Which Alwyne left issue Turchill, who likewise stands in the Catalogue of our Earls, and was a great man in that age, but no more really Earle than his Father and Ancestors were: For if the Earldom of Mercia, with which Honour Edwyn the Grand-Childe to Earle Leofrike fruke was dignified, did, as it included this Shire, really vest him in power and authority therein, as he had in some other Counties, then was this Alwyne his Viccomes, or substitute here; which may seem to have been so, in as much as the said Edwyne is in an ancient MS. "particularly stiled Comes Warwici : But that which argues him to have been only Custos of the County to the Kings immediate use, is, that in Domesday-book where the profits of the Shire are set down as they were rated in Edw. the Conf. time : there is nothing of the Tertius denarius reckoned to the Earle, as in such where the Earle had absolute Jurisdiction is usual, but all to the King. By which it should seem, that these hereditary Viccomites (whom we repute to have been Earles) were immediately Officers to the King, and not to the Earles of Mercia.

This Turchill resid d here at Warwick, and had great possessions in this County when Will. D. of Normandy invaded England and vanquish't K. Harold : and though he were then a man of especial note and power, yet did he give no assistance to Harold in that Battail, as may easily be seen from the favour he received at the hands of the Conquerour : for by the general Survey, * begun about the 14th. of K. William's Reign, it appears that he then continued posselt of vast Lands in this Shire; and yet thereof was neither the Borough, or Castle of Warwick any part, as from the said Survey may be collect'd; the Borough in Edw. the Conf. time answering a certain yearly Ferm to the King, and the Castle properly belonging to the Earle of Mercia, if not to the King, as a special strong hold for the defence of all these parts, and whereof the said Turchill, being in the nature of a Governour, as his Ancestors were, had his denomination, viz. Turchill de Warwick, attributed to him by the Normans, who first introduced such surnames of places here amongst us. And therefore, whereas my Author * represents him to have been a great enlarger of Warwick-Castle, his words are Castri Warwici Will. elmi Conquestoris, and adds * nam Rex Will. Conquestor ad Castella construenda totam Angliam fatigabat. And what was this for, but to besie their mindes and bring them low in their estates, that they should neither have time nor abilities to contrive any insurrection against him: as also to have places of strength in every corner for better keeping the subdued English in awe.

But of this Turchill I have not now much more to say, besides the mention of those Lands whereof I find him posselt (by the Conquerour's special favour, as you must conclude) at the time of his said general Survey, which were these following, all in this County, and whereof I have in their due places spoken particularly, scil. Curdworth, Bickenhull, Minworth, Wolshamcote, Ricton, Pakinton, Langdone, Mactoke, Merton, Elmestone, Dosthill, Wigninville, Whitacre, Bercheston, Badstep-(Fadfor) Lodbroke, Caldecote, Rodburn, Cusston, Birdingburg, Napton, Fleckno, Hodenhill Willoughby, Bilton, Malcote, Shukbozow, Pelston, Holme, Church-Ober, Ashow, Harbury, Baginton, Witley, Weston, Brandon, Lillington, Radford Rotley, Compton-(Win-yate) Alton, Wimpston, Berkote, Fulredy, Cefdone, Chesterton, Coughton, and (Nun-) Caton.

Neither can I say that he had all these clearly to himself; for in some few I finde that others had a share, as where I speak of them in particular will be manifested. And though he had so much respect from the victorious Norman as to possesse these during his life, yet is it most clear, that his Son enjoy'd none of them as his Heir, but by the favour of the Conquerour, or of those on whom he had bestowed them, as will be found by that small remnant, in comparison of all these Lordships before recited, which was left him, and that also to hold by military service from some of the Norman Nobility. Which dealing (generally in a manner) by the Conquerour I have in my Introduction sufficiently made evident. Leaving therefore what else I have to say of Turchill, till I come into Hemlingford-Hundred, in which he and his posterity afterwards resid'd, assuming the surname of Arden from those woody parts wherein they inhabited, I shall now descend to speak of those Earls that were of the Norman race, the first of which was called Henry de Novo-burgo, from the Castle of Newburgh, in Normandy, the place of his birth.

He was the younger Son of Rog. de Bellomont Earle of Belmont: but of his advancement to the Earldom of Warwick, the direct time appears not; yet by all circumstances I guesse, that it was towards the later end of Will. the Conq. time, in regard there is no mention of him in the general Survey (begun as I have elsewhere shew'd in 14. of his reign:) for my Author * says, that K. Will. having begit Warwick with a mighty ditch for the precinct of its Walls, and erected the Gates at his own charge, did then promote this Henry to the Earldom, and annexed thereto the royalty of the Borough of Warwick with the appurtenances, which at that time belong'd to the Crown.

That Earls so anciently had no formal Charters of their Creation is plain enough to any that hath look't into Antiquities, the manner of their investiture into that dignity, being then and a good while after per cincturam gladio Comitatus as Math. Paris. * and others do observe; it cannot therefore be expected that I should say more as to the manner of his advancement thereto: howbeit, that it was the Conquerour who conferr'd the same honour upon him, is not onely manifest by what I have already said from the Testimony of J. Rous, but from the credit of divers other * noted Historians. It should seem, that before the King raised him to that state of Earle, he was trusted with the custody * of Warwick-Castle, then newly built * by the Conquerour, or rather enlarged and more strengthened, as in my discourse of Turchill hath been said, and shall be further declared when I come to the particular story thereof: but though he had this honour by the Conquerour's gift, he was not during that Kings dayes posselt of all those great Lands whereof he died seized: for it is evident, * that K. Will. Rufus in the very beginning of his reign, bestow'd on him the whole inheritance of Turchill before specified in augmentation of his Earldom; so that whatsoever Turchill's posterity enjoyed thereof was but by the favour of this Earl, as I have already intimated. Nay, so clearly did he account himself seized of all Turchill's patrimony, that he laid claim * to what the Monks of Ambendon had in Little-Chesterton and Wille (both in this County) of the said Turchill's gift, in the days of Abbot Aldelme; so that the succeeding Abbot, for quiet enjoyment thereof, was glad to come to a new agreement * with him, and give him a mark

By which instance we may partly see how hardly the native English were dealt with, as in my Introduction is shewed; viz. not to enjoy their inheritances, though they did not at all oppose the Conquerors title, as by that trust committed to this Turchill for enlarging of Warwick-Castle may be inferred. Nay, so imperious were the Normans in these their acquisitions, that they would not permit the Religious houses to possess what was formerly granted to them by the English, as may seem by that claim which this Earle Henry made to those Lands, above-specified, so given to Abingdon by Turchill, which puts me in minde of the answer that John Earle Warren, about the later end of H. 3. time made to Rog. Zouch then chief Justice, when being questioned by what right he held his Lands -- produxit in medium gladium antiquum & evaginatum (saith my Author) & ait, Ecce domini mei, ecce warantum meum! Antecessores mei verò cum Will. Bastardo venientes, conquesti sunt terras suas gladio, & eadem gladio defendam à quocunque eas occupare volente: non enim

Rex terram per se devicit & subjecit, sed progenitores nostri fuerunt cum eo participes & coadjutores, &c. So that having helpt him to get it by the sword, they esteemed themselves well worthy to share with him.

But I return to Earle Henry. Of whom that which I find most memorable, is, that he was one of those great men, who in An. 1081. (14. Will. C.) by fair persuasions qualified the anger of K. Will. conceived towards Rob. Curthose, his eldest Son, so that a fair composition then ensued betwixt them. That he was also of great familiarity with Henry the K. youngest Son, and one that stuck closest to him, upon the death of Will. Rufus, for his obtaining the Crown, and so like wife ever afterwards: Moreover, amongst the witnesses to that notable Charter of K. Henry 1. whereby he confirmed the Laws of Edw. the Conf. (as K. Will. had new moulded them, and granted many other favours to the Church, as also to the Peers and other subjects of this Realm) he is recorded to be one of which Charters so many were sent through England as there were particular Counties, to remain in the several Monasteries of those Shires.

This Earle began the making of Wedgnoock-park near his Castle of Warwick (whereof I have already spoke) following therein the example of K. Henry, who made the first Park at Woodstocke that ever was in England. He founded the Priory at Warwick; gave the Church of Compton-(Murdac) to be a Prebend in the Church of our Lady at Warwick, before it was made Collegiat, with other benefits: As also the Town of Warminster (in this County) to the Monks of Beaur in Normandy, of all which I shall speak more fully as I come to discourse of them in particular; and therefore for a close, I will deliver the Character which an eminent Historian, who lived at the same time, hath of him; scilicet that he was dulcis & quieti animi vir, & qui congruo suis moribus studio vitam egit & clausit.

He wedded Margaret the daughter to Rotrode Earle of Perch, and had issue by her Roger, who succeeded him in the Earldom of Warwick, Henry, & Geffrey, Rotrode & Bishop of Coreur, Robert that inherited his Fathers possessions in Normandy, who was Sewer and Justice of that Dukedom, and a great benefactor to the Abby of Wet, in which he afterwards was shewn a Monk, and departing this life xliii. Kal. Sepemb. An. 1158. had sepulture in the Chapter-house there. Two daughters he also had, but their names I finde not, nor whether they were ever married; and died xx. Junii, An. 1122. (23. H. 1.) lying interred in the Abby of Beaur before specified.

Of Margaret his Countesse, who survived him above 20. years, I finde, that she was a special benefactresse to the Knights Templars; for in the year 1155. (2. H. 2.) she bestowed the Town of Lamnadok in Wales upon them; and to the Canons of Benilworth quitted her interest in the moyety of the Lordship of Salford in this County, by the consent of Rotrode Bishop of Coreur, Roger Earle of Warwick, Rob. de Newburgh, Geffrey, and Henry her sons; but the direct time of her death I have not discovered.

To Henry succeeded Roger his son in the Earldom of Warwick, who amongst other of the great Nobility, was a witnesse to the Charter of K. Steph. Laws, (in 1. Steph.) but for his military actions I finde no great commendation of him: Nay, it is reported by an Author of that time wherein he lived, that he was vir mollis, & delicis magis quam animi fortitudine affluens: Nevertheless, being one of those that adhered to Maud the Empreffe, he was with the Earle of Glouc. and divers other great men, at the siege of Winchester in 6. Steph. at which time their Army being utterly routed by the Royallists, most of the chief Nobility were taken prisoners: but I do not finde that he had much prejudice thereby, in regard K. Steph. who had been taken prisoner before, in the battail at Lincoln, was set at liberty, upon condition that the Earle of Glouc. taken then at Winchester, with the rest of those that were of his party, should also stand in the same condition of freedom as they were before that overthrow.

And besides this is he reputed to have been the Conqueror of Gowher-land in Wales, which his posterity for a long time afterwards enjoyed, and wherein he founded a little Priory at Languentish, annexing it as a Cell to the Monastery of S. Taurines in Normandy; and to the Abby of Sethe gave certain Lands and fishing, lying in Clamozgansh. within his said Territories or Gowher-land. The foundation of the Priory here at Warwick, begun by his Father, he perfected; and did himself found the Collegiat Church of S. Mary in Warwick (whereof, together with its endowment I shall hereafter speak more fully:) as also S. Michaels Hospital for Lepers there; together with the House of Templars beyond the bridge.

were exercised in them by the Conqueror. reign of H. 8. by the L. Herbert p. 369.

To divers other Monasteries was he also a benefactor; viz. to Wuere in com. Oxon. whereunto he gave the Lordship of Wesledene. To Piptwell in Northamptonsh. by confirming the grant of Causon in this County thereto; which, as his Charter testifieth, he did for the Souls of his Father and Mother, Rotrode his Uncle, and all his Ancestors. To Benilworth by confirming the grants of the Mannours of Salford, and Peltonham thereto; and bestowing on the Canons of that House certain Lands in Warwick, with the Churches of Wattles & Welsburn in this County. To the Monks of Beaur in Normandy, by giving to them two Hides of Land in Walton. To the monastery of Geroudon in com. Leic. by conferring thereto the Town of Wadley-(Endor) in this County, which was afterwards given up by those Monks to Earle William his Son and Successor. To the Monks of Woddestey in com. Wicgorn. in confirming the grant of Suhanger (now called Sunger near Clardon) in this County, which Will. Giffard had given to that House, and conferring on them one Hide of Land in Dr. Melbe. To the Monastery of Thozney in Cambridge-shire, by confirming the grant thereunto made of the moyety of the Mannour of Wenge, by Rob. de Montfort. To the Priory of Cantwell in Staffordsh. by granting thereto 3. yard Land lying in Hull (called Hill) within his Lordship of Sutton-Colfield in his County. And lastly to the Nuns of Wrotheshale, by confirming the Church of Shukbozow, with certain Lands there; as also in Bourton, and Radford, given to them by several persons (as I have elsewhere fully declared;) together with whatsoever was granted to them by Hugh fil. Ricard their Founder. By which his several concessions, as also his often journeys to the Holy-land may appear, that he was a very devout and pious man.

He wedded Gundrede, daughter to Will. the second Earle Warren, and sister, by the mothers side to Waleran E. of Wellent, by whom he had issue 3. sons; viz. Will. Waleran, and Henry, and a daughter called Agnes; which Will. and Waleran were both Earls of Warwick successively; Henry had Gowher-land in Wales left to him by his father; (but by his death without issue it came to Earle Will. his brother) Agnes his daughter was married

The K. of England having many times brought Armies to Conquer Wales, defended both by mountains, and a stout people; and yet being not able to reduce them to a final obedience, yet all that could be gained, to those that would attempt it, whereupon many valiant Nobles and Gentl. won much land from the Welsh, which, as gotte by force, was by remission of the Kings then reigning, bid for divers ages in that absolute manner as Jura Regia Hist. of the life and married to Geoffrey de Clinton Chamberlain to the King (son unto Geoffrey the noble founder of the Priory and Castle of Kenilworth) who had in Frank-marriage with her, by the gift of Earl Roger her Father, ten Kcs. fees of thole xviii. that he the said Geoffrey held of his fee, & for which he was to do service in the Castle of Wyandon. And besides all this, he had a grant of this County, id est the Sheriffalty of the Shire, for so it appeareth by sundry testimonies, to hold to him the said Geoffrey and his Heirs of the said Earle and his Heirs, in such sort as he the said Earle held it of the K. This Earl Roger departed the world xii Junii, An. 1153. (18. Steph.) in which year Henry D. of Normandy (afterwards K. of England by the name of H. 2.) came into England with a great power, and was very prosperous; for whose better welcome Gundred, the Countesse of Warwick before mentioned, outed K. Steph. souldiers forth of Warwick-Castle, and delivered that Fort unto him.

To Roger succeeded in the Earldom of Warwick Will. his Son and Heir, of whom the first memorable passage that I finde, relating to any certain time, is the Certificate which he made in 12 H. 2. in answer to that precept he received from the K. touching the number of Knights fees then held of him; whereby it appears, upon calculation of the particulars, that they amounted to C. and a half. This Earle William founded the Hospitals of S. John and S. Thomas, both in Warwick, built a new Church for the Templars there, and enlarged their possessions by the gift of the Mannour of Shireburn, and certain Lands in Wotton, both in this County; ratified to the Monks of Combe a Hide of Land in Wileby, granted to them by Thurbert de Bilney; and made the like confirmation to the Monks of Pipwell as Earle Roger his father had done to them concerning Causdon; for which respect he was received into their fraternity as a Founder of that Abby. To the Canons of Kenilworth did he ratifie the Churches of Lorley, granted unto them by Rob. fil. Odonis; as also the Churches of Waples, and Wellesburne which his father gave them; in consideration whereof they allowed him one Canon there, presentable alwayes by himself.

This Earle had two wives; viz. Maud the eldest of the two daughters and coheirs to Will. Lord Percy; and Margaret Deiwill, if Rous mistake not: but I rather think that Maud was the later: for I finde, that by her speciall Charter, as Countess of Warwick (which was doubtless in her Widowhood) she gave to the Monks of Salley in Yorkshire, the Church of Tatcaster, with the Chapell of Halewood, and one Carucat of Land in Catthorpe (the place of her birth) of which Monastery she was reputed Patroness: And that upon her death in 6. Joh. the K. directed his precept to the Sheriff of Yorksh. commanding him to take order with the Abbot of Fountains, and Henry de Percy, her Executors, that they should forthwith according to the custom of the Kingdom discharge those debts which were due to his Exchequer. But by neither of these wives had he any issue; so that, departing this life in the Holy Land 15. Nov. An. 1184. (30 H. 2.) Waleran his Brother succeeded him in the Earldom and estate; which Waleran in 2 R. 1. paid 51. l. 03. s. 04. d. to the K. for scutage, in respect of the military service he ought to have personally performed in Wales: but it seems he had not absolute possession of this Earldom till 7 R. 1. that he gave xx. marks to have the tertium denarium de placitis Comitatus.

Of this Earl I finde, that in 9 R. 1. he stood charged to the K. in xlii. l. iii. s. viii. d. debt, in the nature of scutage, towards the payment of a Fine for the K. redemption (who had been made Prisoner upon his return from the Holy Land;) And in another debt of a C. l. for licence to return into England; and in a third debt of C. marks for leave to marry (Alice) the daughter of Rob. Harecurt, and widow unto John de Limesey: As also, that he had much adoe, a great part of his time, touching this inheritance, there being one that feigned himself his elder Brother which dyed in the Holy Land, who put him to great vexation; so that my Author is of opinion, that the grant which he made to Hubert Archb. of Canterb. (and Chancelour of England) of the advowson of all the Prebendaries belonging to the Collegiat Church in Warwick, to hold during his life, was to purchase his favour in that weighty business. But I do not finde, that this Earle was a benefactor to any Religious-house, other than the Hospitall of S. Michael in Warwick, whereunto he gave all the Tith arising out of the assarts of Wedgnock, as also of the paunage and Venison: and to the Nuns of Pinley and Wockthill in this County; to the first whereof he gave certain Lands situate in Curdwale within the Liberties of Claberdon, and to the other a yard Land lying in Walls.

He had two wives, Margaret the daughter to Humfrey de Bohun Earle of Hereford; and Alice the daughter of John de Harecurt, (but widow of John de Limesey before mentioned;) and departing this life in 6. Joh. left issue divers Children; of which, Henry his eldest son succeeded him in the Earldom, Waleran, another son, had the Mannours of Gretham and Cotesmore in com. Rutl. given to him by his father, with certain Lands in Worcestersh. but died without issue. Alice his daughter (by Alice his last wife) wedded to Will. Mauduit of Handape in com. Buck. and had by her father's appointment the Mannour of Wauton, now called Walton-Mauduit in this County, for her marriage portion, as is evident by K. John's confirmation thereof to her, bearing date 30. Nov. in the x. of his reign, but at that time she was not married; yet it seems she had a husband very young, for it appears, that she continued in the custody of her mother, after she was so espoused, by reason of her minority. Gundred, his other daughter, was brought up in the Abby of Pinley before mentioned, together with Isabel his Neice, for whose education he gave in his life time to the Nuns of that house two Marks of silver, yearly to be paid by the hands of his Steward at Claberdon; and at the same time bestowed on them the rededication of his Lordship of Walton in pure Almes for the health of his Soul, and the Soul of Margerie his Countesse; as also for the Souls of E. Roger his father, Gundred his Mother, Earle Will. his brother, with all his Ancestors and Successors.

I finde, that the same year of E. Waleran's death, Alice his Countesse gave a fines of a thousand pounds and ten Palfreys, that she might continue a widow as long as she pleased, so that the K. might not compell her to marry; as also that she might have the custody of those Children she had had by Earle Waleran, and lx. l. Lands per ann. which he gave her freely to dispose of; And likewise her reasonable dowry both of her husbands Lands & Fees; nevertheless she was not to chuse a husband for her self without the K. approbation. After which, scil. the next ensuing year, she gave 3. Palfreys more to the K. that she might have a Jury of xii. lawfull Knights to admeasure her dowry out of the Lands and Fees of E. Waleran her late husband, but what was done therein appears not; howbeit within 2. years after she came to a conclusion with Earle Henry, whereupon she had the mannours of Tantworth, and Claverdon in this County, and of Chebbelworth in Gloucestersh. with the service of two Knights Fees, the one in Lodbroke, and the other in Lorley assigned unto her.

This Earle Henry, being in minority at the death of his Father, was committed to the custody of Thom. Bassett (of Hedindon near Orford.) which Thomas, for a Fine that he paid to the King, had a grant of his marriage 5. May, 7. Joh. to the intent he might match his daughter to him (as was afterwards accordingly done) though she was not his first wife: and had also livery of all his Lands, together with the Castle of Warwick, by Hugh de Chaucumb then Sheriffe of this County, to whom the K. had directed his Precept for that purpose, bearing date 24. Aug. ensuing. Upon Inquis. taken in 12. and 13. Joh. what number of Knights Fees the great men that held of the K. in Capite had, there are fourscore and seventeen certified to belong unto this Earle in Warwicksh. For which with the rest, being all in number C. ii. and a third part, he paid at the same time CC. iii. marks viii. s. x. d. for scutage upon the K. expedition with his Army into Wales; viz. duas marcas quo quolibet sento. In 15. Joh. he came of age (as I gather:) for by the K. special Writ bearing date 1. Junii that year, and directed to the Sheriffe of this County he had the tertium denarium de comitatu Warwiche delivered unto him, as his Ancestors were used to have. In 16. Joh. he contributed xlii. marks to the K. towards the support of his wars in Politou, but was by a special Writ acquitted of the Scutage then exacted from him for that service. And did so faithfully adhere to K. Joh. when the Barons rebelliously took up Arms against him that the said K. by his Letters & P. bearing date 10. Junii in the last year of his reign, commanded Hugh de Nevil, to whom he had committed the custody of Warwick-Castle in those turbulent times, that he should deliver it to him, and to Thom. Bassett (his father in Law:) And moreover, by his precept to the Sheriffe of this County, bearing date at Wentbury 23. Julii ensuing, appointed, that he should have livery of all the Lands of such Rebels which held of his the said Earls Fee, to retain during the K. pleasure.

And as he was thus loyal to that K. so did he stand stoutly to the young K. H. 2. joyning with the Earls of Chester and Albanie in the siege of Mount-Sorel-Castle, 1. H. 3. as also in storming the Castle of Lincoln, where they had a glorious victory over those sturdy Barons, as our Historians do manifest: And in 5. H. 3. when Will. de Fortibus E. of Albanie had rebelliously strengthened his Castle of Witham in com. Linc. he attended the K. in person to the siege thereof, having towards the support of his charge in that expedition x. s. de quolibet sento for all the Knights Fees held of him.

In 9. H. 3. he paid xlix. li. xii. s. v. d. to the K. upon the advance of his Army into Wales, which was called Scutagium de Mungumeri. Yet afterward, when other great men in 11. H. 3. put themselves in Arms on the behalf of Ric. Earle of Coynwall the K. brother, he made one; but that business was quickly composed. In 12. H. 3. he paid CC. iii. marks viii. s. x. d. ob. to the K. towards the charge of another Welch expedition, called Scutagium de Berry; and the next year following had the K. Letters & deprecatory to all his Tenants, that held of him by military service, for an aid towards such expences he was like to be at, in a voyage for Gascon, and to discharge some debt that he owed to the K.

During the minority of this Earle it was, that K. John (in 4. of his reign) gave the Seignory of Gowher in Wales, of his inheritance, unto Will. de Brews, concerning which the succeeding Earls of Warwick had great suits, as I shall hereafter shew. He had two wives; viz. Margery the eldest of the two daughters of Henry d'Oyli of Hoke-roston in com. Oxon. and sister of Henry that died without issue (by which means part of d'Oylie's inheritance came to this family) and Philippa, one of the three daughters and Heirs unto Thom. Bassett of Hedindon before mentioned: but of this Earle Henry his death can I not point out the direct day; yet for certain it was in 13. H. 3. for then did Philippa his Countesse give C. marks to the K. that she might not be compelled to marry, but live a Widdow as long as she pleased, or marry whom she lik't best, provided he were a loyal subject to the K. Whereupon she took to husband, the same year, one Ric. Siward, who proved a turbulent spirited man, being as M. Paris. saith vir martius ab adolescentia; for in 17. H. 3. he joyned with divers great Earls & Barons in the Rebellion about that time begun against the K. which was not well quieted till the 22. of his Reign; but then, notwithstanding all his evil demerits, was received into favour. Much more might be said of this Ric. Siward, but it hath no relation to the story of our Earles, therefore I shall forbear to discourse further of him, especially considering that he was divorced from his Countesse; and will close up what I have to speak of her, with mentioning in what sort she was a benefactresse to the Canons of Berencester (vulgo Wilteter) in com. Buck. viz. that in her full widdowhood she gave them vii. s. yearly rent, issuing out of certain lands in Studley within this County, to finde one Lamp continually burning before the Altar of S. John Bapt. in the conventual Church of Berencester, for the health of her Soul, and all her Ancestors and Childrens Souls. When she died I do not finde, but at Berencester she lieth buried, in the Monastery there, of her fathers foundation.

The issue left by this last mentioned Earle, was one son, and one daughter; scil. Thomas and Margery, both by his first wife; which Thomas was of full age at his fathers death, as it should seem, for in that year he had livery of his Lands, paying C. l. for his relief, which was thus apportioned; viz. xx. l. for his Lands in Wiltshire, for which summe John Biset became surety; xx. li. for his Lands in Orfordsh. for which Thom. Bassett stood bound; xx. li. for his Lands in Gloucestershire, for which Raph de Wiliton was bound, and xl. li. for his Lands in Warwicksh. for which Walt. d'Eivill and Ric. de Mundevil were his pledges. And in 17. H.

17. H. 3. (being but 4. years after) was enriched with the inheritance of d'Oyle's Lands in Dr-ford. that descended to him by the death of his Uncle Henry d'Oily without issue, whereof he had then livery, doing his homage, and paying C. l.
for his Relief to the K. with two Palfreys. In which year, the K. keeping his Whitfuntide at Gloucester, there girt him with the sword of Knighthood, together with Rog. Bigod. (E. of Porff.) and Hugh de Vere (E. of Drford.) Nay, I make a question whether he had full seizin of his Earldom of Warwick till then, though he had livery of his Lands 4. years before, as I have shewed; for the K. precept to the Sheriffe of this County, bearing date at Leuksbury 24. Maii in that year, saith thus, Rex cinxit Thomam de Warwic cingulo comitatus Warwic, & mandatum est Vicecomiti Warwici, quod eidem Comiti habere faciat de pre-dicto comitatu id quod habere debet nomine Comitatus Warwici, & de quo predecessores sui Comites War-wici seisiiti fuerunt tanquam ad eos pertinente nomine Comitatus Warewici. And, that this was the meaning of the said Writ; viz. that he should thereby be invested in the Earldom, may seem by what my Author addeth to that mention of his being Knighted with Rog. Bigod, and Hugh Vere as abovesaid; scil. Will. Long-espe accingitur gladio militari, sed non fit Comes Sarum, which was at that very time.

In 25. H. 3. this Earle Thomas gave 4. Clxxx.
Marks fine to the K. to the end he might be exempted from attendance upon him in his expedition into Gascoign: which summe was over and above his due, by way of Scutage; for discharge of which Scutage, and that he might levy the like upon his Tenants, he paid the year following Cxx. l. more.
And further then this can I not say of him, other than that he married Ela, daughter to Will. Long-spe E. of Salisbury (base son to K. H. 2.) as also that he departed this life without issue 26. Junii
A. 1. 242. (26. H. 3.) and was buried at Warwick: but upon the new building of the Quire in E. 3. time (whereof I shall elsewhere speak) both his Monument and divers more of his Ancestors were removed, & never set up again. After whose death Ela his Widow had by the K. Precept, bearing date 29. Julii following, the Mannours of Tanworth, Claverdon, and Sutton in this County; as also of Hoke-Parthon and Bradam in com. Oxon, with all the Corn and Hay then being upon them, assigned for her dowry. And by virtue of another Mandate from the K. to the Archbishop of York and Will. de Cantelupe had an augmentation thereto: for I finde, that, besides all these, she was afterwards posselt of the Mannours of Hatherop and Chedelworth in Gloucestersh.
and had of the K. gift also, for her better support,
the Mannour of Dymmeck in the same County, during her widowhood. Wich Mannour, upon her marriage with Philip Bassett, was at the request of Ric. E. of Cornwall, the K. brother, granted to her by the said King for term of life.

This Philip Bassett, being an eminent man in that time, was one of the Peers that went to Pope Innocent the fourth in An. 1245. 29. H. 3. then sitting in the Council of Lyons, with Letters from the rest of the Nobility and Commons of England, representing the great oppressions under which this Realm at that time suffered by the Court of Rome, and desiring relief: and afterwards faithfully adhering to the said King in that great Rebellion of his Barons, was taken prisoner with him in the Battail of Lewes 49. H. 3. in which year he had a grant from Will. Mauduit then E. of Warwick of the Mannours of Sutton-Colfield, Claverdon, and Tanworth in this County, and the third part of the Mannour of Chedelworth in Gloucester-shire of the dowry belonging to the before specified Ela, his wife, to hold during his own natural life in case he should survive her: which grant was confirmed by a special Charter in 54.

H. 3. wherein the said Philip is stiled by the King,
amicus noster specialis.

But to return unto Ela. She was a benefactresse to the Monks of Reading, to the Canons of Olney, to the Nuns of Godstow, and to the Canons of S. Sepulchers in Warwick; to which last, she gave all those Lands in Claverdon that were granted to her by Sr. Henry Lodbrok Knight, and others. And so great a friend was she to the University of Drford, that she caused a common Chest to be made, and put therein Cxx. Marks, out of which such as were poor Schollars, might upon security at any time, borrow something gratis for supply of their wants: In consideration whereof the said University were obliged to celebrate certain solemn Masses every year in S. Marie's Church, which Chest was in being in K. Edw.
4. time, and called by the name of Warwick Chest.
To the Gray-Friers in London she gave a parcel of Land with the buildings thereupon, for the enlargement of their house. In 17. E. 1. she released to Will. Beauchamp E. of Warwick all her interest in the Mannours of Tanworth in this County, which she held in dower; and departing this life very aged, in the year M.CCC. was buried before the high Altar in the Abby-Church of Olney, at the head of the Tomb of Henry d'Oily, under a fair flat Marble, in the habit of a vowesse graven on a Copper plate.

I now come to Margery, Sister and Heir to Earle Thomas, who had that Christen-name, as I suppose, in memory of Margery her Mother, Sister & Heir to Henry d'Oily before specied. This great Lady was first married to John Mareschall, (brother of Will. Mareschall E. of Pembroke, as some say) but how long before her brother Thomas his death, I cannot affirm. Certain it is, that he continued her husband but a short time after: for he was dead 9. Jan. following, as appears by the K.
Mandate, & then dated and directed to the Archb.
of York, the Bishop of Carleol, and Will. de Cantilupe, requiring them, that if the said John Marschall, before his death, had not seisin of Warwick-Castle, and other the Lands which were of the inheritance of Margery his wife, that then they should retain the said Castle and Lands in the K. possession, till she the said Margery did perform what she ought to do in respect of them: but in case she were already posselt of them, then to take good security of her, that she might not marry to any man without the K. Licence: and also appointed them, that they should earnestly perswade with her, as from him, to take John de Plesssets for her husband, who was one of his domestick servants, and in his special favour. Nay, so greatly did the K. desire she should wed this John de Ple-ssets, that upon Christmas day before, being at Burbeaur in France, he sealed a Charter to the said John, whereby he granted him the marriage of her in case he could get her good will; and if not, that then he should have the fine due from her thereupon to the King.

And by another Precept * sent to the said Archb. and Will. de Cantilupe, bearing date the 26. of March ensuing; reciting, that whereas divers Ladies of this Realm, neglecting to give such security to the King, as in that case by the Laws and Customes thereof they ought to do, had match't themselves without the K. consent, to the great prejudice and dishonour of himself and his Crown; to the intent therefore that the like inconvenience for the time to come might be avoided, he gave them the said Archb. and Will. de Cantilupe strict command, that, forasmuch as the said Margerie, sister to the late E. of Warwick, being one of the most noble Ladies of England, and possessor of a Castle extraordinarily strong, situate also towards the Marches; and that it would be most perillous that she should take to husband any person whatsoever, of whose fidelity the King had not as great a confidence as of his own, they should forthwith take the said Castle of Warwick, and what other Lands of hers they themselves thought fit, as a pledge, besides the ordinary security due from her, that she would not marry to any man living without the K. Licence; so that in case she should be so rash as to do otherwise, the same Castle and Lands should be for ever forfeited to him the said King and his Heirs: whereupon, it seems she gave such security as was satisfactory; for I finde that in June following, she had Livery of the Earldom of Warwick, as appears by the K. Precept * directed to the Sheriffe of this County, commanding him, quod illas decem libras quas Thomas quondam Comes Warwici percipere consuevit per annum, nomine Comitatus predicti, Margerie sorori & heredi predicti Comitatus reddi faciat, eo modo quo predicto Comiti prius reddi consueverit, which summe of ten pounds was, it seems, in lieu of the tertius denarius de Placitis Comitatus, whereof I have formerly spoke: And before the end of this 27. year of H. 3. his reign wedded ^p to the before specified John de Plessets, who was a man in such high esteem with the K. that, being a great part of the year precedent attending him in France, he there received ^q a Horse from the Seneschall of Gascoign, of the Kings special gift, prized at xxx. Marks, which was no small value compared with the rate of other things about that time, a quarter of Wheat being then ^r but at ii. s. price.

And in Sept. following, had a discharge ^s to the Barons of the Exchequer for C.li. wh. ch. was due to the K. out of the Lands belonging to her (then his wife) for her brother's Relief, not till then satisfied: as also ^t in Nov. of CC. Marks further debt, due by the said Earle her brother to the K. And the next Aug. (so well was the said K. pleased with her for taking this husband) gave ^u her 3. Bucks out of the Forest of Wabering in Essex, at which time she had the title ^v of Margerie Countesse of Warwick, wife to John de Plessets, without any name of Earl then attributed to him. Neither do I finde, that he had that appellation very suddenly after the said Precept ^x so directed to the Sheriffe of this County for livery of the x.li. per ann. to him nomine Comitatus, sicut predictus Comes (meaning Earl Thomas) cas percipere consuevit, as the words thereof import, which Writ bore date 26. Apr. 29. H. 3. for in the Fine ^y levied 3. septim. Hill. 31. H. 3. betwixt this John then Plantiffe and Will. Mauduit, & Alice his wife deforc. whereby the Mannours of Warwick, Milton, Wegenock, Sutton, Claberdon, Tanworth, and Bralls, all in this County; as also Chedworth, and Hydnele in com. Glouc. all belonging to the Earldom of Warwick, were settled upon the said John during his life, though he should have no issue by Margerie the Countesse, then his wife, in case he over-lived her, he is barely stiled Joh. de Plesseto: But afterwards, I suppose, he took upon him the title of Earl, by reason of a clause in that Fine, whereby the before specified Will. and Alice do as much as in them lies, confer the same Earldom upon him for life, being loath, it seems, to use that attribute till he had made such an agreement with the next Heir, that in case he overlived his Countesse and had no issue by her, he should not lay it aside again: for in Aug. following, which is the first mention that I finde of him after this Fine was levied, the K. in the permission given him to fall certain Oaks in the Forest of Dene, affords ^z him the title of Comes Warwici, which after that time upon all occasions he used.

But as there was extraordinary means used (as by what I have shew'd appeareth) about woin, and winning this great Lady to marry with John de Plessets; so was there not wanting suspicion, that, being such an Heir, she had been strongly solicited by some; and, that, possibly by reason of the frailty incident to her Sex, she might have been wrought upon to contract her self privately unto another. Wherefore to make sure work with her estate, the K. got a Bond ^a of her, with a Deed ^b to boot, whereby she obliged her self, that if it could justly be prov'd, that she had so contracted marriage with any other before, all her Lands and possessions should be forfeited. Which advantage being so obtained by the K. by his Letters ^c P. bearing date 18. Oct. 34. of his reign, he granted to the said John all those Lands to hold during his life, in case that any such contract should be proved, and thereupon a divorce betwixt them ensue. Nay, he was a man so much in that K. esteem, that there is little mention of him upon any occasion, but what relates to some special trust, or favour: for in 34. H. 3. he had ^d the Castle of Willes in com. Warw. with all the Mannours thereto belonging, and the Forests of Melkesh and Chyppeham committed to his charge, out of which there being a Rent of Lxxx. l. per ann. reserved to the K. he had 25. Marks yearly allowed him for the custody of that Castle.

In 37. H. 3. the K. released ^e to him the Wardship of Hugh ^f his Son and Heir, as to his person, in case he should die and leave him under age; and shortly after did he make him a grant, ^g that if the before mentioned Margery (his Countesse) should dye before him without any issue of her body, all the Lands and Tenements in Hogenarton, Baterinton, and Bradham, Kts. Fees, Reliefs, &c. which did belong to Henry d'Oily her Uncle, and by inheritance were descended to her, should remain unto him the said John, during his natural life.

And the same year did he attend ^h the K. into Gascoign. But before his return out of those parts a great mishap befell him; for ⁱ after things were quieted, & that he resolved to come again for England, determining to pass through Normandy, in regard he was that Country-man by birth, he obtained Letters ^j of safe conduct from the K. of France, and with divers other Noble persons set forwards on the journey: howbeit, lodging at a Citie called Pontes in Poitou, after all free & courteous entertainment outwardly used to them, they were suddenly seized ^k on by the Towns-men, and cast into close prison. This was in 38. H. 3. but when, or how, he with the rest were releast appears not. Which ill usage, together with the great expences he underwent in that service vice of Gascoign, & the debt that he owed to the K. for making Prince Edw. Kt. occasioned the K. to direct his Letters P. to all the said E. Tenants, wherein, giving testimony that in the service of Gascoign he did laudabiliter & strenue se gerere; and that being gravibus & immoderatis sumptibus, & variis anxietatibus corporis fatigatus, did earnestly intreat and desire them, that they would freely contribute such reasonable Aid to him, towards the payment of his debts, as they might expect his royal favour when fit opportunity should be offered.

How long he continued Governour of the Debitest-Castle, by virtue of the K. former grant appears not; but 'tis very like that upon his going over with the K. to the wars in Gascoign some other had the charge thereof; for after his return it was again committed to his custody, viz. 20. Junii 39. H. 3. By all which testimonies it appears, that he was a martial & active man. Whereunto I shall adde, that in 49. H. 3. he joyn'd with the E. of Gloucester. Hereford, Albamarle, and other of the great Nobility in writing to Pope Alex. the 4th. against Ethelmare the K. half brother, then elect of Winchester, beseeching his Holiness that he might not be admitted to that Bishoprick, as being a man wholly seeking to enrich himself by unjust means, & a disturber of the Kingdoms tranquility & welfare. In the same year this Earl received Summons, with divers other great men to be at Chester on Munday next before the feast of S. Joh. Bapt. sufficiently accoutred with horse and arms to attend the K. in his Welch expedition against Lewelin ap Griffith & his complices. In 44. H. 3. he had the like command to attend the K. at Shrewsb. on the feast day of the Nativity of our Lady, & thence to march with him into Wales, as above said. And the next year following to be at London on the morrow after Simon & Jude's day, with Horse and Arms, &c. which hapned about the time that matters grew high betwixt the K. and his Barons; by reason whereof the K. having had sufficient experience of his fidelity, committed then to him the custody of this County and Leicestersh. with the Castle of Saubev.

But he lived not to see the issue of these troubles, which growing on more & more every day, occasioned much misery & bloodshed in this Realm: for in Feb. 47. H. 3. he grew desperately sick, in so much as the K. apprehending his death not far off, out of the great love & affection he bore towards him, as the Patent imports, granted that the Executors of his Testament, whensoever he should dye, might freely administer of his goods & Chattels for the fulfilling thereof; And that for such debts as were due from him to the Crown, the K. would require them of his Heirs: and on the 26. of the same moneth departing this life, was honourably buried in the Quire of the Abby at Wissenden in Buckinghamsh. After which, viz. in Apr. following Hugh de Plessers, his Son & Heir by a former wife, (called Cristine, and daughter of Hugh de Sandford) did his homage, and had livery of the Mannours of Okenarton, Hydellington, and Suttesdon, in com. Oxon. which were of her inheritance, the two former being held of the K. by Barony. When Margery, his Countess, dyed I am not certain. J. Rous alledgeth, that it was 7. Junii An. 1243. 27. H. 3. but in that he is much mistaken; for by what I have already shewed it appears, that she was living in 34. H. 3.

All that I finde further memorable of her is, that in her widow-hood, before she match't with Joh. de Plessers, she confirm'd to the Hospital of S. Mich.

in Warwick for the health of her Soul, and for the Souls of E. Henry her Father, E. Tho. her brother, John Marshall her husband, and her ancestors, all the obventions as well in great as small Tithes and other things, of the assarts of Wegenock, with the Tyth of the Pannage & Venison of Wegenock and Rincell, as freely as Earl Waleran her grand-father did give them thereto. And moreover, bestowed on the poor of Warwick towards their better relief for ever a common Pasture called Cley-pits lying on the West-side of the Town.

I now come to Will. Mauduit, the succeeding E. unto whom the inheritance of that Honour & lands thereto belonging, upon the death of the said Countess descended, as Son & Heir to Alice the daughter of E. Waleran. This Will. was of Hanflap in com. Buck & Chamberlain of the Exchequer to the K. by inheritance; for by that service did he hold the same Lordsh. Of Warw. Castle with all other the Mannours, &c. belonging to that Honour, he had livery 4 Apr. 47. H. 3. then doing his homage, & giving security to pay C.li. for his Relief. The first mention that I afterwards find of him is, that the same year he had Summons, with many other great men, to attend the K. at Worcester on the feast day of S. Peter ad vincula, furnisht with Horse and Arms, thence to march into Wales against Lewelin ap Griffith, again in rebellion. The next year following had he the like Summons to attend the K. at Drif. in Midlent for the same respects: but so great was the strength that the rebellious Barons had then got together, that the K. grew necessitated to let his Welch expedition alone, and march to Porthampt. and in all probability sent away this E. to make sure his Castle of Warwick, being a place so considerable in regard of its strength and situation, and the rather, because the Rebels were posselt at that time, of Kenilworth-Castle: But such was the unhappiness of this E. that for want of diligent guards, they came from Kenilw. under the command of John Giffard Governour of that Castle, and surprized this at Warwick, by treachery, slew divers of the Earls Souldiers, and carried him with his Countess prisoners to Kenilworth; out of which before he could be delivered, they made him pay nineteen hundred Marks for his ransome, and threw down all the Walls, except Towers of Warwick-Castle.

After which unhappy accident, I finde no more of him than this Character by J. Rous, viz. that he was Vir in Consilio providus, & ceteris virtutibus merito laudandus; and that he married Alice, the daughter of Gilbert de Segrave, but died without issue 8. Jan. an. 1267. 52. H. 3. as also that his Heart was buried in the Monastery of Nuns at Catesby in Porthampton-shire, and his body at Weslm. whereupon Will. de Beauchamp, son to Isabel his sister, as his next Heir, succeeded him in the inheritance of this Earldom and estate, who was at that time xxx. years of age. But Alice his Countess, during her life (for she was then alive) held the Mannours of Brayles, in this Shire, Gretham in com. Rutl. and Cheddeworth in com. Glouc. which were assigned for her dower by agreement betwixt the said Will. Beauchamp and her, with divers Knights fees in the Counties of Warr. Leic. Buck. Porthampt. Suthampt. Rutl. and Devon.

And having now brought the succession of these great Earls into the line of Beauchamp, whose principal seat was the Castle of Cumley in Worcester-shire it will not be taken amisse, I hope, if here I disgresse a while in speaking historically of that antient and noble family, especially considering, that some of them had to do in this County long before they became Earls of Warwick.

The first with whom I will begin, is Walter de Beauchamp, by descent a Norman, who was the protoparent of this family that settled in Worcester-shire (for ought I could ever finde to the contrary) for besides all the Lands here of one Rog. de Wygracestra, that K. Henry 1. bestowed upon him, with divers ample priviledges thereto belonging, he gave him the Sherifalty of Worcester-shire to hold as freely as any of his ancestors had done, which Office Urso d'Abitor hereditarily held in the time of K. William the Conq. whole daughter & Heir Evelina he had married. Howbeit, what the said Rog. de Wygracestra was, I cannot certainly determine; but do conclude him, from the formality of that grant which K. Henry so made of his Lands, to have been a man of no mean rank, and that having his surname of Worcester, where it seems his chief seat was, might probably have the like Office of Sherifalty of that County hereditary to his family before the Norman invasion, as Turchill de Warwick and his Ancestors (of whom I have already spoke) had in this Shire.

To which Walter de Beauchamp succeeded Will. his son and Heir, who bore the Office of Despenser to that King, as his father had done, and had his confirmation thereof, together with Livery of all his Lands. This Will. was in great favour with Maud the Empreſſe, as it should seem: for whereas K. S. eph. had given the Citie of Worcester unto Waleran E. of Melent, the Castle whereof did hereditarily belong to him by descent from Urso d'Abitor before mentioned, she, by her Letters P. bearing date at Oxford did grant and restore unto him and his Heirs not onely the said Castle, with the Fortifications thereof, to hold of her and her Heirs in Capite, but also the Sherifalty of that County, with the Forests and all that belonged thereto of inheritance, paying unto her the like ferm as Walt. de Beauchamp, his father, had formerly done; whereupon he became her leige-man against all persons whatsoever, and especially against the same Waleran E. of Melent, with whom, by that her Charter she declared, she would make no agreement for the premises. And furthermore did she then give and restore unto this Will. the Castle and Honour of Lancworth, here in Warwick-shire, to hold as freely as Rob. Despenser, brother to the before mentioned Urso d'Abitor enjoyed the same. And likewise the Mannour of Bekeford, with Wellton, and Luffenham in com. Rutl. as his right, and LX. l. per ann. English Lands for his service. And besides all this did she again give and restore unto him and his Heirs, that Constablenesship which Urso de Abitor had, as also the Office of Despenser that Walter, his father, held of K. H. 1. and all the Lands and inheritances of his next Ancestors which had been in Arms against her, and that could not make Fine with her for the same, unlesse some of their nearest kindred had served in war on her part.

Of which Will. I further also finde, that upon the foundation of Worcester-Abby by the said Empreſſe, he was not onely a witnesse to her Charter, but a benefactor to that house, giving the Town of Olmarſley thereto. That in 5. H. 2. he was Sheriffe of this County; and that, by the Certificate of the Knights Fees held of him in 12. H. 2. de veteri feoffamento, it appears he had no lesse than xv. whereof 7. were held by him immediately of the K. But after 14. H. 2. I have not seen any more mention of him.

To this Will. succeeded Will. his Son and Heir, who in 3. R. 1. was charg'd with xl. s. for the Scutage of Wales. In 13. Joh. he answered for the like Scutage 4. Marks for two Knights Fees, which he had in this County; and in 16. Joh. is taken notice of amongst those upon whom Scutage for support of the K. Army in Wolſton was assent; which being at 3. Marks per Scutum, gave such advantage to the discontented Barons, as that they afterwards broke out into rebellion, & brought in Lewes, eldest son to Philip the French King; of which businesse our Historians are not silent. This last mentioned Will. had issue Walter, who was in arms against the K. with the rest of the Barons at that time; but there being a compolure made with them, at Runnimede (near Stanes) on the xv. of June 17. Joh. (for on that day doth the K. Charter of liberties bear date) he had the Sherivealty of Worcester-sh. again restored to him by thy K. Letters P. dated 19. Aug. ensuing, which it seems, for the causes premied, was committed to Will. de Cantilupe; and in Febr. following had the custody of all those Mannours, in this County, belonging to the Bishoprick of Worcester, and then in the K. hands committed to his trust, by reason of Walt. G. ey's translation at that time from thence to York: But it was not long after ere that the K. holding himself not obliged by that agreement made at Runnimede, in regard he was, in a sort constrain'd to what he did, through the great mens potency at that time, strengthened himself with a powerfull Army, and procured a sentence of excommunication against all those Rebellious Barons by particular name, amongst which this Walt. de Beauchamp was one; who, it seems, taking the same more to heart than many others did, made his peace again with the K. and thereupon went to Guado the Pope's Legate for absolution; from which time of his going till he returned fully absolv'd, the K. committed his Castle of Elmeſley, and all the rest of his possessions to the custody of Walter de Lascy, Hugh de Mortimer, Walt. de Clifford, and John de Monemuth, Will. de Cantilupe having command to deliver the same unto them.

On the 19. of October, in that year, was it that King John dyed, before which, all things were not compleated touching the restitution of this Walter's lands; for x it was but the 8. of August before, that he went to obtain his absolution: but what was not effected then, became shortly after accomplished; for I find y, that the 25. of March ensuing, he had livery of the Castle of Worcester, with the Shirivalty, which were committed before to the custody of John Marshall, as it seems. And further of this Walter have I made no discovery till 20 H. 3. and that is upon occasion of another atonement made with the King, for which, as the Record z expresses, he gave 50. marks Fine, besides the Aurum Regine to the Queen, whereupon he was received to favour, and had a redelivery a of the Shirivalty of Worcestershire, which in respect of his misdemeanour was seised into the Kings hands: and at that time, in presence of the King did he constitute b Hugh le Poken his deputy in that office, whereupon issued a Precept unto the Barons of the Exchequer for his admission. 'Tis very like, that the offence, for which he so suffered, was a taking part with the discontented Barons in 18 H. 3. by reason, that through the perswasion of Peter de Rupibus Bishop of Winchester so many Poictovins were brought into the Realm. But long after this he did not live; for in 20 H. 3. had Wil. de Beauchamp his son and heir livery c of his lands, doing his homage, and giving security to pay C li. for his Relief.

Which William in 37 H. 3. attended d the King in his expedition for Gascoign, and after that did very notable service in Wales; in e consideration whereof the King at the request of Richard Earl of Gloucester respited the payment of certain moneys due by him to his Exchequer till a further time. In 42 H. 3. he had summons f to be at Chester on the munday next before the feast of S. John Baptist well furnished with Horse and Armes to march in that expedition against the Welch, then in Rebellion: and in 44 H. 3. he had again command g to be at Shrewsbury sufficiently accounted for the like purpose. There was, it seems, an accord betwixt this William and Peter de Montfort (a great Baron in these parts, as in Belbeseft I shall shew) that there should be interchangeable marriages betwixt both their eldest sons, and eldest daughters; for K. H. 3. in 32. of his reign, gave his allowance h thereto, saving that he would have the custody of the lands of either who should happen to be in minority at his fathers death till he came of full age. Whether that marriage took effect I cannot affirm, but certain I am that his son and heir did not marry Montfort's daughter, as shall be shew'd anon.

This William himself wedded Isabell i the daughter of William Mauduit of Hanflap in Com. Buck. Chamberlain to the King in his Exchequer, with whom by Agreement k he was to have xx li. lands per annum, in consideration whereof the said William Mauduit assigned l unto him in Frank-marriage with her, all his lands in Ledecumbe, with proviso, that if those did not amount to that value; he would make it up elsewhere. To the Abby of Bordesley he gave m certain lands situate in Wibinton; and by his Testament n bearing date at Wauberge the morrow after the Epiphany Anno 1268. 53 H. 3. bequeathed his body to be buried in the Church of the Friers-Minors at Worcester; appointing, that at his Funerall, a Horse compleatly harness'd with all military caparisons should proceed before his corps; which usage hath continued in the solemnizing of Funeralls for great perions, even till our times. Of his Legacies therein I shall recite the most memorable; viz. to a Priest to sing Mass daily in his Chapell without the City of Worcester neer the said House of Friers-Minors, for the health of his soul, and the souls of Isabell his wife, and Isabell de Mortimer, and all the faithfull deceased, he gave all his Rent of the fee of Richard Bruli in Wiche and Winchester, with supply of what should be too short, out of his proper goods. To Walter his son, signed with the Cross for a Pilgrimage to the Holy-Land in the behalf of him the said Testator, his father, and Isabell his mother two hundred marks. To Joan his daughter a kind of Canopy, sometime belonging to S. Wolstan, and a book of Lancelot, which he the said Testator had lent her. To Isabell his daughter a silver cup. To Sibill his daughter, towards her marriage, all the money due to him from his son William, and 40. marks more, together with the land that he bought in Wistlamton to enjoy till she should be married, and no longer. To Sarra his daughter C. marks for augmentation of her marriage portion. To William his eldest son the Cup and Hornes of S. Hugh. To the Countess his wife a Ring with a Ruby in it. To Sir Roger Mortimer a Ring. To Sir Bartholomew de Suley a Ring. To the Friers-Minors of Worcester xl s. To the Friers-Minors of Gloucester i. mark. To the Friers Carmelites there i. mark. To the Hospitall of St. Wolstan at Worcester i. mark. To the Hospitall of St. Oswald, there, x sol. To the Canons of Doddeford in Com. Wigorn. i. mark. To the Church and Nuns of Cokehill, and Isabell his wife x. marks. To the Church and Nunns of Westwood i. mark. To the Church and Nunns without Worcester i. mark. To every Anchorite in Worcester and the parts adjacent iv s. To the Church of Salewarp (in Com. Wigorn.) a house and garden neer to the Parsonage, for to find a Lamp continually burning therein, to the honour of God, the blessed Virgin, St. Catherine, and St. Margaret. Of which Testament he constituted these Executors, viz. William his eldest son, Earl of Warwick, Sir Roger Mortimer, Sir Barth. de Sudley, with the Abbots of Cheham, and great Palberne.

It seemes he lived not long after; for I find, that his son and heir; viz. William Beauchamp Earl of Warwick before specified, did his homage p to the Bishop of Worcester in the Chapell of Bredon, a for the lands he held of him 2. Non. Maii Anno 1269. which was within 4. months after the date of this his Testament.

And now, before I pass further, will it be requisite to observe two things. First that the noble Lady, I mean Isabell his wife, who, by the death of her brother William Mauduit Earl of Warwick, became heir of this great Earldom, was not onely Foundress q of the Nunnery at Cokehill before specified, but betook herself to a Religious life there, as may be plainly inferred by the Legacy wherein she is joyned with those Nunns as above-said. And secondly, that this William the Testator, though the said Lady his wife, the rightfull inheritrix of that Earldom, was then living, and that he and she, both together survived the said William Mauduit her brother above a twelve month, never had the title of Earl; but that his son and heir was invested invested with that Honour before his death, as appeareth by these two instances from his said Testament viz. — Item Willielmo primogenito meo Cornua & ciphum Seint Huwe; & filia mea Comitissa, uxori sua, unum annulum cum lapide de Rubie. And afterwards — Cetera autem bona mea commisi ordinationi & dispositioni dilectorum Executorum Testamenti mei D. Rogeri de Mortuomari, Willielmi primogeniti mei Comitiss Warwyc &c.

In the first whereof, he calls his said sons wife Countess, and in the second plainly styles him Earl. Which title he the said William did not onely use in that Instrument of Agreement made betwixt him and Alice the widow of William Mauduit the late Earl in 52 H. 3. (whereof I have formerly spoke;) but hath the same attributed to him by the Kings Precept, bearing date 9. Martii next ensuing the month of Jan. wherein the Earl his Uncle dyed, his Father and Mother being both alive. Where may be also discerned, that he was in good esteem with the King, forasmuch as by the same Mandate to the Barons of the Exchequer it appears, that the King pardoned his Relief, viz. C li. and at the same time acquitted him of xcv li. which William Mauduit, the late Earl, owed to a Jew of London.

That this William Beauchamp might bear the title of Earl by right from his mother, she being heir generall to Mauduit, considering what the custome of those ancient times was, as Mr Selden in his Titles of Honour hath observed, I shall not need here to argue: But whether he ought so to have done, during his fathers life, especially before his mothers decease, had it not been by the Kings speciall favour, I make a great question. All that I shall say herein, is to shew some probable reason why he was so summoned during their times, which is from what I find delivered by Leland, out of an old Chronicle of the gefts of England, written in French, but with some mistake exprest. The words are these.

The old Lord Beauchamp of Helmeley sent 3. or 4. of his sons to the battail of Cavelham to help K. Henry the third and Prince Edward against Simon Mountford and the Barons: And these brether, with their band, did a great feate in vanquishing the hoste of Mountfort; whereupon the eldest had Belomont's heir, and the residue were highly preferred. The Beauchamps afterwards kept the name of Earl of Warwick to King Edward the fourth's time.

Now, that the substance of this is true, viz. that for the service done in that battail, he was by the Kings speciall favour, honoured with the title of Earl, I am very inclinable to believe; yet that either he or his father did marry the immediat heir of Belomont, or that the Beauchamps kept the name of Earls till E. 4. time cannot be proved. But I return to his Story.

The 9. of Febr. 52 H. 3. he did his homage as nephew and heir to the said William Mauduit Earl of Warwick for all the lands descended to him by his fathers death; at which time the King did exprest, that pro laudabili servicio quod dilectus & fidelis noster Will. de Bellocampo Comes Warwici nobis impendit (for those are the words of the Writ) he was contented to accept of him for those debts which were due from his father, to the Exchequer, xx li. per annum till they were run up: And in further remuneration of his services, did he

the year following, pardon & unto him xcv li. of the same. And as he stood in great esteem with K. H. 3. so also did he with K. E. 1. For menſe Paſch. 2 E. 1. he was sent in Commission with Roger de Clifford, William Bagod, Odo de Hodenet, and the Prior of S. Thomas, juxta Stafford, unto the ford of Montgomery in Wales, to examin, hear, and reform the wrongs and trespasses done in those parts, contrary to the form of peace concluded betwixt the said King Henry, and Lewelin Prince of Wales, and to rectify all things according to the tenour of that Agreement: at which meeting the Prince of Wales, was to be there, or send Commissioners, on his part, to manage that business.

In 4 E. 1. he was constituted Captain generall of all the Kings Forces in Cheſtre, and Lancaſtre for securing those Counties against the violence of the Welch: and the next year following attended the King in that notable expedition of Wales, wherein he became so victorious: but in 6 E. 1. his Office of Chamberlainship of the Exchequer was seized into the Kings hands, by reason of some misdemeanour therein committed by one William de Bradecote, his Clerke; howbeit the King taking into consideration his speciall services, before exprest, made a quick restitution of it again. I find that this Earl had great suits with William de Breause for the dominion of Gowher in Wales, wrongfully alienated by King John (4. Joh.) to Will. de Breause great-grandfather of this William whilst Henry Earl of Warwick was in his minority, but could not recover it. In 15 E. 1. he was again employed into Wales, at which time he beſieged the Castle of Dosselan, and had ccxl li. delivered to him by the Bishop of Ely, then Treasurer, for the defraying his charges in that service. At that time the King being in France had constituted Edmund Earl of Cornwall his lieutenant, here in England, during his absence, who taking great care to preserve all things in quiet here whilst the King was away, directed his speciall Precept to this Earl of Warwick, and other great men; requiring them most strictly, that they should not ride with armed power in any part of the Kingdom, for any respect whatsoever, to the terrour of the Kings leige people, and disturbance of the Peace; but if that any difference did arise betwixt them and others, they should make it known unto the said E. of Cornwall, who would apply a timely remedy thereto.

In 23 E. 1. being again in Wales with the K. he performed a notable Warlike exploit, which was thus; Hearing that a great body of the Welch were got together in a plain betwixt two woods, and to prevent any danger had fastned their pikes in the ground sloping towards their assailants, he marcht thither with a choyse company of Crossbow-men, and Archers, and in the night time incompassing them, put betwixt every two Horsemen one Crossbow-man, who, killing many of them that supported those Pikes, the Horse charged in suddainly, and made so great a slaughter, that the like hath seldom been heard. The next ensuing year he received command to be at Newcastle upon Tyne, on the first of March, furnisht with Horse and Armes for an expedition into Scotland: and afterwards was sent with John Earl of Surrey to recover the Castle of Dunbar treacherously gained by the Scots: In which action they were constrained to cope with the whole Scotch Army my that came to raise the Siege; but at length, after a sharp dispute obtained a glorious victory, wherein the number of slain were supposed to be ten thousand; which success made the Castle suddenly to render. In 25 E. 1. he had command^e to be at London upon the Sunday next after the Ottaves of S. John Bapt. well provided with Horse and Armes to attend the King into Flanders; but, it seemes, he had other direction to stay behind; for I find^e, that he was one of those who were made Governours to Prince Edward (then in minority) during the Kings absence, whom the King had constituted his Lieutenant during that time.

In the same year he was made Governour^r of the Castle and Forrest of Rokingham, in Com. Northampt. And in Oct. following again appointed to be at New-castle upon Tine on S. Nicholas day, to march against the Scotts, with Prince Edward; But that proved an unhappy business, the English Army being for the most part destroyed in attempting to pass the Bridge at Sterling. This year it was, and on Holy-Rood day, being in perfect health, that he made his Testament, whereby he disposed his body to sepulture in the Quire of the Friers-Minors at Worcester, in case he should depart this life within the compass of the four English Seas; but if otherwise, then in the next House of Friers-Minors to that place where his death might happen; and his Heart whereofever the Countess, his dear comfort, should resolve to be herself interred. To which place when his body was to be buried, did he bequeath two great Horses, viz. those which at his funerall should carry his Armour; for the celebration whereof he gave CC li. (which was as much as three thousand in these times.) For the maintenance of two Souldiers in the Holy-Land he gave C li. To Maud his Countess all his silver vessell, with his Crofs wherein was contained part of the wood that had been of the very Crofs whereupon our B. Saviour dyed: As also the Vestments belonging to his Chapell, to make use of during her life; but afterwards the best suit to remain to Guy his eldest son. His second suit to his Chapell of Hantslope, and the third to his Chapell of Anneley. To Guy his son a gold Ring with a Ruby in it, together with his blessing. To his said Countess a Cup which the B. of Worcester gave him; but all his other Cups together with his lesser sort of Jewells and Rings he bequeathed unto her, to distribute for the health of his soul, where she should think fittest. And to his two daughters which were Nuns at Shouldham in Com. Dorset. (a Monastery of their great-grandfather's foundation, by the mother side) he gave fifty marks.

He was a benefactor to the Monastery of Thellessford, in this County: Ratified the grant of Warrington, made by Henry de Neuburgh, sometime Earl of Warwick, to the Monks of Beaur in Normandy: bore for his Armes gules semé of Cross-crosslets with a fess Or; which Cross-crosslets were by him added to his Coat; for his father used them not; but whether as a badge of any Pilgrimage that he made unto the Holy-Land, or vow so to do, I will not take upon me to determine: Wedded^m Maud the eldest of the four sisters and heirs to Richard Fitz-John, son of John Fitz-Gesfrey, Justice of Ireland, and widow^x of Gerard de Furnivall; which Maud had for her purpartie of his lands the Mannours of Chitrel in Com. Wilts. Potters-Wirt in Com. Northampt. and Querndon in Com. Buck. assigned to her; And departed this life, either in May or the beginning of June Anno 1298. 26 E. 1. leaving Guy his son and heir then 26. years of age, who did his homage the 25. of September following, and had livery^e of his fathers lands; And 2. Junii following performed the like homage^e for the lands descended to him by the death of Maud his mother, who dyed^e the same year.

This Guy had his Christen name (out of doubt) in remembrance of the warlike Guy, Earl of Warwick in the Saxons time, and was a martiall man as well as his Ancestors. The same year that his father dyed, he had summons^e, with many other great men, to be at Carleol on the even of Pentecost, well furnished with Horse and Armes to march into Scotland, this being the time that the King made a personall expedition thither, and obtained a great victory at Falokirk; in which Battail he behaved himself so gallantly, that the King rewarded^e him with all the Castles and lands of Geffrey de Moubray, lying in that Kingdom, excepting the Mannour of Wkeford near Roxborough; as also with the lands of John de Strivelin, and the Castle of Amesteld, with the land of Drangrey that belong'd to Andrew de Chartres; which they the said Geffrey, John, and Andrew, were seized of on the day of S. Mary Magdalen, the same year that battail was fought. The next year scil. 27 E. 1. he was employed beyond Sea in the Kings service. In 31 E. 1. he attended the King again into Scotland, and was in person^e with him at that memorable siege of Baerlaberok. In 34 E. 1. he had summons^e, with divers other great men, to appear at Westminster the morrow after Trinity-Sunday, there to consider and advise with the King concerning an Aid for making his eldest son Knight. The same year I find that he had license^e to entail all his lands upon Philip the son of Hugh le Despenser for lack of issue male of his own body. And in 35 E. 1. the King taking into further consideration his many and great services, gave^t unto him and his heirs Bernard-castle in the Bishoprick of Durham, which eschaet^e to the Crown upon the forfeiture of John de Baliol King of Scotts.

This was the last year of King E. 1. but therein I meet with no more mention of this Earl. I come now to Edw. 2. time: In the first yeare of whose reign I find^m that he took part with Thomas Earl of Lancaster and some other of the Nobility, who being discontented that Piers de Gaveston, then E. of Cornwall was so much in favour with the King, put themselves in Armes and took him at Scardeburgh: but the King hearing thereof, desired to speak with him, and that his life might be saved, promising that he would in all things satisfy their requests. Which motion and assurance so wrought upon^e the Earl of Pembroke, who was one of the great men then acting in this tragedy, that he undertook, upon forfeiture of all he had, that if they would consent to the Kings propofalls, he would take care that Piers should not escape, but after conference with the King should stand to the Judgments of the Barons; which was yielded unto, and a day and place assigned when he should be delivered back to them. Whereupon the Earl of Pembroke resolved to carry him unto Wallingford, but being^e on the journey at Dedington in Oxfordshire where he had left a guard of his own servants to look to him, himself and his Countess lodging at the next town, this Guy Earl of Warwick came in the night time with a number of armed med men, and carryed him back to Warwick-Castle; where, consulting with those about him, what then to do, they presently determined, without delay, to cut off his head, and accordingly did so, upon a rising ground called Blacklow-hill about a mile Northwards from Warwick (whereof I have elsewhere already spoke.) Which being done, the Friers-Preachers took care of his body, and conveyed it to Oxford, whence after two years, the King removed it to Langlep in Hertfordshire, causing it to be interred in the Church of the Friers-Preachers, which he there founded to pray for the soul of the said Piers, and his Progenitors.

It seems that this Piers had much angered the E. of Warwick, in calling him the Black Dog of Arberne, because he was of a black and swarthy complexion: but what way the great men then bore, having insinuated to the people, that all they did was for the honour of God, and good of the Realm may easily be seen: for though the King did sufficiently take this murder to heart (for it was no better) he knew not how to punish any one Actor in it; nay so glad was he to please them, that within two years after, he granted to every of them a Pardon, by particular name; amongst which (as servants or Retainers to this Earl) I finde William Trussell, Piers de Limesey, Osbert de Clinton, Rauf de Grendon, Edmund le fitz Edmund Trussell, Tebaud de Gayton, John de Nasford, Thomas de Clinton, John de Mountfort, John de Odingells, Hugh de Culy, and John de Beauchamp, all of this County. But however this Earl thus obtained pardon, I do not find that he was heartily reconciled to the King. For upon his advance that very year towards Scotland, and expecting at Warwick the assistance of all those which held of him by military service, he forbore then to do his duty: Nay my Author says, that there was latens odium inter Regem & Proceres, & precipue inter Comitem de Lancastria, & Comitem de Warwico & adherentes ejusdem.

As I cannot commend his demeanor in these things last spoke of, so do I not discern that he had any great comfort thereof himself; for tis plain enough, that he enjoyed not the felicities of this world full xiv. months after, as I shall shew by and by; Wherefore coming now neer his death, which hapned in the prime of his days; viz. about the xlvth. year of his age, let us see what preparations he made for it. And herein I find, that for the good estate of himself, and the health of his fathers and mothers souls, and all his Ancestors and successors, he gave to the Monks of Worcester in Worcester-shire the advowson of the Church of Wickwane in Com. Glouc. How far further he was a benefactor to that Monastery I cannot say, but 'tis very like that something more he gave: for it appears that the Monks of that House by their publique Instrument, in a full Chapter, granted unto him and his heirs, by the attribute of dilecto & speciali amico nostro, power to present two Monks successively in their Covent, that should sing Mass daily in the Church of that Monastery for the health of his soul, and of the souls of Earl William his father, Maud his mother, and their Ancestors for ever. And besides this, he was the first Founder of that Chantry, or Colledge of Priests, at Elmely in Worcester-shire.

I now come to his Testament, which bears date at Warwick-Castle the Munday next after the feast of S. James the Apostle Anno 1315.9 E.

2. by which he bequeathed his body to sepulture in the said Abby of Worcester, but willed that his funerall Rites should be performed without any great pomp. To Alice his wife, who was the sister and heir to Robert de Tony, he devised a proportion of his plate, with a Cristall Cup, and half his bedding, as also all the Vestments and books pertaining to his Chapell: the other moiety of his Beds, Rings, and Jewells to his two daughters. To Maud his daughter a Cristall Cup. To Elizabeth his daughter he gave the marriage of Astley's heir (whom she took to husband, as in Astley I have already shewed.) To Thomas his son, his best coat of Maile, Helmet, and suit of harness, with all that belong'd thereto. To his son John, his second coat of Maile, Helmet, and harness; and appointed that all the rest of his Armour, Bows, and other warlike provision should remain in the Castle of Warwick, for his heir; constituting these his Executors, viz. Alice his Countess, Sir John de Hastings, John Hamelin, Piers le Blund Parson of Hanlape, Adam de Herewynton, Richard de Brumefgrave, Henry de Sidenhale, Simon de Sutton Parson of Luffenham, William de Wellesburne Parson of Berkswell, with Roger Caumpere Parson of Hibworth, and departed this life 12. August next following, in his said Castle of Warwick, by poison as some thought, but had sepulture in Abby of Worcester before specified.

Before his death he obtained a grant from the King, that his Executors, when it should fortune him to depart this life, might have the custody of his lands during the minority of his heir, being answerable for the value of them to the Exchequer at Michaelmas and Easter every year; saving that his Castles of Elmely and Warwick should not be disposed of to any without the Kings speciall license: which grant was confirmed to John Hamelyn and the rest of the Executors in December following his death. Nevertheless, so much was the K. wrought upon by them, whose miscarriages afterwards gave the discontented Nobles opportunity to work his own ruine, as that, notwithstanding the grant before recited made to those Executors, about two years after he passed the custody of them by a new Patent to Hugh le Despenfer the elder, in satisfaction of a debt of 6770 li. due to him from the said King as was pretended. But before I proceed to speak of Thomas Earl of Warwick (son and heir to the said Guy) I have a word or two to say of the Countess his mother, and the rest of her Children, which is, that she was the daughter of Raph de Tony of Flamsted in Hertfordshire, widow of Thomas de Leybourne, and at length heir to Robert her brother. In November following the Death of her husband she had assigned to her in dowrie, the Mannours of Hanlape in Com. Buck. Lygthorne, Beaufale, Haseley, Claverdon, Berkswell, with the third part of the Templars Mannour in Warwick and Shirburne, and divers Knights fees, all in this County: And the next year following gave a Fine of 500. marks for license to marry with William La Zouch of Abby in Com. Leic. to whom she was accordingly wedded; but dyed in 18 E. 2.

The other children of Earl Guy, were John, a martiall Knight, Emma the wife of Roul. Odingells, Isabell married to Clinton, Elizabeth to Thomas Lord Astley, and Lucia to Robert bert de Napton. Which John was a man of singular note in his time; for in 22 E. 3. the King in consideration of his great services made him a Banneret^a and gave him Cxlii. per annum out of the Exchequer, for his better support. In 25 E. 3. he was Governour^b of Calets. In 26 John Darcy, to whom the King had granted^c the Constableness of the Tower of London for life, for the great affection he bore to this John de B. past^d over his interest in that Office to him, which the King also ratified: but within two years, through the sinister suggestions of some, he became much offended with him, and put him out of that place, constituting Barth. l. de Burghersh in his stead; and after his death Robert de Morley: but at the length it appearing^f to the King, that those suggestions were false, he received him again into favour, and in consideration of his speciall services, restored^g unto him the custody of the said Tower of London by his Letters Patents bearing date 25. Jan. at the town of S. George neer the Castle of Beaufort in France; and the same year constituted^h him Constable of Doboy-Castle, Warden of the Cinque-ports for life, and Admirallⁱ of the Seas for the North and West coasts. He was also one of the Founders^k of that noble Order of the Garter, instituted by King E. 3. and departing^l this life without issue 2. Dec. 34 E. 3. lyeth buried betwixt two pillars on the South part of the Cathedrall Church of S. Paul in London before^m the Image of our Lady, where he had a fair Monument lately demolisht, which was, through mistake, usually called Duke Humphrey's Tombe.

I now return to Thomas the succeeding Earl, bornⁿ in Warwick-Castle, having to his God-fathers^o Thomas Earl of Lancaster, and Henry his brother, with Thomas de Warrington Prior of Beulwozth. This Thomas was very young at his fathers death, but who had the custody and tuition of his person, during King Edward 2. reign, I find not. Most likely it is, that Hugh le Despenser, the great favourite at that time, having a grant of his lands, as abovesaid, had also the charge of his person: but in 1 E. 3. the Castle of Warwick, with the rest of his lands were committed^p to Roger Mortimer of Wigmore, till he should arrive to his full age; and in 3 E. 3. the King being minded to afford speciall favour to him, as the very words^q of the Writ do import, accepted of his homage though he was not then of full age, commanding that he should have livery of all his fathers lands, and the next year following admitted^r him to the office of Shireffalty for Worcester-shire, which was of his inheritance, as also^s to that of the Chamberlainship in the Exchequer, with power to appoint whomsoever he should think fit for the execution of them in such sort, as in his Ancestors times had been used.

'Tis not to be doubted, but as this Earl was descended from an ancient race of worthy Progenitors, and by many noble heirs, so were his virtues no less eminent than the chiefest of them; for from the time that he came to mans estate, even till his death, which hapned in 23. of King Edw. 3. reign, was he scarce ever out of some notable and high employment, whereof in order I will briefly make recitall. In 5 E. 3. he had^t the government of the Isles of Bernsey, Serke and Aurenep. In 6. he was joyn'd in Commission^u with Raph Lord Basset, and William de Shreshull (a great Lawyer, and afterwards Chief-Justice) for conservation of the peace in this County and Worcester-shire. In 7.

to attend^v the King in his expedition for Scotland, at which time Edward de Baliol King of Scots did homage^x to King Edward for the Realm of Scotland with the adjacent Isles. In 9. he had^y the custody of the Marches of Scotland committed to him. All which was whilst he lived a batchelour: For I find^z, that in 12 E. 3. the King in satisfaction of a great summe of money that he owed to Roger Lord Mortimer for the time that he was his Lieutenant of Ireland, granted unto him the benefit of his marriage, whereupon he became wedded to the Lady Kath. his daughter. After which was he the same year put again in Commission^a for conservation of the Peace in this County and Worcester-shire, and likewise in the County of Orford; and in 17 E. 3. marcht^b into Scotland with Henry Earl of Lanc. as also many other great persons, with a numerous Army, for rayfing the siege of Louhmaran-Castle, whereof William de Boun Earl of Poshtampt. had the custody.

In 18 E. 3. he had the Shireffalty^c of this County and Leicester-shire committed to him for terme of life; and in the same year was constituted^d Marshall of England; in which he entailed^e the Castle of Warwick, with divers great Lordships in this and other Countyes upon his issue male, mentioning the names of his severall sons then living. In the month of July 20 E. 3. he attended^f the King in his French expedition, and arrived^g with him at Hoggs in Normandy, where getting on shore, he manifested his valour to admiration, by making the first attempt, himself in person, with one Esquier and six Archers, though he had but a weak Horse under him; with which and those few men he encountred^h with an C. Normans, whereof they slew 60. thereby making way for the Army to land. And at the same time was he one of the principall Commanders, that with the Black-Prince ledⁱ the van of his Army in that famous battail of Cressy, where the English got such lasting honour. In 21. E. 3. he was at the siege^k of Calets with three Bannerets, Knights 61. Esquiers 106. and Archers on Horsback 154. In consideration of which notable services and other his heroic actions, the King gave^l him the summe of 1366 li. 11 s. 08 d. and the next ensuing year assigned^m unto him a thousand marks per annum during his life, partly in recompence of his faithful services, and partly as wages for attendance upon his person with C. men at Armes according to certain Indentures of Covenants betwixt them.

In 26 E. 3. he recoveredⁿ the dominion of Gowher in Wales from John Lord Moubray, whose title thereto accrued by Aliva his mother, daughter and heir to William de Brews, to whom King John, during the minority of Henry Earl of Warwick (Ancestor to this Thomas) wrongfully gave the same. In which suit I find^o, that Simon Pakeman of Leiby in Com. Leic. did him especiall service ('tis like as a solicitor) in consideration whereof he gave^p him the inheritance of all the Lands and Rents he had in Over-Boryndon in Com. Northampt. In 27 E. 3. he was sent^q with Edw. Prince of Wales, Henry D. of Lanc. and Raph Earl Stafford to protect Sir Richard de Willughby, and Sir William de Shreshull Justices Itinerant, whilst they sat at Chester, for fear of any insurrection by the people. In 29 E. 3. he attended^r the said Prince into France, this being the time that King Edward hearing that Philip King of France was dead; as also that John his eldest son, then newly newly crown'd, had given unto Charles the Dauphin of Attenuots the Dukedome of Aquittane; whereat being much moved, he called the said Prince with divers of his Nobles before him, and assigned the said Dukedome of Aquittane unto him; but before the revolution of one year after such their arrivall in France, hapned that memorable battail of Poitiers, in which, the K. of France being taken prisoner, this Noble Earl gained high renown for his marvellous valor; and no small advantage, for he had no less than 8000 li. for the redemption of Will. de Melleun Archbishop of Heinz, whom he himself took likewise in that fight.

Nay, of so heroic a spirit he was, that about 37 E. 3. he travailed into forrain parts, and having spent full 3. years in warring against the Pagans, at his return brought with him the son to the King of Ustuanis, whom he Christened at London, and being his Godfather named him Thomas. In 40 E. 3. he was sent upon speciall service by the K. into Flanders, having an allowance assigned to him out of the Exchequer of 5. marks per diem for his charges, and two marks and a half per diem by way of reward; in which year his Commission for Marshall of England was renewed. But having now no more to say of his publique employments, saying of that last wherein he dyed; and that he was one of the Founders of that Noble Order of the Garter instituted by King E. 3. I will here take notice of his pious works, as also of his Testament, and then come to his death with the circumstances thereof.

To the Collegiat-Church of Warwick he gave the advouson of the Church of Willerton-Hercy in this County. To the Canons of Benilworth two mess. and one yard land lying in Radford-Senseli. To the Priory of Clatercote in Com. Oxon. the patronage of the Church of Rotley in this County. To the Hospitall of S. John Baptist in Warwick the moiety of the Church of Porton-Daubney in this shire. To the Canons of Witke one yard land and one acre lying in Perdley in Com. Wigorn. with the advouson of the Church. To the Collegiat-Church of Astley the advouson of the Church of Long-Stanton in Com. Cantab. And that he was a good Benefactor to the Monks of Abingdon I shall not doubt, though I have not seen in what particulars; for I find that the Abbot and Covent of that Monastery by their publique Instrument bearing date 5 Id. Martii Anno 1344. which doth give a generall testimony thereof, not only made him a speciall partaker of all their devout exercises, but declared, that whensoever the tidings of his death did come to their knowledge, the like solemn office should be perform'd for him, aswell in all the Covents of their Order within this Realm, as in their own; and not only so, but by divers Canons-Regular too, as was used to be done for any of their own fraternity, friends or benefactors.

His Testament bears at date Chelchench (vulgo Chelsey juxta Westminster) on Tuesday 6. Sept. 1369. 43 E. 3. Whereby he bequeathed his body to be buried in the midst of the Quire of the Collegiat Church at Warwick. To every Church within each of his Mannours he gave his best Beast which should there be found, in satisfaction of his Tithes forgotten to be payd. To Thomas his son and heir a Ring, and Cup with Cover, the best next that which his daughter Stafford should choose, with the Sword and Coat of maile sometime belonging to the famous Guy of Warwick; appointing that all his harnes, weapons, and such like habiliments, aswell for peace as warr, should be equally divided betwixt his two sons, viz. Thomas and William. To his said son William he gave a Ring and a Cup with Cover, the best next after his elder brother had chosen, with 24. dishes and as many Saucers of silver, as also two Bacyns and two Ewers, with twelve pieces of silver. To Isabell his daughter a thousand pounds to her marriage. To Margaret his daughter a Nunne at Shouldam in Posff. a Ring, and a Cup with a cover, as also 40. marks in money. To Katherin the daughter to his son Guy, a Nunne likewise at Shouldam a gold Ring with xx li. in money, and for the charges of his funerall 500. marks: Hereunto adding, that his Executors should make full satisfaction to every man whom he had in any sort wronged. That his son William should have lands of 400. marks per annum value setled upon him and his heirs male. That the Testament of his Countesse should be compleatly performed and fulfilled out of his goods. That his Executors should new build the Quire of the Collegiat-Church in Warwick, where he purposed to be buried. That with the residue of his goods his Executors should cause Masses to be sung for his soul, and distribute Almes with all speed that might be, especially at Wordestep, Worcester, and Warwick, as also in other places of the Countrey unto which he had most relation; And that all the vestments of his Chappell should be given to the Collegiat-Church in Warwick, where he had chosen his sepulture.

His Jewells he thus disposed. To his daughter Stafford an Ouche called the Eagle, which the Prince gave him; all his Pearls, and a Crosse made of the very wood of our Saviours Crosse; a Ring with an Emerald that his Countesse bequeathed to him; another Ring whereof she herself was to make choise; a set of Beads of gold, with the buckles, which the Queen gave him; and the choise of one of his Cups of gold, with that silver boll which he always used himself, as also his best Bed with the whole furniture thereto. To his daughter Alice his next best Ouche which his Lady (the Countesse) gave him, with a Cup of gold, a set of Beads of gold, and a Ring. To his daughter Clifford an Ouche called the Eagle, which his son Will. had bestow'd on him for a Newyears-gift, with a Cup, a set of Beads of gold, and a Ring. To his daughter Isabell a Cup with an Ewer and a Cover to it gilt, and the next best Ring after his other daughters before remembered had chosen. To the Bishop of Lincoln a Crosse of gold that the Lady Segrave gave him, which sometimes was the good King Edwards, wherein likewise was part of the very Crosse of Christ, and other Reliques. To his son William a Casket of gold, with a bone of St. George, which Thomas Earl of Lanc. bestowed on him at his Christening.

To Sir John Beauchamp a Cross of gold, wherein also part of the very Cross of our Saviour was contained, enameled with the Armes of England; as also his best tilting Horse. To Sir Roger Beauchamp a Ring, the best he could choose, after the rest that were disposed of; and his next best tilting Horse. To Sir Guy de Brienne a Cup and a Horse, the next best also that he could choose. All the rest of his Jewells did he appoint that his Executors should dispose of for his souls benefit, which were these; viz. the Earl of Stafford, Thomas and

Will. de Beauchamp, his own sons, Sir Roger de Beauchamp, Sir Guy de Brienne, Sir John de Beauchamp, Sir Raph Basset of Sapcote Knights, Sir Richard de Piriton Governour of Northampton; Sir William Forde, Sir Alan Fen, Sir John Blake, Sir John Harewode, Sir William Morton and John Rous, all which last mentioned I conceive to have been Priests.

Touching his death, the manner thereof was thus, King Edward having called a Parliament at London in 43. of his reign, wherein the breach of Peace by the French was discussed, sent an Army into that Kingdom about the feast of the Nativity of the blessed Virgin, under the conduct of his son John Duke of Lanc. and Humfr. de Boun Earl of Hereford, to claim his right therein; who being got over sea, encamp'd at a place called the Chalk-hill near Caleys, towards whom the French presently advanced; but the two English Dukes delayed fighting so long, as that their Army grew in want for provisions (so that many dyed by famine and the plague) pretending they were not strong enough to give them battail without more men. In which interim our noble Earl, hearing that the French Army was thus drawn out, halted away with some choyse men, and sailed toward Caleys; whereof the French having notice, in great amazement they left their Tents, with all their victuall behind them, and fled. And so soon as he came ashore, he highly blamed those that occasioned the English to forbear fighting, saying, I will goe on and fight before the English bread, which we have eaten be digested, and thereupon presently entred the Isle of Caus; which he waited. But alas! in his return towards Caleys he felt sick of the pestilence, and dyed on the 13. of Nov. Patrem sibi in armorum strenuitate, & Regi Regniq; fidelitate superstitem, minimè derelinquens, saith mine Author.

After which his body was interred in the midd'l of the Quire of the Collegiat Church at Warwick, according to the direction of his Testament, where is yet to be seen a goodly Tombe with the statues of him and his Countess in white marble excellently cut; viz. Katherine the daughter of Roger Mortimer before specified (created the first Earl of March by King E. 3.) a perfect representation whereof, I have placed here in my Story of him, because there being so many other Monuments in that Church, to have put them altogether would not shew gracefull to the work. Which noble Lady dyed before him, as by what I have said appears; yet not many weeks, for her Testament bears date 4. Aug. the same year, by which she appointed her body to be buried wheresoever the Earl her husband should think fit, to whom she bequeathed her Goblet bound with gold, and those Buckles of gold which she used to carry, as also a Ring having an Emraud in it. To Thomas her son she gave her book of Ch. To Will. her other son a Tablet of gold. To Maud de Clifford her daughter a Cup enameled with Doggs. To Philippa de Stafford her daughter a Boll with a cover. To her daughter Alice a Cup of silver gilt. To Margaret Mountfort her daughter the Cross with the pedestal in her Chapell. To Isabell her daughter a Cup. To Elizabeth the daughter of her son Guy a Cup. To the Covent of Friers Preachers in Worcester xx li. To the Friers Preachers of Whetisbury xx li. To the Friers Minors there xx li. To the Friers Preachers of Northampton xx li. To the Friers Mi- nors of Cobentre xx li. and to the Friers Minors of Lichfield xx li. Divers other Legacies she gave to her servants, and did constitute Isabell de Hareley, Rauf Tangele, and John Falvesse her executors, desiring her husband to be assistant unto them in the performance thereof.

This Noble Earl had divers children, of which I will only make a brief mention. Guy his eldest son, who received the honour of Knighthood in 29 E. 3. with a grant from the King of Cli. per annum out of his Exchequer till his fathers inheritance should descend to him, or that he could otherwise provide for his support; and married Philippa the daughter of Henry Lord Ferrers of Groby, by whom he had issue three daughters, Elizabeth, Katherine, and Margaret, whereof the two later were Nuns at Shouldham in Com. Norff. This Guy was a stout Souldier, and upon his going into France in 33 E. 3. which (I conceive) was to attend the King in an expedition at that time made, declared his Testament at Canterbury on the 26. of Sept. whereby he bequeathed his body to buriall where his parents should think fit. To the Earl his father he gave his best gold Ring. To the Countesse his mother his next gold Ring. To Philippa his wife the third. To Catherine his daughter, then a Nunne at Shouldham in North. the fourth; and appointed that the Church of Beketon in North. of his Patronage should be appropriated to the Monastery of Shouldham before-mentioned, for the maintenance of Catherine and Margaret, his two daughters, during their lives; and after their deceases, the said House of Shouldham obliged to find a Priest to sing divine service daily for the souls of his father and mother, his own and his wives; as also for the souls of the said Catherine and Margaret, and all the faithfull departed. After which, in April following (his father then alive) he dyed at Wendolme in France, and was there interred in a Chapell behind the high Altar, towards the East, having a fair Monument of Alabaster, with his statue thereon finely cut, and over his harness a surcoat of Armes; upon the verge of which Monument is this Inscription.

Icy gist Monseigneur Gui de Beauchamp l'eyne Fils de tresnoble & puissant home Monsieur Thomas de Beauchampe Comte de Warwike, Marechal d'Angleterre, qui trespassa le xxviii. iour d'Averill l'an M. CCCL. Upon which Monument are the Armes of Beauchamp and Mortimer.

What became of his daughter Elizabeth, I cannot imagine; but that such a one there was, living ten years after her fathers death, appeareth by the Testament of Katherine Countess of Warwick (mother to this Guy) as I have already shewed. It seems, that the Lady Philippa his wife was a devout woman, and resolving to continue a widow whilst she lived, upon the eleventh of August the same year made her solemn vow of Chastity in the Collegiat Church of Warwick, before Reginald Bryan then Bishop of Worcester; which vow, together with the ceremony thereof, I have here inserted, as I find it recorded in the Register.

The rest of the sons of Earl Thomas, were Thomas that succeeded him, Reynburne^d (so named, doubtless, in memory of Reynburne the son to Guy Earl of Warwick in the Saxons time) that dyed before the 35 E. 3. which Reynburne had issue one onely daughter called Alianore married to John Knight of Hanlapp in Com. Buck. who by her had a daughter named Emme,^b that married to Foster, from whom the Fosters of Hanlapp derive their descent. William^b the 4. son was Lord Bergavenny, as I shall shew when I come to Fillongley, where I purpose to speak fully of him. Roger^c the fift son dyed without issue, as I guess. Some are of opinion that he had two more sons, viz. John and Hierome, because that amongst those portraitures, which were in glasse in the North Crofs of the Collegiat Church at Warwick, there are the pictures of two such, as appeareth by their surcotes of Armes, and those names on the side of them; which, as I cannot gainsay, so am not I fully convinced thereof, in regard, that neither J. Rous makes mention of them, nor any of those Entailes^k whereby the said Earl feiled the greatest part of his lands upon his issue male.

But he had ix. daughters, the portraitures of all which are curiously drawn and set up in the windows on the South side of the Quire of the said Collegiat Church, and in the habit of that time (as they are here represented.) Seven of them were married and have their paternall Coat upon their inner garment, but on the outer mantle their husbands Armes; viz. Maud^l the wife of Roger Lord Clifford, Philippa^m of Hugh Earl Stafford, Elizabethⁿ (Alice potius) of John Beauchamp of Hach in Somersetshire, Joan^o of Ralph Lord Bassett of Drayton, Isabella^p of John Lord Strange of Blackmere, afterwards married to William Ufford Earl of Suff. (for which respect her picture is twice drawn there) Margaret^r of Guy de Montfort, who was afterwards a Nunne at Shoultham, Agnes^s of Cokesey, and afterwards of Bardolf. The other two were Julian^t and Catherine^u, the former wherof dyed unmarried, and the later being a Nunne^v at Wrothall in this County was buried^x in S. Thomas Chapell there. He had likewise another son and daughter, but they were illegitimate; the son called Sir John Adardston Knight, and Mary^a the daughter, wife to Sir Richard Herthull Knight.

To this last Earl succeeded Thomas his second son, by reason that Guy the eldest dyed in his fathers life time. Which Thomas received^b the dignity of Knighthood in 29 E. 3. with his brother Guy, and having had C. marks per annum granted him^c at that time by the King, to be payd out of the Exchequer till there should other provision be made for his support, did his Homage^d 7 Febr. 44 E. 3. for all the lands descended to him by his fathers death, whereupon he had livery of them, for he was^e 24 years of age when his father dyed. Being of a martiall disposition as well as his Ance-cestors, he was in 46 E. 3. retained by Indenture to serve the King in his wars beyond the Seas for one whole year, with C. men at Armes and Clx. Archers, of which number himself to be one; as also with two Banneretts, xxx. Knights, and Lxxvii. Esquiers, and for that service to receive for himself and his men at Armes double pay, but for the rest according to the ordinary rate, the year to begin from the time that they should take shipping, and to have half in hand for himself and his men at Armes, but for the rest a fourth part: which expedition was principally intended for rayling the siege of Rochel; but as the Earl of Pembroke, sent over for that purpose, was worsted by the Spaniard, who then came with a great Navy to aid the French, so was the King and that power he had raised, hindered^b from getting over thither by contrary winds, to the loss of nine hundred thousand pounds expences; for no less charge had he been at in order thereto.

The next ensuing year, viz. 47 E. 3. he was again retained^f to serve the King in his French wars, for one whole year, with CC. men at Armes and CC. Archers, well mounted armed and arrayed, under the conduct of John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaster, of which men at Armes, besides himself, there were to be Lix. Knights and Cxi. esquiers. And in 49 E. 3. was sent by Commission from^g the King into Scotland, with whom were joyned Sir Guy de Brienne, and Sir Henry de Somers Banneretts, to treat with William Earl of Douglas and others appointed by the King of Scots touching restitution of those lands which by the truce formerly made did belong to the English. The same year also did he accompany^h Edmund E. of Cambridge, the Kings son, into Britanny on the behalf of John de Montfort Duke of Britanny, where they had great success in taking of severall Castles, till they wereⁱ recalled by the King upon a truce concluded betwixt him and the French. In 50 E. 3. he was constituted Governour^j of the Isles of Gernsey, Serke, and Aureney. In 51 E. 3. he had Commission^k, with divers gentlemen of note for arraying of men in this County; so also in 51 R. 2. at which time he was by Indenture^l retain'd to serve the King with CC. men at Armes, and CC. Archers beyond Sea, for a quarter and half of the year; viz. besides himself a Banneret, four Knights, with Clxv. Esquiers well and sufficiently mounted, armed, and accoutred for that voyage.

In 3 R. 2. he was again in Commission^m for arraying of men in this Shire, and by the Commons in Parliament at the same time held at London chosen Governourⁿ to the King then but young, as being a man most just and prudent; for which service he was to have a convenient allowance^o out of the Kings publique Treasury. In 5 R. 2. that foul Insurrection of the Commons under the conduct of Jack-Straw happening, whereof our Storyes have a full relation, he was sent^p to protect the Monastery of S. Albans then much endangered by that Rebellious Rout, and to do Justice upon the Villains; but as he was marching thitherward with a thousand stout men, well armed, and the Lord Thomas Percy in his company, News came to him that the like commotion was broke out where his own estate lay, which occasioning him to divert his intended course, and to send part of his souldiers to the aid of the Abbot, did much animate those bold Rebels that had gotten head at S. Albans. Whether in this County, or where where els the Insurrection was I cannot directly say; but I find that there were speciall Commissions^w directed to him with other persons of quality in this Shire, to suppress any that should make head therein. In 8. of the same Kings reign he had againe Commission^x to put the men of this County in Array.

But I cannot point out the direct extent of time that the King continued under his tutelage, yet certain it is, that before he arrived to mans estate, he took the reins of government into his own hand, or suffered them to be guided by some speciall Favourite, of whose misdoings he himself had at last wofull experience; the chief of which were Robert de Vere Earl of Orford, advanced to the title of Marquess of Dublin, and afterwards D. of Ireland, upon whom divers of the Nobility had therefore cast very envious eyes; but so much did the King affect the Marquess, that discerning who they were that thus maligned him, he laid trains to murder them, as saith my Author⁴; of which number were Thomas Duke of Glouc. (the Kings own Uncle) and our Earl of Warwick, who being men of haughty Spirits, and apprehending some danger towards, associated^b more to their company, and put themselves in Armes at Barlingey Park; whereupon they constrained the King to call a Parliament the next ensuing year, but what exorbitant things were done therein through their potency our *Annals*⁴ of that time will tell you: Howbeit, about a twelve month after, the King assembling his Nobles told them he was now of age to govern himself and the Kingdom, and thereupon chang'd some of his great Officers and Councillers, whereof this Thomas E. of Warwick was one that he laid aside; who thenceforth retiring himself built a that strong and stately Tower standing at the Northeast corner of the Castle here at Warwick, the cost whereof amounted^f to CCLXCV li. v. s. ii d. As also the whole body of the Collegiat Church of our Lady, both which were finished in 17 R. 2. but from that time forwards never could he get the Kings favour again; so that Thomas de Mowbray Earl Marshall and Beaufort, taking advantage of the Kings displeasure against him, and of the countenance that he himself then had at Court, brought his Writs of Error to reverse the Judgement given in 26 E. 3. on the behalf of Thomas then Earl of Warwick for the domination of Gowher in Wales, alleading that the Process, whereupon the suit in E. 3. time had been commenced, was directed to the Shiriff of Herefordshire, whereas the land of Gowher, in question, lay in Wales; yet so hapned the issue of that business, though this error, if it were one, related nothing to the just title, that in 20 R. 2. Mowbray recovered it.

Nay this was not all, for jealousyes and secret grudges harboured by divers great men towards that had most interest with the King, and doubtless were his advisers in what he had done; as also by him against them, began now to shew their effects; so that the King having wedded^b Isabell daughter to the King of France (a girl scarce eight years old) for better securing the xxx. years Truce concludedⁱ with that Nation, whereby he apprehended, that nothing could now disturb him in doing what he listed, caused his uncle the Duke of Glouc. to be layd hold^k on at Plisbury in Glouc. when he least thought of such a thing, and hurried thence to Caelys, where he was secretly murdered^l by the said Thomas Mowbray, not without the Kings privity, as 'tis said: And the same^m day that the Duke of Glouc. was so seized on, did he invite this our Earl of Warwick to a Feast, who suspecting nothing came, but found very harsh entertainment; for there did he cause him to be arrested and carryed away Prisoner; who puttingⁿ himself upon the Parliament for Justice, and acknowledging the meeting at Barlingey Park, had Judgement^o of death past upon him: Howbeit the King qualified that sentence, and gave him his life in exchange for a perpetual banishment to the Isle of Man, where he was to continue Prisoner, directing his Letters Patents^p to William le Scrope Earl of Wiltshire, who then had the dominion^q of that Isle, and to Sir Stephen le Scrope Knight bearing date at Westminster 12. Oct. in the xx. year of his reign, straightly commanding them to carry him thither and put him in sure custody, as they would be responsible body for body.

Whereupon this his Castle and Lordship of Warwick, with divers other Mannours, were given to Thomas Holland Earl of Kent, and to the heirs male of his body; and the rest of his lands to others, as I shall shew when I speak particularly of them: And the next ensuing year was his son and heir, viz. Richard Beauchamp, with Eliz. wife to the said Richard committed^r to the custody of the before specified Thomas Holland, at that time Duke of Surrey, who had also a speciall^s grant from the King of a suit of Arras Hangings containing the story of the famous Guy of Warwick, and belonging to the banisht Earl. Which hard measure to the Earl and his son occasioned Catherine the Nunne at Shouldam before mentioned to petition^t the King in her own behalf, in regard she was the grandchild and heir to this Earls father, by Guy his eldest son (as I have elsewhere manifested) and enjoyed no part of her inheritance; whereupon she obtained^u an assignation of Xl. marks per annum annuity out of the Kings Exchequer during her life: howbeit, the Earl continued not long a Prisoner in the Isle of Man; for on the 12. of July 21 R. 2. the Kings Mandate^x to the Constable of the Tower of London for reception of him thither bears date; during the remainder of whose reign he was kept in durance, But (alas!) upon what slippery ground the greatest earthly Potentate stands, when he thinks himself surest, the fall of this King, and divers other, whereof the Storyes of our own Nation shew us lamentable examples, may sufficiently manifest; for within the compass of two years, or little more, after he had strengthened himself by that alliance with the French, fill'd his cofers with vast summs of money by loans and otherwise, pull'd down and ruin'd all whole fidelity to him he thought not firm, and advanced his friends & favourites in that Parliament of 21. of his reign, which damn'd those Acts that by the power of the great ones had been made in 11. behold the Monster multitude agitated by the wind of his enemies malice and ambition took part with them, and suddainly overwhelm him in the gulf of absolute destruction, by Deposition from his throne, and the murder of his person, as is not unknown to those who are acquainted with the Story of those times, Henry of Lancaster being crowned King in his room.^y

In the first year of whose reign a Parliament makes null and void all that had been done in 21 R. 2. so that this our Earl of Warwick was then restored^z to his full liberty, honour and possessions; having having whatsoever goods in Warwick-Castle were to be found belonging to Thomas Holland Earl of Kent before mentioned, bestow'd upon him; and in particular that suite 2 of Hangings containing the said Story of Guy of Warwick, all which were forfeited to the new King by attainder of Holland. In which year he was made a Commissioner * for arraying all men in this County according to their estates and faculties: but his death now approaching, as I shall shew by and by, it will here be proper to take notice of his pious works. The first whereof, that I find, is in 49 E. 3. viz. the establishing an Anniversary * for his father in the Collegiat Church of Warwick; for the solemnizing whereof the Dean, Canons, and Vicars of that Church, and every Priest in Warwick that should come to the Dirige and Miss, was to have his dinner and 4 d. in money, and vi s. viii d. to be given amongst the Friers of that town; iii s. iv d. to the Canons of S. Sepulchers in Warwick, and xx s. amongst the poor yearly.

In 5 R. 2. he built * one of the Cells in the Monastery of Carthusians justa Coventre at the first foundation of that Religious house. In 6. he gave the * perpetuall patronage of the Church dedicated to S. James, situate over the gate called Hongyngate in Warwick, to the Gild of S. George, there newly founded in a Chapell over the same Gate. And in 15 R. 2. having finish'd the Quire of the Collegiat Church, begun by his father; and newly built * from the ground the whole body of the Church (which very fabrik now stands) he gave the Mannour of Haseleoure with the advouson of the Church, and the advouson of the Church of Wolhamcote, both in this County, together with the perpetuall patronage of the Church of Wylecotesford in Cambridg-shire unto the Dean and Canons thereof and their successors, to pray for the good estate of King R. 2. and of Queen Anne then his consort, of himself and Margaret his Countess, Sir William Beauchamp his brother, and Jane his wife during their lives in this world, and for the health of their souls after their departures hence; as also for the souls of their Progenitors, Ancestors, and all the faithfull deceased.

His Testament * bears date at Warwick-Castle 1 Apr. Anno 1400. (1 H. 4.) whereby he bequeathed his body to sepulture in the Collegiat Church before specified; and to every town whereof he was Lord, or Patron of the Church xx s. in money, in the name of his Principall *; but if he should depart this life at Warwick, then did he appoint the Church of our Lady, there, to have the best Beast, whereof he might be at that time posselt. For his Herse he directed CCC. lii weight of Wax, in six Tapers, and seven Morters, to remain in the said Church; and lx. poor men in gowas made of white-cloth, every one carrying a Torch at the solemnizing his Funerall: As also that xl. of those Torches, after his Exequies were finished, should be distributed to the poore Churches of his Patronage, and the residue to remain to the said Collegiat Church of Warwick: And moreover, that all his friends attending the Funerall should have good en-

tainment, viz. a Supper over night, and a Dinner on the next day, and money distributed to the poor according to the discretion of his Executors: as also xxx. Trentalls sung for his soul with all possible speed that might be after his decease, and a thousand Masses in like sort; viz. of the Trinity, of the Holy Ghost, of the Nativity of our Saviour, of the Holy Crosse, of the five Festivals of our Lady, of the Resurrection, of the Ascension, of Corpus Christi, of the Angells, of All Saints, and of Requiem; of every Feast lxvii. Masses, five in the whole excepted.

By which Testament he likewise gave to the King an Image of the blessed Virgin, with two Cruets silver and gilt, made in the fashion of two Angells. To the Archbishop of Canterbury a Tablet of gold. To the Colledge of our Lady in Warwick before mentioned a Cross with the pedettall silvergilt, and enamell'd with the Story of our Saviours Passion, and a precious stone called a Berrill, bound with silver and enamell'd, to put the Host into; as also his best Censer with a Challice, two Cruets of silver gilt, a basin and a piece of silver enamell'd. To his Colledge of Elmeley a Vestment. To Richard his son and heir his benediction, and these particulars, viz. a Bed of silk embroydered with Bears, and his Armes, with all that belong'd thereto. A wrought with the Armes and Story of Guy of Warwick; his sword, harnets, and Ragged Tavers likewise. And moreover appointed, that the Sword and coate of Maile sometime belonging to the famous Guy, with his Cup of the Swan, and the knives and Salt-cellars for the Coronation of a King should be and remain to his said son and his heirs after him. To his daughter Beauchamp his best Nouchet. To his brother of Bergavenny, and his sisters of Suffolk and Clifford, and to his neece Catherine Beauchamp, the Nunne, at Shouldham, each of them some gift of his according to his Executors liking, to the end that his memory might be preserved by them; And to his cozen le Despenser a pair of Pater nsters of Corral with buckles of gold.

This Earl was a Knight of that noble Order of the Garter; and having a great reputation for his Valour, publique spiritedness, Piety, and Charity, as Rous affirmeth, departed * this world 8. Apr. An. 1401. (2 H. 4.) and lyeth buried on the South part of the said Collegiat Church in Warwick under a fair Monument of Marble, (here represented) with Margaret his wife, daughter to William Lord Ferrers of Grobby, who by her Testament * bearing date xxviii. Nov. Anno 1406. (8 H. 4.) bequeathed also her body to sepulture there, appointing that at the solemnizing of her Exequies there should be five Tapers, containing vi l. of wax, burning about it from the beginning of Service on the Even before her Funerall, till the high Mass of Requiem on the morrow after: And at the same time xx. Torches to be held burning by xx. poor men about her Herse, but to remain afterwards for the high Altar and other Altars of that Church, for the honour of God according to antient custome and right.

Hic iacent Dominus Thomas de Beloeampo quondam Comes Warwici, qui obit octavo die mensis aprilis. Anno Domini Millesimo CCC C primo et Domina Margareta vxor eius quondam Comitissa Warwici que obit xxi mensis Ianuarij Anno Domini Millesimo CCC C septo. Quorum animabus propicietur Deus, Amen.

Which noble Lady dyed 22. Jan. Anno 1406. (8 H. 4.) as her monumentall Inscription sheweth, Earl Richard her son being then xxv. years of age; who did no whit fall short of his famous Ancestors, either in Marciall prowesse, great employments, or other excellent vertue, as by what I shall say of him will appear. And if the leaving behind us an honourable fame, which lives in the memories of all good men, when these mortall bodies of ours are turn'd to dust, be accounted some happiness, as doubtles it is, and hath therefore excited divers noble spirits to bold and high adventures, whereof we want not manifold testimonies, then surely the transmitting a remembrance of our vertuous actions to posterity by a faithfull Register must needs be a thing most acceptable to those, whose memories are so preserved, as the like by Polybius of Scipio Africanus was, as also of singular estimation with after-ages, which are so much quickned, we see, by such notable examples; And therefore I cannot but observe, that the advantage, which this Earl had herein, was much more than any of his Ancestors, by reason that Rom being his contemporary, and so well affected to History in generall, out of the speciall relation he had to this Family, hath with great diligence observed the most remarkable passages of his life, which with no less Art than industry are set forth by him in curious Pictures, historically representing them in order of time from his birth to his death, and which hath added much to the lustre of his Story, as by and by will appear.

He was born at the Mannour-house of Salwarpe in Com. Wigorn. 28. Jan. Anno. 1381. (5 R. 2.) having to his Godfathers King Richard 2. and Richard Scroope then Bishop of Cobentre and Wichfield, but afterwards Archbishop of York. Passing by his infancy and youth, wherein there is little observable, I come to the times of his action in the world, which began in 4 H. 4. For no sooner had he livery of his lands, which was 13. Febr. the same year, upon performance of his homage, but that he was put in Commission for arraying of men in this County; and the next year following, at the Coronation of Queen Jane, wife to King H. 4. (viz. 26. Jan. 5. H. 4.) kept Jousts on the Q. part against all comers, in which action he behaved himself most nobly. Neither did he shew less courage against that great Rebel Owen Glendour, whose Banner he took, putting him to flight; nor against the Percies in that notable battaill of Shrewsbury about the same time. After which not long, he was made Knight of the Gar, and in the ninth year of this Kings reign obtaining license to visit the Holy Land for performance of the Vow he had made, and Pilgrimage he did resolve to take, fitted himself with all necessities for that journey, and passed the Sea. In which voyage he visited his cosin the Duke of Barr, by whom being nobly received and entertained for eight dayes, he was thence accompanied to Paris; at which place they arrived, where, the King of France wearing his Crown in reverence of the holy Feast made him to sit at his table, and sent at his departure a Herald to conduct him safely through that Realm.

Out of which, entering Lumbardy, he was met by another Herald from Sir Pandolph Maliscet, or Malier, with a challenge to perform certain feats of Armes with him at Uerona upon a day assigned for the Order of the Gar, and in the presence of Sir Galeot of Mantua, whereunto he gave his assent; and so soon as he had performed his Pilgrimage at Rome returned to Uerona, where he and his Challenger were first to Joust, next to fight with Axes, afterwards with arming Swords, and lastly with sharp Daggers. At the place and day alligned for which exercises came great resort of people, Sir Pandolf entering the lists with ix. Spears born before him; but the Act of Spears being ended they fell to it with Axes, in which encounter Sir Pandolf received a fore wound on the shoulder, and had been utterly slain but that Sir Galeot cryed Peace.

From thence he travailed to Venice, where being very nobly received by the Duke and others, he had many great presents given him by reason of the honour he had so gained at Uerona. When he came to Uterusalem he had much respect shewed him by the Patriarch's deputy, and having performed his Offerings at the Sepulcher of our B. Saviour, set up his Armes on the North side of the Temple, which continued there many years after, by the relation of divers Pilgrims that came from thence. At the time of his being thus at Uterusalem a noble person called Baltredam, the Souldan's Lieutenant, hearing that he was descended from the famous Sir Guy of Warwick, whose story they had in books of their own language, invited him to his Palace, and Royally feasting him, presented him with three pretious stones of great value, besides divers clothes of silk and gold given to his servants; where this Baltredam told him privately, that he faithfully believed as he did, though he durst not discover himself, and rehearsed the Articles of the Creed: But on the morrow he feasted Sir Baltredam's servants, and gave them scarlet with other English Cloth; which being shewed to Sir Baltredam, he returned again to him, and said, he would wear his livery and be Marshall of his Hall; whereupon he gave Sir Baltredam a Gown of black puke furred, and had much discourse with him, for he was skillfull in sundry languages.

From Uterusalem he came back to Venice, and was there nobly received. Thence he travailed he into Russia, Lituan, Poland, Prussia, Westphalia, as also some Countreyes of Germany, shewing great valour in divers Tourneaments whilst he was in those parts; and no sooner returned into England, but that he was by Indenture, bearing date 2 Oct. 12 H. 4. retained with Henry Prince of Wales (afterwards King by the name of H. 5.) to serve him as well in times of Peace as War, both in this Realm, upon, and beyond the Seas, for CCL. marks per an. to be payd out of the Prince his Exchequer at Wacermardyn at Easter and Michaelmas by even portions; and whensoever he should be in the said Prince his Court, to have 4. Esquiers, and 6. Yeomen with him, and dyet there for them all; Provided that the said Prince in service of Warr should have the third part of what he got in battail, and the third of the thirds of what his men at Armes should gain; And in case he took any great Commander, Fort, or Castle, the Prince likewise to have them, giving him reasonable satisfaction. Nay, he stood in such high esteem with that heroic Prince, that against his Coronation he was for his wisdom and industry, as the words of the Charter import, constituted high Steward of England for that solemnity. And in the second year of his reign, when the Sect of Lollards, (being much increased in all parts of the Realm, through the doctrine of Wickliff and others,) had conspired to seize upon the K. and his brothers, with divers other persons of quality and to murder them, as my Author affirmeth; as also to destroy the Monasteries and Prelates, and to share their possessions; he forthwith armed himself and gave great assistance to the subduing of them.

After which he was retained by Indenture bearing date 19. Junii 3.H.5. to serve the K. as Captain of Caleys from the 6. day of in 2.H.5. till Febr. 3. An. 1416. (4.H.5.) &c to have with him in the time of truce, or peace, for the safeguard thereof during the time before limited xxx. men at Arms (sc. Horsemen) himself and 3. Knights accounted as part of the number, xxx. Archers on horse-back, CC. foot Souldiers, and CC. Archers, all of his own retinue, besides ten men at Arms and x. Archers on horse-back belonging to the Treasurer of Caleys, all which were to be at his command in every thing touching the safe-guard of that place. For which service he was himself to receive vi.s. viii.d. per diem, for his Knights ii.s. a piece, for the rest of his horse xii. d. for every Archer on horse-back and foot Souldier viii.d. and for every Archer on foot vi. d. per diem for their wages. In which Town there was also to be at the Kings charges xl. Cross-bow-men, xx. Carpenters, and v. Masons, besides Bowyers, with other Officers and Pensioners. And in time of war was he to have Cxl. men at Arms on horse-back, himself and ix. Knights accounted part; Cl. Archers on horse-back, C. foot Souldiers, Cxxxiii. Archers on foot, and 4. Scouts on horse-back for his own retinue, over and above xx. men at Arms, and x. Archers on horse-back, as also x. Archers on foot belonging to the said Treasurer, besides Balisters, Carpenters, &c.

Whereupon he soon hastened to Caleys, and with the more speed, because he heard the French were raising great forces against that place, and there was received with solemn Procession; but when he understood that those forces bent another way, he resolved to practise some new point of Chivalry, causing three Shields to be made, and in each of them a Lady painted; The first harping at the end of a bedsted with a grate of Gold on her left sleeve, and her Knight called the green Knight with a black quarter, who was ready to just with any Knight of France xii. courses, having two Shields of purveyance, and his Letter sealed with the Seal of his Arms, the field silver a manch gules. The second Pavice, or Shield, had a Lady sitting at a covered bord, working Pearls, and on her sleeve a glove of plate rached, her Knight being called Chivalier Vert, having his Letter sealed with these Arms, the field silver two bars of gules, who was to just xv. courses, and that should be Saddles of Chains. The third Pavice had a Lady sitting in a Garden, making a Chaplet, and on her sleeve a Poleyne with a rivet, her Knight being called Chivalier attendant, who with his fellow must run and course with sharp Spears, his Letter being sealed with gold and gules quarterly, and a border Vert; which Letters were sent to the Kings Court of France, where 3. French Knights received them, and promised their fellows to meet at a day and place assigned: whereof the first was a Knight, called Sr. Gerard Herbaumes, who called himself le Chivalier rouge; the 2. a famous Knight, named Sr. Hugh Launey, calling himself le Chivalier blank, and the third a Knight, named Sr. Collard Fines; Twelf-day in Christmase being appointed for the time that they should meet in a Laund, called the Park-hedge of Oynes.

On which day this Earle came into the field with his face covered, a plume of ostrich feathers upon his Helm, and his Horse trapt with the Lord Toney's Arms (one of his Ancestors) viz. Arg. a manch gules: where first encountering with the Chivalier Rouge, at the third course he unhorsed him, and so returned with close vizor, unknown to his Pavilion; whence he sent to the said Knight a good Courser. The next day also he came into the field with his Vizor close, a Chaplet on his Helm, and a Plume of Ostrich feathers aloft, his Horse trapt with the Arms of Hanslap, viz. silver 2. bars gules, where he met with the blank Knight with whom he encountered, smote of his Vizor thrice, brake his Beagurs and other Harneys, and returned victoriously to his Pavilion, with all his own habiliments safe, and as yet not known to any; from whence he sent this blank Knight, (Sr. H. Launey) a good Courser. But the morrow after, viz. the last day of the Justs, he came with his face open, and his Helmet as the day before, save that the Chaplet was rich with Pearl and pretious stones, and in his Coat of Arms of Guy and Beauchamp, quarterly, having the Arms of Tony and Hanslap on his trappers; and said, that as he had in his own person performed the service those two dayes before, so with Gods grace he would the third; whereupon encountering with Sr. Collard Fines, at every stroke he bore him backward to his Horse, insomuch as the French-men, saying that he himself was bound to his Saddle, he alighted and presently got up again: but all being ended he returned to his Pavilion, sent to Sr. Collard a fair Courser, feasted all the people, gave to those three Knights great rewards, and so rode to Caleys with great honour.

About this time it was that the general Councell of Constance in Germany began; unto which totius Christianitatis prudentissimi Pontifices, & Prelati, cum aliis Clericis velut innumeris confluxerunt, as Walsingham saith; the cause of which meeting was chiefly about choise of the Pope: whereupon, from England were sent the Bishops of Salisbury, Ebo. and Lich. Bath and Wells, Portsmouth, Hereford and S. Davids, the Abbot of Wellesm. Prior of Worcester, with divers other learned men, and for their greater honour our Earle of Warwick; themselves and their whole retinue amounting in number to 800 Horse. During whose stay at Constance he receiving a Challenge from a great Duke for his Ladies sake, slew the Duke in Justing; whereupon the Empresse took his livery, viz. the Bear, from one of his Knights shoulders, and for great favour to him set it on her own shoulder; but he, having notice thereof, made one of Pearle and precious stones, which being presented to her she received with much respect. Here also was it that the Emperour Sigismund gave him his sword to bear, and offered him the heart of S. George (the English-mens tutelary Saint) to bring over into this Realm; but hearing the Emperour say, that he would come in person into England, he restored it to him again, saying that the delivery thereof with his own hand would be much more acceptable. Nor was it long after that the Emperour did come over accordingly, and being made Knight of the Garter offered the holy Heart at Windsor, which was there kept in great esteem. Upon whose passage hither and return he was royally entertained at Caleys by this our Earle, then Captain there, his comportment being such, that the Emperour told King Henry that no Christian Prince Prince had such another Knight for Wisdom, Nurture, and Manhood; adding that if all courtesie were lost, yet might it be found again in him, inso-much as ever after by the same Emperours authority he was called the Father of Courtesie.

In his return from Caleys at that time, he took sat Sea two great Carricks; and shortly after, sc. 5. H. 5. attended Thomas D. of Clarence General of the Kings Army into France, where he further manifested his valour in divers eminent services; for having taken Dampfront, he first entred Cane, and set the Kings Arms on the Walls with the Duke's, crying, a Clarence, a Clarence. Then laid he siege to Candebek on the River of Selne; blockt up the Citie of Roan, both by land and water, and afterwards won Mount S. Michael, as also divers other strong Towns; As a reward for which signal services the K. created him Earle of Amarle. At the siege of Roan his Tent stood betwixt the Kings pavilion and S. Katherine's; and S. Katherine's being won, he was appointed to keep Port-Parteville.

After this, viz. in May following K. Henry imploy'd him to the K. of France, attended with a thousand men at Arms, to treat concerning a marriage with the Lady Kath. his daughter; but to obstruct his passage the Dolphin sent the Earles of Mandoline and Lymosin with 5000 men at arms, to whom the Earle gave Battail, wherein both those French Earls lost their lives, and one of them by E. Richard's own hands, 2000 of their men being slain and taken. In which Embassy he sped so well, that all things were concluded for the Kings marriage to that Lady (whom he wedded 3. Junii 8. of his reign,) and that he should enjoy the Realm of France intirely after the death of the then K. whereupon siege being laid to those places that rebelliously opposed this agreement, of which the strong Citie of Orlon was one, this noble Earle gained it with great honour, after xiiii. weeks and four dayes opposition. The next ensuing year, (viz. the last of the victorious Henry's reign) he was sent with John D. of Bedford the Kings brother, and other noble persons to raise the siege which the Dolphin had laid to a Citie of the D. of Burgundie's; howbeit, the D. hearing of their approach did not stay their coming.

But shortly after, K. Henry departed this world, having appointed by his last Will, that this Earle should have the tutelage of young Henry his Son, then an Infant, till he were xvi. years of age; which, the Parliament approving, he accordingly had. In the first year of whose reign he was, by Indenture bearing date x. Julii retained to serve as Capt. of Caleys from the 4. of Febr. past, for the space of 2. years, having for the custody thereof CCx. men, himself accounted; who, with his Lieutenant and the Marshall of the Town, were onely to be Horst, but all the rest to serve on foot; & to have also CC. Archers, besides ten men at Arms and x. Archers belonging to the Treasurer of Caleys that were to be at his command in all things tending to the safe-guard of that place; for which service he was to receive vi. s. viii. d. per diem for himself, ii. s. for his Lieutenant, xii. d. for his Marshall, for every of his Foot-souldiers viii. d. and for his Archers vi. d. After which Philip D. of Burgundy, besieging Caleys, was by the valour of this noble Earle (assisted by Humfr. D. of Glouc. and Humf. E. of Stafford) forc'd to flee. Nay, so conspicuous was his fidelity, wisdom, and circumspetion, as the words of the Pat. do import, (for which respect the custody of the K. royal person, as I have already intimated, had been by the advice of the D. of Bedf. and Glouc. (his Uncles) & all the Lords of the Councell committed to him, as well for the security thereof, as education in learning & virtue,) that upon the death of the D. of Bedf. then Regent of France, he was discharg'd of that burthen and care, and in stead thereof constituted Lieutenant general of the whole Realm of France, and Dutchy of Normandy; whereupon with his Lady and Son, taking shipping for passage over, and discerning great danger by a hideous tempest, he caus'd himself, with both of them, to be bound unto the main mast of the ship, to the intent that if they had perisht, and were ever after found, yet by his Cote of Arms, discovering who he was, they might have been buried together; the state and lustre of whose equipage in that journey may in some sort be discerned by his Painters bill, which I have here, from the Original transcribed, having with him a peculiar Officer at Arms, called Warwick-Herauld, who had a grant from him of an Annuity of x. Marks Sterling per annum.

But he safely arrived, though not without much difficulty, and continued in that high employment till his death, which hapned about 4. years after, as I shall shew anon, using this title * in his Charters Ric. de Beauchamp Comes de Warrewyk, & de Aumarle, seign. L'isle, & Capitayne de Rovent.

Having thus manifested the chief of his publick employments, I now come to speak of those pious works, which for his Souls advantage he either performed himself, in his life time, or by his Will appointed that his Executors should do. Of the first, was the foundation of that Chantry at Cup-Cliff, in 9.H.6. (whereof I have there spoke at large:) but the rest being left to his Executors performance; viz. 1. to perfect the building at Cup-Cliff, the building of that magnificent Chapel, in honour of our Lady, adjoining to the Collegiat Church in Warwick, where his Monument now is (of which I shall speak more fully there) the amortizing of Lands for the maintenance of 4. more Priests and 2. Clerks in the said Collegiat Church, over and above the number there before; and of Lands to the value of xx. Marks per ann. to his Colledge at Elmley, for the maintenance of one more Priest to be added to the number at that time there.

By his said last Will and Testam. bearing date at Caberham in Orfordsch. 8. Aug. An. 1435. 15. H.6. (which is very memorable) he appointed that first, and in all haste possible after his decease, there should be five thousand Masses said for his Soul; Next his debts to be truly and wholly paid; Then that untill the Chapel above specified were finisht, his body should be laid in a Chest of stone before the Altar on the right hand of his fathers Tomb in the said Collegiat Church of Warw. & afterwards removed thither, where he ordained 3. Masses every day to be sung as long as the world might endure; one of our Lady with Note, according to the Ordinale Sarum; The 2. without Note of Requiem; The 3. also without Note, viz. the Sunday of the Trinity, the Munday of the Angels, the Tuesday of S. Thomas of Canterb. the Wednesday of the Holyghost, the Thursday of Corpus Christi, the Fryday of the Holy Crosse, & the Saturday of the Annunciation of our Lady; for performance of which he appointed xli. Lands per ann. over and above all reprises, to be amortized; viz. for every of the four Priests above specified x. Marks per ann. and for every Clerk v. Marks, and x. Marks to be divided amongst the said four Priests, and other six Vicars of the Colledge to increase their yearly salary, viz. to each of them xlii. s. iiii. d. And besides this, that his Executors should treat with the Abbot and Convent of Leeksbury, and agree that in their Monastery his Obit might be yearly kept; as also one Masse sung every day there for his Soul, which to be the first if it might be, if not the last.

To the Collegiat Church of Warwick he gave an Image of our Lady in pure Gold, there to remain for ever, in the name of a Heriot; and appointed that his Executors should cause four Images of Gold, each weighing xx. li. to be made like unto himself, in his Coat of Arms, holding an Anker betwixt his hands, and so to be offered and delivered in his name; viz. one to the Shrine in the Church of S. Alban, to the honour of God, our Lady and S. Alban; another to the Shrine of S. Thomas at Canterbury; the third at Bridlington (in Yorksh.) and the fourth at the Shrine in the Church of S. Winifride at Shrewsbury. And moreover, that a goodly Tombe of Marble should be erected in the Abby of Livingwood in Com. Glouc. upon the grave of Eliz. his first wife, as also restitution made for any wrong done by him; and his servants to be rewarded. To Isabell then his wife, he gave all the silver vessel, bedding, and household stuffe that he had with her; and over and above all that, and whatsoever else she had since they were married, two dozen of silver dishes, xii. Chargers of silver, xii. saucers of silver, a pair of Basyns, covered, silver, and gilt, four other Basyns of silver, four Ewers of silver, xii. pieces of silver of one sort, with his Arms enameled on the bottom of them; & likewise the great Paytren bought of the Countesse of Suff. sometime belonging to the Earle of Salisbury; and to his Son Henry the Cup of Gold with the dance of men and women.

Of which Testament were Executors, the Lord Cromwell, the Lord Tiptoft, John Throkemorton, Ric. Curson, Thomas Hugesford, Will. Berkswell Priest, and Nich. Rody (his Steward.) After which, viz. ult. Apr. An. 1439. 17.H.6. he departed this life; as his monumental inscription here most exactly imitated, together with the true representation of his magnificent Tombe sheweth: leaving issue by Eliz. his first wife, daughter, and Heir to Thom. L. Berkley, three daughters; viz. Margaret born at Good-rest in Mednoks-park the next year after the Battail of Shrewsbury. second wife to the famous John Talbot Earle of Shrewsbury; which Margaret died at London, An. 1467. (7.E.4.) and was buried under the Quire in the Cathedral of St. Paul (commonly called St. Faiths Church.) Alianore born at Walkinstou in Essex shortly after the feast of our Lady's Nativity 9. H.4. first married to the L. Rosse, and afterwards to Edm. Beaufort Marq. Dorset and D. of Somerset; And Elizabeth, born at Warwick-Castle, wife to George Nevil Lord Latimer. To his second wife he wedded Isabel daughter of Thomas le Despens E. of Glouc. and by the death of her brother Richard, and elder sister Eliz. without issue, Heir to all his Lands; but being the widow to Ric. Beauchamp E. of Warcest. his Uncles son (as in Fillongley I have shewed) he had a special dispensation from the Pope to marry her. The pictures of which his wives & children together with his own, as they stand in the East window of that stately Chapel before specified, where his Monument is, I have upon the next page exquisitely represented. By this Isabel he left issue Henry and Anne, of both which I shall speak in their order.

The Lands whereof he was possesd were very vast, as may seem by that computation of their yearly value extracted from the Accompts of his several Bayliffs through England and Wales, in 12.H.6. amounting to no less than 8306. Marks, 11. s. 11. d. ob. Which, setting aside the good penniworths that his Tenants had of what they then held, would in the dayes we live augment that sum sixfold at least, considering that about that time Barly was sold for 4. s. 2. d. the quarter, Oats at 2. s. 1. d. ob. Capons at 3. d. a piece, and Hens at 1. d. ob. as by certain Accompts of his Household-Officers appeareth.

Touching the said Lady Isabel his Countesse I finde, that she did not long survive him; for her Testament bears date the first of Decemb. following, and the probat thereof 4. Febr. the same year. Of which Testament, forasmuch as it is very memorable, I shall here deliver the substance; viz. that her body should be interred in the Abby of Leeksa-

I now come to Henry the succeeding Earle, Son and Heir to Richard by the said Lady Isabel. This Henry was born at Hanley-Castle in Worcester-shire, on Thursday xi. Kal. Apr. An. 1424. 3. H. 6. and baptized on the Saturday by Philip Morgan Bishop of Worcester, having to his God-fathers at the font Henry Beaufort Cardinal and Bishop of Winchester, with Humfry E. Stafford, and to his God-mother Jane Lady Bergavenny; the same B. of Worcester being his God-father also at confirmation. At his fathers death he hardly exceed- ed the age of fourteen years, but was a person of extraordinary hopes, as by the early appearance of his heroick disposition is evident; for before he accomplished full xix. years of age, he tendred his service for defence of the Dutchy of Aquitane; in consideration whereof, and to give him the more encouragement in that expedition, the K. by his Charter bearing date at Dober. 2. Apr. 22. of his Reign, created him Premier Earle of England, and for a distinction betwixt him and other Earles, granted to him and the Heirs male of his body leave to wear a golden Coronet about his head, as well in his own presence as elsewhere, upon such great Festivals as the like used to be worn. And within 3. dayes following, considering the high deserts of his noble father, of whom he hath this expression° ---- quem (meaning Earl Richard) dignissime in Armorum strenuitate ut columnam immobilem belli fata pro nobis & nostris magnanimiter & libenter sustinentem, suorum cognoscit & commendat ingenia, ex excellentia meritorum minime nimè per nos aut progenitores nostros huc usque remuneratum, &c. advanced him to the title of Duke of Warwick, granting him place in Parl. and all other meetings next to the D. of Boz. and before the Duke of Buck. and giving him xl. l. per ann. to be paid by the Sheriffe of War. and Leic. Shires for the time being out of the revenue of these Counties, towards the better support of that Honour.

But this business of Precedency was so stomackt by Humfrey Duke of Buck. that had not the K. by Act of Parl. in 23. of his reign (which was the next year ensuing the said Duke of Warwick's Creation) qualified it, much inconvenience had arisen upon it: Therefore for appeasing the contention and strife moved betwixt them for that preheminance (those are the words of the Act) it was established, that from the 2. of Decemb. then next following, they should take place of each other by turn, viz. one that year, and the other the next, and so as long as they lived together, the Duke of Warwick to have the first years precedence, and he which should survive to have place of the others heir male, as long as he lived; And from that time, that the heir male of each should take place of other, according as it might happen he had livery of his lands before him. After which he had a grant in reversion from the death of Humfrey Duke of Glouc. of the Isles of Cernesey, Jersey, Serk, Crm and Aureney, for the yearly Rent of a Rose to be paid at the feast of the Nativity of S. John Bapt. As also of the Mannour and Hundred of Brissoll in Gloucester-sh. for the yearly ferm of lx. l. and besides this of all the Kings Castles and Mannours within the Forest of Dene, for the Rent of C. l. per ann. To all which Honours he had this further added, viz. to be Crowned King of the Isle of Wight by the Kings own hands.

But this hopeful branch, the onely heir male to these great Earls, was cropt in the flower of his youth, before the fruits of his Heroik disposition could be fully manifested to the world; for upon S. Barnabas day, sc. xi. Junii 1445. 23. H. 6. being but xxii. years of age, he died at Hanley, (the place of his birth) and was buried in the Abbey of Leicester about the midst of the Quire, at the head of Prince Edm. Son and Heir to King H. 6. In his fathers life time, when he was scarce

ix. years of age, being then called by the name of the Lord Despenser, he wedded Cecily daughter to Ric. Nevill, Earle of Salisbury, whose portion was 4700. Marks; (which Cecily afterwards, sc. 27. H. 6. married to John Lord Tiptoft) by whom he left issue one onely daughter, called Anne, born at Harroff in the moneth of Febr. An. 1439. Which Anne being about 2. years old at his death, was committed to the tutelage, & first of Q. Margaret, and afterwards of Will. de la Poole, D. of Suff. & had the title of Countess of Warwick; but she did not long survive; For I finde, that 3. Jan. An. 1449. 27. H. 6. she departed this world at Netelme in Driford. (a Mannour of the said D. of Suff.) and was buried in the Abbey of Reading, near to the grave of Constance Lady Despenser her great Grand-mother, daughter to Edmund of Langley D. of Bozk. Whereupon Anne her Aunt, born at Caversham in Driford-shire, 3. Id. Julii, An. 1429. 7. H. 6. Sister of the whole blood to the late D. of Warwick, became Heir to the Earldom, being at that time the wife of Ric. Nevill, Son and Heir to Ric. Nevill, Earle of Salisbury before specified, having been wedded to him the same year that Henry her brother married Cecily his sister. Which Richard, by reason of his said marriage, and in respect of his special services about the Kings person, as also in the Wars of Scotland (for so doth the Par. import) had on the 23. of July following the death of his wives Neice, the dignity and title of Earle of Warwick confirm'd and declared to him and his said wife, and to her Heirs, with all preheminencies that any of their Ancestors, before the Creation of Henry D. of Warwick used. Shortly after which, he with his said Countesse, by Fine levied xv. Trin. 28. H. 6. entailed the Castle of Warwick, with a great number of Lordships in this and xvi. other Counties upon the issue of their two bodies lawfully begotten, and for default thereof upon the issue of her, with remainder to Margaret eldest daughter to Richard Beauchamp Earle of Warwick and her Heirs.

This is that Ric. Nevill, who by our Historians is called the stout Earle of Warwick; and well he might be so in regard he bore such bold sway towards the later end of K. H. 6. and part of Edm. 4. Reign, having been so prime an Actor in those tragick stirs betwixt the Houses of Lanc. & Bozk, as they that have but indifferently perused the stories of that time cannot be ignorant. About the 30. of H. 6. he took part with Ric. D. of Bozk, who at that time put himself in Arms under pretence to reform things amiss in the Kingdom; but the D. being not then powerfull enough to go through with his design, submitted himself, making Oath to be a true and faithfull subject: howbeit, the next year after, having laid a better foundation for his attempts, chiefly by the interest he had in this Earle, and the Earle of Salisbury his father, he broke out again in 33. H. 6. and at S. Albans assailed the Kings forces, (where our Warwick entering through a garden gave the first onset) slew many, took the person of the King, caused a Parliament to be summoned, made himself Protector to the K. and Warwick Capt. of Caleys: But by the power of some others, who saw what was driven at, was at that time hindered in his speed; so that the King coming to Cobentre in 35. of his Reign, there hoped to have reconciled all things, and to that end sent for the D. by Letters, as also our E. of Warwick and his father, who came accordingly; but they, pretending some ill intentions towards them, pack-away, York to Wigmore in the Marches of Wales, Salisbury to Stoleham-Castle in the North, and our Warwick to Caleys; yet after some overtures were content to meet at London, so as they might have store of followers; whereupon they came, Warwick bringing with him 600. men apparelled, in Red Coats embroidered with white Ragged staves before and behind.

This was in 36. H. 6. where, and at which time all things were peaceably accorded in shew; but there hapning not long after (sc. 37. H. 6.) an affray betwixt a servant of the K. and one of Warwick's followers, this gave colour of a report that there was a design to kill the Earle, which occasioned him to take his Barge, & haste to Caleys. Thither therefore the young D. of Somerset was sent as Captain, but Warwick would not resign, maintaining himself there by a great booty he had got at Sea, as Admiral, no less worth than 10000. l. for he had taken 3. Carricks of Genoa, and 2. of Spain, laden with rich merchandize after two dayes fight with the losse^a of about C. men of his own and a thousand of theirs. After which, (sc. 38. H.6.) he brings^b over a band of stout Souldiers from Caleys, and with them a valiant Commander, named Andrew Trollop to a general Rendevouz that the Yorkists had at Luddeford in Herefordsh. on the Vigil of the translation of S. Edw. the K. where he produced^d certain persons before the people to swear that the K. was deceased; causing^c Masse to be said and Offerings made that they might the lesse dread to take the field: But Trollop, who had served formerly against the French, & done notably, finding that Warw. & the rest had foul intentions towards the K. whereas his preservation and honour was pretended to him, got away privately with a choise sort of men, & came^f in to the K. wch did so much daunt the Yorkists, that they presently shifted for themselves, Warw. with his father getting difficultly^e to Caleys. Whereupon the K. calls^h a Parl. at Cob. and attaintsⁱ him, with the rest, of high treason.

From Caleys therefore Warwick sayls^k speedily into Ireland to the D. of Forke; and being not able to carry on their work in Engl. by main strength, they pretend^l all fidelity and allegiance to the K. which feigned shew did not onely gull^m the ordinary sort of men, but even the Archb. of Can. himself, and many other persons of quality that believed them, so that they were permittedⁿ to land in Kent: and the better to delude the people, Warwick openly at the Cross in Canterb. swore, ^o that they had ever born true faith and allegiance to King Henry, upon which stock he got many to joyn with them, giving^p out that they onely desired admission to the K. for speech with him: Nevertheless when they came^q to Portsmouth, where his Army was, they put themselves in order to fight, the Vanguard being led^r by our Warwick, whereupon a bloody Battail ensued (9. Julii) in which the K. was taken^s & many a gallant man slain. Howbeit after this the Q. raises^t more power in Forke, whereof the D. of Forke hearing, he hastens thither, but meeting at Wakefield an. 39. H.6. he felt the reward of his perfidie, being their slain^u in Battail. Hereupon she advances towards London, where Warwick and the rest of his party, now^v in Arms on the behalf of Edw. E. of March, son and heir to the D. of Forke, were, having the K. along with them; who endeavouring to stop her passage at S. Albans were there routed; at which time the K. person was recovered: but it was not long after ere the Earls of March and Warw. having by flight escaped, made^y up towards London again with a mighty power, which so affrighted the Q. notwithstanding her late successe at S. Albans, that she retired with the K. and P. Northwards again; which gave such ground to the Yorkists, that London received them without opposition; so that the E. of March, from this time forwards taking upon him the title, was proclaimed^z K. by the name of Edw. 4. and thereupon hasted Northwards against the forces which K. Henry had raised there; but at Ferry-brygg receiving some loss whereat divers were staggered, Warwick to encourage others slew^a his own Horle with his Sword in King Edw. presence, saying, Let him fly that fly will, I will tarry with him that will tarry with me, and so kist the Crosse of his Sword to confirm that resolution; this being the day preceding that great Battail of Towton where K. Edw. had the better.

After which victory, Warwick had the command of the Castle of Guyenes, near Caleys, committed to his custody, which he was obliged by Indenture^b to keep, from the 4. of March 1. E. 4. as long as he lived, with xlviii. men at Arms on foot, himself and his Lieut. on horse-back, and 50. Archers on foot: in consideration whereof himself & his Lieutenant were to have ii. s. per diem, his men at Arms viii. d. and his Archers vi. d. The same year was he also made^c Lord great Chamberlain of Engl. for life; And, in recompence for his many & great services, had a grant^d in fee of the Mannour of Wozend in Portsmouth, as also of Atherston, & Fulbroke in this County. It is not like that he continued long at the Castle of Guyenes before specified; for about this time (3. E. 4.) was he employed^e further into France by the K. to treat in his behalf touching a marriage with the Lady Bona, daughter to Lewes D. of Saboy, and sister to the French Q. in which he sped so well, as that it was resolved the E. of Dampmartin should speedily come over into Engl. to confirm the business: but K. Edw. hunting in Wythwood forest, where he chanc'd to set his eyes upon Eliz. the widow of Sr. John Grey, was so captivated^f with her beauty, that he would not hearken to what our Warwick had done in France; which so incens'd the haughty spirited E. that, from that time he never ceas'd to endeavour the Ks. ruin; and to that end taking advantage of the D. of Clarence his discontents, won him to his side, but for firmer securing their compact, gave^g his daughter Isabel to him in marriage (8. E. 4.) in our Lady Church at Caleys with half the Lands of her mothers inheritance.

Hereupon they plotted how new commotions should be raised, which were effected by certain of their instruments in Forke, and being gotten into Arms, the first bout they had was at^h Codgote in Driford, where the Royalists had the worst. But the K. himself being yet Northwards in the head of a good Army, and resolving to find out his enemies, marcht towards Warw. whereof our Earl being advertised, he employedⁱ several persons to treat with him for a peace, unto which the K. too credulously hearkning rested secure in his Camp at Wolbey (in this County) whilst spying the advantage, he came in the night time and surpris'd^k him in his bed; from whence he carried him prisoner^l to his Castle at Warw. and afterwards to Middleham in Forke, where he left him in the custody of his brother George Nevil Archb. of Forke: but by advantage of hunting in the Parks, which the Archb. permitted him to do, he made his escape, & raised such a power in a short space, that, having vanquish'd Sr. Rob. Wells with his forces in Lincolns. our Warwick & Clarence thought it safest to pack^m away, and would have got to Caleys (of which Town he was Capt.) but that the Lord Pawclere (a Gascoign) whom he constituted his Deputy, oppos'dⁿ his entrance; whereupon he landed^o in Portmandy, & receiving^p much countenance from the French K. applied himself to Q. Margaret (wife of K. H. 6.) who was fled into those parts for safety; & for the firmer twisting his and the Lancastrian interest together, matches^q his other daughter, Anne, with Edw. Pr. of Wales, taking a solemn Oath^r to restore K. Henry, by means whereof he obtained no small assistance^s from the said Queens friends.

Shortly after which he landed^t in the West of Eng. and proclaimed K. Henry; where his power so increased that K. Edw. was forc'd to fly the Land; so that then having no rub in his way, he entred^u London, delivered King Henry from his ix.

inprisonment, and set him again on his Throne. But before the revolution of one year K. Edw. arrives in Eng. again, and increasing his strength much, so daunted the D. of Clarence (his brother) that he made his peace with him, and offered to do the like for our Warwick (his father in law) had not his stomach been too high; so that then there being no way but by the sword to determine the business, it came to be decided on Easter day at Barnet-field, in which Battail our stout Earle lost his life with many persons of note; & others, to a great number; and was buried in the Monastery of Wicham in Com. Berks. with his Ancestors the Montagues, by whom it had been founded.

This was the course & conclusion of our haughty spirited Earle, whose ambition hastned his ruine as we see. Commes being sent to Caleys by the D. of Burgundy to treat with Varclere, (the deputy Governour there to this great man) reports, that he was so popular, as that every one wore his Badge, no man esteeming himself gallant, whose head was not adorned with his Ragged staff; nor no doot frequented, that had not his white Crosse painted thereon; insonuch as Varclere himself wore a Jewel in his Hat, wherein was a black Ragged staffe embroidered with Gold. Of his extraordinary Hospitality also do I finde this observ'd, that at his house in London six Oxen were usually eaten at a Break-fast, and every Tavern full of his meat; for who that had any acquaintance in his family should have as much fodder and rost as he might carry upon a long Dagger. Nay it appears, that being Admiral to K. H. 6. he was stiled a great Captain of the Sea, having for his support in that place, not onely all the Tonnage and Poundage belonging to the King in any wise, but a thousand pounds per. ann. out of the revenues of the Dutchy of Lancaster; as also that by the same Kings favour he had a grant of preheminance above all the Earles in the Land. And moreover, to adde to his greatness, a peculiar Officer at arms, for his service in martial employments, called Warwick-Herault.

But after the death of this Earle his Countesse underwent no little distresse; being constrained to take sanctuary in the Abby of Beaulieu (in Hants.) where she continued for a long time in a mean condition; but thence privately got into the North, where also she abode in great streights, all her vast inheritance by authority of Parliament being taken from her, and settled upon Isabel and Anne her two daughters and heirs, the first of them wife to George D. of Clarence, and the second to Ric. D. of Glouc. as if she the said Anne had been naturally dead: which was with-held from her till 3. H. 7. that the K. (having a minde thereto, her said daughters being both dead) by a new Act of Parliament, annulled the former, as against all reason, conscience, and course of nature, and contrary to the Laws of God and man (as the words thereof import:) And in consideration of the true and faithfull service and allegiance by her born to K. H. 6. as also that she never gave cause to such disherison, restored unto her the possession of the premises, with power to alien the same, or any part thereof; but with little purpose that she should enjoy it, as it seems; for it appears, that the same year by a special Feoffment bearing date 13. Dec. and a Fine thereupon, she convey'd it wholly to the K. entailing it upon the issue male of his body, with remainder to her self & her Heirs; the particular Lordships in which grant, for as-much as the magnificence of our preceding Earls may thereby be the better illustrated, I have here set down; viz. the Mannours of Warrewyk, Tone-worthe, Lightborne, Boxton, Berkswell, Brayles, Claberdon, Sutton, Winterton, Budbroke, Hale-ley, Snitterfeld, and Pipe hall in this County; Abbotley, Shzabeley, Elmley-Lover, Sallwarpe, Hull-place, Wyche, Elmley-Castle, Chadsey, Verbington, Shyleve-Lench, Perdley, Cromb-Simonds, Warpdell, Hanley, Bullheley, Ridmery, Upton super Sabrinam, with the Citie of Worcester, all in Worcestersh. Tewkesbury, Stoke-Archer, Whittington, Fairford, Sobbury, Tredyngton, Panngton, Fyrdington, Pozthey, Putt, Berton-Regis juxta Bristol, Barton-Hundred, Kenmerton, Chedworthe, and Lydney in Gloucestershire. Burford, Shypton, Spellesbury, Chadlyngton-Hundred, and Langley in Orfordsh. Kavertham, and Stanford in Berks. Chyriel, Sherston, and Wootton in Wilts. Dertford, Willington, and Hendon in Kent. Walhamstow and Fraunceys in Essex. Flampstead in Hertfordsh. Potters-Pitpe, Atherugge-Hundred, Querendon, Aylesbury, Wackland, Agmonds-ham, Slingsbury, Hanslope, Diney, and Gerlaw in *Com. She was living in 5. H. 7. as appears by an assignation from the K. of the Mannour of Sutton in this County for her maintenance, but how long after I know not; for of her death is there no mention in Record, that I can finde. By the Earle her husband she left issue two daughters, viz. Isabel and Anne. Which Isabel was born in Warwick-Castle, 5. Sept. An. 1451. 30. H. 6. and on Tuesday, 11. Julii. An. 1469. (9. E. 4.) married at Caleys (by the Archb. of York) to George D. of Clarence, brother to K. E. 4. having a Dispensation from Pope Paul the 3. in regard that they stood allyed in the second and third, and third and fourth degrees of consanguinity; as also in respect that the mother of the said Duke was God-mother to this Isabel; which Dispensation bears date at Rome, Prid. Id Martii, An. 1468. 7. E. 4. Anne the other daughter, first married to Edw. Prince of Wales (son of H. 6. slay'd at the Battail of Tewkesbury in cool blood by Rich. D. of Glouc. as our Historians affirm) & afterwards to Ric. D. of Glouc. who posselt himself of all Warwick's lands, imprisoning her mother as long as she lived, and poisoning her, as 'twas thought, to make way for his marriage with his brother's (viz. K. E. 4.) eldest daughter.

Which

Which George D. of Clarence having wedded the said Isabel, and being reconciled to his brother K. E. 4. (as I have already intimated) was in regard of that marriage, by Charter ^u bearing date 14. Aug. 12. E. 4. created Earl of Warwick. And in 49. H. 6. (being the year of that Kings re-dépotion of his regal power) had a Pat. ^w of Lieutenancy for Ireland to the end of xx. years: After which K. Henry loosing all, he had the like Pat. ^x from King E. 4. for xx. years dated 16. Martii 12. E. 4. the title ^y he used being Georgius Dux Clarentie, Comes Warwici & Sarum, Magnus Camerarius Anglie; nec non locum tenens terræ Hibernie. But after all this, being charged with divers great offences towards the King (as our Historians affirm,) viz. in endeavouring to possess the people that the King his brother used by Negromancy and poison to make away those that he hated; as also that the said King was a Bastard, and therefore not fit to reign: And moreover, that he had procured divers of the Kings subjects to be sworn to him and his Heirs, without reservation of their allegiance to the King; as also sundry persons to give out, that Thomas Burdet his servant (of whom in Arrow I have spoke) was wrongfully put to death, he was attainted ^z in Parl. 15. Jan. An. 1477. 16. E. 4. and about a moneth after (viz. ^a 17. Febr.) being a prisoner in the Tower, there cruelly murdered, ^b by drowning in a Butt of Malmsey, not without the Kings consent. But the Lady Isabel his wife departed ^c this World at Warwick-Castle, 2. Dec. 16. E. 4. (which was about a year before) poisoned, as our Writers say, and was buried ^d in the Abby of Wewksbury.

This D. had issue by her 2. sons, and one daughter, the elder called Edm. Plantaginet, born ^e in Warwick-Castle, 21. Feb. An. 1474. 14. E. 4. as some say; but others ^f that it was on Ship-board when his father fled towards Caleys. The younger ^h (Richard) in ⁱ the Monastery of Wewksbury, An. 1476, who lived scarce ^k a year; being ^l poisoned as 'twas thought. Which Edward, being about three years of age at his fathers death, was knighted ^m at Wark by K. R. 3. in the first year of his Reign, with Edm. the onely son to that King; but both he & his sister were attended with a very hard fate: For Edward that bore ⁿ the title of E. of Warwick onely, being at the age ^o of 8. years committed ^p prisoner to the Castle of Striff-Burton in Com. Eboz. by the said K. Rich. 3. where he remained all his Reign, was immediatly upon the victory obtained at Bosworth-field by Henry Earl of Richmond (thenceforth K. by the name of H. 7.) by special Warrant removed ^q to the Tower of London, and there shut up in a more close and streight condition, for no other offence than being the onely male Plantaginet at that time living, and so consequently the most rightfull Heir to the Crown; and being at length charged with privy of Perkin Warbeck's escape out of the Tower, strange inferences were raised by which they made advantage to take away his life; whereas the truth is, that K. Henry being upon Treaty with Ferdinand K. of Spain for a marriage in the behalf of Prince Arthur his eldest son, and the Lady Kath. daughter to the said Ferdinand; and finding that the Spaniard thought ^r K. Henrie's title to have no sure foundation whil't this branch of Plantaginet was extant, had a minde to dispatch him out of the world; for the fairer effecting whereof a Commission was granted to John Earle of Orford, then high Steward of England, to arraign him for that pretended offence, which was accordingly done 21. Nov. 15. H. 7. care being taken to periwade him, that by confessing himself guilty, he should be sure to find mercy from the K. With which fair promises being caught, he pleaded as they directed him; and so betraying his life into the hands of those that to eagerly sought it, had judgement of death past upon him, and accordingly was beheaded ^s on Tower-Hill the 28. day of the same moneth of November. After which, viz. ^t 25. Jan. 19. H. 7. the better to countenance what was done, he was attainted ^u in Parl. so that all the favour he had, was, that being thus put to death, his body should be sent to the Monastery of Wingham, and buried ^v with his Ancestors. Which cruel dealing we may well think hath been some cause of Gods judgements upon H. 7. posterity, as well as upon that noble Lady Katherine, who became so sensible thereof when King H. 8. (her second husband) prosecuted the divorce betwixt them, that she expressed (as some ^x have said) that it was the hand of God, for that to clear the way to her marriage, the innocent E. of Warwick was put to unworthy death.

And if it be seriously considered what afterwards befell the said Earle of Orford and his family, we have cause enough to doubt, that God was no whit pleased with his activeness in this bloody scene; for having ^y within a short time lost the Kings favour, and been fined at 30000. li. for a very small offence, he spent the rest of his life in discontent, and dyed without any lawfull issue. After which it was not long that the possessions of that great Earldom became totally wasted, and the very Monuments of his noble ancestors (in the Abby of Colne) torn in pieces in that hideous storm raised by K. H. 8. son and successor of him to whom this Earle had been so obsequious. As for the Lands whereof this our Earle of Warwick dyed seized, I do not finde that they were any other than the Mannours of Wyke ^z in Com. Widd. Stanford ^a in the Vale of White-horse in Berks. and of Snitterfeld in this County.

Of his sister Margaret, born ^b at Farley-Castle in Wilt. 14. Aug. An. 1473. 13. E. 4. and married ^c to Sir Rich. Pool Knight I finde, that she had issue ^d Henry Pool Lord Mountagu, Reginald Pool Cardinal, Geffrey, and Arthur, with a daughter called Ursula, wife to Henry Lord Stafford, Son and Heir to Edm. Duke of Buck. which Marg. in her widowhood, ^e An. 1513. 5. H. 8. petitioned ^f in Parliament as Sister and Heir to Edm. Earle of Warwick attainted 19. H. 7. that she might inherit his estate and dignity, and so be stiled Countesse of Salisbury, which was granted: ^g but of her fathers inheritance she had very little that ever I could finde, and that also by attainder ^h in Parliament taken away, unheard, in 31. H. 8. for privy to the conspiracy of Henry Marq. of Greter, as was pretended: After which she enjoy'd her life but a short time, being barbarously put to death ⁱ on Tower-Hill 27. Maii 33. H. 8. drag'd ^j to the block by the hair of the head in the lxxviii. year of her age.

After the before specified Edward Plantaginet, till 1 E. 6. there was no Earl of Warwick; but then John Dudley, son of Edmund by Eliz. daughter of Edward Grey Viscount Lisle (Aunt and heir to Elizabeth Grey Countess of Debon: daughter and heir of Sir John Grey Viscount Lisle;) having been advanced to the dignity ^k of Viscount Lisle 12. Martii 34. H. 8.

34 H. 8. was through the great favour of King Edward, or rather of Edward Duke of Somerset, then Lord Protector, created ¹ Earl of Warwick 16. Febr. 1 E. 6. as descended from Margaret the eldest daughter to Richard Beauchamp sometime E. of Warwick. Howbeit, before I proceed to speak further of this John, I shall crave leave to say something of his parentage. That he was the son ^m of Edmund Dudley (of whom I shall say more by and by) and he the son of one John Dudley is plain enough: but, as I am not sufficiently satisfied that the said John his grandfather was a younger branch of the Barons of Dudley in Staffordshire, though with his own ⁿ hand in a descent of those Barons he express him so to be; viz. second son to John Sutton, first of that name that had the title of Lord Dudley; so shall I be as tender in affirming that to be true which I have seen under the hand of a very good Genealogist ^p in his time, and which he alledgeth to have received from a person of credit; id est, that the same John, his grandfather, was a Carpenter, and indeed born in the town of Dudley, though not of the name, other than travelling for his living he hapned to be entertained at the Abby of Lewes in Sussex, and was by the Monks called John of Dudley, and so growing in favour with the Abbot there, married and continued Carpenter to the House; And that having a son called Edmund, who for his pregnancy in learning was taken notice of by the Abbot, and preferred to a Schollars place in the University, grew such a proficient, that the Monks resolved to make him a Solicitor for managing their Law-suits, and to that purpose, from the University placed him at the Inns of Court, where he grew to skilfull in his profession, that finding King H. 7. politiquely resolving to raise great summs of money by taking the forfeiture of penall Lawes, which he conceived would be much more plausible to his subjects than the exacting from them by Loans, Subsidies, and such other ways of tax as his predecessors had used, applied himself to his service; wherein, being very officious, and bringing store of money to the Kings Coffers, he obtained a grant ^q of the Wardship and Marriage of Elizabeth daughter and heir to Edward Grey Visc. Lisle, before mentioned, whom he made his wife.

That the later part of this Story is true, I find testimony enough; but that the father of Edmund was a Carpenter, is not very likely, in regard he married so eminently, viz. Elizabeth one of the daughters and coheirs to John Bramshot Esquier, seized ^r of the Mannours of Calton, Calbourne, and Whitwell in the Isle of Wight; as also of Bramshot in Hantshire; which Eliz. dyed ^u 12. Oct. 14 H. 7. leaving Edmund her son then 36. years of age; the other coheir called Agnes being the wife ^w of John Pakenham: whence I conclude that he was a Gentleman, as some others of the name of Dudley in severall parts of England are, though, perhaps, not of the Baron of Dudley's line; therefore how this formall Story of the Carpenter should rise, I cannot well imagine, unless the grandfather or great-grandfather of Edm. had been of that trade: for it is no wonder to see those that are sprung from as poor Mechanicks, by their assidueness in the world to get wealth, and assume the title of Esquire or Gentleman without controull, yea, and be allowed so do; Neither do we often find that those which are in truth of right noble extraction will boggle at matching their children with them.

But I return unto Edmund Dudley. He was a man well vers'd in the Law, and one of the Privy Councell to that prudent Prince King H. 7. chosen in the first year of his reign propter prudentiam singularem, fidem, & gravitatem, saith ^x Polydore. In 19 H. 7. he was Speaker ^y of the Parliament, and should the same year have been made a Sergeant at Law, on the 13. of November; but, for what reason I will not take upon me to assign, he desired ^z that he might be discharged from assuming that degree; whereupon the King directed his Precept to Will. Bishop of London, then Lord Keeper of the great Seal, commanding his forbearance of making out any Writ to him for that purpose. In 22 H. 7. he had the Stewardship of the Rape of Hastings granted to him by Patent, ^a and wrote a Book ^b called Arbor Republicæ.

Whether he, with Richard Empson another Lawyer (but a Sive-makers son in Worcester, as our Historians affirm) discerning King Henry to be of a frugall disposition, did project unto him the taking advantage of such as had transgressed by exacting the forfeitures of penall Statutes; or whether the King seeing so fair a gap open for him to rake vast summs of money from his subjects; and finding those persons to be fit Instruments for his purpose, did put them upon such courses of filling his Coffers 'tis hard to say; certain it is, that these were the men he constituted ^c his Judices fiscales (Dudley being an eminent man, and one that could put hatefull business into good language, as Sir Fr. Bacon saith ^e) and after he had long made use of their service to that end, exposed them to those advantages ^f which the discontented people could justly take for their abominable extortions: For their course ^g was to proceed secretly to the Outlary against men, and then seize their estates: And besides that, they had packt ^h Jurors upon all occasions, who were sure to them in any verdict which served for their purpose: but at last found they a just reward for such their service; for King H. 8. in the first year of his reign, being desirous of popularity, made known by his Proclamations, that whosoever had received injury by the unjust oppressions of any, should upon complaint to him have redress: which liberty did so so animate the vulgar, who were sufficiently imbibittered against them, that nothing then would satisfy but their lives; so that the King to appease the multitude, gave way that they might be legally proceeded against, which accordingly was done, Dudley being thereupon arraigned ⁱ in Guild-Hall, London, on Monday next after the xv. of S. John Baptist 1 H. 8. before Edward Duke of Buck. Henry Earl of Northumberland, Thomas Earl of Surrey, George Earl of Shrewsbury, Thomas Earl of Derby, Thomas Prior of S. Johns of Hierusalem in England; Charles Somerset of Herbert Knight, Stephen Jennings Knight, Mayor of the City of London, John Fineux Knight, Robert Rede Knight, William Hodge Knight, Robert Brudnell, Humphrey Coningsby, John Fisher Knight, John Boteler, William Gre-vill, Thomas Lovell Knight, Edward Poynings Kt. Henry Marney Knight, Thomas Englefield Knight, and Robert Drury Knight, Justices to enquire, &c. Where the said Edmund being indicted of divers high Treasons, was on wednesday next before the Feast of S. Margaret the Virgin, attainted in Parliament ^k, and had his head ^l cut off on Tower Hill (with Empson, who was tryed ^m at Portsmouth) through the peoples clamours, and for their satisfaction, tisfaction, 18. August 2 H. 8. by vertue of the K. speciall Writ for that purpose.

Having said thus much of the parentage of this John Earl of Warwick, I will now go on with my story of him. At his fathers death he was scarce eight years old, having to his Guardian Edward Guilford Esquire of the Body to the King, who by his Petition exhibited in Parliament 3 H. 8. obtained an Act for the repeal of the said Edmund's attainder, and the restitution of this John, in name, blood, and degree to enjoy all his said fathers lands. Being therefore thus young, it was a great while ere he came to appear in any publique employments; so that till 24 H. 8. I have not yet seen any farther mention of his name; but then I finde he was a Knight, though how long he had been, so I am not certain. After which, about ten years, he was created Visc. L'isle (viz. 12. Martii 34 H. 8.) in respect of his descent on the mothers side (as I have shewed,) and the same year made Lord Admirall of England for life. Of person he was very comely, and of a Spirit highly aspiring (saith my Author) neither wanted he skill, industry, nor resolution to attempt great matters.

In 36 H. 8. he landed the Kings Army at Bellsh in Scotland (with a Fleet of CC. sail) on which, after they had wasted Coenburgh, they also set fire. The same year the King went over Sea in person, and took Boleyn in France, where this new Admirall, having scoured the Seas towards Scotland, and being upon the Kings return left his Lieutenant, through his valour and military skill, defended it against the Daulfin and the French Army of 5000. men (as they were reputed) though the walls at that time were very much shattered; And when the Daulfin had entred the bafe town, not without slaughter of divers English, by a brave failly he beat out the French again, with the los of above 800. of their men, which were esteemed the best souldiers in that Realm. The next year after, when the French had got a great Fleet at Sea for invasion of England, being appointed Admirall, he presented battaill to them, which they refused, returning home with the los of all their cost. Hereupon he landed 5000. men in France, fired Trepoint, as also divers Villages thereabouts, with the los of one man; and was one of the three Comissioners on the King of England's part by whom the Articles of Truce, made 7. Junii 38 H. 8. in the Camp betwixt Ardores and Gulnes, were concluded.

To say truth, for enterprises by Armes (quoth Sir John Haward) he was the minion of that time, so as few things he attempted but he atchieved with honour, which made him more proud and ambitious when he had done. Generally he always increased both in estimation with the King and authority amongst the Nobility, (but doubtfull, whether by fatall destiny to the State, or whether by his vertues, or at least by his appearance of vertues, as saith the same Author:) so that King Henry constituted him one of his xvi. Executors; whereupon, finding the Duke of Somerset (Protector to Edward 6.) to be neither a man of great wisdom or courage, ambitiously aimed to have the sway of all, and therefore insinuated himself into his friendship, whereby he made him a shadow for accomplishing his own ends. To which purpose he first obtained an increase of honour, being presently created Earl of Warwick, and made Lord high

Chamberlain of England for life; (which office he surrendered in 4 E. 6.) and soon after got a grant of Warwick-Castle with the Mannour, as also of divers other great Lordships and lands in this Shire (whereof I shall take notice as they come in my course) most of which he exchanged away with the King in 3 E. 6. for the Mannour of Wintest-Lovell in Derbyshire and divers other Lordships in the same County, and in Staff. Glouc. Worcester, Berks. and York-shires; yet by his power got them again the next year following with more, in exchange for lands in Northumberland Bishoprick of Durham, Hartfordshire and Wiltshire.

Of his particular great employments and actions, I shall not stay to make any large relation, for as much as they are obvious enough in our Common Chronicles, but will onely point at them, in brief. He was Lieutenant generall in that expedition for Scotland in 1 E. 6. when the Scots were overthrown at Bush, where he made many Knights: and indeed the principall person for military skill and prowess, upon whom the management of that Warr rested. In 3 E. 6. he commanded the Forces that were sent against Ket and his fellow Rebels in Staff. of which he slew about 5000. took Ket himself, and settled all in quiet again. In 4 E. 6. he was made Lord Steward of the Kings household: and being now elated with these great successes, his ambitious mind had no bound, for it mattered not whom he ruin'd, so it tended, in his own opinion, to the ends he aimed at. First, therefore he rayse^d discontents betwixt the Protector, and the Lord Thomas Seymour his brother, whereby soon after the said Lord Seymour became attainted by Parliament, upon pretence that he had conspired his brothers death, and so lost his head.

Then did he put the Protector upon making alteration both in State and Religion, whereupon some of the Bishops that opposed it were committed to prison. What vast summs did he make a shift to pocket by despoiling the Church of her Chalice, Crosses, and an infinite number of consecrated vessels, with the like, both silver and gold; as also by rich Copes and other vestments, under colour of bringing them into the Kings Wardrobe? for he it was that led the Protector on to those courses, as 'tis well known: as also by the lands given to maintain Lamps, and Lights, and for other pious uses. Which doings, with the ruine of the Cloister and Charnell at Pauls, the Church in the Strand, and two Bishops houses there, besides the goodly Church of S. Johns neer Smithfield, that were pulled down to build Somerset House, brought upon the Protector no little hatred, and so hastned his ruine, that being it which our Warwick aimed at; who, spying so fair an opportunity, wrought upon xviii. of the Privy Councill to joyn with him therein; yet such was his cunning, that he accomplished the work by others, being least seen in it himself: And because he could not win the Earls of Arundell, and Southampt. to be his Instruments for that purpose, he found means to discharge them from the Councill, and confine them to their houses; as also to fine the Earl of Arundell 1000 li. upon suggestion that he had taken away bolts, and locks at Westminster and given away the Kings stuff when he was Lord Chamberlain.

And now, that he might carry the greater sway, he did cause himself to be made Lord great Master of the Kings household; and having been a prime Actor

q Life of Actor ⁴ in the Peace made with France, he was by way of reward for that service made generall Warden^r of the North, having 1000. marks per ann. lands granted unto him, and C. Horlemen of the Kings Charge, Mr. Herbert, his chief Instrument, being made President of Wales, with a grant of 500 li. per ann. And yet all this seemed not enough; for within awhile after, viz. 20. April. 5 E. 6. was he made ^r Earl Marshall of England, and xi. Oct. following Duke ^u of Northumb. about which time he got his son Robert (afterwards made Earl of Leic. by Q. Eliz.) to be sworn ^w one of the six Gentlemen in ordinary; which Robert was (as saith my Author ^x) his fathers true heir, both in hatred towards persons of Nobility, and cunning to dissemble the same, as also for lust and crutchy a Monaster of the Court, and sure executioner of his hate: After whose entertainment into that place of so need-service, the King enjoy'd ^y his health but awhile, And being now inferior to none of the Nobility in titles of honour, and superior to all others in authority and power, he could not restrain his haughty hopes from aspiring to an absolute command; yet before he directly levelled at his marke, the Duke of Somerset was thought fit to be taken away, whose credit with the Common people, although it sufficed not to bear out any bad attempt of his own (as my Author ^z observeth) yet was it of force to cross the evill purposes of others; and therefore speeches were cast out, that he caused himself to be proclaimed King in divers Counties, and much more layd in charge against him by Northumberland's contrivance, who when he came to his tryall was one ^a of his Peers: upon which Triall, though they acquitted him of Treason, yet did they find him guilty of Felony; whereupon he had Judgment to be hang'd, never remembring to crave the benefit of his Clergy (which is by some observ'd to be a just Judgment of God upon him for having so much wronged the Church and all learning) and had his head ^b smitten off upon a scaffold on Tower-hill.

After this 'twas not long ere infirmities ^c seized upon the King, from whom Northumb. was ^d little absent, so ordering the matter, that, whilst he languish'd, Guilford Dudley, his 4. son did marry with the Lady Jane Grey, eldest daughter to Henry Duke of Suff. (by Frances daughter to Mary second sister to King H. 8.) and that a Patent was sealed for the said Lady Jane's succession to the Crown, for drawing whereof, in excluding his two sisters with fair pretences, the assistance ^e of the Lord chief Justice Mountagu and Secretary Cecill was used; which Letter's were subscribed ^f by all the Privy Councell, the greatest part both for number and power of the Nobility, the Kings learned Councell, and all the Judges at the Common Law, except Sir James Hales one of the Justices of the Common Pleas; some being guided with particular interest, for that they were posselt of so much Monastery and Chantry lands, which if Religion should be altered, through Qu. Maryes coming to the Crown, they might be in danger to loole; and others by fear of, or obligation to the Duke of Northumberland then so potent, and almost absolute in government of the State, that 'twas supposed he could make any title good, either by his authority or his sword. And having now thus designed to himself the power of a King, for no less would he have had, if the Lady

Jane had been Queen, he contrived to get the Lady Mary into his hands, causing ^g K. Edw. to write his Letters for her coming to him in his sickness; but she being made sensible of the device, when she was within half a days journey of London, directed her course another way; after which the King immediatly dyed: whereupon Northumb. causes the Lady Jane to be proclaimed Queen: but the tide of the peoples affections bending to Mary; the Kings eldest sister, she is likewise proclaimed, first by the Citizens of ^h Norwich, and afterwards in Buck. and Northampton-shires; neither was there want of numbers in severall parts that began to put themselves in Armes on her behalf.

So that 'twas no sitting still now; Northumberland therefore being Queen Jane's Champion, with a Commission under the great Seal marcheth out with 600. Horse to suppress any power that should appear for Queen Mary, having a promise from the Lords of more forces to be sent after him; but such a change did he perceive in the affections of his own Souldiers, whereof many forsook him, that to daub up the matter he returns to Cambridge, and there without either Herauld or Trumpet, accompanied with the Maior and Marquess of Northampton, proclaimes Queen Mary himself, in the Market-place, and in token of joy threw up his Cap. All which would not now secure him; for the very next day, the Earl of Arundell, coming thither from the Queen, arrested him of Treason; whence he was with his three sons, John, Ambrose, and Henry convey'd to the Tower of London, and from that place, ere long, to his arraignment; where being condemn'd for a Traitor he suffered death at Tower-hill the 22. of Aug. and was buried ⁱ in the Tower Church by John Cock then Lancaster-Herauld, who having been his old servant was willing to shew some respect to him dead, from whom living he had received so much favour; and therefore begg'd his Head onely of the Queen, that he might bury it in the Tower, upon which suit he had his wholly body also granted.

Our Historians that write of his death do say, that at his end he profest the Roman Religion; and I have heard, that for a witness of his Faith he vouch't Dr. Heath Archbishop of York (afterwards Lord Chancelour;) yet was he so much blinded by ambition, that apprehending the alteration of Religion to be the chief means whereby he might accomplish his worldly ends, he told Sir Anthony Brown (afterward Viscount Mountacute) when he moved him for restoring the Roman Religion, that albeitt he knew the same Religion to be true, yet seeing a new Religion was begun, Run Dog, run Devill, he would go forwards.

One thing have I further to observe of him, which is, that being arrived to such a pitch of honour and greatness, he was not content with those vast possessions that he had by the bounty of the K. and his own just acquisition; but finding John Lord Dudley (grandfather to the last Baron) to be a weak man, whereby he had exposed himself to some wants, and so became entangled within the Usurers bonds, made those money-merchants his Instruments to work him out of Dudley-Castle: which Usurers accordingly getting a mortgage of part of his lands, let in such room for the Duke to put in a foot, that he soon justled him out of his Castle and Barony; so that the poor Lord, being thus turn'd out of dore, and left to the Charity of his friends for a subsistence, spent the rest of his days days in making visits amongst them, with whom he usually stayed according as he found welcome, being commonly called the Lord Quondam; but so soon as Queen Mary had taken off the Dukes head, she bestowed the Castle of Dudley, and all the lands which belong'd to the quondam Lord upon Edward his son and heir, who had wedded Katherine Bridges, (daughter to Sir John Bridges Knight Lord Chandos;) one of her maids of Honour.

During the time that this our Earl of Warwick was so possessor of Dudley-Castle, it being a place that he thirsted after in regard of his name, and for the honourableness of the House and seat, from which he was desirous the world should believe he was descended; (for he had thrust into his titles ^h, Dux Northumbriae, Comes Warwici, Marescallus Angliae, Vicecomes L'isle, Baro de Somery, Basset & Tyase, Dominus de Dudley, prænobilis Ordinis Garterii miles, Magnus Magister & Seneschallus Hospitii regis) he made great repairs there, and built that stately fabrick within the walls thereof on the North part, which was called the New work, adorn'd the Gate-house tower with the Armes of Malpas, Someri, and the Lyon rampant by him assumed for Sutton's coat, fairly cut in large shields of stone, and fixt in the wall just over the Port cullice.

By Jane daughter¹ and heir to Sir Edward Guilford Knight (who had his Wardship, as I have said) he left issue^m 8. sons and 5. daughters; viz. Henry that dyed at Boleyn, John who had the title of Earl of Warwick in his fathers life-time (as commonly Dukes sons out of curtesie have of some Earldom whereof their fathers have the honour,) but dyed without issue, Ambrose Earl of Warwick by the favour of Queen Elizabeth (as I shall shew anon,) Robert created Earl of Leic. by the said Q. Guilford who suffered death in 1. M. as his father did, Henry slain at S. Quintines, and Charles that dyed a child. His daughters were these, Mary the wife of Sir Henry Sidney Knight of the Garter and Lord President of Wales, from whom the now Earl of Leic. is descended, Kath. wife to Henry Hastings Earl of Huntingdon; As also Margaret, Temperance, and another Katherine, who dyed young. In the Parliament held 1. M. was the attainderⁿ of this Duke and four of his sons confirmed; viz. John, called Earl of Warwick, Sir Ambrose, and Sir Guilford, both Knights and Henry Dudley Esquire.

Going on with the succession of these Earls, I come next to Sir Ambrose Dudley abovementioned, restoredⁿ in blood by Queen Mary. This Sir Ambrose had in 1. Eliz. a grant^p of the Mannour of Bibworth-Beauchamp in Com. Leic. to be held by the service of being Panther to the Kings & Queens of this Realm at their Coronations; which office and Mannour his father and other of his Ancestors, Earls of Warwick, had. In the second year of her reign he was made^q Master of the Ordinance. In the fourth viz. 26. Dec. Baron L'isle and Earl of Warwick, and the 6. of April following had a grant^r from the same Queen of the Castle, Mannour, and Burrough of Warwick, with divers other Lordships in this Shire, eschaetered to the Crown by his fathers attainder, in which year she made him her Lieutenant^s generall in Normandy, and during the time of his service there caused him to be chosen^t Knight of the Garter. In 12. of her reign, this E. with Edward Lord Clinton were^w made Lieutenants Generall of her Majesties forces in the North parts. In 13. he was constituted^u chief Butler of England, and in 15. sworn^v of her Privy-Councell. He had 3. wives; viz. Anne^w daughter and coheir to Will. Whorwood esq. Attorney generall to King H. 8. Eliz. daughter of Sir Gilbert Talboys Knight, sister and sole heir of George Lord Talboys, and Anne^x daughter to Francis Earl of Bedford; but departed this life without issue 21. Febr. Anno 1589. (32. Eliz.) at Bedford-house in the suburbs of London, and was buried in that beautifull Chapell here at Warwick, called our Lady Chapell adjoyning to the Collegiat Church, where his Monument is yet to be seen.

The next that had this title of Earl, was Robert Lord Rich. (grandchild to Richard created^z Lord Rich. of Leeze in Essex 17. Febr. 1. E. 6. and made^a Chancelour of England 26. Oct. following,) which family doe derive their descent from Richard Richone of the Shiriffs^b of London, An. 1441 20 H. 6. This Robert, created^c Earl of Warwick 5. Aug. 16. Jac. had^d two wives, viz. Penelope daughter to Robert Devereux Earl of Essex, and Frances daughter to Sir Christopher Wray Lord Chief Justice of the Kings Bench in Q. Elizabeths time, but widow to Sir George St. Paul of Snarfford in Com. Line. Knight and Baronet. By the first whereof he had issue^e Robert Lord Rich. his son and heir, Sir Henry Rich Knight of the Bath, and Capt. of the Guard; afterwards created^f Baron of Kenilington & Earl^g of Holland by King James, and chosen Knight of the Garter; Lettice his eldest daughter^h first married to Sir George Cary of Cokington in Com. Devon and after to Sir Arthur Lake Knight. And Essex, the secondⁱ, to Sir Thomas Cheek of Wiggo in Essex: which Earl dyed at^k Warwick-House in Holburne 24. Martii An. 1618. (15. Jac.) and was buried^l at Felstede in Essex where his Ancestors do lye. To whom succeeded in this Honour Robert his eldest son, who wedded Frances daughter and heir to Sir William Newport (alias Hutton) Knight, by whom he hath issue three Sons, scil. Robert, Charles, and Henry; and three daughters, Anne, Luce, and Frances.

Having thus finisht my discourse of the Earles, I shall now proceed with the town of Warwick it self; whereof, as to its first building by Kymbeline a King of the Britans, and all other passages relating thereto, during the Saxons time, I have already in my Introduction, and Story of those Earles, said as much as I can. In the Conquerors time it was a Borough, id est^m habitaculum seu locus munitus, and containedⁿ CCxi. houses, whereof Cxxx. were possessor^o by the King, Cxii. by these his Barons whose names, with the particular number held by each of them I have here added, viz.

All which were belonging to the lands they held in this County, and apprized with them; and the residue, being xix. by so many Burgeses; which Burgeses enjoy'd them with Soc and Sac, and all Customes as they did in Edward the Confessors days. In the time of the said King Edward the Shrivality of this County, with the Borough of Warwick and all the Kings Mannours in the Shire, answered lxxv li. in money and xxxvi. Sextars of honey, or xxiv li. and viii s. in lieu thereof: but at the time of the generall Survey they were rated at Cxlv li. in weight (in the ferm of the Kings Mannours;) xxiii li. for the custome of Dogs, xx s. for a Sumpster horse, i li. for a Hawk, and C s. to the Queen for a Fine: Besides this they payd also xxiv Sextars of Honey, of the greater measure, and the Borough vi. Sextars; viz. xv d. a Sextar, whereof the Earl of Mellent had vi. Sextars and v. s. The custome of this Borough then was (as by the same Survey appears) that when ever the King went in person in any expedition by land, x. Burgeses thereof attended him in stead of all the rest; And if he that was warned to give such his attendance did not go, he should pay unto the King C s. but if the King did go by Sea against his enemies, the whole Borough was to send him in four Bussueins (i. e. Mariners) or 4 lib. in money.

That it was by the Conquerour granted to Henry de Newburgh, upon his advancement to the Earldom of Warwick, is manifest enough, though the particular Charter, if he had any whereby it was so given, appears not: for I finde that the same Henry conferred^p the tenth of the Toll thereof upon William one of his Priests; as also that Earl Roger, son to the said Henry, for the health of his soul, gave^q likewise iv li. x s. of his Rent out of it unto one John a Priest. And by the Inquis.^r taken after the death of Guy de Beauchamp Earl of Warwick 9 E. 2. it appears, that he held the same, with the Suburbs and Castle, of the King in Capite, per servitium Comitatus, which (no doubt) was the service whereby K. Will. granted it unto the before-specified Henry the first Earl of the Norman line. In 16. H. 2. it answered v. marks for^t Pleas concealed. In 31 H. 3. upon selling divers Mannours (part of the Earldom of Warwick) upon John de Pleffets for life, who had married Margerie the sister and heir to Thomas the last Earl, the Mannour^u (for by that name it is termed) was one. Which John de Pleffets (being Earl) by his Charter^v bearing date the Friday next after the Feast of S. Mathew the Apostle in 45 H. 3. granted to the Burgeses of this place a Fair here for 3. days, with immunity, that all comers thereto should be quit of Toll for six years; and if any man did commit an offence within the compais of the said Fair to be amerced^w by the said Earl's Bayliff and xii. lawfull Burgeses; And in case any stranger, repairing thither at such time, should set up a Stall of xii. foot upon the bare ground, to pay vi d. for the same; howbeit the Inhabitants to erect Stalls at their pleasure.

In 4 E. 1. it was certified^x, that there was a piece of ground, lying in the Suburbs of this Borough, held of the K. by the service of four Horschoos for the Ks.

Courser, when he came to his Mannour of Stoneley; which piece of ground the Prior of Atheby then held. And in 7 E. 1. it appears^y, that Will. de Beauchamp then Earl of Warwick, held the before-specified Borough of the K. in Capite, and that he had here a yearly Fair lasting 8. days before the Feast of St. Peter ad Vincula, and 8. days after; as also a Mercate every week upon the Wednesday, and . . . valued at xxiii li. per an. And moreover a Pillory and Tumbrell, with a Court upon the Munday every week, wherein Duell^z for felony might be waged, the profits of which Court were then valued at x. Marks. Which Earl in 13 E. 1. being questioned^a by what authority he claimed to have a Gallows with Assize of Bread and Beere in this place, pleaded Prescription, whereupon the same was allowed; And in 18 E. 1. obtained the Kings Charter^b bearing date 25. Aug. for himself and his heirs, to have another Fair here yearly to last for xv. days; viz. the Even, Day, and Morrow after the Feast of the Apostles S. Peter & Paul and xii. days following. About the later end of whose reign the Pavement of this town was first begun, and so much of its Walls as now appear; towards the support of which charge Guy de Beauchamp, the then Earl, procured a^c Patent for the receiving of a certain Toll upon all vendible commodities that should be brought hither to sell for the space of seven years; viz. for every quarter of corn a half peny, for every Horse, Mare, Oxe, and Cow a half-peny; for every hide of Horse, Mare, Oxe, or Cow, tan'd or not tan'd a farthing; and so of all other things more or less, which for brevity I omit.

It seems that this work of Walling and Paving was not perfected according to their mindes within the compasse of that time so limited; for I finde that in 8. E. 2. the same Earle had another Patent^d for receiving of certain proportions of Toll by the space of three years longer, towards the same charge: Neither did those three years accomplish what they had an intent to do; for in 6. E. 3. Thom. d. Beauchamp, the then Earle, got a third Pat.^e for taking of Toll to the like purposes, by the space of 7. years: which Thom. in 24. E. 3. had a Charter^f of Free-warren granted to him in all his demesne lands here: Howbeit, besides the Toll taken for sustaining the charges before specified, the Earls, it seems, successively, had another proportion upon certain vendible commodities, which, being apprehended over-burthenome by Merchants & Tradesmen, who brought their wares hither, occasioned them to forsake the Mercate, and carry their commodities to other places, whereby the Inhabitants of this place had much prejudice: the said Earle therefore, bearing a great respect to their weal and advantage, at the request^g of the Lady Katherine his Countesse, and for the health of his Soul, as also the Souls of his Ancestors, by his special Charter^h bearing date on the Feast day of the Circumcision of our Lord 32. E. 3. freed them, for the future, from any manner of Toll, Terrage, or Stallage, due to him, either by long prescription, or any grant from the Kings of this Realm unto him, or his Ancestors.

The next thing that in order of time I finde memorable, is, that in 48. E. 3. the Inhabitants of this Town, for the repair of the great Bridge here over Avon, had a Pat.ⁱ to take Custom of all vendible Commodities that should passe over it into Warwick for the space of 3. years; viz. of every Horleload

Hors-load of Corn a farthing, of every Cart-load as much; of every Horse, Mare, Oxe, or Cow a farthing, &c. with a certain rate likewise upon all other things: And at the end of the said three years had they another Patent^k for continuing the like imposition for three yeares more: yet all this would not do; for after those 3. years were ended, they had the same renewed^l for three years longer. After which, viz. in 1.H.5. the Feast at Michaelmasse being found inconvenient, was by a new Charter^m changed to the Even, Day, and morrow after the Feast of St. Bartholmeu the Apostle.

That this, being an eminent Borough, sent usually two Burgesses to the Parl. as anciently as any other did, I am induced to believe, in regard I find, that in 28.E.1. the Major and Bailiffs of Warwick (for by that name it seems they were then called) had command to allow unto Will. de Stodelley, and Philip le Roux reasonable expences for their service in the Parl. held at Westm. that year. Howbeit, after that time (scil. 1.E.3. the Ks. Mindates are to the Bayliffs for making such allowance of the Burgesses expences, without any mention of Major. But when it was that the principal Magistrate here, had first the title of Major, I am not certain, neither how long it continued; yet in 7.E.1. (which was xxi. years before the date above-mentioned) he had^o so, one Thomas Payn bearing that Office. From which time do I finde little memorable relating to this Borough, till 37. H. 8. that the K. by his Pat.^p bearing date 15. May, granted to the Inhabitants thereof, by the name of Burgesses, the Rectories of the Churches of S. Mary and S. Nich. belonging to the Collegiat Church of our Lady here; as also the Rectories of Chadley in Com. Wigorn. & Bibbroke in this County, with the advowsons of all the Vicaridges; And likewise one Mess. in Cannon-row within this Town of Warw. the value of all wch then extended to Lviii. lxxiii. s. iiii. d. per ann. to have and to hold to them and their Successors for ever, by the service of the xx. part of a Knights Fee, and the Rent of vi. li. xiii. s. iiii. d. per ann. As also paying to the Vicar of St. Maries Church, for the time being, xx. li. per ann. and to the School-master of the Kings School there x. li. per ann.

But shortly after, viz. in 1. & 2. Ph. & M. was it made a Corporation, the inhabitants being then incorporated by the name of a Bayliffe and Burgesses; which, as the Charter expresses, should from thenceforth be one Commonalty, and one body Corporate in re, facto, & nomine, and have perpetual succession, a common Seal and xii. Assistants to the Bayliffe, called principales Burgesses, with power to make Laws and Ordinances for the better benefit of the Borough: As also to have a Recorder, Serjeant at Mace, and Clerk of the Mercate, and to elect and choose a new Bayliff, Burgess and Recorder. And moreover, that the Bayliff & Recorder should be Justices of the Peace within the same Borough, and no other Justices to intermeddle there: As also the House called the Court-house, to be a common Hall and House for the keeping of all their Courts, Pleadings &c. whatsoever there to be handled. And likewise another house, situate in the Market-place of this Borough, vulgarly called the Booth-hall, to be a publick and common Hall, or House for the selling of wares therein on the Market-day every week. Whereunto King James, by a new Charter made unto them, and bearing date 10. Martii 10. Jac. added, that the two ancientest Burgesses of this Borough, for the time being, should also be Justices of the Peace, within the precincts thereof, together with the said Bayliffe and Recorder; and the said Bayliffe, or one of those senior Burgesses, to be of the Quorum.

Having thus done with the particulars, I now come to such other remarkable passages, as do relate in a general manner to this Town. In 36. H. 3. there being a great meeting appointed here by divers eminent persons, for exercising themselves in martial Tourneaments, and other feats of Arms; the King apprehending, (as it seems) the danger that might grow by permitting such a concourse of people armed and accoutred in that manner, directed his Letters Patent^r to the Priors of Kenilworth & S. Sepulchers here in Warwick, commanding them to prohibit their meeting, either here, or at any other place within the Realm, upon pain of forfeiting all their Lands which they held of the K. And in 50.H. 3. when the King had prepared for the siege of Kenilworth-Castle (whereof I have already spoke) he made the general Rendezvous^t for his whole Army here, and hence marching thitherward the morrow after Midsummer day, fixt down his Tents, and begirt it round. After this, viz. in 57. H. 3. divers of the Nobility and others, having again appointed^u to meet here, under colour of exercising themselves at Jufts and Tourneaments, were especially prohibited so to do, and to forbear any concourse in that kinde elsewhere within the Realm, upon penalty of seizing all their Lands and possessions, the Prior of Kenilworth having thereupon strict command^v to repair hither, and to publish the Kings Letters Pat. for that purpose. And lastly in 7. E. 1. a great number of the English Nobles, and other persons of note from foreign parts, had a meeting^w here, called the Round Table, Sir Roger Mortimer being the chief of them; touching which matter I have already spoke in Kenilworth, in regard that there they exercised themselves at that time in martial feats; but it seems that most of them lodg'd at this place in respect of proper accommodations.

Having now dispatch'd what concerns the Town in general, I come to the particular places within the precincts thereof, which are most observable; and first to the Castle. Whether I may attribute it's original to Kimbelin the Brittish King, who is said to have been the first builder here, or to the Romans that had a strong Hold at this place (by reason whereof they called it Presidium, as I have else where shewed) I cannot well determine: If therefore to do so be too great a presumption, to refer the foundation thereof to the renowned Lady Ethelstede, daughter to K. Alfred, and Lady of the Mercians, I am sure will not, in regard it appears, that she, in the year DCCCCxv. (scil. in the 16. year of K. Edw. the elder) caused the Dungeon to be made, which was a strong Tower, or Platform upon a large and high mount of earth, artificially raised (such being usually placed towards the side of a Castle or Fort, which is least defensible) the substance whereof is yet to be seen.

In those dayes (in the Saxons time I mean) were very few^y such defensible places, as we now call Castles, that being a French^z name; so that though the English were^a a bold and warlike people, yet for want of the like strong Holds, were they much the lesse able to resist their Enemies: which defect gave great advantage to the Norman Conqueror, after his victory at Bastings; whereof he was so sensible, that he neglected^b not to raise store of such Forts throughout the whole Realm, as I have elsewhere observed, amongst which this ^c at Warwick was not the least, there being 4. houses, that belong'd to the Monks of Cobentre, walled for his enlargement thereof: For effecting therefore of this work was Turchill de Warwick (of whom I have spoke in my story of the Earls,) especially imployed^e by K. William; howbeit, after it became perfected, he would not trust him with the custody thereof, but committed^f it to Henry de Newburgh, whom he advanced to the Earldom, as I have already shewed.

There was heretofore a Church within the Precincts of this Castle, dedicated to the honour of All Saints, and of no lesse antiquity than the Britains time, as Rous affirmeth; and therefore, if it were at first founded therein, then doth it plainly shew that the Castle was built before the Romans made this place a Garrison; for it is evident (from what I have already said) that S. Dubritius, in those dayes making Warwick his Episcopal seat, had his residence there; but if by any enlargement of the Castle it came afterwards to be encompass't with it's Walls, it alters the case. This Church had divers customs and privileges belonging to it, as appears by K. H. 1. Charter dated at Woodstoke, whereby he confirmed them; as also Judicia Ferri & Aquæ, id est fire and water Ordeal, in as ample manner as it had wont to have them in Edw. the Conf. time, & afterwards: but in the said K. H. 1. time, it became united to the Collegiate Church of our Lady, founded by Roger Earle of Warwick, as when I come to speak thereof shall be shewed.

Out of this Castle, towards the later end of King Steph. reign, upon the arrival of Henry Duke of Normandy, did Gundred, the then Countesse of Warwick, turn^h out the Kings Souldiers, and deliveredⁱ it up to the said Duke, who was shortly after King of Engl. by the name of H. 2. After which, viz. in 19. H. 2. upon the Rebellion of young Henry (whom his father had caused to be Crowned) it was garrison'd^k by the K. at which time the Sheriffe of this Shire, scil. Bertram de Verdoun, accounted^l vi. li. xiii. s. iiii. d. for 20. quarters of Bread-Corn; xx. s. for 20. quarters of Malt; C. s. for 50. Biefs salted up; xxx. s. for 90. Cheeses, and xx. s. for Salt then laid in for the victualling thereof: And the next ensuing year did the same Sheriffe account^m xxx. li. x. s. viii. d. paid to the Souldiers therein; as also v. li. vii. s. xi. d. for repairs: And inⁿ 21. H. 2. xiiii. l. xv. s. v. d. more for the Souldiers wages. But I do not finde it any longer garrison'd in that Kings time: howbeit, in 7. Joh. the then Sheriffe, sc. Hugh de Chancumbe accounted^o xxv. l. vi. s. for the ward thereof: which King had great affiance in the fidelity of Thomas Basset of Bedingdon in Com. Oxon. for he not onely granted^p to him the wardship and marriage of Henry Son and Heir to Waleran Earle of Warwick, but trusted him with the custody of this Castle, the same Sheriffe having command^q to deliver it up to him.

After this the like custody thereof was committed to Hugh de Nevil; but in 18. Joh. the said Hugh had command^r to deliver it unto Henry the then Earle of Warwick, and the before specified T. Basset. And of what great regard it was in those times may be discerned by the Kings precept^s to the Archb. of York and Will. de Cantilupe, for requiring good security of Margery sifter and heir to Thomas, then E. of Warwick, that she should not take to husband any person whatsoever in whom the said King could not repose trust as in his own self; the chief reason being there given in these words, eo quod Castrum habet ingentis fortitudinis, & situm versus partes Marchie. But in 48. H. 3. when Will. Mauduit the then Earle of Warw. with his Countesse, were surprized^t here by a treacherous practise of the Rebels that then held Kensworth-Castle (as I have elsewhere declared) the Walls hereof were thrown down by those conspirators, lest they of the Royal party should have made any advantage to themselves by possessing it.

Upon the extent^u of the Lands of Guy de Beauchamp Earle of Warw. taken after his death in 9. E. 2. the Ditches and Courts belonging to this Castle, were valued at vi. s. viii. d. per ann. and the Garden adjoyning thereto, with another Garden called the Vineyard, as much. Shortly after which, sc. 14. E. 2. was Will. de Sutton constituted^v Constable thereof, in regard of the minority of Thomas Son and Heir to the deceased Earle, command^x being given to Walter de Beauchamp, the then Constable of it, to deliver it up accordingly: But this Will. de Sutton held not that Office long; for the next year following I finde^y it in the Sheriffs custody; as also that one Thomas Blaucfront, and certain others, by Force and Arms entred^z it, and turning him out, kept possession thereof; whereupon complaint being made to the King, he immediately directed his precept^a to the said Sheriffe, to take along with him John Peche (a great man in this County, as in Hampton in Arden shall be shewed) or any other of the Kings loyal subjects, and requiring the delivery thereof, to commit those Malefactors, that so held it, to prison; which being accordingly perform'd, the said John Peche was made Governour^b of it: but in that trust he continued not long; for in 20. E. 2. Thomas le Blount had the charge^c thereof granted to him; and in^d 1. E. 3. Rog. de Mortimer of Wigmore, together with the rest of the E. of Warwick's Lands during his minority.

After this; sc. in 10. E. 3. John the Son and Heir to Rob. le Purser of Warwick, (a servant to Th. Beauchamp the then Earle) granted^e unto the said Earle a Chantery, founded by the said Rob. his father, in the Church of St. Nicholas; here in Warwick, for one Priest to sing Masse in this Castle, for the said Earle and his Heirs for ever. Which Earle erected^f anew the outer wall of the Castle with divers Towers; but the great Tower at the North-East corner thereof, called Cupe's Tower, the walls whereof are x. foot thick, was built^g by Thomas Earle of Warwick, son to the last Earle, about the 17. of K. R. 2. reign; upon whose banishment in 20. R. 2. (of which I have elsewhere spoke) the K. granted^h the custody thereof to John de Clinton, sc. 3. Aug. the same year; but the 28. of Sept. following, he gaveⁱ it with a great part of the said Earls possessions to Tho. Holland, Earle of Bent, and the Heirs male of his body: howbeit, in 1. H. 4. the said Earle reposselt it again, as I have also elsewhere shewed; nor do I finde, that from this time till Eam. 4. reign it was out of the possession of the successive Earles: but then, upon the death of George D. of Clarence it being seized into the Kings hands, John Hugford Esq; by reason of the minority of Edw. Plantagenet, Son and Heir to the said D. was constituted^k Constable thereof;

And in 2. R. 3. Humsfrey Beausfo, his Son in Law, became joyn'd¹ with him in that charge.

From which time it continued in the Crown a great while; and in 17. H. 7. Edm. Belknap, Esquire of the body to the K. was made Constable^m thereof, which Office K. H. 8. in 1. of his reign confirm'dⁿ to him. But in 1. E. 6. upon the advancement of John Dudley to the Earldom of Warw. he had a grant^o of it, and divers lands which had belong'd to the former Earls: All which, upon his attainder in 1. M. (whereof I have elsewhere spoke) eschaetred to the Crown: Howbeit, by the speciall favour of Q. Eliz. unto Ambrose one of the sons to the said John, whom she created Earle of Warwick, was it bestow'd^p upon him and the Heirs of his body, in 4. of her reign: but he dying without issue (as I have formerly observed) it came again to the Crown, and there rested till King James, 9. July in the second year of his Reign, out of the great respect that he bore unto Sir Fonk Grevill Knight, (whom he afterwards advanc'd to the Dignity of a Baron, as in Beauchamps-Court I shall shew) bestow'd^q it on him in Fee: at which time it was a very ruinous thing, the strongest and securest parts thereof being onely made use of for the common Goal of the County; but he bestowing more then 20000. l. cost, (as I have heard) in repairing and adorning it, made it a place not onely of great strength, but extraordinary delight, with most pleasant Gardens, Walks, and Thickets, such as this part of England can hardly paralell, so that now it is the most Princely seat that is within these mid-land parts of the Realm.

Here is to be seen a large two handed Sword, with a Helmet, and certain Plate-Armour for Horse service; which, as the tradition is, were part of the accoutrements sometime belonging to the famous Guy; but I rather think that they are of a much later time: yet I finde that in 1. H. 8. the Sword having that repute, the King granted^r the custody thereof to Will. Hoggeson, one of the Yeomen of his Buttry, or his sufficient Deputy, with the Fee of ii. d. per diem for that service.

Near unto the Castle, towards the North-East, stands a place fenced with large and strong Walls of stone, still called the Vineyard; for so it was long since, as it seems, allowance^t of wages having been given to certain women for gathering of Grapes there during the space of five dayes in 3. H. 4.

The next place of note within the precincts of Warwick is the Church of our Lady. This in the Conq. time had^u 1. hide of Land, lying in Milton, belonging thereto, valued at x. s. which it seems, was given to it by Turchill de Warwick; for by the Survey then made it was certified to be held of him. The design for making of it Collegiate, id est consisting of a Dean and secular Canons, and uniting the Priests belonging to the Church of All Saints, which stood within the Castle, unto those here, was originally laid by Henry de Newburgh, the first Earle of Warwick of the Norman line, who gave^v the Church of Compton-(Murdak) for a Prebend to the maintenance of one Canon therein: But the work being not effected by him, Roger his Son, and Successor in the Earldom did^w in the year MCxxiii. 23. H. 1. consummate it, with the assent, and at the request of the Clerks of the before specified Churches so united, and of S. Bishop of Worcester, for the health of the Soul of K. Will. the Conq. Q. Maud his consort, K. Will.

Rufus, and for the future advantage of the Soul of K. H. 1. Q. Maud his wife, and their Children: As also for the Soul of Roger de Belmund and Aelina his wife, and of Earle Henry, father to the before specified Earle Roger, Robert Earle of Mellent, and all the faithfull deceased; to the end that all the said Clerks might serve God together Canonically night and day in the said Church of our Lady: Granting unto them for their necessary sustentance the Church of S. Nicholas, the Church of S. Lawrence with x. Acres of Land and a House, the Church of S. Mich. with 5. Acres of Land and three houses, the Churches of S. Sepulcher and S. Helen, with two parts of the Tithes of Widsozd, scil. of the Inclosure. In Wellesburn 2. parts of the Tith of the inclosed grounds, and Chirchset; so also in Werdwick; with 2. Carucats of Land lying near Long-bridge. In Cherlecote half a hide of Land, with the Tyth of the demesnes and of the 2. Mills there. In Fulboc half a hide, with 2. parts of the Tyth of the demesne, & 2. parts of the Tyth of the Mill belonging to that Village. In Sintene-felt 1. hide, with 2. parts of the Tyth of the Inclosure. In Claverdon 2. parts of the Tyths of the Inclosure, as also the Paunage of the whole Wood belonging to that Town. In Shitburn half a hide, with 2. parts of the Tyth of the Inclosure. In Milberton half a hide, vvith all the Tyth of the Earle of Warwick's Fee. In Cotes all the Tythe, as well in the Mills, as other things, living & dead; and likewise of two Carucates of Land lying in Stochull, and Modelaw. In Comton 2. parts of the Tyth of the Inclosure. In Walton-Theoderic all the Tyth of the demesne, and of one Mill. In Walton-Spilibert 2. parts of the Tythes of the Inclosure, as also of the 2. Mills; and in the Meadow adjoining to Bereford vi. Acres. Within and without the Town of Warw. lx. houses, In Milton all the Tyth, and all the third part of the demesne; as also the Land of one Neatheard, and 4. ----- Land. And moreover, the Church of Grettham, with the Church of S. John and 6. Acres of Land; the Church of S. Peter with one house. The Church of Bubboke, and all the Tyth of that Village, with all that belongeth thereto; and the Tythe of the Rent of the Burrough of Warw. In Hethe 1. Hide. In Caldecote half a Hide: as also the Schools of Warw. together with judgement by Fire, Water, and Battail; and lastly C. Acres of land in Cotes, with the land of Wimund the Priest. All which possessions he the said E. Roger ratified unto them by his Charter sealed, granting, that they might have a Dean and Chapter, and a fraternal Covent in the said Church, and to enjoy the premisses as freely, and honorably, as the Churches of Lincoln, Salisbury, or Exet did theirs.

And besides this did the said Earle Roger give^w to the Canons of this his Collegiate Church, the Chapel of S. James, built over the West-gate in Warwick; with a croft thereto belonging, lying without the Town ditch, and extending in length from the said Chapel as far as S. John's Chapel, on the other side the way. And to these grants did Robert de Curli add his confirmation^x of the Church of Budeboke, acknowledging it to be a Chapel belonging to the said mother Church of our Lady; to which Church of Budeboke did then belong lx. Acres of Inclosure on the one side of the Town, and as many on the other, and a House for the Priests, with certain crofts anciently belonging to that Church; as also the whole Tythes of Budbrooke, Hamton, Pozton, and Grebe; and of the Mill and Pool belonging to the Town; provided that the said Canons did place a Vicar there, with the consent of him the said Robert and his Heirs: All which were confirmed ^y by Simon Bishop of Worcester, who in the third year of his Episcopacy translated ^z the Priests out of the said Church of All Saints accordingly (an. sc. 1128.)

Canonicus Secularis.

Little can I say touching this sort of Canons, for as much as they were no other than Priests, and called Secular, in regard they performed the Offices of such in serving the world, by administering to lay people upon all occasions, whereas those as lived Regularly did not so do; Neither had they their diet, or lodging in common like the Monks and Regular Canons, but habitations apart, and their maintenance several, by distinct shares, called Prebendaries, assigned unto them, as those in our Collegiate and Cathedral Churches even till these times used to have; their habite not differing, as by this here represented from an ancient Monumental Portraiture in brass, still remaining upon a Marble in the body of this Church, may be seen. Of which kinde were those that before King Edgar's time had got footing † in divers of our Monasteries; but, through the advice of St. Dunstan, and power of that devout Monarch, were ejected, * and the Monks again restored, consonant to the minds of their pious founders.

Much ado there was betwixt the Dean and Canons of this Church, and the Prior of S. Sepulchers in Warwick, the said Prior making claim † to a right in this Parish; but these differences were at length determined ‡ by Pope Adrian the 4. about the beginning of K.H. 2. reign, and the right therein adjudg'd to the said Dean & Canons; all which was afterwards confirm'd † by other Popes and Bishops. In 8.E. 3. T. de Beauchamp Earl of Warwick, out of the great respect he bore to this Colledge of Priests, gave † them the perpetual advowson of the Church of Billerton-Hercy in this County, which was appropriated † thereto for augmentation of their maintenance in An. 1341. 15. E. 3. But such was the regardlessness of the rights belonging to this Church by those that had to do in the government thereof, that in proceſse of time it received no small losse by the alienation of a great part of its possessions, till Will. Wirslesey B. of Worcester (afterwards Archb. of Canterbury) moved thereto by the said Earle, restored † unto it the greatest part of those ancient rights which before it had: howbeit, by that Instrument it appears, † that whereas the Priory of S. Sepulchers in Warwick was founded where the Churches of S. Sepulchers and S. Helens stood; and † that the Church of Gretham in Rutland had been very anciently appropriated to the said Priory of S. Sepulchers, in consideration whereof the Canons of that House perpetually found at their charge one Sub-Deacon to serve in the said Collegiate Church, there was an impossibility of restoring them thereto.

As also, † whereas the Churches of S. John, S. Michaell, S. Laurence, S. Peter, and S. James, all standing within the Precincts of this Town, whereof the most waned Church-yards for Sepulture, and the rest were grown ruinous, there was no necessity at all of repairing them, forasmuch as this Collegiate Church had capacity sufficient to receive all the inhabitants coming thereto, and the Church-yard spacious enough for to bury their dead; that from thenceforth they should constantly come to this Church, there to make their Processions, and hear Divine service, as heretofore upon Sundays and Festivals, in acknowledgement of subjection (thereto, it being the mother Church) they had used to do; and have sepulture in the Church-yard there, in regard that by this Decree and Constitution all other places within the compass of this Town, except the Church & Churchyard of S. Nicholas, were thenceforth prohibited from having any Ecclesiastick burial in them: Which Decree and Constitution, whereby also several Pensions are assigned out of the revenues belonging to the Colledge, for the Canons-resident, differing in proportion from the non-resident, bears date at Hertlebury 24. Dec. An. 1367. 41. E. 3.

After this divers eminent persons became Benefactors thereto; viz. Sir Will. Beauchamp Knight, (a younger son to the before specified Earle) who in March 15. R. 2. gave † the advowson of the Church of Spellesbury in Worcestershire, for augmentation of their maintenance, to the intent that they should pray for the good estate of K. Ric. 2. Q. Anne his consort, and for their Souls after their departure out of this world; as also for the good estate of him the said Sir Will. and Dame Joane his wife, during this life, and for their Souls afterwards, together with the Souls of the said Kings Progenitors, his own Ancestors, and all the faithfull deceased: which Church was appropriated † thereto 18. Martii the same year. And in April following, Thomas B. then E. of Warw. (elder brother to the said Sir Will.) considering, † that this Coll. Church so founded by his noble Ancestors, was not sufficiently endowed, did for the good estate of the said K. and Q. of himself and the Lady Margaret his wife, Sir Will. Beauchamp his brother, and Dame Joane his wife; as also of all their children during this life, and for their Souls after their departures out of this world, together with the Souls of their Progenitors, Ancestors, and all the faithfull deceased, bestow † upon the said Dean and Canons, and their Successors, in further enlargement of their maintenance, half an Acre of Land in Haseleore, with the perpetual patronage of that Church; a quarter of an Acre of Land in Wolhamcote, with the advowson of the Church (both in this County;) and a quarter of an Acre of Land in Wytlesford in Cambridgeshire, with the advowson of that Church; which said Churches were appropriated accordingly; viz. † that of Wytlesford in Dec. following, that † of Haseleore in Oct. 18. R. 2. and that † of Wolhamcote in Nov. 19. R. 2.

And upon the Feast day of S. Michael 18. R. 2. did the before specified Sir Will. Beauchamp, then styled Lord Bergavenny, give † further to this Coll. Church, half an Acre of Land in Chadstep-Corbet in Com. Wigorn. with the advowson of the Church, to be appropriated thereunto, to pray for the good estate of himself and Dame Joane his wife; Tho. E. of Warwick, his brother, & Margaret his wife; as also for their Children during this life, and for their Souls after their departure hence; which Church was accordingly appropriated † in Octob. following. And notwithstanding all this, the said Earle, thinking their endowment too slender, by his Charter † bearing date 20. Sept. 19. R. 2. gave therunto his Mannour of Haseleore in this County: And not onely perfected † the work of that stately Quire, begun † by his Father (in the mid't whereof his said fathers, and mothers Monument doth stand) but built † anew the whole body of the Church from the ground, in the form it now appears, the timber employed therein being bought † of his brother in Allestey woods for that purpose; In which Quire there was at that time a statue of the famous Guy, but altered † in 19. R. 2. by one John Sutton a Carver, who did cut the Arms of the ancient Earls of Warwick upon it.

But as some, out of their devout affections for the

the advancement of Gods service were munificent Benefactors to this Collegiate Church, yet were there others as apt to detain its rights; for notwithstanding that Decree made by Will. Wutlesey Bishop of Worcester, before specified, the profits of the Churches of S. Nicholas, S. Peter, S. Laurence, and Budbroke, were yet withheld, under colour that the said restitution and confirmation did not in expresse words extend to the Successors of the then Dean and Canons to whom the same was granted; therefore in 22.R.2. the King gave a new License to them for their union and appropriation, which appropriation was accordingly made by Tideman de Winchcombe Bishop of Worcester, 7. Martii the same year. Amongst other the Benefactors to this Church Wal er Power was not the least; for I finde, that by his deed bearing date 4. Martii 2. H.4. to the intent that the Dean and Chapter and their Successors should there celebrate two Obits yearly for ever; viz. one for the Soul of Margaret his wife then deceased, and the other for his own Soul after his departure out of this world, he gave thereunto his Mannour of Hethcote in this County, with Proviso, that if they failed in the celebration of the said Obits, they should forfeit xl.s. to be levied by distresse upon that Mannour. Shortly after which did Will. de Peto, Esquire (of whom and his family I have spoke in Chesterton) release^k unto them (sc. 15. Apr. 6.H.4.) all his interest in the advouson of the Church of Wolthamcote before specified (for it was purchas't^l by T. Beauchamp Earle of Warwick, who gave it, of Sr. John de Peto Kt. father to this Will. in 38.E.3.) covenanting^m with them thereupon, that in case he departed this life within the County of Warw. they should cause his body to be brought thither, and interred in the said Coll. Church, in such a place as he did before direct; and celebrate his Anniversary on the day of his Obit, register his name in their Martyrologe, and pray for him his Ancestors and Heirs as Founders and Patrons of the said Church of Wolthamcote; as also to cause his grave to be covered with a Monumental stone, and his Arms cut thereupon, with an inscription declaring his death, according to his, or his Council's directions.

I will now proceed with its other Benefactors in order of time as I finde them; The first whereof was K.E.4. who, partly in consideration of an annuity of viiii.s. 1.d. ob. q. and of a portion of Tithe amounting to xxiii.s. per an. issuing out of Fulbroke in this County, which the said Coll. Church was possess of till John D. of Bedford inclosed that Lordship and made it a Park; And partly for that the said Dean and Canons had undertaken to solemnize perpetually, upon the 30. of Decemb. yearly one Obit in the said Church for the health of the Souls of the most excellent Prince Richard Duke of York, father to the said K. and Rich. Nevill E. of Salisbury deceased, did by his Letters Pat.ⁿ bearing date 16. Decemb. in the first year of his reign, grant unto them and their Successors a certain portion of inclosed ground, called Portbroke, parcel of that Lordship of Fulbroke, lying Northwards of the said Park, but not included therein. And about the 8. of Edm. 4. Rich. Nevill then Earle of Warwick and Anne his wife, daughter to Rich. Beauchamp Earle of Warwick, (but sister and Heir to Duke Henry her brother) gave^o them the Mannours of Bathkinton & Wolbardon in this County, with 3. Tenements and one Garden in Warwick, situate next to the Church-yard of this Coll. Church: which grant was (as I conceive) in accomplishment of the last Will of the said Rich. B. who ordained^p that for the increase of Divine service in this Church there should be lands, or advousons, amortized, to finde 4. Priests and two Clerks for ever, over and above the number that were there before (as in my story of the said Earle is shewed.)

To theie K.H.7. in 16. of his reign granted^q the place where a Church, called Cuckow-Church had heretofore stood, with the Church-yard (which was in Wedgnock-Park as I have already declared) and all the rights thereto belonging, together with xl.s. annuity, in exchange for the glebe antiently given thereto by the E. of Warwick.

Having thus made recital of whatsoever I have seen memorable in relation to its endowments, I shall here add a Catalogue^r of such Books as I finde did belong thereto in An.1407. 8.H.4. As also of the Reliques as they were inventoried in An.1455. 33.H.6.

I now come to that fatall Survey^a in 26. H. 8. the fore-runner of its dissolution; whereby I finde that the yearly revenues belonging thereto were then certified to be CCCxxiii.li. ii.s. iii.d.ob.

Out of which was allowed, ^a per ann. to the Dean for his stipend. 26.li.-13.s.-04.d.
 To John Watwood one of the Prebends, called S. Peters. 13-06-08
 To John Fisher another of the Prebends, called S. John Bapt. 13-06-08
 To David Vaughan another of the Prebends, called S. Laurence. 02-00-00
 To Thomas Leason another of the Prebends, called S. Michaels. 02-00-00
 To Robert Wythington another of the Prebends, called S. James. 02-00-00
 To Robert Hoole Curate of this Parish Church. 06-13-04
 To ten Priests which were Vicars, daily serving in the said Collegiate Church. 07-06-08 a piece.
 To six Choristers. 02-00-00 a piece.

The yearly Obits^x kept in this Church, for which also there were several allowances were these:

Of Thomas Beauchamp the father, and Thomas his son, both Earls of Warwick; Of Margaret Countesse of Warwick; (wife to the last Thomas) Of Ric. Beauchamp, E. of Warwick. Of Ric. Duke of York; Of Rich. Nevil Earle of Warwick; Of K. Henry 7. Of Walter Power, and of William Peito. As also of John Young, Raph Power, Thom. Rows, Will. Launder, John Allestre, and John Acreman; which last mentioned six, were Ecclesiastick persons, as it seems; Henry Grey, Marquesse Dorset, being then high^y Steward of the said Colledge, having an annuity of xl.s. per ann.

But this Collegiate Church (with many more) being dissolved in the Parliament of 37. H. 8. was the same year (inter alia) granted² out of the Crown, by Letters Pat. bearing date 15. May, to the inhabitants of Warwick, by the name of the Burgesles of Warwick, and their Successors.

Here was one onely Chantry, founded^a by Rob. Waldene of Warwick in 2. H. 4. for a Priest to sing Masse dayly, at the Altar of S. Anne, for the good^b estate of Henry 4. then K. of England, Margaret Countesse of Warwick, Richard, her Son, then E. of Warwick, and Eliz. his wife; and of him the said Robert and Elene his wife, during this life: as also for the Souls of Thomas Beauchamp, late Earle of Warwick, and of Alice sometime wife of the said Rob. Waldene; and likewise for the Souls of their Children, Ancestors, and all the faithfull deceased; for the maintenance of which Priest, he gave C. iii. s. iii. d. yearly Rent issuing out of divers messuages lying in Warwick, Oulton, Longbottle, Lee, Beresford, and Preston-Bagot, all in this County.

And here, before I proceed further with these Monumentall Inscriptions, I must not omit to point at the particular pious works of the same Thomas Oken; who, having been born in this Borough of very mean parentage, and exercising the trade of a Mercer, by Gods blessing upon his industry, purchased lands here, as also in Badley, Bentale, and Harbury, in this County, of good value; which by his deed, dated 1. Jan. 13 Eliz. he past unto certain Feoffees; by whom they were so settled, as that, out of the profits thence arising, there should be yearly payd towards the increase of the head School-masters wages xl sol. and as much to the under School-master; 4 li. to the poor of Warwick; viz. at Christmasts 40 s. and at Easter 40 s. For 4. Sermons every year 40 s. To six poor Almshouses that he appointed to be placed in three of his Houses for ever 24 s. a piece, with six black Gowns of Rugg or Cotton: Appointing, that the Collectors of the Rents issuing out of those lands should once every year give up their Accounts to the same Feoffees in the presence of the Bayliff and Burgesses of Warwick; and a Sermon to be preach'd upon that day, for which the Preacher to have vi s. viii d. and the Bayliff, with the rest, xx s. for a dinner. But, besides all this, by his last Will & Testament, bearing date 24. Nov. the year above-said, whereby he disposed his body to be buried neer St. Anne's Altar within this Church, and those portraitures in brasse of himself and his wife, with the Inscription, before inserted, to be made, did he give xxx li. to be distributed to the poor, by xii d. a piece. Ten pounds to 30. poor maydens to their marriages, viz. vi s. viii d. a piece; 100 li. to the Town of Warwick to buy land to enlarge their Common, wherewith they purchased a piece of ground called Michaell's piece: And to the Bayliff and Burgesses severall pieces of plate, which, ever since, have been transmitted from each Bayliff to his successour. To the Bayliff and Aldermen of Stratford, and their successours he also gave 40 li. to be set out to give honest Tradesmen within that Town; viz. 5 li. a man, for three or four years together at eight pence in the pound; whereof the one half to go to the poor; the other to the same Bayliff and his brethren to pay 3 s. 4 d. unto a Minister that shall preach unto them a Sermon, the rest they themselves to make merry with, and at the end of their mirth, give God thanks and say the Lords Prayer. The like bequest made he to the town of Banbury, and dyed 30. Julii Anno 1573. 15 Eliz.

NICHOLAS IFFELER

Borne at Ozenbrigg in the Province of Westphalia in Germany, as a travailing Pilgrim upon earth did leave his native Countrey, and made a free

Denizen in England, inhabited here within this Borough of Warwick, where using the mystery of a Glasier painfully, and walking in his vocation uprightly, God so blessed the increase of his goods and good name, that he was preferred to be one of the principall Burgesses of this Borough; who for a short time enjoying that place, shewing himself an example worthy of imitation in sincere Religion and charitable devotion, did give order for the erection of an Hospitall for the necessary and continuall relief of eight poor persons, and bestowed likewise another portion of his lands for the further benefit of this Borough. And then departing out of this earthly tabernacle unto the celestiall Hierusalem, bequeathed his soule to God, through his mercy, of him to be received, his body to the earth, here to be buried, and his good name to posterity, continually to be remembered; who lived and dyed the faithfull servant of Christ, upon the 14. day of January in the year of our Lord God 1591. of his age 80. Via sine devio, vita sine termino, est mihi Christus.

DC. XXXIX.

Divers other persons of note doe lye here interred, whose Monuments have been long since defaced, as the severall Marbles yet remaining, whereupon their Portraictures and Epitaphs in brasse were fixt, doe manifest. Of these, (as Leland testifieth) were William Berkswell Dean of this Collegiate Church, and one of the Executors to Richard Beauchamp Earl of Warwick, who saw the building of our Lady Chapell, and the structure of those buildings (at the East end of the Church-yard), called the Colledge, begun by the same Earl Richard, finished. As also Dean Alestre, who translated the body of Earl Richard into that Chapell; And Dean Haseley, sometime School-master to King Henry the 7. And moreover our heretofore eminent Antiquary John Rous, of whom I have spoke in Cup-Elise, who built a Library over the South porch of this Church, and dyed 14. Jan. Anno 1491. 6 H. 7.

And lastly, the no less famous, in his kinde, Thomas Cartwright, whom Mr. Cambden calls inter Puritanos antesignanus; and whom the Earl of Leicester, (who bore such a sway in those days,) thought it no small policy to court, his party in this Realme being so considerable; inso much as he made him Master of the Hospitall, then newly by him here founded.

But before I further proceed with my Monumentall matters in this Church, give me leave to digress a little in relating briefly the occasion that moved this Cartwright to broach those Tenets so much tending to the disturbance of the Churches peace, as from credible tradition I have heard.

Being of Trinity Colledge in Cambridge, where Doctor Whitgift was Master, he made suit to be one of the disputants before Queen Elizabeth at her entertainment in that University, and was admitted so to be; but missing of such applause and advancement which he thereupon expected, and apprehending that the Doctor had been his back-friend, he quitted the Colledge, and, going beyond Sea, wrote against him in a Schismaticall manner. Of which writings I shall say no more than what the learned Whitaker in few words expresth — Quem Cartwrightus (saith he, speaking of his second Reply) nuper emisit libellum, ejus magnam partem perlegi; ne vivam si quid unquam viderim dissolutius ac penè puerilius. Verborum satis ille quidem lautam, ac novam supellestem habet, rerum omnino nullam, quantum ego judicare possam. Deinde, non modò perversè de Principis, in rebus sacris atq; Ecclesiasticis autoritate sentit: Sed in Papistarum etiam castra transfugit, à quibus tamen videri vult odio capitali dissidere, verum ne in hac causa ferendus, & aliis etiam in partibus tela à Papistis mutuatur. Deniq; (ut de Ambrosio dixit Hieronymus) verbis ludit, planèq; indignus est qui à quopiam docto confutetur.

And I have been told, from good authority, that the reverend Bishop Andrew's observed, that this Cartwright was the first that in the Church of England began the way of praying ex tempore, before his Sermon (which some call by the spirit.)

From the body of the Church I next come to the Quire.

On the North side of this Quire, towards the upper end, lyeth interred William Parr Marquess of Northampton, as by his achievements, viz. coat of Armes, Sword, Shield, Helme and Crest, which I have seen there hanging, appeareth; but forasmuch as there is no Monumentall Inscription, I have here transcribed what Mr. Cambden, in his Annals of Q. Eliz. Anno 1571. hath said of him.

Supremum vita diem, hoc anno placide egit Gulielmus Parrus, Marchio Northamptonia, amantioribus studiis, musicis, amatoris, & cetera Aule jucunditatibus versatissimus; qui ab Henrico octavo primum ad dignitatem Baronis Parr de Kendalia, deinde, ad nuptias Annæ Bouchieræ, Comitissæ Essexiæ unicae heredis, & simul ad Comitissæ Essexiæ titulum, cum Rex ejus sororem duxisset; atque ab Edwardo sexto ad Marchionis Northamptoniæ stylum & honorem provectus. Sub Maria, quod pro Jana Greja Regina subornata arma sumpserit, Majestatis damnatus, ab eadem tamen mox condonatus, & ad patrimonium, ut postea ab Elizabetha ad honores restitutus. Liberos genuit nullos, sed Henricum Herbertum Pembrochiæ Comitem, ex altera sorore nepotem, reliquit heredem.

An Epitaph upon the death of Mrs Eliz. Chowne, who died the last day of August 1597.

*Here lyes Elizabeth twice happy wife
Of two good vertuous men blest from above
With both lo' without both, a godly life
Till seventy five she lived in perfect love,
Resting a widow eight and twenty yeares
Loving to see her dearest issue wed
Before her God in glory she appears
Her corps feed wormes, her soule by Christ is fed Anno ætatis suæ 75.*

Our Lady Chapell.

ON the South side, and adjoyning to the Quire of this Church, stands that stately and beautiful Chapell dedicated to the honour of the B. Virgin, the fabrick whercof was begun^e by the Executors of Richard Beauchamp Earl of Warwick (according to the appointment of his Will) in 21 H. 6. and perfected^e in 3 E. 4. together with that magnificent Tombe for the said Earl, inferior to none in England, except that of K. H. 7. in Westminster Abby; the charge of all which came to no leis than 2481 li.-04 s.-07 d. ob. as by the particular accompts appeareth: but to how vast a sum such a piece of worke would have amounted to in these days, may be easily gueſt by that great disproportion in the prizes of things now, from what they were then, the value^s of an Oxe being about that time xiii s. iv d. and of a quarter of bread-corne iii s. iv d.

That the beauty of this goodly Chapell and Monument, through the iniquity of later times, is now much impaired, all that have seen it may easily discern, and thereby gueſt at the glory wherein it once stood; to such therefore would there be no great need to say more thereof; but for the satisfaction of others I have here thought fit to insert a brief of the Covenants^h betwixt the said Executors, viz. Thomas Huggesford, Nich. Rodye, and Will. Berkswell, and the severall Artists that were employed in the most exquisite parts of its fabrick and ornaments, as also of the costly Tombe before specified, bearing date xiii. Junii 32 H. 6.

John Essex Marbler, Will. Austen Founder, and Thomas Stevyns Copper-Smyth, do covenant with the said Executors, that they shall make, forge, and worke in most finest wise and of the finest Latten, one large plate to be dressed and to lye on the overmost stone of the Tombe under the Image that shall lye on the same Tombe; and two narrow plates to go round about the stone. Also they shall make in like wise, and like Latten, an Hearse to be dressed and set upon the said stone, over the Image, to beare a covering to be ordeyned; the large plate, to be made of the finest and thickest Cullen plate, shall be in length viii. foot and in bredth iii. foot and one inch. Either of the said long plates for writing shall be in bredth to fill justly the casements provided therefore; the Hearse to be made in the comeliest wise, justly in length, bredth, thickness, and height thereof and of every part thereof, and in workmanship in all places and pieces such, and after an Hearse of timber which the Executors shall make for a pattern: and in ten panelles of this Hearse of Letters, the said workman shall set, in the most finest and fairest wise ten Scutcheons of Armes such as the Executors will devise. In the two long plates they shall write in Latine in fine manner all such Scripture of Declaration as the said Executors shall devise, that may be contained and comprehended in the plates; all the champes about the Letter to be abated and hatched curiously to set out the Letters. All the aforesaid large plates, and all the said two plates through all the over sides of them, and all the said Hearse of Latten, without and within, they shall repair and gild with the finest gold, as finely, and as well in all places through, as is or shall be any place of the aforesaid Image, which one Bartholmew Goldsmyth then had in gilding; All the said workmanship, in making, finishing, laying and fastning to be at the charge of the said workmen. And for the same they have in sterling money Cxxv li.

Will. Austen Citizen and Founder of London xiv. Martii 30 H. 6. covenanteth, &c. to cast, work, and perfectly to make, of the finest Latten to be gilded that may be found, xiv. Images embossed, of Lords and Ladyes in divers vestures, called Weepers, to stand in housings made about the Tombe, those Images to be made in bredth, length, & thickness, &c. to xiv. patterns made of timber. Also he shall make xviii. lesse Images of Angells, to stand in oſher housings, as shall be appointed by patterns, whereof ix. after one side, and ix. after another. Also he must make an Hearse to stand on the Tombe, above and about the principall Image that shall lye in the Tombe, according to a pattern; the stuffe and Workmanship to the repairing to be at the charge of the said Will. Austen. And the Executors shall pay for every Image that shall lye on the Tombe, of the weepers so made in Latten xiii s. iv d. And for every Image of Angells so made v s. And for every pound of Latten that shall be in the Hearse x d. And shall pay and bear the costs of the said Austen for setting the said Images and Herse.

The said Will. Austen. xi. Feb. 28 H. 6. doth covenant to cast and make an Image of a man armed, of fine Latten, garnished with certain ornaments, viz. with Sword and Dagger; with a Garter; with a Helme and Crest under his head, and at his feet a Bear musſed, and a Griffon, perfectly made of the finest Latten, according to patterns; all which to be brought to Warwick, and layd on the Tombe, at the perill of the said Austen; the said Executors paying for the Image, perfectly made and laid and all the ornaments, in good order, besides the cost of the said workmen to Warwick, and working there to lay the Image, and besides the cost of the carriages, all which are to be born by the said Executors, in totall xl li.

Bartholomew Lambespring Dutchman, and Goldsmyth of London 27. Maii 27 H. 6. covenanteth to repaire, whone, and pullish, and to make perfect to the gilding, an Image of Latten of a man armed that is in making, to lye over the Tombe, and all the apperell that belongeth thereunto, as Helme, Crest, Sword, &c. and Beasts; the said Executors paying therefore xiii li.

The said Bartholomew and Will. Austen xii. Martii 31 H. 6. do covenant to pullish and repaire xxxii. Images of Latten, lately made by the said Will. Austen for the Tombe, viz. xviii. Images of Angells, and xiv. Images of Mourners, ready to the gilding; the said Executors paying therefore xx li.

The said Bartholmew 6. Julii 30 H. 6. doth covenant to make xiv. Scutcheons of the finest Latten, to be set under xiv. Images of Lords and Ladyes, Weepers, about the Tombe; every Scutcheon to be made mee in length, bredth and thickness, to the place it shall stand in the Marble according to the patterns. These xiv. Scutcheons, and the Armes in them, the said Bartholmew shall make, repaire, grave, gild, enamil, and pullish as well as is possible; and

and the same Scutcheons shall set up, and pin have xl s. which in the totall comes to iv li. xiii s. fast, and shall bear the charge of all the stuff iv. d. thereof, the said Executors paying for every Scutcheon xv s. sterling, which in all amounteth to xli. x s.

The said Bartholomew xx. Julii 31 H. 6. doth covenant &c. to gild, pullish, and burnish xxxii. Images, whereof xiv. Mourners, and xviii. Angels to be set about the Tombe, and to make the visages and hands, and all other bares of all the said Images, in most quick and fair wise, and to save the gold as much as may be from and without spoiling, and to find all things saving gold; the said Executors to find all the gold that shall be occupied thereabout, and to pay him for his other charges and labours, either xl. li. or else so much as two honest and skilfull Goldsmiths shall say upon the view of the work, what the same, besides gold and his labour, is worth: and the Executors are to deliver money from time to time, as the work goeth forward, whereof they pay Li. li. viii s. iv d.

The said Bartholomew iii^o. Martii 32 H. 6. doth covenant to make clean, to gild, to burnish, and pullish the great Image of Latten, which shall lye upon the Tombe, with the Helme and Crest, the Bear and the Griffon, and all other the ornaments of Latten; and the said Bartholomew shall finde all manner of stuffe for the doing thereof, saving gold, and all workmanship at his charges, the said Executors providing gold, and giving to the said Bartholomew such sum and sums of money for his charges and workmanship as two honest and skilfull Goldsmiths, viewing the work, shall adjudge, whereof some of the money to be payd for the borde of the workmen, as the work shall go forward, whereof they pay xcv li. ii s. viii d.

John Bourde of Coxff. Castle in the County of Dorset Marbler 16. Maii. 35 H. 6. doth covenant to make a Tombe of Marble, to be set on the said Earles grave; the said Tombe to be made well, cleane, and sufficiently, of a good and fine Marble, as well coloured as may be had in England. The uppermost stone of the Tombe and the base thereof to contain in length ix. foot of the standard, in bredth iv. foot, and in thickness vii. inches: the course of the Tombe to be of good and due proportion to answer the length and bredth of the uppermost stone; and a pace to be made round about the Tombe of like good marble, to stand on the ground; which pace shall contain in thickness vi. Inches and in bredth xviii. inches. The Tombe to bear in height from the pace iv. foot and a half. And in and about the same Tombe to make xiv. principall housings, and under every principall housing a goodly quarter for a Scutcheon of copper and gilt to be set in; and to do all the work and workmanship about the same Tombe to the entail, according to a portraiture delivered him; and the carriages and bringing to Warwick, and there to set the same up where it shall stand: the entailing to be at the charge of the Executors: after which entailing the said Marbler shall pullish and clense the said Tombe in workmanlike sort: And for all the said Marble, carriage and work, he shall have in sterling money xlv li.

The said Marbler covenanteth to provide, of good and well coloured Marble, so many stones as will pave the Chapell where the Tombe standeth, every stone containing in thickness two inches, and in convenient bredth, and to bring the same to Warwick and lay it: And for the stuff, workmanship, and carriage of every hundred of those stones, he shall

John Prudde of Westminster Glasier 23. Junii 25 H. 6. covenanteth, &c. to glase all the windows in the new Chappell in Warwick, with Glasse beyond the Seas, and with no Glasse of England; and that in the finest wise, with the best, clearest, and strongest glasse of beyond the Sea that may be had in England, and of the finest colours of blew, yellow, red, purple, sanguine, and violet, and of all other colours that shall be most necessary, and best to make rich and embellish the matters, Images, and stories that shall be delivered and appointed by the said Executors by patterns in paper, afterwards to be newly traced and pictured by another Painter in rich colour at the charges of the said Glasier: All which proportions the said John Prudde must make perfectly to fine, glase, eneylin it, and finely and strongly set it in lead and sonder, as well as any Glasse is in England. Of white Glasse, green Glasse, black Glasse, he shall put in as little as shall be needfull for the showing and setting forth of the matters, Images and stories. And the said Glasier shall take charge of the same Glasse, wrought and to be brought to Warwick, and set up there, in the windows of the said Chapell; the Executors paying to the said Glasier for every foot of Glasse ii s. and so for the whole xci li. i s. x d.

It appeareth, that after these windows were so finished, the Executors devised some alterations, as to adde for our Lady; and Scripture of the marriage of the Earle, and procured the same to be set forth in Glasse in most fine and curious colours; and for the same they payd the sum of xiii li. vi s. iv d. Also it appeareth, that they caused the windows in the vestry to be curiously glased with Glasse of ii s. a foot, for which they payd L s. The sum to tall for the Glasse of the said Vestry and Chappell Xvi li. xviii s. vi d. which in all contain by measure; The East window Cxlix. foot. i. quarter and two inches.

The South windows CCCClix. foot. xi. inches.

The North windows CCCv. foot.

The totall DCCCCx. foot, iii. quarters of a foot and two inches.

Richard Bird and John Haynes, Citizens and Carpenters of London xii. Febr. 28 H. 6. do covenant to make and set up in the Chapell where the Earl is buried, or where the Tombe standeth, a pair of Desks of timber, Poppies, seats, fills, planks, Reredoses of timber, with patands of timber, and a crest of fine entail, with a bowtel roving on the crest. And also the Carpenters do covenant to make and set up, finely, and workmanly a parclose of timber about an Organ-loft ordained to stand over the West dore of the said Chapell, according to patterns: All these things to be made, set up, fastned, joyned, and ordered in as good sort as those in the Quire of S. Maries Church in Warwick; the Executors finding all manner of timber, and carriages; and giving and paying to the said Carpenters, for the workmanship xl. li.

John Brentwood Citizen and Steyner of London 12. Febr. 28 H. 6. doth covenant to paint fine and curiously to make at Warwick, on the West wall of the new Chappell there, the Dome of our Lord God Jesus, and all manner of devises and Imagery thereto belonging, of fair and lightly proportion, as the place shall serve for, with the finest colours, and fine gold: and the said Brentwood shall find all manner of stuffe thereto at his charge; the said Executors paying therefore xiii li. vi s. viii d.

Kristian Coleburne Painter dwelling in London
 13. Junii 32 H. 6. covenanteth, &c. to paint in most fine, fairest and curious wise, four Images of stone ordained for the new Chapell in Warwick; whereof two principall Images, the one of our Lady, the other of S. Gabrael the Angell; and two lesse Images, one of S. Anne, and another of S. George: These four to be painted with the finest oyle colours, in the richest, finest, and freshest clothings that may be made of fine Gold, Azure, of fine purple, of fine white & other finest colours necessary, garnished, bordered and powdered in the finest and curiousest wise: All the cost and wormanship of painting to be at the charge of the said Kristian, the Executors paying for the same xii li.

By the Accomptsⁱ of the before specified Will. Berkswell, one of the Executors to the said Earl, (and then Dean of this Coll. Church) I find, that the structure of this Chapell and Monument was begun in 21 H. 6. but not totally finished till 3 E. 4. (which was full 21. years;) And that the toll cost thereof, in the work of Malons, Quarriers, Smyths, Plummers, Carpenters, and other inferior Labourers, added to what those principall Artists had, with whom the said Executors so covenanted, as I have before exprest, amounted to no less than MMCCCCLxxxi li. iv s. vii d. ob. At which time were also the Deanery and Colledge (both standing at the East end of the Churchyard) reedified by those Executors, the charge whereof came to DCCCCLxxxviii li. xix s. ix d.

But it was not consecrated till^k the year 1475. k Carp. vi (15 E. 4.) that John Halse, or Hales Bishop of 2.f.74.b. Cobentre and Litchfield had a speciall Comission for that purpose from John Carpenter then Bishop of Worcester.

Besides this goodly Tombe of Earl Richard (which in the story of his life I have accurately represented) there are in the same Chapell these following Monuments; viz. of Ambrose Dudley Earl of Warwick, Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, and of Robert his son, who dyed young as doe here follow.

In the midst of our lady chapell toward the west end.

Here under this Tombe lyeth the corps of the Lord Ambrose Duddeley, who after the deceases of his elder brethren without yssue, was sonne and heir to John Duke of Northumberland.

To whom Queen Elizabeth in the first year of her raigne gave the Mannor of Kibworth-Beauchamp in the Countie of Leye. to be held by the service of being Pantler to the Kings & Queens of this realme at their Coronations. Which office & Mannour his said father & other other his Ancestours Earles of Warwick held. In the second yeare of her raigne the said Queen gave him the office of maister of the Ordinance.

In the fourth yeare of her said raigne she created him Baron L'isle and Earle of Warwick. In the same yeare she made him her Lieutenant generall in Normandy, and during the time of his service there he was chosen knight of the noble order of the Garter.

In the twelveth year of her raigne the said Earle and Edward Lord Clinton, Lord Admirall of England, were made Lieutenants jointly and severally of her Majesties Army in the North parts.

In the thirteenth year of her raigne the said Qu. bestowed on him the Office of chief Butler of England. And in the xvth yeare of her reign was sworn of her privy Councill.

Who departed this life without issue the xxith day of February 1589. at Bedford house neer the City of London; from whence, as himself desired, his corps was conveyed and interred in this place,

Neare his brother Robert Earle of Leicester, and other his noble ancestors (which was accomplished by his last Will) and welbeloved wife the Lady Anne Countesse of Warr. who, in further testimony of her faithfull love towards him, bestowed this Monument as a remembrance of him.

John Dudley esquire, second sonne to John Lord Dudley and knight of the Garter, marryed Elizabeth daughter and heire of John Bramshot Esquier, and had issue Edmund Duddeley.

Edmund Duddeley Esquire one of the privy Councill to king Henry the 7th, married Elizabeth sister and sole heire of John Grey Vicount L'sle, descended as heire of the eldest daughter and coheire of Richard Beauchamp Earl of Warwick, and Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heire of the Lord Berkley and heire of the Lord L'ytle and Ties, and had issue John Duke of Northumberland.

John Duke of Northumberland and Earle of Warwick, Vicount L'isle and knight of the Garter, married Jane daughter and heire of Sir Edward Guildford knight, and Elianore his wife sister and coheire to Thomas lord la Warre, and had issue the said Lord Ambrose.

The said Lord Ambrose Dudley married, to his first wife, Anne daughter and coheire of William Whorwood esquier, Attorney generall to King Henry the eight.

The said Lord Ambrose married to his second wife Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Gilbert Taylbois knight, sister and sole heire of George Lord Taylbois.

The said Lord Ambrose, after he was Earl of Warwick, married to his third wife the Lady Anne daughter to Francis Earle of Bedford, Lord Russell, and knight of the Garter.

JOHN GREY VICOUNT LISLE KIL. FLEW AND HEIR VNTO THE LADY MARGARET COVNTESSE OF QUEENSBURY THE ELDEST DAUGHTER AND COHEIR OF THE NOBLE EARLE OF WARWICK. S. RICHARD BLANCHARD HEIR INTERRED A CHILDE OF GREAT FAVORABLETY, BUT OF LATER GREATER HOPE AND TOWARDS TAKEN FROM THIS TRANSITORY VNTO EVERLAST. ING LIFE IN HIS TENDER AGE AT WANTS IN EARLY ON SUNDAY THE 10th OF JUNE IN THE YEARE OF OUR LORD GOD 1584. BEING THE CCVth YEARE OF THE HAPPY REINE OF THE MOST VERTVOWS AND GODLY PRINCESSE QUEEN ELIZABETH. AND IN THIS PLACE LAYD VNTO HIS NOBLE ANCESTORS IN AVIDE HOPE OF THE GENERAL RESURRECTION.

It now remains that I take notice of what else I have found worthy of note in relation to this Chapell and not already publicquely known; which is, that Sir Henry Nevill Kt. son and heir to George

Nevill Lord Latimer, by Eliz. the third daughter to the noble Earl Richard before remembred, who dyed in his fathers life time, was here interred at the head of the said Earl, as appears by the Testament of 1604. 2.

the Lady his widow (daughter to Sir John Bouchier Lord Berners) who also bequeathed her body to be here buried; And to the intent that the Dean and Canons of this Coll. Church should devoutly pray for her soul, and for the soul of her said husband, and all Christen people departed, she gave unto them two Gowns of blew Velvet wherewith to make a Vestment and Copes, so far as they would reach, to be used in the same Colledge, one of which gowns belong'd to her said husband; And directed, that if those two gowns would not suffice to make a Chesciple, two Tunicles, a Cope, with Altar clothes, and frontell, that then her Executors should buy as much plain blew Velvet as might compleat the same, for to serve to the Altar in the said Chapell; And farther appointed, that her said Executors should find a Priest to sing in the said Chapell for her soul, and the soul of her said husband, and all Christen people deceased, for the space of three years next ensuing her decease: And to this Church she also bequeathed her Crysome gown of fine thred and lawn, to be disposed of for a Corporas.

Other memorable Legacies which she gave by this Testament were these; viz. a Ring of gold, with a table Diamond to be offered at the Shrine of S. Thomas of Canterbury in the honour of God, and that blessed Martyr. To her brother Sir Humphrey Bouchier Knight a Ring of gold with a flower de Lyce of Rubyes. To her brother Thomas Bouchier an Ouch of gold, made like a trunk, with a Diamond, two Rubies, and two Pearles. To Dame Eliz. Lady Wells, her sister, a flower of gold with a Ruby, and two half Pearls. To her son, the Lord Latimer, her wedding Ring. To the Parson of S. M. Magd. at old Fish-street end, a Crosse of silver, and to Thomas Nevill, her son, her great Primmer. Of which Testament she constituted Executors Sir John Bouchier Knight, Lord Berners, her father, Dame Margery his wife, her mother, Thomas Bouchier her brother, and John Bradshaw; the same bearing date 2. Octob. Anno 1470. (10 E. 4.) and proved the xvith of that month, which shews that she dyed soon after it was made.

About ten years after this; viz. 20. Sept. Anno 1480. (20 E. 4.) Dame Eliz. Lady Latimer, third daughter to the said Earl, declared her last Will^m and Testament, whereby she bequeathed her body to be interred in this Chapell, at the head likewise of her noble father, betwixt the above specified Sir Henry Nevill her son, and Oliver Dudley her son in Law; and appointed that there should be 4. stones of fair Marble, with portraitures upon them of copper, and gilt, according to her estate and degree, with Epitaphs representing their births and deceases, and other fit things to such purposes, cut upon the same, and be layd upon the graves of her husband, her son, her son in Law beforementioned, and her self. And further ordained that lands of xl. per annum value should be put in Feoffees hands, to the end that with the revenue thereof a Priest might be maintained for the saying of Masse and other Divine services at the Altar in the aforesaid Chapell of our Lady, to the honour of God, and remission of the offences of her said

Lord and Father, her mother, her husband, her self, her sons, and all Christians, till such time as the Kings licencie could be procured for amortizing of lands to that value, to the purposes abovesaid: And moreover, with parcell of those revenues, bought a pair of goodly vestments of white Damaske, powdred with Bears and ragged staves of gold, and in the orfray the Scocheon of her Armes to be well and richly embroydered, and delivered to the said Chapell: And that a pair of Vestments of black stuff, with a like Scocheon in the orfray Crosse, to be used in the Church of Wells, in exercising the observances for her Lord and husband's soul (who was, it seems, there interred.)

In the East window of this Chapell, there are, besides those costly portraitures in glasse of Earl Richard, with his wives, and children, (which in my story of his life are represented) the pictures in their full proportions, of S. Alban the protomartyr of England, S. Thomas of Canterbury, S. John of Bridlington, and of S. Winifride; unto each of which, the renowned Earl Richard, by his last Will and Testament bequeathed his Image in pure gold, weighing xx li. in weight, and in his surcoat of Armes holding an Anker in his hand, appointing them to be offered at their severall Shrines in his name, as in my story of him I have already declared; so great an honour did he bear (as it seems) to those Saints.

On the North side of the Quire is a fair room built eight square, which was heretofore the Chapter house for the Dean and Canons of this Collegiat Church, but in our time converted to another use by the right honorable Foulk Lord Brook, who in his life time erected therein a very stately Monument for himself, of black and white Marble, the representation whereof is on the next page truly exhibited; his body being enbalded and put into a coffin of lead in the Vault below.

Of the particular Churches which were heretofore in Wartwick, and so united to this Collegiate Church of our Lady (as I have intimated) I will here briefly say something.

That of S. Helene stood^a where the Priory of S. Sepulchers was founded, as I have already shewed, and by that means became swallowed up therein.

S. Michaells at the lower end of the street called Saltford, on the North part of the town; out of which the Canons of S. Maryes had a portion^b, viz. xi s. per annum as in 19 E. 1. was certified^c; and the Lepers in the Hospitall there, vi s. viii d. But in 14 E. 3. the great and small Tithes, with all oblations thereto belonging, were rated^d at v. marks and a half. This Church was governed anciently by its own proper Rector, who used to be presented by the Dean of the Collegiat Church of our Lady, and the Prebendary thereof jointly; but in 41 E. 3. the number of its Parishioners was so much decreas'd; as also the yearly revenue belonging thereto, that it became reduced, in a manner, to nothing; having but three Parishioners, and those onely Cottiers; so that the yearly value thereof scarce reach't to one mark, the Church it self being very ruinous, the Church-yard small, and not any House for the Parson then standing.

That of S. Peters anciently stood ^e in the midst of the town, whereunto in 14 E. 3. nothing but small Tithes appertained ^h. This also in 41 E. 3. had ⁱ a Rector presentable by the said Dean and the Prebendary of that Prebend, the value thereof being then scarce v. marks per annum, having no dwelling house, and without either Church-yard or Ecclesiastique sepulture, the Parishioners burying their dead at S. Maries, whereunto it was appropriated ^k afterwards, sc. in 22 R. 2. But in K. H. 6. time pulled down; whereupon that of S. Peter, in stead thereof, was in those dayes newly built over the East gate.

The Church of S. Laurence, standing at the lower end of the West street, in the suburbe, was in 19 E. 1. valued ^l at viii. marks and a half, and in 14 E. 3. at ix. marks. In 41 E. 3. the Parson was presentable thereto by the Prebend thereof; at which time the Dean of the Collegiate Church and the Prebendary received two parts of the Tith corne belonging to it, the Colledge onely two parts of the Tith hay, Mills, and all small Tithes, and the Rector the third throughout, which scarce amounted then to C s. per ann. but had a Church-yard and Ecclesiastique sepulture. In 22 R. 2. it was appropriated to the said Collegiat Church of our Lady, a Pension of iii s. iv d. per ann. being thereupon reserved to the Bishop and his successors out of it; and in 26 H. 8. valued ^m at iii li. vi s. viii d. per ann. which sum the Dean and Canons of the said Collegiat Church then received.

The Church of S. James, being originally, but a Chapell, and founded ⁿ over the West gate of this town, was given to that of our Lady by Roger Earl of ~~Warwick~~, upon the making thereof Collegiate by him in King Henry 1. time, as I have already shewed: And in 41 E. 3. was presentable ^o by the Dean and Canons of the above recited Colledge; but, being at that time void, as it had been for many years, had no more revenue ^p than xx s. per ann. belonging to it, and neither Church-yard nor Ecclesiastique sepulture. In 6 R. 2. the advouson thereof was bestowed ^q on the Gild of S. George, in ~~Warwick~~, whereof I shall speak anon.

The Priory.

From hence I come to the Priory of S. Sepulchers, situate on the North side of this town, on a most pleasant ascent; the Foundation whereof was begun ^r by Henry de Neuburgh (the first Earl of ~~Warwick~~ after the Conquest) in K. H. 1. time: the occasion ^s thereof being by the recourse of divers Pilgrims in great devotion to the Holy Land (the Christians prevailing much about that time) who solicited this Earl to erect a Monastery in imitation of those Canons Regular, there instituted in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher of our blessed Saviour; which Canons used ^t the like habite that other Regular Canons did, adding onely a double red Cross upon the brest of their Cope, this being the first ^u House of that peculiar Order, either in England, Wales, Scotland, or Ireland. But after the destruction of Jerusalem, again (which hapned ^v in Anno 1188. 35 H. 2.) almost all the Houses of this Rule began to decay, so that then, the Religious persons of this Order betook ^x themselves to solicit and implore the aid of good people for help to regain the Holy Land, having power to bestow great Indulgences upon those that were bountifull thereto, their habite being then chang'd to a gray Cloake, and the Prior going with a Pastoral staff: howbeit, all their endeavours ^y for regaining the Holy Land, at last, comming to nothing, their lands and revenues were transferred ^z to the Order of Friars of the Holy Trinity for redemption of Captives, touching the first Institution whereof I have spoke in ~~Chelsoford~~.

But this work, so begun by Earl Henry, was ^a not perfected till the days of Roger his son, and successor in the Earldome; for ^b in his time, by the speciall command of K. Henry 1. (the Canons of All-Hallows, within whose Parish it stood, ascending) did Simon Bishop of Worcester consecrate the Altar here; as also the Church-yard, for sepulture only of the Canons there serving God; provided^c, that neither the said mother Church of All-Hallows, nor the Church of our Lady should receive any detriment in Tithes, Burialls, Oblations, Confessions, Visitations of the sick, nor in any other Customs and benefits belonging to them: In recognition^d therefore to that mother Church of All-Hallows, this Church of S. Sepulchers was by the said Bishops Decree to give xxx d. yearly on the Feast day of All Saints, and either the Prior of this House or some one for him to be there present at that time: which Church and Canons of All-Hallows were united to that of our Lady, when it was made Collegiate by the abovesaid Earl, as I have already shewed. But whether there were ever any formall Charter of the Foundation hereof, made by either of the before specified Earls, is hard to say; if so, 'tis perisht, I believe; wherefore for want thereof, and of its recitall by any Inspecimus, we are now utterly without knowledge of what it was at first endowed with; but probable it is, that those lands, or the greatest part of them, which lye adjacent to the site hereof, were then given thereto. Its other possessions (so far as I have authority to guide me) I shall here enumerate

The Church of Snitsfield given^e by Hugh fil. Ricardi; Certain lands lying betwixt Tunstall, and Stochull (near Warwick) by^e Geffrey de Vinea; A stone-house and some particular ground in Warwick by^e William the son of Gilbert Nutricius; Those grounds called Lebenhull, situate on the North-west side of Warwick, by^e Robert de Morton in 29 H. 3. One yard land in Lighthorne confirm'd^d by Nigell de Mundevill, which his father gave when he bequeath'd his body to sepulture here; Certain lands in Upton by^e Thomas de Arden; The Church of Hasele confirm'd^d by Thomas de Cherlecote Lord of Hasele, having been given by some of his Ancestors. Certain lands in Solihull by^e Sir William de Odingfells; An annuity of 50 s. by^e Margery de Nerburne, given out of Austrey, in this shire: Certain lands in Claverdon by^e Ela Longespe Countess of Warwick, which she gave for the health of her soul, and for the soul of Thomas Earl of Warwick her husband, William Earl of Salisbury, her father, Ela her mother, William and Richard her brothers, and Ida her sister, sometime wife of Walter fil. Roberti.

Besides all these, there belong'd^d thereto five mess. one carucat of land, and x s. x d. yearly Rent, lying within the parish of S. Clements-Danes in the suburbs of London, together with the advouson of the said Church of S. Clements; all which the Prior and Canons of this House exchanged^d away unto Walter Stapleton Bishop of Exeter, to the use of his Bishoprick, for eight acres of land in Snitsfield before specified, with the advouson of the Church, in 17 E. 2. Which Church they had then License^d to hold appropriate to them and their successors, and did^d accordingly; so that, it seems, the former title they had thereto, by the grant of Hugh fil. Ricardi, either was not good, or else they had aliened it away soon after. It also seems, that much of the lands they had here at Warwick, was antiently Common; for by an Inquil.^s taken 9 H. 8. I find that they had inclosed foure hundred acres here, and depopulated one mess. whereunto eighty acres belonged. But over and above these lands had they sundry liberties and privileges, granted^d to them by King Henry 2. and Richard 1. and confirm'd by King Hen. 3. and Edw. 3. so great an esteem had they of that Order, as the Preamble of King Henry 3. Charter implies; scil. pro reverentia S. Dominici Sepulchri.

And by the Survey^w taken in 26 H. 8. it appears, that besides the Rectories of Snitsfield and Haseley above specified, there belong'd to this Monastery, the Church of Gretham in Com. Rutl. antiently of the Earl of Warwick's advouson, though when given thereto I am not very certain; all which, with the rest of its possessions, lying in Warwick, Hatton, Claver- don, Church-Latford, Austrey, Snitsfield, Pinley, Solihull, and Fenni-Compton, were then rated at no more than x li. x s. ii d. over and above all reprises: which undervalue, exposing it to dissolution by the Statute of 27 H. 8. Robert Radford, the then Prior, had a Pension of 5 li. per annum granted^e to him by the King for his maintenance during life.

After which till 38 H. 8. the site of this Religious House, with the lands in Warwick belonging thereto, continued in the Crown; but then, by the Kings Letters Patent^y bearing date 24. Septemb. it was granted to Thomas Hawkins alias Fisher Gentleman, and his heirs, to be held in Socage of the Castle of Warwick, by the Rent of xxvi s. ix d. ob. per annum. Which Thomas accumulated a vast estate in Monastery and Church lands, the most whereof were wasted by his Son, as will appear when I come to the particular places where they lay: And therefore, having been, in his time, a man so eminent and active, it will not be amiss to say something historically of him.

As for his parentage, all that I can say is from the relation of an aged Gentleman^z sometime the honour of this County for his singular knowledge in Antiquities; viz. that his true name was Hawkins, and that his father, being by profession one that sold Fish by retail at the Mercate Crosse in Warwick, was thereupon called Fisher by most people. This Thomas as he had good naturall parts, so wanted he not convenient education in learning; for I find, that being a servant^a to John Dudley (heretofore Earl of Warwick and Duke of Northumberland) then Visc. Lisle, he was by him constituted^b high Steward and Bailiff of his Mannour of Wibworth-Beauchamp in Com. Wetc. 4. Maii 34 H. 8. and for his exercise of that Office during life, had an Annuity^c of vi li. xiii s. iv d. granted to him, which Queen Mary in 1. of her reign confirmed^d. In 38 H. 8. (as I have said) he obtain'd the site of this Priory, with the lands adjacent; In 1 E. 6. the Lordships of Wibshops-Ichington, Lachebroke, Chadshunt, and Cepdon in this County, of the then Bishop of Cobentry and Leichfield, with the advouson of the Church of Fenni-Compton; In 2 E. 6. he purchast^e from the Bishop of Exeter (of whom in Sutton I have spoke) the Mannours of Chadham and Thorney in Suffe, as also of Horsley, and Tyting in Surrey, the Rectory of South-Pens, with the Mannour of Fernefelds in Wexingham (alias Haxingham) in Com. Midd. with the advowsons of the Rectories and Vicaridges of Chadham, Thorney, Horsley, South-Pens, Fernefelds, and Haringham; all which were confirm'd by King E. 6. in 3. of his reign; about which time he also purchas't from the Crown the Chantry of Aston juxta Birmingham, with all the lands & revenues thereto belonging, situate in this County, Leic. and Staff. shires: as also lands in Wington belonging to the Colledge of Stratford super Avon, with the Mannour of Dracote in this shire, belonging to the Colledge of Newark in Leicester; And, about the same time, joyned with Thomas Dabridgecourt in the buying of much more Chantry land; of which in this County these were part; viz. a Chapell in Birmingham with lands, &c. thereto belonging; the Chantries of Dervate-end juxta Birmingham; of Hurley, Sutton-Colfield, and Hill-Morton; lands in Lapworth belonging to the Gild of Henley; lands in Longley pertaining to the Gild of Aston Cantlow; the Chantry of Alipath; as also Marlers in Cobentree with the lands to them belonging; besides a multitude in other places, given originally for the maintenance of Obits, Anniversaries, Lamps and Lights in Churches, and the like: The Chapell of Widford, as also that of Ullarton juxta Polestworth, with the lands to them belonging; the Rectory of Pillerton-Hercy, with the advowson of the Vicaridge, and lands in Warwick belonging to a Gild there.

In 6 E. 6. he had a grant of the Bailiwick of Banbury, in Orfordsh. being made Collector of the Ks. revenue within that Borough and Hundred; as also Governour of the Castle, having a fee of Lxvi s. viii d. per an. for exercising the office of Steward, and keeping the K. Court within that Mannour. In 4 Eliz. he purchas't the Mannour of Herberbury, and divers lands in other parts of this County, which were sometime belonging to the Monasteries of Run-Caton, Kensworth, and the Preceptory of Balshall. And being thus enricht with such ample possessions, he pull'd to the ground this Monastery, and raised in the place of it a very fair Houle, as is yet to be seen; which, being finished about the 8. year of Queen Eliz. reign, he made his principall seat, giving it a new name (somewhat alluding to his own) viz. Hawkins-nest, or Hawks-nest, by reason of its situation, having a pleasant grove of loftie Elmes, almost environing it; adorning the windows with his Armes; and likewise with the Armes of the Dukes of Somerset and Northumberland, expressing his name by a Rebus upon the timber work, as the T. R. with a Dolphin betwixt the Letters, do import

For his publique employments, besides what I have already mentioned, I shall speak of them from tradition. Having been first a servant to John Visc. Lisle, from thence he arrived to be Secretary to the D. of Somerset (Protector to K. E. 6.) and wanting not personall valour, was Colonel of a Regiment in the English Army, under the conduct of the said Duke and Earl of Warwick at Spinkborough field, in Scotland, in which battail the English had the day; where he taking the Cholours of some eminent person, in which a Griffon was depicted, had a grant by the said Duke that he should thenceforth, in memory of that notable exploit, bear the same in his Armes within a Border Verrey, which the Duke added thereto, in relation to one of the quarterings of his own coat (viz. Beauchamp of Witch) as an honourable Badge for that service. I have also heard, that when the before specified Duke of Northumb. out of his ambition to get the whole sway of all into his power, had obtain'd a designation from King E. 6. that the Lady Jane Grey should succeed him in the Throne (as I have elsewhere intimated) with whom he had matcht his fourth son, Sir Gulford Dudley; he, apprehending that some stirrs might arise thereupon, by reason that the Kings, two sisters were thereby excludet, privately conveyed a vast summe of money to the hands of this Fisher (in whom he reposed great confidence, as having been formerly his servant) to the end that Forces might be the better raysed in these parts, as occasion should require; which money was by him hidden in Bishops-Ichington pool; and that the Duke sayling of his ends, and losing his head (as is well known) Fisher became questioned, by authority from Queen Mary, for that money; but denying it stoutly, and put upon the Rack, was so extremely tormented, that his fingers were pull'd out of the joynts, yet would never reveal it.

After which he lived till 19 Eliz. and then^m on m Esc. 29. Jan. 12. anno 1576. departing this life, was interred at the upper end of S. Maryes Church in Warwick, where his Monument is yet to be seen, leaving Edward his son and heir xxx. years of age, whose inheritance left him by his father, was no lesse than what is now worth 3000 li. per an. as I have heard; but as such possessions (I mean Church lands, and the like) which were originally given to the maintenance of Gods service, wanting that blessing of continuance to the posterity of those that obtain them, as for the most part others have; doe often shiftr their owners, so we find it here; for the substance of all that had been thus rak't together, with so much care and industry, by the Father, was in a short time wastet by the Son, who lavish't it out so fast, as that foreseeing his own ruin he betook himself to the course of unthriftr, which hastned it on the sooner; for making a fraudulent conveyance to deceive Sergeant Puckring, to whom in 23 Eliz. he had soldⁿ this fair seat and lands thereabout, he was by him so prosecuted in the Star-Chamber, that, had not the Earl of Leicester interposed, his Fine would have been very grievous; for prevention whereof he, at length, consented, that an Act of Parliament to confirm the estate to the said Sergeant Puckring (then Lord Keeper of the great Seal) should be made; and being yet intangled with debts was committed Prisoner to the Fleet, where he remained all the dayes of his life: which conveyance, from the before specified Edward Fisher, being to^o George Chowne and others 1. Octob. 23 Eliz. they pass't away their right therein to the said Sergeant Puckring 13. Octob. 24 Eliz.

This Sergeant Puckring, being Speaker^q in the Parliament of 28. Eliz. upon answer to Queen Eliz. proposall, as to some expedient whereby the life of the Queen of Scots might be saved, urged that the Sentence given against her should be put in execution. In 36 Eliz. he was Knighted^r, and dyed in 38. whereupon M^r Cambden in his Annals of that time hath this expression, Infra hunc annum nonnulli insignioris nota & nobilitatis, ex hujus vite statione evocati fuerunt, & quibus inprimis memorandi Joh. Cantii Baronet, nephew to the said Sir Thomas Puckering, is, by his said uncle's designation, become heir to this and the greatest part of his estate

The next place of note for antiquity, lying within the precincts of Warwick, is the Hospitall of S. Michael, situate on the North side of the town, at the lower end of that street called Saltsford, neer the Chapell of S. Michael before spoken of. This being founded by Roger Earl of Warwick, about the later end of H. 1. or beginning of King Stephen's time, had, besides what it was then endowed withall, little given thereto, other than those obventions and Tythes of the assarts of Wedgenok, as also of the paunage and venison, by Waleran Earl of Warwick; so that the whole revenue thereof, by the Survey taken in 26 H. 8. was certified to amount unto no more than x li. ii s. iv d. over and above reprises; all which issued out of lands in Warwick, excepting vi s. viii d. yearly Rent of Assize for something that belong'd thereto situate in Aven-Deslet; out of which xxvi s. was annually payd to certain Leprous persons residing there, towards their maintenance. But by another Survey made in 37 H. 8. I find that the revenue thereof, over and above all reprises amounted to x li. xix s. x d. And that it was founded by a King, to give Almes weekly to poor people, as also to harbour them; Howbeit at that time there being no Master there resident, the same was demised by Lease, with all the Rents and profits thereto belonging, unto one Richard Fisher, paying therefore yearly x li. which Richard did then weekly distribute 8 d. to the poor, and found four beds for their lodging, giving viii d. a week to a certain poor woman attending on the poor men, and making their beds. But at this time the poor people, there resident, are onely women, and viii. in number, having iv li. per annum distributed amongst them out of the Priory lands (late Sir Thomas Puckering's) at Michaelmasse and our Lady-day by equall portions. A Catalogue of its Guardians (scil. such as I have found) are here inserted, with the times of their admission to that charge, and the names of those by whom they were constituted.

The Hospitall of S. Iohn Baptist.

IN the Suburb on the East part of the town, is there a street called Smyth's street, where the Jews long since resided; neer unto which stood the Hospitall of S. Iohn Baptist, founded by Will. Earl of Warwick in H. 2. time, for entertainment and reception of strangers and travellers, as well as those that were poor and infirm. What endowment it had at first I am not certain, but in anno 1291. 19 E. 1. I find it certified, that there was a carucate of land and a Dove-house pertaining thereto, the land then valued at x s. and the Dove-house at ii s. howbeit the Record doth not expresse where it did lye. Something there was belonging to it, situate in Witchford, in this County; viz. one mess. and half a yard land, given by Francis de Dicheford Lord of that Mannour, besides certain small proportions of errable land by other private men; as also in Wilton, which, considering that the Donors were mean persons, I forbear to mention. But in 6 E. 3. Sir Iohn de Bishopdon Knight, having obtained License from Henry Earl of Lancaster, chief Lord of the Fee, gave the advouson of the moiety of the Church of Morton-Merhall, in this County, thereto; which moiety was appropriated accordingly by Wolstan Bishop of Worcester; in consideration whereof the Master and Brethren of this Hospitall, by their publique Instrument, bearing date on the Feast day of *S. their successors unto the said Sir John and his heirs for ever, the service of two Priests, Friars of the said Hospitall, dayly to celebrate divine service there, for the good estate of him and Dame Beatrice his wife, during their lives, and afterwards for their soules, and for the soules of their Ancestors, heirs, and all the faithfull departed; which two Friars the said Sir John and Dame Beatrice and their heirs should yearly make choise of out of the rest of the Friars of this Hospitall, for the performance of that service. And in 19 E. 3. Thomas de Beauchamp Earl of Warwick gave the advouson of the other moitie of this Church of, Morton; which was also appropriated thereto by Reginald Bryan Bishop of Worcester 16 Apr. anno 1359. 33 E. 3.

So that in 37 H. 8. it was certified¹, that the totall of all the revenues belonging thereto, were xix li. xvii s. iiii d. ob. over and above all reprises; and that it was founded to maintain one Master, two Chaplains, and two poor folks there continually; as also to keep Hospitality: But at the time of that Survey^m was there no such thing, one Anthony Stoughton, servant to the Queen (a younger branch of the Stoughton's of Stoughton, an ancient family in Surrey) having obtain'd a grant thereof from the King for his life; yet the Chappell was then standing, and the lead thereof prized at xii li. scil. 4 li. the foudre. When it was seized into the Kings hands, or upon what ground I cannot well resolve, in regard the Statute for dissolution of the small Houses in 27 H. 8. extended onely to Monks, Canons, and Nuns; and that the same King by his Letters Patentⁿ bearing date xx. Decemb. 32. of his reign, granted an estate for life therein to Anthony Stoughton above specified, unless it were by Surrender; because such Hospitalls were not dissolved by Act of Parliament till 37 H. 8. How it was therefore in this particular I shall not farther trouble my self to guess; but if the King had not a found title thereto, when he granted that estate for life to Anthony Stoughton, the Act of Parliament in 37. of his reign did make it good; after which I find, that Queen Eliz. by her Letters Patent^o dated 25. Junii 5. Eliz. granted the inheritance thereof to the said Anthony, and his heirs male, who dyed^p seized of it 9 Dec. 17 Eliz. leaving issue William his son and heir, then 31. years of age, father of Anthony the present possessor thereof.

The Black Friars.

IN the Suburbe on the West side of Warwick stood the House of Friars Preachers, commonly called Black Friars. This Order was begun^u by St. Dominick a Spaniard in the time of Pope Innocent the III, who being at first a Canon, with a few that he chose to be his companions, instituted a new Rule of strict and holy living; and least they should grow sluggish in the service of God by staying at home, in imitation of our blessed Saviour, he appointed them to travail far and wide to preach the Gospell, their Habite being a white coat with a black cloak over it; (as in the following page may be seen) which Order Honorius the III. (who succeeded Pope Innocent) confirmed; and Gregory the ix. canonized him for a Saint.

In anno^r 1221. (20 H. 3.) they first came into England, and towards the later end of H. 3. reign, settled here at Warwick, John de Plessers being then Earl. It seems that they afterwards enlarged their mansion; for I find, that in 9 E. 2. they purchast^t of Avicia de Pilardynon a certain piece of ground, containing Clx. foot in length, and C. foot in breadth adjoining thereto, for that purpose, and had the Kings pardonⁿ for so doing. The like pardonⁿ had they in 18 E. 3. for ten acres of land lying here in Warwick, acquired of John de Peito the younger; as also for half an acre more of Thomas Beauchamp Earl of Warwick, situate neer their habitation and to enlarge the same.

To this House were the Botelers of Sudley, and the Monforts of Colshill Benefactors^x; so likewise was William Harewell sometime of Motton-Wawen in this County Esquire, as appears by an Indenture^y made 9. Oct. 16. H. 7. between Thomas Latimer D^r of Divinity, Prior of the Friars Preachers here, and the said William: For, in consideration of xl li. sterling, which he gave to the repair of their Church, and other necessities, they covenanted, that there should be a perpetuall Chantry by one of the Friars thereof, to sing Masse at the Altar of St. Peter of Millain in the said Church, betwixt the houres of nine and ten every day, for the good estate of the said William and Agnes his wife, whilst they lived, and for their souls after their departure hence; as also for all Christen souls; and that during their lives, there should be every day said, by the Priest who was to perform that service, after Confiteor and Miserereatur, turning his face to the people, a Pater noster and Ave, for the prosperity of the said William and Agnes; and after their decease, for the souls of the said William and Agnes, and all Christen souls: As also turning his face to the people De profundis clamavi, with this Orison, Inclina Domine aurem tuam ad preces nostras; which Masse to be called WWilliam Harewell's Masse.

But this House was surrendered into the Kings hands by Deed^z, dated Oct. xx. 30 H. 8. whereunto these names are subscribed.

Which being Mendicants, had no Pensions allowed unto them during life, as the Monks and Canons had: The site whereof, and all that belong'd thereto, was by the Kings Letters a Patent bearing date 5 Jan. 5 E. 6. granted, inter alia, to John Duke of Northumberland and his heirs; and that it was soon after demolish't we need not doubt; so that what became of the ground whereon it stood, after it eschaet'd to Queen Mary, by his attainder, is not worth while to enquire.

The Gilds.

OF Gilds, or Fraternities, there were at first two in Warwick, but afterward (for ought I see) they were both jyn'd together. The one of these was in honour of the Holy Trinity, and the Blessed Dominicanus.

Virgin, and the other of S. George the Martyr, both begun in 6 R. 2. the former by Will. Hobkyns, John Cooke, Will. Lyndraper, Ric. Martin, Will. de la Chaumbre, Tho. Pavye, John Mountford, Tho. Raidy, John Hukyn, Ric. de Chestre, John Hering, Rob. Brown, and Rob. Wulden, all Inhabitants of Warwick; for which they had the Ks. License^b, bearing date 2. Mai the same year; the place of their association being the Church of our Lady, formerly mentioned. And within ten years after had the Brethren thereof License^c, to purchase vi Mess. iii Tofts, xii Cottages, viii shops, xxxviii acres of land and a half, iii acres and iii Rods of Meadow ground, and 30 s. Rent in Warwick, to find three Priests to sing Masse daily in the said Church of our Lady for the good estate of the said K. Ric. of his Q. and of his Mother; as also of T. Beauchamp E. of Warwick, and Margaret his wife, Richard their son, and of Sr. Will. Beauchamp Kt. during their lives in this world; and for their Souls after their departure hence, and the souls of E. 3. K. of England, Edm. P. of Wales, Father to the said K. Ric. 2. Thomas sometime E. of Warwick, and Kath. his wife, and all the Faithfull deceased.

The other of these Gilds (viz. of S. George) was begun the same year, by Rob. de Dynelay, Will. Russell, and Hugh Cooke, of Warwick, by virtue of the said Ks. License^d bearing date 20 April. whereby they had power to receive others also of this Borough into their Fraternity, and to build and found a Chantry for two Priests to sing Masse every day in a Chapell over the Gate called Hongyn-gate in Warwick, for the good estate of the said King Richard & Queen Anne his Consort, and of the said King's Mother, as also of Michaell de la Poole, and all the Brethren and Sisters of the said Gild, during their lives in this world, and for their Souls after their departure hence, as also for the souls of K. E. 3. Edm. P. of Wales, Father to K. Ric. 2. and other the Ks. Progenitors, and all the Faithfull departed; whereunto likewise Tho. Beauchamp then E. of Warwick had license to give the Advowson of the Church of S. James, situate over the said Gate.

The same year did the Brethren of this Gild purchase^e two Mess. one Toft and a Quarry in Warwick, for the use thereof. But that Gild of the Holy Trinity became at length united^f to this of S. George, though the direct time of such their conjunction I have not found; for in 10 H. 6. it so appears^g; and that Tho. Escop Baker was Master thereof. In 26 H. 8. I find^h, that there were five Priests belonging thereunto, each whereof had Cvi s. per ann. Stipend, which amounted to 26 l. 13 s. 4 d. per ann. But by the Surveyⁱ taken, in 37 H. 8. it is evident, that the Revenue thereof amounted to xxxiii l. x s. v d. out of which was yearly paid to four Priests celebrating Divine Service xxi l. vi s. viii d. viz. Cvi s. viii d. a peice. To Ric. Hawes gent. Auditor thereof xiii s. iii d. per ann. To Ric. Ward Collector of the Rents xl s. per ann. To eight poor people of the same Gild viii d. a week of ancient custome, amounting to xxxiii s. viii d. per ann. And to two of the Canons celebrating Divine Service in the Quire of the Collegiate Church here at Warwick ii l. vi s. viii d. per ann.

Of which foure Priests, two did then sing Masse in the said Church of our Lady, and the other two in the two Chapells built over the several Gates of Warwick. viz. that of the East gate of S. Peter, and the West S. James, having their Colledge^k or mansion on the Northside the said Chapell of S. James. But the remainder of the Revenues, saving what was disposed of as abovesaid, was employed towards repairing the great Bridge, here in Warwick over Avon, containing 13 Arches, and of the High-waies about the town. Howbeit in 36 H. 8. the Master and Brethren thereof sold^l parcell of the lands belonging thereto, for which they received the summe of 39 l. 13 s. 4 d. which summe they bestowed^m, partly for obtaining the Coll. Church of our Lady in Warwick, from the K. to be made use of as a Parish Church, and partly for the erecting of a new School within this Town.

All that I farther find relating to this Gild, is, that after the general dissolution of such Fraternities by Act of Parl. in 37. H. 8. the Hall belonging thereto, situate on the North-side the West-gate, was grantedⁿ unto Sr. Nic. le Strange Kt. and his heirs by K. E. 6. 23 Julii in 4 of his reign; and that it being afterwards acquired by Rob. Dudley E. of Leicester, was in 28 Eliz. made an^o Hospitall by him for 12 men besides the Master; scil. impotent persons, not having above 5 li. per ann. of their own, and such as either had been or should be maimed in the Warrs in the said Qs. service, her Heirs and Successors, especially under the conduct of the said Earl or his Heirs, or had been servants and tenants to him and his Heirs, and born in the Counties of Warwick or Glouc. or having their dwelling there for five years before: And in case there happen to be none such hurt in the Warrs, then other poor of Henlsworth, Warwick, Stretford super Avon in this County, or of Wotton under Edge or Crlingham in Gloucestersh. to be recommended by the Minister and Churchwardens where they last had their aboad; which poor men are to have Liveries (viz. Gowns of blew cloth, with a Ragged staff embroydered on the left sleeve) and not to go into the Town without them.

But besides this Hospital of the E. of Leicester's Foundation, is there another without the said West gate, in part of the buildings sometime belonging to the before specified Gild, wherein are viii poor women who have xxxiii s. viii d. payable amongst them by even portions (once a quarter) out of Sir Thomas Puckering's estate; which women doe also receive clothing for two years in December, from the Bayliff of Warwick and Minister of S. Maries, provided for them out of the summe of viii li. per ann. payable out of Sir Tho. Puckering's estate for that purpose; and for the like clothing of the poor in St. Michaels Hospitall; and the third year have they the said summe of viii li. shared equally amongst them. Two other Houses for poor people which have Trades, did the said Sir Tho. Puckering build of fair ashler stone, within this Borough; viz. the one in Jolce-pool lane, antiently called Wall-ditch, and the other in a lane leading towards the West gate from the Mercate place, on the first whereof is this Inscription in capitall letters,

Domunculas hanc Thomas Puckering Miles & Baronettus benevolus, utpote amici, vicinique in hunc Burgum affectu motus, (cujus meliorem statum resq; secundiores ex animo optat) sibiq; in hac parte Executoris munere fungi optimum ratus, dum esset ætatis adhuc media, suis sumptibus in proprio fundo extrui curavit, industriæque (sine qua urbes Burgique marcescunt) excitanda, adaugendaque perpetuo dedicavit, An. salutis MDCxxxiii.

And on the other, the very same, excepting the ar, which is An. salutis MDCXXXV.

HAVING now discovered what I can on the North side the Bridge, I come to that part of the Suburb lying South of it; where first I will begin with St. Nicholas Church, within the precincts of which Parish, not onely all that part of Warwick, situate on the South side of Avon, stands, together with Witton, now a depopulated place; but also the Eastern suburbe on the North of Avon antiently called Cotes, and now Coten-end; with Woodlote and Stockhull, of all which I purpose to speak particularly by and by.

As to the exact time when this Church was first founded, I cannot directly point; but do conclude, that if it were not a little before the Norman Conquest, it was immediatly after; for that which is at present the Chancell, in the Saxons time was the Quire to the house of Nuns situate where this Church and Church-yard now are; which Nunnery being destroyed by Canutus the Dane in an. 1016, (as in my story of Earl Wolgeat I have already intimated) was again rebuilt, as it seems; for it appears, that Henry de Newburgh, the first E. of Warwick of the Norman line, gave unto the Nunns here serving God, for the health of his soul, and for the souls of Margaret his wife, Roger his Son, E. Robert his brother, and all his Ancestors, the town of Clopton. After which they continued not long; for I find that Earl Roger, son and successor to the said Henry in 23 H. 1, upon the endowment of the Collegiat Church of our Lady before spoken of, then newly by him founded, granted inter alia, this Church of St. Nicholas to the Canons thereof ad eorum vitæ necessarios, for those are the words of his Charter.

In an. 1291 (19 E. 1.) this Church was valued at xviii Marks and a halfe, having three Rectors then belonging thereto; and in 14 E. 3, at xviii Marks, the tithe Hay with the small tithes being rated at xiii Marks: But it was antiently appropriated to the Collegiat Church of our Lady, and the fruits thereof divided into three portions; To the one of which, the Dean of the said Coll. Church presented; and to the second and third the two Prebends. In 41 E. 3. the Cure was served by two Priests, which were presentable by the said Dean and Canons to the Bp. of Worcester, by whom they were to receive Institution, one of those Priests having charge of all the parishioners on the South side the Bridge, and the other of those on the North; which Priest, to whom the said South part appertained, had the South part of the Quire, and the other the North, in the celebration of all divine Offices; and each of them ten Marks per an. Salary, payd at the Feast of St. Michael and the Annunciation of our Lady, by equal portions, by the Treasurer of the Collegiat Church before specified. Howbeit, notwithstanding the Appropriation above mentioned, such was the neglect of those that had the Government of that Coll. Church, that the benefit of this and others, which of right ought to have been enjoyed accordingly, was withheld, so that in 22 R. 2. it became again united thereunto; whereupon Tideman then Bp. of Worcester, by his Instrument bearing date at War-tlebury 15 Junii an. 1401. (2 H. 4) ordained a Vicaridge here, assigning to it a certain proportion of Tithes and Oblations, as by the same more fully appeareth.

But after this there was a new Composition, or Ordination made by John Carpenter Bp. of Worcester, bearing date at Northwike 4 Feb. an. 1461 (1 E. 4) whereby there were xx Marks sterling per an. to be paid quarterly, viz. at Michaelmasse, Christmasse, the Annuntiation of our Lady, and the Nativity of St. Joh Baptist, by the said Dean and Canons to the Vicar; with vi s. viii d. per an. more at Michaelmasse, in lieu of a house for his habitation; In consideration whereof, the Vicar for the time being, was to find a fitting Priest, at his own charge, to assist him in the celebration of Divine Service in that Church; which Vicaridge in 26 H. 8. was certified to consist in that Annuity of xiii li, vi s. viii d. the Rectory being then valued at xx l. vi s. viii d. per an. which with the Advowson of the Vicaridge coming to the Crown, by the dissolution of the said Coll. Church, was 15 Maii 27 H. 8. granted by the K. to the Burgeses of Warwick and their successors, for so were the Inhabitants then stiled.

In this Church was there anciently a Chantry, founded by Rob. le Purser of Warwick in 17 E. 2. unto which, by the Ks. speciall license, he gave five Marks and xxi d. per an. Rent issuing out of a Mess. and certain lands lying here in Warwick; but in 10 E. 3. John le Purser, Sonn and Heir to Robert the Founder, being a servant to Tho. Beauchamp E. of Warwick, granted this Chantry, with the Rents thereto belonging, unto the said Earl, to be removed into the Castle, and there to continue for ever, and to be presentable by him the said Earl and his Heirs.

In this part of the Suburbe there was also a House of Templars founded, and endowed with Lands by Roger E. of Warwick in H. 1. histime, which afterwards came to the Preceptory of Balshall in this County, and in 9 E. 2. were certify'd to be of the yearly value of xliii s. viii d. the Arable being Clx Acres, then rated at iii d. an acre, the Meadowing xxiv acres at iii s. an acre; certain Pasture ground, at xx s. per an, a Water-mill at xvi s. viii d. per an. Pleas and Perquisites of Court xx s. per an. one Croft at v s. per an. and twenty foure Freeholders paying 4 li. 12 s. 7 d. yearly rent.

In this Temple was there a Chantry for the ancient Earles of Warwick, and the Revenue thereof certify'd at lxxvi s. viii d. per an. But upon the suppression of that Order, all the Lands which they here enjoy'd, came to the Hospitalars (as in Balshall I shall manifest) and continued in their hands till that generall Deluge in 30 H. 8. swept them away: After which, these their Possessions, as parcell of the Preceptory of Balshall, were granted in 3 E. 6. to John Dudley E. of Warwick, and Jane his wife and their Heirs, and since that have returned to the Crown by the attainder of the said John in 1 M. but how they are now disposed of, I have not thought worth my enquiry.

Having compleady done with the Borough, I shall now take notice of the Hamlets belonging to Warwick: viz. Long-Bridge, Ston-Cotton-end, Stochill, Levenhull, and Woodlow, some whereof have been many years since depopulated; beginning with Long-bridge, which is in the Parish of St. Maries.

Long-Bridge.

This being situate near a narrow Foot-Bridge, which standeth over a small Torrent, coming from Bunbrook, thence assumed its name: Howbeit, I do not discern that it was ever a Mannor of itself; but that the Lands therein did, part belong to the Monastier of Thelesford, part to the Collegiat Church of Warwick, part to the Hospitalars, part to the Priory of Chaucumbe in Porthamptonshire, and the rest to particular persons: Nor have I seen it so much as mentioned in Record till 4. E. 1. that one John de Honele was presented before the Justices Itinerant, as an Inhabitant thereof, for withdrawing his suit from the County and Hundred Court.

Miton.

This is situate well neare a mile above Warwick, on the Southern bank of Avon, but there is now no more left of it than a Grove of Elms in the place where the Village stood. In the Conquerors time the E. of Meilent was possessor of the greatest part of it, viz. two hides, the third then belonging to S. Maries Church in Warwick; which two hides are certify'd in two places; viz amongst the E. of Meilent's Lands, and amongst those of Turchill de Warwick; in the first whereof he is said to hold them of the u { Domef- d. lib.

King, and in the later, of Turchill's Fee: but that it is one and the self same Land which is meant thereby, is evident by these testimonies; first that the two Mills there, are mentioned in both; secondly the value, viz. vi l. and lastly in the one Algarus Comes is said to have been owner thereof in Edw. the Confessors daies, and in the other Edwinus Comes (the sonn and heir of Earl Algar) which makes no difference, in regard that the said Edwine succeeded his Father in that Inheritance. In that Record^w it is variously written, Mulfone and Mofstone, so that for the Etymologie of the name I do not well know what to say, except it be British, Mloy in that language signifying the same with Major, and Mwyo humectatio sive madefactio; in either of which senses, for ought I see, it might have its originall denomination; First as being greater than Cotes, (which was, the next Village lying near Warwick) or secondly by reason of the moist situation of it, standing on the bank of Avon somewhat flat and low.

That this came to Henry de Newburgh, the first E. of Warwick of the Norman line; either with the residue of Turchill's Lands, or by some accord with the E. of Spellent (his brother) there is no doubt at all to be made, forasmuch as it appears that his posterity enjoy'd it:

Ex Rec. x. gift. Col. de Warw. y. w. f. 9. a.
In those dayes there was a Chapell here, wherein several Canons officiated, unto which Roger E. of Warwick. Sonn to the said Henry, did, about the beginning of K. Stephens time, grant ten Acres of his demesn land in this place, and five acres of Arable, with a house, and half an acre of Meadow; and did besides, confirm the gift of eight acres, which Wil. fil. Godardi past thereto. That it continued to the succeeding Earls. I need not stand to prove, forasmuch as it was a member^z of Warwick; but it hath been long since^a depopulated.

Hethcote.

Adjoining to Milton field, on the South part, do lye certain Grounds called by the name of Hethcote, which Walter Power gave^b to the Coll. Church of Warwick in 2. H. 4. by the name of the Mannour of Hethcote, to the intent that the Dean and Canons of that Coll. Church should annuallie solemnize two Obits, one for the Soul of Margaret his late wife, and the other for his own. After the dissolution of which Church, was it granted^c by the name of the Leasow called Hethcote to George Trefham gent. and Edw. Twyniko and their Heirs in 37 H. 8. and from the said George to^d Will. Morcote, who in 6. E. 6. dyed^e seized of it, leaving Will. his Grandson, viz. sonn to John, his next Heir, and then 9 years of age.

Cotes.

This is that part of Warwick, which lyes on the East part of the town, beyond the little Brook coming from the Priory Mill, and is now called Coton-end. In Edw. the Confessors time Edwine E. of Mercia held^f it; but after the Norman Conquest, K. Will. had it in his own hand, in whose time it was certified to contain one hide, there being then two Mills rated at C s. and the Woods containing 3 Furlongs in length and as much in breadth. In the Conq. Survey^g it is written Cotes, which in our old English signifies the same with Domus. It seems that upon the advancement of Henry de Newburgh to the Earldome of Warwick, it was by the K. bestowed on him; for it appears^h that the same Henry gave certain lands lying here, to the Churches of our Lady and Aliballows, which Rog. his son and successor confirmedⁱ; adding his Grant^k of all the Tithes thereof, and C. acres of land in 23. H. 1. when he united those two Churches, making that of our Lady Collegiate: But there is no more to be said of it, forasmuch as it was so united to Warwick, that part thereof being in the possession of the Earls, which did not belong to the Colledge.

Stokebull.

ON the Northwest side of Warwick lyes Stokebull, now onely known by certain grounds bearing that name, but heretofore it hath been a petty Hamlet, as the name imports, Stoke signifying the same with Villa. The first mention I find thereof is in the foundation of the Collegiate Church of Warw. by E. Roger in H. 1 time, where he grants^l thereto the Tithes of certain Lands situate therein; so that there is no question but it came to Henry E. of Warwick, as all the rest of the lands thereabout did; viz. upon his advancement to that Earldome, or in augmentation of it, as I have elsewhere shewed: Howbeit till 14 E. 1. I have not seen any thing more thereof that is remarkable; but then was there a Fine levied^m of the moyetie of this Mannour by John le Lou and Amice his wife Plantiffs, and Philip le Lou and Margery his Wife deforc: whereby the said moyetie became settled upon the same John and Amice, and the Heires of Amice: And further than this have I no more to say of it, other than that it is in Rous hisⁿ Catalogue amongst the antiently depopulated Villages, whereof he makes so much complaint.

Levenbull.

This place, lying neer to the last, hath no habitation now thereon, yet do the Grounds retain the name; but what I have seen^o of it, is no more, than that Rob. de Morton, who stiles himself Dominus de Levenbull, by his Deed, whereupon a Fine was levied xv. Hill. 29 H. 3. granted to the Monastery of S. Sepulchers here in Warwick, totam terram illam extra Warrewyke, ex parte occidentali, que appellatur Levenbull; which it seems was a Purchase; for the Canons of that House gave fourty Marks of Silver in consideration of that Grant, and covenanted to pay to the said Robert and his Heirs 13 s. 4 d. per an. at the Feasts of S. Mich. and the Annunciation of our Lady, by even portions.

Woodlow.

Woodlow.

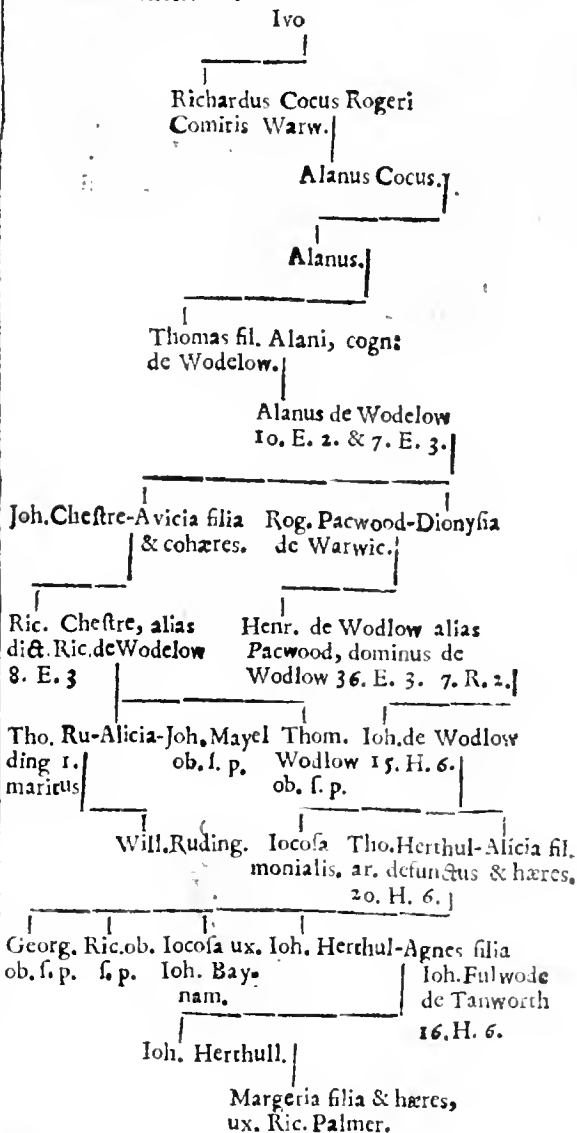

THE first mention I find of this place, is in that foundation of the Collegiat Church at Warwick, made by Earl Roger in 23. H. 1 where the Tithes of certain lands lying here, are given thereto; and in that grant^p it is called Wodolau: By which testimony, tis plain enough, that it was originally part of those possessions, which Henry de Newburgh, the first Earl after the Norman Conquest, had hereabouts; and there is no doubt (I think) to be made, but that it was a member of Warwick. In H. 1 time, one Richard the Son of Tvo, Cook to the before specified Earl Roger, held it; but having no grant thereof in writing, and leaving a Son called Alan, whom he had trained up in his own profession, the said Alan succeeding in that office as servant to William E. of Warwick (son to Earl Roger) obtained a special Charter^r from him, in H. 2 time, of this Lordship to himself and his Heirs, whereby the Metes and Bounds thereof are exactly set forth. By which Charter he also granted to the said Alan and his Heirs power to keep a Court of all his own proper Tenants, as well those residing in Warwick as at Woodlow, and to take Toll of them for all things that they should buy or sell within the Borough of Warwick: Ratifying moreover to him and his Heirs, the office of Master Cook in his Kitchen, which the said Richard his father heretofore held in his, and E. Roger his fathers time; with all Fees of his Kitchen belonging to the Master Cook, both, in liveryes and Hories, as the Elquiers of his household then had, and as the said Richard his father used to have in the days of the same Earl Roger and his the said Earl. And moreover granted unto him and his heires a yard land lying in Cotes, with whatsoever lands the said Richard his father held in Warwick, to hold therewith freely and quietly, &c. with Tol and Team, Sach and Soc Infatheycol and in free socage; paying yearly to the said Earl and his heires a pair of Gloves at Easter for all secular service, suit of Court, and demand whatsoever: for which grant and confirmation the said Alan gave unto him x s. in money, xij Geese, and a firkin of wine.

From this Alan descended the family of Woodlow (as the pedigree^{*} here inserted sheweth) so named in respect of their residence here, who bore^r for thir Armes Gules, a fesse argent betwixt six crosses crosslet Or, differing nothing from the coat of Beauchamp E. of Warwick, but in the colour of the fesse: Of which was one Thomas de Woodlow Feodary^r to Ric. Beauchamp E. of Warwick, for all his lands in this County, in 10. H. 4. And in 5. H. 5. one of his Councill.

In 15. H. 6. this Mannour, being entailed by John Wodelow, was setled upon George Herthul, his granchild, with divers remainders: but it seems that some of the Herthulls past away their right herein, to Alice the daughter of Ric. Chester, grandchild and heir (after the death of her brother Thomas) to Avicia one of the daughters and coheirs of Alan de Wodelow; for after the death of her second husband, sc. John Mayell, being in her free state of widowhood, by her deed^{*} bearing date at Warwick on the feast day of S. Hillary 27. H. 6. she granted the capital mess. of Woodlow, with all the lands thereto belonging (excepting some that had been exchange'd away) to John Brome of Warwick; which John was he that became owner of Badley-Clinton in this County (as I shall there shew:) from whose son Nich: Brome, by Lettice the daughter of Nich: Catesby, his third wife, is descended^r Robert Brome Gent. now residing here, to whom the inheritance of this place still continues.

It seemes, that this was anciently a little village, though now reduc'd to one house; for I find it in the list of those places, whereof John Rous, in his complaint of the Depopulations in this County, doth make mention.

Chesterton.

HAVING now done with all the places of note within the precincts of Warwick, and following the river Avon about a mile and halfe lower, I find it increast by a petty torrent, which, coming from the Southeast, joyneth therewith. This brook riseth within the precincts of Chesterton, of which place being next in order to discourse, I shall observe, that antiently it had many Inhabitants, for no lesse than Lxxix families doth Rous make mention^r of, that there resided, which by depopulation were in his time reduced to three, but now are augmented to the number of xliii. Through this Lordship doth one of those famous Roman ways (whereof I have spoke) scil. fron, extend it self; upon which, as is apparent, hath been a Roman Fortification, and within the com-

passé thereof divers old coynes digg'd up. That such fortified places had the name of Cear-tre by our Ancestors the Saxons; is evident enough; so that we need not look farther for an Etymologie of this Towns name, antiently written Cearstretun, and Cestretun, than the situation thereof is neer to that place.

Part of this Village being given^b by Earl Leofrike to the Monks of Cobentre upon the foundation of that Monastery (1. Edm. Conf.) was by the Conq. Survey^c certified to contain 1 hide and a half, and valued at L. s. By which Survey it also appears that Henry de Fersers (a great man at that time) had half a hide here, then held of him by one Wazelinus and valued at x. s. But the greatest proportion, viz 3. hides did Ric. Forestarius at that time hold, which was rated at C. s. and whereof 4 Theins^d were posselt in Edm. the Conf. time. This Ric. Forestarius is also called Ric. Venator, and Ric. Chineu. what he had here in Chefferton was a third^e part of the town; being given^f to him by Will. the Conq. together with other lands in Sergeanty; viz by the service of keeping the Forest of Canoc in Staffordshire, paying to the K. x marks yearly for the Bailiwick thereof; and for the said lands he so held. Which Ric. founded^g the Church here, endowing it with lands of two marks per an. value, and had issue one only daughter called Margerie,^h married to Walter Crok, who in 5. Steph. gaveⁱ 3. marks of gold to the K. pro rehabendo Ministerio suo, which I conclude to be for his office of Forester in the Forest of Canok; and xiiii. l. x. s. v. d. for the land of Ric. Chinewe, (his wifes father.)

To this Walter succeeded Will. his son^j and heir, who gave^k to the Monks of Radmoze, in the said Forest of Canok (afterwards translated to Stonley in this County) all his lands in Witley in Com. Staff. in consideration whereof he was made partaker of the whole benefit of their Cister-tian Order, and promised that his body should have sepulture in their Monastery. On the Canons of Kenilworth he conferred^l the Church of Chefferton, and granted^m to the Kts. Templars a yard land in this Lordship; but an ill fate attended him, for he was hang'dⁿ, though^o for what appears not; whereupon his lands were seized^p into the K. hands, who gave^q them in marriage to one Rob. de Broc, with Margerie his the said Will. sister. Which Rob. de Broc, being a man of note in his days, for he is called^r Marescallus Angliae, & Forestarius de Canoc, gave^s to the Monks of Stonclep a meis. and half a yard land lying in Radway in this County, and dyed^t in 5. R. 1. leaving issue Margerie^u his only daughter and heir, marryed^v to Hugh de Loges; who in 7. R. 1. payd^w lx marks fine towards the rayling that great sum of money for the Ks. redemption, for which he had the custody of the Forest of Canok with his house at Orimbaldetun, and the land of Rob. de Broc, whose daughter and heir he had wedded, rendred to him.

It seems that this Hugh was in armes against K. John in those turbulent times towards the end of his reign, for which his Castle of Orimbaldetun and Forestership of Canok were seized into the Ks. hands: for I find that the said King, by his Precept^x bearing date 1. Dec. 17. Joh. directed to Thomas de Erdington, appointed, that in case he found good pledges for his faithfull service to him, and sure custody of the Forest of Canok, with the said Castle, that then he should render them to him; but he lived not above a year afterwards, as I guefs; for in 1. H. 3. the custody of his heir, called Hugh, was committed^y to Will. de Cantilupe, which Hugh held this Mannour of Cestretun and Forestership of Canok in sergeanty, as his Ancestors had done; and had suit^z with the Kts. Templars for that hide of land given to them, here, in Chefferton; whereof I have already spoke, but could not recover it. In 19. H. 3. he received a command^a from the K. to permit Will. Fitz-Walkelin to enter his Hart hounds at hunting the Stag in his Bayliwick. In 25. H. 3. he payd^b C. l. fine to the K. for some miscarriages in his said office of Forester. In 36. being a prisoner^c in Warwick gaol upon an Appeal prosecuted against him for killing of Rog. le Straunge, he was bayled. The next year following I find^d that the Shiriff of Staffordshire had command from the K. not to distrain him to take the order of Knighthood, except it did appear that he had other lands for which he ought to be a Kt. than those that were in Sergeanty. but he was the last of this family that held the Stewardship and Bayliwick of Canok-Forest; for it appears^e, that K. H. 3. disposed thereof to Sir Thomas de Weseham Kt. and his heirs, who past away the inheritance of it, in 12. E. 1. to Philip de Montgomeri, the K. confirming^f the grant.

This Hugh de Loges lived to be a very old^g man, and was not^h compos mentis before he dyed. It seemes he had conceived some displeasure against his son and heir, viz. Ric. de Loges, and therefore did endeavour to disheritⁱ him of this Lordship and other lands, selling^k this to the Kts. Templars; which Richard was a busy^l actor in that rebellion of the Barons in H. 3. time, being of the retinue^m to Ralph Lord Basset; in respect whereof, all his lands in this County and Staff. were seized on, and bestowedⁿ, inter alia, by the K. on Thomas Corbet of Sitropshire. 30. Nov. 50. H. 3. but submitting to the Decree called Dictum de Kenilw. as appears^o by James de Audley's undertaking for him therein, he being at the time when Kenilworth castle was rendred, with^p young Sim. Montfort in the Isle of Ely, and finding good sureties, viz. Will. de Mortein, and Will. de la Rye for his future fidelity, was received^q into the K. protection as his good subiect. And in August following, sc. 51. H. 3. found so much favour, that whereas his father had, to the disherison of him, aliened this Mannour of Chefferton to the Templars, the K. taking^r advantage of its being soe conveyed without License, forasmuch as it was held of him in Capite by Sergeanty, seized upon it, and in consideration of Cxx. marks Fine, reinvested^s him therein, promising that he would not permit the said Hugh to do any thing tending to the disheriting him of this, or any other lands so held; provided that he did conveniently maintain his said father during life, at that time old and weak, and not in his senses, as I have intimated.

After which in 3. E. 1. this Ric. de Loges, being very much indebted, obtained License from the K. that for rayling of some money, he might demise his lands for a certain time: but, it seems, that under colour of this liberty to set, he absolutely sold part of them; whereupon the Shiriff of this County had command^t to seize them into his hands for the Ks. use, sc. in 5. E. 1. in which year he was^u with the K. and his Army in Wales: what Agreement he made appears not, but certain it is that he reposselt them again: for in

13. E. 1. being questioned by what authority he held a Court-Let here, and claimed Affize of Bread and Beere within this Lordship, he pleaded * Prescription, and had allowance of those privileges. In 14. E. 1. being then a K^t, he bore for his Armes Arg. 3. piles gules, with a Buck trippint Or, in a canton azure, as appears by his seal, and dyed in 21. E. 1. leaving Ric. his son and heir, then 28 years of age, who doing his homage had livery of his lands; but enjoy'd them not long: for in 28. E. 1. he departed this life, leaving one only daughter, called Elizabeth, his heir, then 4. years of age, whose marriage was granted by the K. the next ensuing year to Nich. de Warrewyk; Which Nich. matcht her unto his own son Nicholas, who did his fealty and had livery of her lands in 6. E. 2. which Nich. had issue John de Warrewyk his son and heir, who by the K. special command, entailed this Lordship in 9. E. 3. for default of issue by himselfe and Margaret his wife, upon John de Sanderfed of Robbasson and his heirs, the same John having married his mother.

During the time that this John de Sanderfed held it, he obtained a Charter of Free Warren in all his demesne lands here, to enjoy during his own life, and afterwards to the right heires thereof. But upon his death, in 27. E. 3. John the son of Will. de Peito became posselt thereof, by marriage with Alianore daughter and heir to John the son of the before specified Nich. de Warwick; from which time the Familie of Peto have had their principall seat here. Being therefore now to proceed with what I have found historically relating thereto, to the end the more light may be given, as well to what I have already spoke, touching the successive Possessors of this place, as to what I shall say of the rest, I have here inserted this ensuing Pedegree.

And because this family of Peto hath been so eminent in former times, as by what followes will appear, I shall ascend somewhat higher in my discourse thereof, than the time that I find them first posselt of Chesterston, especially considering that they had lands in this County before.

The first mention, I meet with of this name and Family in Warwickshire, is in 6. E. 1. Where Ric. de Peito is recorded to have been posselt of certain lands in Dialton juxta Stratford super Avon; which (I suppose) were those that he had from Rose Trussell, and which she purchased of Walt. de Lodington; for Walt. the son of Will de Lodington commenced suit against him, and against the other Walter for divers lands here, about that time. This Ric. being a man of the superiour ranck amongst the gentry of his time, was one of the Coroners in this County, and dyed in that office, 28. E. 1. as appears by the Writ for causing another to be chosen in his stead, in which he is called Ric. de Pistavia. To him succeeded John, a person learned in the Lawes, who by his eminencie in that profession (as tis most probable) was the first advancer of this Familie to those fair possessions, which qualified his descendants the better for such great and notable employments as thyafterwards had in the world. In 15. E. 2. and so every year after, during that Ks. time, he was constituted one of the Justices for Gaol-delivery in this County; so also in the first and second years of K. E. 3.

In 3. he was^x one of the Justices appointed for conservation of the Peace. In 4. one^y of the K^s for this Shire in the Parl. then holden at Westm. at which time he was called Job. de Peito senior, in regard his eldest son bore that name, who before that time acted in sundry publick employments, as I shall shew by and by. In 9. E. 3. he was one^z of the two Commissioners constituted for the arraying of all men in this Shire, according to their estates and degrees; as also^a for conservation of the Peace according to the statute of Portsmouth. In^b 12. E. 3. one of the Justices for Goal delivery at Warwick. In^c 14. one of the Commissioners assigned for selling the Nones of Sheaf, Wool, and Lamb; as also for^d levying and collecting a Tenth, then granted unto the K. in Parliament; and in 21. and 22. E. 3. was in^e Commiss. for the Gaol delivery at Cobentre: but he wrote himself of Drayton, where he held^f lands of John de Trussel by the xth. part of a Knights fee. It seemes that in his age he travelled into those parts of France from whence his ancestors came, for I find^h that he dyed in Gascon, and left issue 2 sons, John and Will. both well advanced by good marriages; whereof John had to wife Alice the widow of John de Langely, one of the daughters and coheirs of Isabel de Hules (which Isab. was daughter and coheir to Rog. de Herdebergh, as in Willie I have already declared,) & Will. married Margaret daughter and heir to Rob. de Langley, (as in Wolthamcote I have shewed) whose posterity became heirs unto, at length, to Geffery de Langley, the principall branch of that family: But with John, called Job. de Peito junior, during his fathers life time, I will proceed.

The first mention I find of his publick employments, is in 6. E. 3. and then was he in Commissionⁱ, in this County, for assessing and collecting a xvth and xth granted to the K. in Parl. In^k 7. E. 3. he had the office of Eschaetor for the Counties of Heref. Glouc. Worcester, Salop, Staff. and the Marches of Wales, and substituted^l John de Saundersted (of Wotton-Warren in this shire) his deputy therein, for the Counties of Salop Staff. and Marches of Wales: which office this John de Peito held^m for 2. years. In 10. E. 3. the K. having a xth granted to him in the Parl. then held at Spotttingham, for support of his warrs against the Scots, he was appointedⁿ to be one of the Receivers thereof for this County; in which year the K. by his special Pat.^o exempted him from Knight-hood, during his life, except he himself should be willing thereto; and made him one^p of the Commissioners for to hear and determine matters of felony and misdemeanor in this Shire. The next ensuing year was he again assigned^q to be one of the Receivers of the xvth and xth then granted to the K. in Parl. and also one^r of the Commissioners in this County & Leicestershire for explaining the K. meaning in certain particulars handled in that Parl. In 15. E. 3. was he appointed^s one of the Assessors and Collectors of the Nones of Sheaf, Wool, and Lamb in this County, granted to the King in Parliament the preceding year. In 17. E. 3. he had a Pat.^t specially exempting him from the office of Sheriff, Eschaetor, or any other; as also for serving upon any Jury, without his own good will. In^u 20. E. 3. he should have attended the K. in person, over into France, with his Army; and for that purpose did array himself accordingly; but by a particular Pat. he had then leave to stay behind, and was also exempted from contributing to the charge of that voyage: and not onely so, but at the special request of William de Clinton Earl of Huntingdon, had the Kings Letters Patents^w of priviledge granted to him, that he should not, during his life, be exposed to attend him in any warlike service, nor be charged with finding any men at Armes, Hoblers, or Archers, except he himselfe were willing thereto. This John was also a Lawyer as well as his father, and of Councel^x to Wolstan Bishop of Worcester in all his affairs relating to this Shire, and so likewise to the Prior and Monks of Worcester, with whom he became retained^y in 17. Edw. 3. and covenanted to be for them in all causes and upon all occasions, and not against them or their Monastery for any person whatsoever. To his second wife, hee wedded^z the Lady Beatrice de Bishopsden, widow of Sir John de Bishopsden Knight, but daughter^a and heir to John de Sheldon; and bearing a venerable respect to the Canons of Kenilworth, in this County; not only gave^b them the adyouson of the Church of Locksley, to be appropriated to the use of that Monastery, but lands of good value in Locksley; in consideration whereof, they assigned^c a certain Annuity to be paid to a Chantry Priest, which should sing Masse daily in the Chapel of our Lady, adjoyning to the Parish Church of Sheldon, for the good estate of him the said John, and the Lady Beatr. his wife, Thomas de Beauchamp Earl of Warwick, and the Lady Catherine his wife, and William de Clinton Earl of Huntingdon, during their lives, and afterwards for the health of their soules; as when I come to Sheldon shall be more fully shewed.

In 7. Edw. 3. he bore^d for his Armes three Maidenheads, as his father had done; but afterwards, scil. 16. Edw. 3. he changed that coat, and gave^e upon a Cheveron, betwixt 6. Crosses Crosslets fitchè, 3 mullets; which armes he assumed (as I conceive) out of some special relation that he had to William de Clinton Earl of Huntingdon (of whom in Parloke I have spoke) who bore for his coat Arg. 6 Crosses Crosslets fitchè sable, upon a cheif azure, two mullets Or, peirced igules. But in 47. Edw. 3. he dyed^f without issue, leaving his brother William his heir, then lx. years of age. Which William having wedded the heir of Langley (as hath been said) was Sheriff^g of this County and Leicestershire in 14. Edw. 3. In^h 17. Edw. 3. there were divers Proctors of Cardinals, and others from the Court of Rome, as well English as forrainers, who by virtue of the Popes Bulls made out processe against sundry persons, much derogating from the King's royall power in this his Realm; whereupon Commissions were issued out to divers persons through England, for the finding them out, and arresting and bringing them before himself and his Councell; of which Commissioners this William de Peito wasⁱ one of those that were assigned, for this County, to that purpose. So also in^k 18. Edw. 3. to enquire, what persons were seized of lands to the value of Cs. per annum, and upwards to a thousand pounds, over and above all reprises, and to make certificate thereof to the King, And likewise in^l 21. Edw. 3. for levying the subsidy of Wools then granted to the King in Parliament towards the supporting his warrs with France. And,

In 35 E. 3. he with his Sonns, John and Thomas, was attended upon Raph E. of Stafford in his Irish journey that year: unto which Raph, he was killed^o Attornatus generalis; but he varied from his Father in the bearing of his Arms, and took barry of 6 peices Arg. and Gules per pale indented and counterchanged, as appeareth by his Seal^p; which Coat his Posterity have ever since retained. When he dyed, I am not certain, nor how long he lived after 4 R. 2. but he had issue^q *Will. (as I suppose) shortly after, for I find little mention further of him: So that John was his Heir, and became the first Lord of Chefferton of this Family, by marriage with Elleanor daughter and heir of John the son and heir to Nich. de Warwick before specified; which John, being a Kt. in 38. E. 3 served afterwards as one of the Kts. for this Shire, in the several Parliaments of 42, 43, and 45 E. 3. held in those years at Westminster and Winchester, in which said 45 year he superintended the Assessment and Collection of the Subsidy for this County, then granted to the K. In 5. R. 2. he was also one of the Kts. for this Shire: and the same year a Commissioner for conservation of the Peace, and arresting of the Rebels. In 7 and 10 R. 2. he was again Kt. for this shire; In 11 R. 2. Lieutenant to the Constable of Dober-Castle. In 12 he with Sir John Lakenbith Kt. were Lieutenants in the Court Military to the Constable and Marshall of England; so also in 15 R. 2. and dyed in 19 R. 2. leaving Will. his son and heir then 30 years of age, who did his Homage the same year, and had Livery of the lands of his Mothers Inheritance. Which Will. was in 21 R. 2. constituted one of the Commissioners for Assessing and gathering a xv. and tenth then granted to the K. in Parliament, and in 4 H. 4. also was a Commissioner of Array in this County.

Regist. In 6. H. 4. he released all his right in the ad-Coll. de volution of the Church of Wolthamcote to the warw. Dean and Canons of the Collegiate Church of 170. Warwick, which T. Beauchamp E. of Warwick (who in 15. R. 2. gave the same unto them) had of the grant of Sir John Peyto Kt. (his father) in 38. E. 3. In consideration whereof the said Dean and Canons did oblige themselves by Indenture, that so soon as they should have notice of his death, they would forthwith cause his body to be brought unto Warwick, if he departed this life within this County, and at their own charges in-terre the same in the before specified Coll. Church, in such place where he the said Will. should appoint, and keep his Anniversary on the day of his death every year, registering his name in their Martyrologe; as also pray for him and his ancestors, as Founders and Patrons of the said Church at Wolthamcote; And moreover cause his grave to be covered with a Monumentall stone, whereupon his Armes with his Epitaph should be graven, according to the direction of him the said Will.
or his Counsel; whence I guess, that the raised Monument in the North crosse of the Coll. Church at Warwick was for this man, though some painting on the wall of late years directed Sir Edw.
Peyto (the heir of this family) in repairing it to cause a new Inscription to be put thereon, intimating it to be of Edw. 3. time. He wedded ^k Joan, the daughter of Sir Job. Thornbury Kt. (who overli-ving him, afterwards married to Sir Rob. Corbet Kt.) and departed this life in 8. H. 4. leaving issue Will. his son and heir, whose lands, by reason of his minority, were in 10. H. 4. committed to the custody of John Knightley the younger, untill

he came of full age.

In 3. H. 5. there was a purpose to have matcht o Pat. 3. H.
this young gentleman with Eliz. the daughter of 5. p. 2.
Sir Rob. Franceys Kt. but she lived not long, neither was he above xvi years of age at that time. p Esc. 13.
This Will. was one of those persons of quality, H. 4. m.
who, bearing ancient Arms from their Ancestors, 37.
had summons in 7. H. 5. to serve the K. in person for defence of the Realm; and in 2. H. 6. became retained with Ric. Beauchamp Earl of Warwick for term of life, for which he had a Pension of xx marks per an. In 8. H. 6. he was knigh-ted, and in 10. H. 6. retained by Indenture to serve the K. in his French wars for half a year, with xxx men at Armes himself accounted for one,
as also CL. Archers, well and sufficiently mounted, armed, and arrayed according to their degrees; and in consideration thereof to receive 2s. per diem wages, for himself, and xii d. per diem for his men at Armes, with the accustomed reward; viz. according to the proportion of C. marks for xxx men at Armes the quarter, and for each of his Archers
vid. per diem; it being then covenanted betwixt them, that the K. should have the third part of all he might get by the warr, and the third of the thirds of whatsoever his retinue did gaine in that Voyage, by Prisoners, gold, silver, or Jewells, and such prizes that exceeded the value of x. marks, and were not to be employed for victualling of the Army: And the said Sir Will. to make benefit of all Prisoners, taken by him, or those of his retinue in that Voyage, except Kings, Kings sons, or any of the blood royall of France, or any of the principal Commanders of the French Kings Army,

Army, bearing the arms of France, or of the Constables or Marshalls of France, or those which were Adversors in, or consenting to the murder of John D. of Burgoin.

At that time he bore his own paternal Coat, quarter'd with Lingley, viz. Arg. a Fesse sable with 3 pellets in Chief; and for his Crest, upon a Torse a pair of wings, as is to be seen by the impression of his Seal. In 15 H. 6. he was Shiriffe of his County and Leicester-shire, and the next year following had a special Patent exempting him from the office of Shiriffe, Escheator, Coroner or any other; as also from serving on Juries; which favour the K. granted to him in recompensationem bonorum obsequiorum qua fidelis miles noster Will. Peito nobis in guerris nostris, & aliis impendit, & adhuc impendit, as the words thereof do import. In 17. H. 6. being again retained to serve the K. in his Warrs of France and Normandy, for halfe a year, where the said K. or his Council there, or his Lieutenant or Governour in that Realm, or the Duchy of Normandy should think most fit, he was to have 50 men at Arms, and 210 Archers, well and sufficiently mounted, armed, and arrayed; and in consideration thereof 2 s. per diem wages for himself, 12 d. per diem for each of his men at Arms, with the reward accustomed, and 6 d. for his Archers, as also the benefit of all Prisoners, as upon his former retainers; which Indenture bears date 25 May the same year. After which, viz. in June following he shipped over his forces, with divers other retained in like sort, and mustered by Sr. J. Montgomery K. Jo. Starlaw Treasurer of the Duchy of Normandy and Ric. Curson Esquires; and being thus honourably employed, spared not his own purse for advancement of the Ks. service, as the large summes of money taken up on trust, for which Sr. Will. Mountfort, Kt. John Curson Esq; Sr. John Gressly Kt. Will. Lucy, Rob. Francens, and John Pultney Esq; stood engaged with him in Statute a merchant do manifest.

Of this Sr. William I further find, that he was Lieutenant general of the Marshallship of France, under the famous John Talbot E. of Shrewsbury in An. 1448. 27. H. 6. and Captain of the Bastile before Diepe; but was there taken prisoner by the French, and put to ransom him self at a very great Fine, for raising whereof he had the K. Licence to mortgage this Lordship of Chesterton, with those of Solo and Wylep before specified; and in 30 H. 6. pawned them to Sr. Drew Barentine Kt. Walt. Mounttall and others for 390 li. In a Grant of his, that I have seen, he styles himself Guillaume Peto chevalier maitre d'ostell de treshunt & puissant Prince Mons. le Duc de Somerset, general Gouverneur en France et Normandy: But after this misfortune befell him at Diepe, I have not observed any thing very notable of him, so that 'tis like he retired from those publike services. He married Katherine the daughter of the before specified Sr. John Gressly Kt. about the 4 of H. 6. and departed this life in 4. E. 4. leaving issue John his Son and Heir, then 30 years of age; who in 32 H. 6. wedded Eleanor the daughter of Rob. Mansfeld; and had livery of his lands in 7 E. 4. at which time the K. respited his Homage: The next year following he payd 8 l. Ransom to the K. for this Mannour, held by grand Serjeanty to keep the Forrest of Canok, as I have already said: But of him I have seen nothing further memorable, than that he rebuilt the ancient Mannour house of this Lordship, as the Armes in a great Canton Window of the Hall, which I have in pag. 377. represented, do shew: and that he dyed on the Even of the blessed Virgin Assumpcion, 3 H. 7. leaving issue Edward his Son and Heir then 30 years of age: which Edward had to wife Goditha the daughter of Thro. Throgmorton Esq; and departed this life at Throgmorton in Com. Wigorn: (her fathers houte) as it seems; for at Fladbury (which is the parish Church to it) he lieth buried, as his Monument, whereof this is a true shadow, witnesseth, having issue John 9 years old and upwards, and a younger soun called Peter a Cardinall in Q. Maries daies.

Which John, being thus in minority, was committed to the tuition of Rob. Throgmorton his Uncle, but afterwards had 2 wives; first Anne the daughter of R. Cooke, and secondly Margaret daughter to Sr. John Baynham Kt. and left issue John, who married Anne the daughter of Sr. John Ferrers of Lamworth Castle, about the 33 of H. 8. Which John dyed 11 Sep. 5. & 6. Ph. & M. leaving Humphrey his Son and Heir, then 26 years of age, who in 1. M. married Anne the daughter to Basil Fiellding of Beltenham Esq; and in 27 Eliz. dyed. To whom succeeded Will. and to him Sr. Edward &c. as the Pedegree before inserted sheweth.

Within the Precincts of Chesterton was there another Mannour, whereof one Gilbert le Harpout dyed seized in 32 E. 1. but whether this was that proportion that belong'd originally to the the Monks of Coventre in the Conquerors time, or that which Henry de Feriers then held (whereof I have already spoke) or both, is hard to say: Evident it is, that one Geffrey le Brune possessed certain lands here in H. 2. time, and had a Daughter named Constance wedded to Henry del Broc; from which Henry descended the same Gilbert le Harpur; but the said land did not all come to him by her, for it appears that Brune bestowed part of it on the Templars; and that Jeffrey Fitz-Stephan, the first Master of the Temple here in England, in H. 2. time, by the common consent of the rest of that Order in this Realm (here at London) gave that part so bestowed on them, to the said Henry and Constance and their Heirs, paying to the Knights Templars and their Successors 20 s. per Ann. Howbeit the rest that Brune had here, descended (as I conceive) to the said Constance; For I find that Rob. fil. Odonis (at that time Lord of Herberbury) confirmed it unto the said Henry and Constance, to enjoy as freely as the same Brune held it; the extent thereof being 4 Messuages, and 4 yard land, and held of his Heirs by the service of 20 s. payable at the Annuntiation of our Lady, and St. Michael the Archangell by even portions.

Descendants thus deduced by the learned Cambden, and the Seals of Arms of some of them so drawn from certain original Charters, by that judicious Antiquary (my worthy friend) Sr. Tho. Shirley Kt. as they are here expressed.

But the last of this Family that had to do here, was John the son of John le Harpur; who in 25 E. 3. past away all his lands in this place, as also what he had in Pillardinton Hercey, unto Will de Peito and his Heirs (so that since that time the Descendants of the said Will have enjoy'd them, together with the other Mannour here in Cherterton (whereof I have already spoke) Which John dying without issue, left Richard his Brother and Heir; and he John, from whom the Harpours late of Ruthall in Staffordshire, who flourish there in an eminent condition, for divers Ages, did descend; Edward Harpur Esq; being the immediate Heir male to them, and now living.

The Church (dedicated to S. Giles) was given to the Canons of Kenilworth by Will. Croc in H. 2. time, as I have already shewed; yet I find, that K. Ric. 1. by his Letters Pat. bearing date 10. April. 5. of his reign, presented thereunto one Eustace a Clerk, upon the vacancy thereof, by reason that Rob. de Broc (whose daughter and heir became wedded to Hugh de Loges before recited) was then dead, and his lands at that time, in respect of the Tenure in Sergeanty, in the Ks. hands. However the K. then presented, there is no doubt but that the right was in the said Canons of Kenilworth, and so continued till they past it away to Rog. Molend B. of Cob. and Uch. and his successors in 12 E. 1. After which, sc. in 19. E. 1. I find it valued at 24 Marks; and in 11. E. 2. that the K. in consideration of the Mannour of Greneworth in Com. Midd. which Walt. Langton then Bp. of Coventre and Uch. (as also L. There was also a certain place here, held like-wise by the said Gilbert le Harpur of the K. by Grand Sergeanty; viz. to keep the Hay called Teddlesley-Hey within the Forrest of Canoke at his proper costs. And that the Ancestors of the same Gilbert had some possessions in this County, long before is very probable; for it appears that one Hugh Harpur was a witness to the Grant of certain lands made to the Canons of Kenilworth, by Hugo fil. Richardi, in the time of K. H. 1. From which Hugh I find the line of his

Kingston, alias Little Chesterton.

THis, being in the parish of Chesterton, is also by depopulation reduced only to one House; but it was given^s by Turchill de Warwick to the Monks of Abingdon in Will. the Conq. time, Simard son to the said Turchill (then a youth) consenting thereto, and the K. himself confirming^h it. By the Conq. Surveyⁱ it was valued at C s. and certified to contain 1 hide, one Alwol having held it in Edw. the Conf. days. At the time of the said generall Survey, the Abbot of Abingdon had another hide of land in this place, rated at L s. pawn'd onely to him by the said Turchill, which (I suppose) was not redeem'd; for by an antient Roll^k, written about K. John's time, it appears that the Monks of Abingdon then posselt it, and that the extent thereof amounted to ix. carucats of land. But notwithstanding that this gift was soe confirm'd to the Monks by the Conq. yet did Henry de Newburgh, after he had, by the favour of K. Will. Rufus, in the beginning of his reign, obtained Turchill's lands in augmentation of his Earldome, lay his claim^l thereto; soe that Rainaldus, the then Abbot, was glad to give^m him a mark in gold to ratify their title. After which, sc. in 4. H. 1. the said Monks grantedⁿ it, in fee to one Anskitell, who held lands of them at Madmarton in com. Oxon. in exchange for those wherein the said Anskitell, upon this agreement, quitted his title: But^o forasmuch as that land at Madmarton had been taxed to the K. in all payments for 5 hides, and that this at Chesterton was asselt at no more than one, the said Anskitell allowed the Monks all the Tiche of his corne arising out of this.

To which Anskitell, in K. John's time, succeeded one Sir Rob. de Kyngestune Kt. in the possession of this place (whether by descent or otherwise is hard to say) which Sir Rob. gave^p some lands, lying here, unto Will. de Arden of Robburne, with Avicia his daughter in frank marriage: but in 36. H. 3. one Will. de Ley was owner^q of it, and held it of the Monks of Abingdon by the service of a Kts. fee. 'Tis not unlike, but that this Will. de Ley might be son to Sir Rob. de Kyngestune, and changed his name by residing at his Mannour of Ley in Berkshire, as was usuall enough in those times, when surnames were but in their infancy. To whom succeeded^r Thomas de Ley, who had a whole carucat of land here, and a virgat in demesne, with x Servants holding severall proportions of him under particular Rents, and certain servile employments: And to him John de Leye, who in 6. E. 3. obtain'd a Charter^s of Free-warren in all his demesne lands here, and at Leye in Berksh. which John in 12. E. 3. past^t away all his estate herein to Thomas de Leye, his brother, his Seal of Armes being 3. lyons passant upon a bend cottized: From which time till 3. R. 2. have I seen noe more mention of it; but then was it posselt^u by Cath. the widow of Sir Thomas Besyles Kt. daughter^v of John (son, as I suppose, of the said Thomas Leye) which Sir T. Besyles had issue Sir Peter, who dyed^w without children; whereupon Rob. Craunford son of Margaret, daughter of Alice, sister to John, father to the above specified Catherine, became his heir^y, and was 30 years of age 3. H. 6.

howbeit, soon after this, viz. in 10. H. 6. John Verney Clerk, Parson of Bredon in Worcestersh. with others, were certified^z to be Lords thereof (of which John I shall say more, in Compton-Murdak.) But it seemes, that he and the rest were onely Feoffees in trust for Ric. Verney esq. (afterwards Kt.) his brother, in those turbulent times; for I find, that in 25. H. 6. Tho. Hugford esq. Nich. Rody, and Will. Berkswell Clerk (to whom, belike, the other Feoffees past their interest) by their deed^a bearing date 10. May, released to the said Ric. Verney, and Eliaore his wife, all their right in this Mannour; the depopulation whereof, as may seem by Rous his complaint^a, hath been antient. From which Sir Ric. Verney descended Sir Ric. Verney, late of Compton-Murdak Kt. who, in our time, seled a considerable part thereof, together with the Mannour-House, upon John Verney his younger son, whose posterity do still enjoy it.

Tachebrooke Episcopi.

Following this petty stream I come next to Tachebrook, commonly called Bishops Tachebrook, for distinction from the other which is in this parish. In the Conq. time it was held^b by the Bp. of Chester (id est Cob. and Uich.) and contained 7. hides, having then 2. Mills rated at xii s. but all at vii l. being part of the possessions belonging to the Church of St. Chad at Uichfeld, as Domesday book witnesseth, wherein it is written Tachebroc. I can but guess at the Etymologie of the name; perhaps it might be from the Brittainish word tegwch, though there be so much difference in the orthography; for in pronuntiation there can be no great dissonance, and therefore considering that tegwch signifies the same that pulchritudo and serenitas doth, it may be applicable enough to this little brook, which is soe pure and clear a torrent.

To the successive Bishops of this Dioces it continued till E. 6. time; of which Rog. Molend in 43. H. 3. obtained a Charter^c of Free warren for himself and his successors in all his demesne lands here. In 7. E. 1. it appears^d, that the Bp. held 3 carucats of lands here in demesne; and that he had xix servants who workt^e 3 dayes a weeke for him through the whole year, and used to mow ad magnam Precariam (which I take to be his generall Reap, or some such day in Harvest.) That he had also 1x Cottiers who payd certain Rents, and did work in Harvest; as also six Freeholders that did the like, and a Court Leet, with Gallows; for which, together with Assize of Bread and Beer he pleaded Prescription in^f 13. E. 1. and had allowance of them: But in 1. E. 6. it was passed^g by Ric. Sampson, the then Bp. to Thomas Fysher esq. together with Bishops Achington, Cepdon, and Chadshunt, (asin Bishops Achington is shewed;) which alienation was confirm'd^h by the Dean and Chapter, as alsoⁱ by the K. who granted unto the said T. Fysher and his heirs certain Liberties to be exercised within the precincts of these Lordships (whereof I have also made mention in Achington;) which T. Fysher dyed^j seized thereof in 20. Eliz. leaving Edw. his son and heir, who sold it.

The Church (dedicated to S. Chad) hath for a long time been a Prebend^k of Uichfeld, and had a Vi-

Tachebrooke-Malory.

Though this be in the Hundred of Knightslow, yet because it is contained within the parish of Bishops Tachebrook I have referred it to be here spoken of. It is called Tachebrook-Malory for distinction from the other, in regard the Malories were antiently Lords thereof, as I shall shew anon, and in the Conq. time was certified^o to contain viii hides except one Virgate, all which were then posselt by the Earl of Mellent, and valued at xl s. but in Edw. the Conf. days one Bilwin was owner thereof.

By the said E. of Mellent, or Robert E. of Leic. his son, was Raph Boteler of Overstep first entrest of it, as it should seem; who granted it to Geffrey de Clinton, (Founder of the Castle and Priory at Kenilworth in H. 1. time) or to Geffrey his son; for by his gift^p of certain lands lying within this Lordship to the Templers, it appears that he was posselt thereof: But in the family of Clinton it continued not long; for Henry de Clinton, son to the last Geffrey, gave the whole Village with the Mill, and services of the Freeholders to the Canons of Kenilworth, in which grant it is written Tachelesbroc, (though in the Conq. Survey Tacesbroc.) It seems, that before the said grant from Boteler to Clinton was made, Malory had some estate in this Lordship past to him by Boteler; so that, in the beginning of K. Johns time, there growing dispute betwixt them touching their titles, they came at length to an Agreement, whereupon all was settled by a Fine in 3. Joh. in manner and form following (by the consent of Raph Boteler heir to the beforementioned Raph, and superior Lord of the Fee; (viz. that the Canons of Kenilworth should quietly enjoy the one half of this Lordship, sc. that which lyes North, together with the antient Mannour house, and the Mill, holding it of the same Henry de Clinton and his heirs by the service of half a Ks. fee, the said Henry and his heirs holding it over by the like service of the before specified Raph and his heirs. And that all the rest of this Village should remain to Henry Malory and his heirs to be held of the same Raph and his heirs by the service of half a Ks. fee; at which time divers of the Tenants, here, held⁹ in Villenage, and being then present and privy to this Agreement, acknowledged themselves to be Villains.

This Henry was the son¹ of Askitell Malore, who forfeited¹ all his lands, in H. 2. time, for taking part with young K. Henry in that rebellion against his father; but by a Fine of lx. marks, which he the said Henry payd to the K. in 1. Joh. he had restitution¹ of them again. To the Monks of Combe, and Canons of Kenilworth he gave "certain lands in Herberbury, and the Nuns of Polesworth 3 yard land in Osbaston in com. Leic. But the succession of these Malories, for the time that they continued Lords of this place, can I not exactly point out: certain it is that the seat where they most resided was Malton on the Wolds in Leicestersh. though they were likewise owners of Botler in this County; in all which places, (sc. Malton, Tachebroke, and Botler) had John Malory a Charter^x of Free-warren granted granted to him and his heirs dated 17. Nov. 9. E. 3. which John in 10. E. 3. had license^y to amortize one mess. with the appurtenances, lying within this Lordship, for maintenance of a Priest to sing Masse daylie in the Chapel of St. James, situate here in Tachebroke, for the health of his soul, and the soules of Margery his wife, with all the faithfull deceased. As for the two half Kts. fees, which Boteler thus had here, as abovesaid, they were by him and his heirs held² over of the Earls of Leicester (descendants from the E. of Spellent before specified) to whose Court Leet, held for the Honour of Leicester (the Inhabitants of this place (in token of the Royalty belonging to those Earls) did anciently use to appear²).

This Lordship continued in the family of Mallore till towards the later end of H. 6. time, if not longer. Whether any of them sold it to Benedict Medley (Clerk of the Signet to K. H. 7. as in Whitnash I have shewed) or from whom it was that the said Benedict purchased it, I am not sure; but apparent it is, that he dyed^b seized of it in 19. H. 7. leaving Will. his son and heir 23. years of age, who with Raph Maxfield, then Prior of Kentilworth, depopulated^c 8. mess. here, and converted CCCX. acres of land into pasture, which kept six Plows, so that now there is not above 4 Houses left in all the Village. After the dissolution of the Monasteries, that which the Canons of Kentilworth had here, was by Q. Eliz. in 4. of her reign, granted^d to Barth. Brekesby and Edw. Downing, who sold^e the same to George Medley esq. heir to the before specified Benedict; to whom succeeded Henry Medley esq. who dyed^f seized of the whole in 21. Eliz. leaving Henry his son and heir 14. years of age.

Naspes.

Within the parish of Bps-Tachebrook lyeth a place called Naspes, which hath not now above 4. houses in it, but anciently² it was more populous. The first mention I find^h of it is in 7. R. 1. where Ric. des Aspes paid one mark to the K. for seisin of his lands here; and in 9. E. 2. it was certifiedⁱ to be a Hamlet belonging unto Tachebrook before specified.

Barford.

Below Tachebrook, about 2 miles, this petty rivulet falls into Abon, on whose Southern bank, a little below, stands Barford, where is now a fair stone Bridg of many Arches. In the Conq. time Will. fil. Corbucion (of whom I shall speak in Stodley) held^k one hide here, of the K. valued at Ls. but in Edw. the Conf. days at xx s. being then posselt by Saulf. The residue of this town, at the same time held by one Hugh of Osbernus fil. Ricardi, was then certified^l to contain 4 hides and valued at xl s. having a Mill rated at ii s. in both which places it is written Bereforde.

I am of opinion, that from the said Hugh descended that family, who assumed their surname of this place, and the rather for that I find one of them in^m 23. andⁿ 24. H. 2. bearing the same Christen name: but whether Amfridus de Bereford mentioned in^o 26. H. 2. were the son of this Hugh, I cannot positively affirm; howbeit, that he was the father of Walter de Bereford is most certain^p; which Walter left issue^q Henry, and a daughter called Dionysia^r married to de Nasford by whom she had issue^s Henry de Nasford, who became heir to his uncle, and so consequently Lord of this Mannour: From this family of Bereford, did descend (as I conceive) that male branch, who were Lords of Whitnash and Shottswell in this County. But in the line of Nasford this Lordship continued not above 4 generations; for to Henry de Nasford, abovespecified, succeeded Will. his coisyn and heir, who had issue John, which was the last of that name, as the descent here drawn doth shew

Of these were Benefactors to the little Monastery of Thelesford, hard by; viz. Walt. de Bereford and Alice his wife, with Henry their son; as also^u Will. de Nasford, and John his son; which John confirmed^v what his ancestors had so given; and further added, that the Canons of that House should have free liberty of Fishing in the river of Abon every day in the week, except Sundays; viz. from Le Mill to his Mill pool; as also Common of pasture for their Cattell in the Common of Bereford. In 7. E. 1. upon that Inq. then taken, it appears^x, that the said Will. de Nasford was then Lord of this Mannour, and that he held it of Theobald de Verdon by the service of half a Kts. fee; who held it over of Rob. de Mortimer of Ricards-Castle (descended from Osborne before mentioned, as I have elsewhere shewed;) at which time the said Will. then had^y here in demesne two caruats of land, a watermill, and free fishing in Abon with a Court-Leet and Gallows; as also 4 Tenants holding 4 yard land by base service. And moreover it is evident that the Kts. Templars then held^z here, of his fee, one yard land; and the Canons^a of Thelesford xi. five whereof were given^b to them by Alice the wife of Walter de Bereford.

In 13. E. 1. the said Will. de Nasford claymed^c here, a Court-Leet, Gallows, Weyfs, with Affize of Bread and Beer by Prescription, all which were allowed: to whom succeeded John his son and heir, who being the last of that family (as I have intimated) was one of those that did partake^d with Guy de Beauchamp E. of Warw. and others, in the murder of Piers de Gaveston, for which offence he had his pardon^e in 7. E. 2. which John, about that time (it seems) past away this Lordship to the said Earl; for in 9 E. 2. Thomas E. of Warw. was certified^f to be Lord thereof, it being then then in the Kings hands, by reason of his minority: And yet afterwards in 14 E. 3. do I find, ⁸ that the same Earl had a grant thereof from William de Clinton Earl Huntingdon, unto himself and his heirs, with the reversion of certain lands, which Julian his wife held in dower of the Earl of Pembroke's inheritance, his Charter bearing date here at Bereford the Sunday next after the Feast day of S. Mathew the Apostle: After which time it continued to the succeeding Earls of Warwick, as appears by sundry Authorities ^h, till all the rest of their possessions came to the Crown (as in my discourse of Anne Countess of Warwick is manifested) wherein it rested till 1 E. 6. but then, together with the Castle of Warwick, was granted ⁱ to John Dudley Earl of Warwick, and his heirs; upon whose attainder ^k in 1 M. it devolved again to the Crown, and was by Queen Eliz. in 4. of her reign, together with other lands, past ^l to Ambrose Dudley Earl of Warwick, and the heirs male of his body; whereof sayling it return'd to the Crown.

Here was also a reputed Mannour, within the precincts of this parish, belonging to the Collegiate Church of Westbury in Gloucestershire, though how or when it came thereto I have not found; but after the dissolution, viz. in 35. H. 8. the King sold ^m it to Sir Raph Sadler Knight, and his heirs; who (it seems) past it to John Earl of Warwick: for in 6 Eliz. the Qu. granted ⁿ it to Ambrose Earl of Warwick, and the heirs male of his body, in like sort as the other Mannour whereof I have already spoke.

The Church (dedicated to S. Peter) was, in K. John's time, given ^o by Henry de Bereford to the Canons of Thebesford: but some Release did they make thereof to him again, or to his heirs: for in 4 E. 1. Will. de Nasford bestowed ^p the Advowson of it on the Monks of Chebam, for which grant they made him partaker of all their spirituall benefits.

In anno 1291. 19 E. 1. it was valued ^q at xi. marks, and in ^r 26. H. 8. at xii li. having never been appropriated.

Wasperton.

A Little below Barfod lyes Wasperton; one of the towns that Earl Leofrik gave ^t to the Monastery of Cobentre upon the first Foundation thereof (1 Edw. Conf.) which in the Conquerors Survey, was certified ^u to contain five hides and written Wasmertone, there being then a Mill rated at xx s. At that time also it yielded four Horse-load of Salt, and a thousand Eeles per annum, having woods of half a mile in length, and two furlongs in bredth, all being valued at lxx s. But in H. 2. dayes, the Monks of Cobentre past ^v away this Lordship to Walter de Cherlecote (of Cherlecote close by;) which grant was confirmed ^w by K. R. 1. and King John, and enjoyed accordingly the greatest part of H. 3. time; for in 36. H. 3. William de Lucy, (heir to the family of Cherlecote) was certified ^x to hold it of those Monks by the fourth part of a Knights fee: but by some Agreement made with this William (as it seems) they got it again; for in 41 H. 3. I find that they had Free-warren granted ^y to them therein, together with their other lands: And in 51 H. 3. in that ample Charter, ^z whereby their possessions, which they then peaceably enjoyed, were confirmed to them, it is, amongst the rest, there mentioned. I am of opinion, that the extent of the woods, which, by the Conq. Survey it was certified to contain, were wholly in Backwood, that being a member ^a thereof, and lying in the Wood-land.

In 7 E. 1. I find ^b, that the Monks of Cobentre, had two carucats of land here, in demeſn, and xxii. tenants holding xiv. yard land at will, and performing sundry servile labours in stead of Rent; as Plowing, Mowing, Reaping, making Hay, and the like, as well at Cobentre as here; as also 3. Cottiers, which paid some Rent in money, and did some work, according as the Prior should direct; And fishing in Abon, so far as their Lordship stretched. As for the priviledge of having a Court-Leet here, Gallows, Assize of Bread and Beer, Weyfs, and the like, which they had in all their Lordships, I need not so particularly enumerate them, having in Cobentre fully shew'd that they were allowed upon their claim in 13. E. 1. After the dissolution of which Monastery this Lordship continued in the Crown but a short time; for in 31 H. 8. the King by his Letters Patent dated 16. Apr. past it away to William Whorwood Esquier his Solicitor generall, and to William Walter and Katherine his wife, and their heirs: which William Whorwood, as it seems, releas't his interest to the said William Walter; for I find that William Walter of Wambleton in Com. Surr. Esquier dyed seized thereof 10. Sept. 29 Eliz. from whom it came to Kath. one of the daughters of Sir William Walter Knight, now the wife of Sir Simon Fanshawe Knight (as in Winton is more fully manifested.)

The Church (dedicated to S. John Baptist) was anciently a Chapell belonging to Hampton Episcopi, having always used to be presented to as a Vicaridge by the Parson of Hampton: which Vicaridge in 26 H. 8. was valued at 5 l. per annum.

this Inſcription.

Hic jacet Thomas Croſſe, quondam Firmarius de Waſperton, qui obiit XIII. die menſis Apri-lis Anno D. MCCCCxxiii. Cujus anima pro-pitietur Deus, Amen.

Hethcote.

This is in the Pariſh of Waſperton, but whether it was ever a Village or not, I cannot affirm, howbeit the appellation ſhews, that there hath been a Houſe at leaſt, the laſt ſyllable, viz.
Cote ſignifying as much: And it is probable that the ground hath formerly been of a Heathy condition; for ſo doth the firſt part of its name intimate, though now, by good huſbandry, it be of a better kind. As it was originally a member of Waſper-ton, ſo did it paſs therewith from the Monks of Cobentre to Walter the ſon of Thurſtan de Cherlecote, being confirm'd by King Richard 1. but in that grant it is called Terra de Hethcote, ſo that it had not then the reputation of a Village. It ſhould ſeem that it came not to the Monks of Cobentre again with Waſperton; but was given by ſome of the Lucyes (deſcendants of the before ſpecified Walter de Cherlecote) unto the little Monastery of Wheleſford, cloſe by; yet when, or by which of them I have not ſeen: Nether do I find more of it, than that in 19 E. 1. it was certified that the Prior of Cobentre had a portion of x s. per annum out of it, which, by the Inquiſ. taken in 26 H.
8. doth appear to have been in lieu of Tiſhe-corn;
And that after the diſſolution of the ſaid Houſe of Wheleſford it was granted to Thomas Arden, and William Walter, and to the heirs of William Walter, by the name of five ſeverall paſture grounds, called Hethcote; ſince which time it hath appertained to the poſterity of the ſaid Will. Walter, as Waſperton hath done.

Lighthorne.

A Little below Waſperton, Abon is ſomewhat increaſed with a torrent called Wheleſford brooke, which riſeth in Lighthorne, as the Map will ſhew: Aſcending therefore to the head of it, I firſt come to Lighthorne. In King Edward the Confeſſors days Raph Earl of Hereford was owner of this place; who being ruined by Will.
the Conquerour, as moſt of the Engliſh-men were,
it was beſtowed, with other lands in this County, upon William Buenvaſſeth a Norman; and at the time of the generall Survey certified to contain five hides, beſides the Incloſure, there being at that time a Grove containing two furlongs in length, and xx. perches in bredth, all which were rated at vii li. But the direct time, or manner how it came firſt to the family of Mundevile I have not yet diſcovered, yet do believe it was very early, that is to ſay in H. 1. time; for in H. 2. days did Nigel de Mundevile confirm to the Canons of of S. Sepulchers in Warwick a yard land lying in this Lordship, which his father bequeathed to them, with his body to be buried in that Monastery, whose name (as I take it) was Ranulph de Munneville; for such a one lived in this County in H. 1. time, and was a witness^p to that Charter of Earl Roger 23 H. 1. whereby he founded the Collegiate Church at Warwick; as also to his grant^q of Salford to the Canons of Kenilworth, about the same time; And, by what afterwards appears, 'tis most certain, that Henry de Newburgh, the first Earl of Warwick of the Norman line, had these lands of William Buerwasteth by Agreement or otherwise, and thereof enfeoff^t Mundevile, together with Berkswell, to hold by the service of one Knights fee; for of a Knights fee was he enfeoff^t in H. 1. time, and by the service of one Knights fee was Richard de Mundevile certified^u to hold this Lordship and Berkswell of the Earl of Warwick in 20 H. 3. in both which he had Free-warren^v granted to him, as also in Thorp-Mundevile in Com. Northampton. by the Kings Charter dated at Clarendon 19 Nov. 37 H. 3.

As for the name I find it variously written in ancient Records; viz. Ustethorne, Ustethirn, Ustethirn, Ustethirne, and in Domesday-book Ustecorne, where doubtless some Letters are mistaken; for I am confident that the last syllable should be hirne, which in our old English signifies a corner; and by what I guess at the former syllable, viz. Ust, which is the same with Cadaver, I suppose that it had originally its name from some sepulture of dead bodies there.

Of these Mundeviles I shall say more in Berkswell, because that was their seat, the before-specified Richard being the last of them that had to do in this County; for in 6 E. 1. he pass^w away his interest in the reversion of these Mannours to Will. Beauchamp Earl of Warwick, reserving onely an estate for life to himself and Maud his wife, and the longer liver of them; in consideration whereof the said Earl granted^x to them his Mannour of Waples to enjoy during that terme. In 7. E. 1. it appears^y that the said Richard and his wife so held it for life, and that there was then a certain Park^z here containing four acres, and five carucats of land, held by the Lord in demesne; as also xxi Tenants holding ten yard land and a fourth part, performing sundry servile works, and Freeholders^a holding two yard land and a half under certain Rents, and doing suit to his three weeks Court; And likewise that what the Canons of S. Sepulchers in Warwick had here, was then^b held by Freeholders, paying severall Rents. After which, viz. in 13 E. 1. the before-specified Richard de Mundevill challenged a Court-Leet here with Assize of Bread and Beer by^c Prescription; but it being found that the King was in possession of those liberties, he was amerc^d, for that claim. Which Richard and his wife were dead before the 29 E. 1. as it seems; for by the Inquisi^d taken after the death of Maud de Beauchamp, widow to William de Beauchamp Earl of Warwick, I find that she dyed seized of this Mannour, Guy de Beauchamp Earl of Warwick, (her son and heir) being then of full age.

Upon the death of which Guy, scil. 9 E. 2. it was (inter alia) assigned^e to Alice his Countess in dower: and after the attainder^f of Thomas Beauchamp Earl of Warwick in 22 R. 2. given^g by the King to Thomas Holland Duke of Surrey:

But the deposition of King R. 2. shortly after ensuing, annihilated that grant; so that in 2 H. 4. the said Earl dying^h seized thereof, it was assigned toⁱ Margaret his Countess as part of her dower, and continued to the successive Earls till it came to the Crown with the rest of their lands (as in Warwick I have shewed) After which I find^k that King H. 8. made a Lease of it in 21. of his reign, for xx. years to Roger Wigston Esquier: and in 35. by his Letters Patent^l dated 9. Apr. in consideration of 536 li. 18 s. 11 d. sold it to Sir Thomas Pope Knight and his heirs, together with the advowson of the Church: and the next year following granted^m to him the said Thomas and his heirs all the lands lying within this town, and formerly belonging to the Priory of S. Sepulchers at Warwick; which are at this day possessⁿ by his descendant, viz. Sir Thomas Pope of Wroxton in Oxfordshire, (a younger son to the late Earl of Downe.)

In anno 1291. 19 E. 1. the Church (dedicated to S. Laurence) was valued^o at xxvi. marks, and in^p 26 H. 8. at xv li. vi s. viii d.

old Earls of Warwick, Beauchamp E. of Warw.

Of these Incumbents, John de Blockley in 37 E. 3. intended the foundation of a Chantry here, and to have endowed it with lands of good value, as may seem by the return of a Writ^p of Ad quod dampnum to that purpose; but I do not discern that it was done accordingly.

Morton-Merbull.

Following this petty stream, it leads me next to Morton-Morrell; for so it is vulgarly called, but more truly Morton-Merbull, in regard that the town is divided into two parts, whereof the one, scil. where the Church stands, is called Morton from the low moorish ground adjoining thereto, and the other, distant from it about a quarter of a mile, Merebull. In^q the Conquerors time there was no distinction at all in it, the whole bearing the name of Morton being then possess'd by the Earl of Melent, and containing five hides, which were valued at xli but before the Norman invasion one Der-man owned it. That most of the lands in this County, which the said Earl of Melent then had came to Henry de Newburgh Earl of Warwick (his brother) is very clear, the moiety of this town being part, the other half descending to his own posterity (I mean the Earls of Leicester) with the residue: but to whom or when these Earls granted either of their shares away, is not otherwise to be known (I think) than by circumstances; for till about the beginning of E. 1. time there is little discovery to be made by Record, unless that which is mentioned^r in 20 H. 3. of Agatha Trusbut her holding one Knights fee of the Earl of Warwick in Morton or meant of this Morton.

It seems that the Earl of Warwick's half was first granted^f to John Fitz Alan of Wolfrinton; which John was certified^t to hold it of William Mauduit Earl of Warwick in 52 H. 3. by the service of half a Knights fee: by whom I suppose it was that Thomas Trimenell became enfeoffed thereof; for it is evident^u that the said Thomas possess'd it in 4 E. 1. but shortly after Eustace de Hacche in right of Avicia his wife, widowⁿ to the said Thomas, and held it of the heirs of the same John Fitz Alan by the service of half a Knights fee, paying a pair of gilt Spurs or vi d. yearly, as the Record^z of 7 E. 1. manifesteth; In which is also shewed, that the same Eustace then had here in Morton, two carucats of land in demesne, and was Patron of half the Church: and that he had four Tenants holding yard land of him, by performing certain base services, 5. Cottiers and 6. Freeholders; as also a Court-Leet, and weyfs: And moreover that he had in Merebull 6. Tenants holding 6. yard land under the like servile employments; but depopulation^r, since, hath shrunk the Inhabitants into a lesse number. The same Record^z calls it Sale-Morton, by way of distinction from the severall other Mortons in this County; but I cannot well guess at the reason, unless it should be from one of that name residing there, which possibly may be; for one John Sale was a Tenant to the same Eustace for part of his lands in Merebull at that time.

As for that half belonging to the Earl of Leicester, it was by one of those Earls given^a to an Ancestor of William de Bishopsden, and by the same William to Henry de Harecourt, or one of his Predecessors, to hold by the service of the fourth part of a Knights fee, and 1 d. which Henry in 7

E. 1. held two carucats of land, here, in demesne, and had ix Freeholders and 8 tenants, who held land in servage of him. At the same time the Knights Templars of Walshall^b held certain lands here, which were given to them by Roger Earl of Warwick, as I believe; for it appears by the Account^c of their possessions in this shire in 31 H. 2. that they had them of the Earl of Warwick's grant. Of which Henry de Harecourt I find^d, that he was slain here at Morton, and left issue^e one only daughter called Margaret, first^f married to John Pipe, and^g afterwards to John de Saundrestede; which John de Saundrestede and she, in 22 E. 3. levied a Fine^h of this Mannour; whereby, for want of issue of his body by her, it was entailed upon Henry de Pipe, her grandchild (as the descent in Erdrington will shew) and Ingrith his wife, and the issue of their two bodies, the remainder to the right heirs of the said Margaret. During the time that the said John de Saundrestede had to do here, he obtained a Charterⁱ of Free-warren in all his demesne lands in this place, whereof the future possessors were to take benefit after the decease of him and his said wife: But touching the descendants of the same Henry and Ingrith, resolving to speak more in Erdrington, I will now proceed in observing what else I find memorable of this place, in order of time, relating to the successive Lords thereof.

In 7 E. 1. the same Eustace de Hacche was a Knight^k, being then meniall^l servant to the King. In 10. E. 1. he had Free-warren^m granted to him in all his demesne lands here, and at Chester-ton in this County; as also at Hacche in Wiltshire, (which shews that there was his chief seat.) In 9ⁿ and 21^o E. 1. he was in Comiss. for the Gaol delivery at Warwick. In^p 22. he attended Edmund Earl of Lancaster in an expedition into Gasconie for the Kings service. In 24. he received command^q with the rest of the great men, to attend the King at Carleol on the xv. of the Nativity of S. John Baptist, to march with his Army into Scotland against Robert de Brus then assuming the title of King in that Realm. In^r 26 E. 1. he was at that memorable Battail of Falkirk in Scotland; and being summoned^s to Parliament amongst the Barons in 27, 28, 30, 32, and 33 E. 1. dyed^t in 34 E. 1. leaving Julian the wife of John Hunsford his daughter^u and heir, then of full age. After the decease of which Eustace, viz. the next ensuing year, was there a Fine^v levied betwixt the said Avicia, and Nich. Trimenell and Margerie his wife, whereby this Mannour, then passing by the name of Morton-D'aubeny, became settled upon the said Avicia for life, and after her decease upon the same Nicholas and Margerie, and the heirs male of their two bodies.

But whether the said Avicia were an heir or not, I am not certain; neither have I yet found whose daughter she was; howbeit her paternall coat was three Lyons rampant, as appears by her Seal^x, wherein the Armes of Thomas Trimenell and Sir Eustace de Hacche, her two husbands, are also set, all meeting in point, which was the usuall way in those ancient times of expressing the husbands Armes before empaling came in use (Trimenells coat being a Crosse engrailed, and debruised with a bendlet, and that of Hacche the like Crosse engrailed;) which Nich. Trimenell was the son^y of Thomas; and being also a Knight^z, had issue John, who had the like dignity^a, and served K. Edw. 3. in his
